New York, Sept. 2. — When the trustees of Princeton University hold their next meeting there will be placed before them for consideration, it was learned today, an article published in the Biblical World by Lucas Hopkins Miller, who occupies the chair of biblical instruction at Princeton, and a reply thereto by the Rev. Dr. Ford C. Ottman of Stamford, Conn., in which Dr. Ottman charges Prof. Miller with heresy. Dr. Ottman's reply, published in the form of a brochure, whose covers bears the orange and black of Princeton, is issued under the caption of "The devil in cap and gown." No official announcement of the proposed consideration of these two articles has been made, but Dr. Ottmann asserts that he has already called attention of the trustees individually to Prof. Miller's article, and that from the replies he has received he is "able to say that Mr. Miller's teaching is as obnoxious to many—possibly an overwhelming majority—of the trustees as it is to a great host of believers in the intergity and authority of the Bible."

Dr. Ottman's brochure was first circulated at the Stony Brook Bible conference, which terminated at Stony Brook, Long Island, yesterday and was unanimously approved by the Presbyterian ministers — about 185—who compose the conference. With this approval it is to be given general circulation. The brochure quotes Mr. Miller in saying in his articles that it is not clear when Christ was born, nor where nor under what circumstances; that He "was probably the son of Joseph and Mary."

"That He considered his life and teaching the consummation of Old Testament, prophecy and builded consciously on the basis of truth the prophets had already laid down."

Continuing, Mr. Miller is quoted as follows:

'Regarding His early environment (Christ's) we know that He had four brothers and at least two sisters, and it is probable that He learned the trade of His Father, who was a master builder in Nazareth. It is only fair to assume that heredity and environmental forces imparted form as well as content to Jesus' expanding thought, but they do not explain His exalted personality."

In his reply Dr. Ottman assails Mr. Miller as "a past master of induction and inference" from "the "brain-pan of whose stewing wits there has been poured out a malodorous breath that is now on exhibit in the Galipot of the critical ecclesiologist."

Dr. Ottman deals at length with the article asserting that when an institution "founded on the principles of Christianity tolerates without rebuke and permits without protest the word of God to be discredited, to be dishonored and to be branded with the bar sinister, then the glory of that institution has departed."

He closes with the following question:

"There remains, however, the pertinent question—how much longer are we to suffer in silence such intolerable misteaching in our institutions of learning?"

Reorganization at Valcartier is Now Complete

VALCARTIER, Sept. 2. — Plans were given out last night by Col. Williams regarding organization of the Canadian expeditionary force. Following the announcement of Col. Hughes Monday the camp has been organized into 16 battalions instead of 12, as planned originally, and four brigades instead of three. Only three brigades will be taken with the first contingent, the other brigade or battalions, probably 8,000 men, being left behind to form the nucleus of the second division. Col. Williams stated that the surplus of volunteers there now being over 30,000 troops in camp, and two or three thousand on the road, made it necessary to form an extra brigade. The fact that one brigade will not be taken to the front will act as an incentive to various battalions to work hard in order to be chosen.

One brigade will be composed exclusively of Highlanders, and one will comprise the Ontario regiments.

The arrivals yesterday numbered 2,400 men, so that the strength of the camp now exceeds 30,000 men. Recruiting has been ordered stopped, and no more troops are to come to Valcartier for the present.

It is understood that nearly 30,000 men will be accepted for service abroad, although not all of these will go with the first contingent. Many more men have come forward than were expected, and, although the authorities decided to form a fourth infantry brigade rather than send several thousand men back to their homes, only twelve of the sixteen battalions will go with the first contingent, according to an announcement made last night by Col. Victor Williams, Camp Commandant.

To Pay Belgium's Tax.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A despatch to The Express from The Hague says that the four richest men in Belgium have guaranteed the payment to Germany of the war tax which the Germans levied against Belgium. The four men are Ernest Solvay, the alkali king; Baron Lambert, the Belgian representative of the Rothschilds; Raoul Warocque, the mine owner, and Baron Empain, the railway magnate.

"Had not this guarantee been given," says the correspondent, "Brussels would probably have been treated as Louvain was. Big guns were mounted in front of the palace ready for bombardment."

ALLIES STEADY AT CENTRE AND RIGHT BUT THEY RETIRE ON THE LEFT

Gen. Joffre Believes Force of German Advance is Spent and Kaiser's Army Will Not Get Within 50 Miles of Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The following official statement was issued by the War Office last night:—

"On our left wing, as a result of the turning movement of the German army, and in order not to accept battle under unfavorable conditions, our troops retired toward the south and southwest. In the region of Rethel our forces have arrested the enemy momentarily. In the centre and on the right the situation remains unchanged."

"Our line is holding like a bulldog in the centre," said the Minister of War, M. Millerand, yesterday as he left his office after a conference with Gen. Gallien, Military Governor of Paris. He refused to make any further comment on the situation, but he showed no trace of anxiety.

Well-founded though unofficial reports are current in Paris that the French have checked the German advance on the north.

It is reported Gen. Joffre has informed Minister of War Millerand that he does not believe the Germans will go within fifty miles of Paris.

The General in Chief believes that the force of the German assault is already beginning to show indications of being spent.

The best of the German troops were concentrated on the French left flank in a desperate effort to crush completely the combined British and French armies. This they have failed to do.

The French Cabinet has postponed action regarding the moving of the Government to Bordeaux. The feeling is that the move will not be necessary.

Secrecy In London.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Something of a very important nature is happening in the war zone. This was indicated yesterday afternoon when the censorship became more severe, and by order of the Government, many despatches recounting operations in France and elsewhere were held up.

All that the papers are permitted to say is that fighting is progressing near La Fere, about 75 miles from Paris in a northeastly direction. The moral of the troops is said to be excellent and the losses have been made up everywhere.

"The Germans cannot invest Paris, its size is too vast," says George Clemenceau, former Premier of France, in an interview printed by The Daily Mail.

"We are fighting," he adds, "for a great cause which is worthy of great sacrifice. We know our frontier would be invaded somewhere. We are still resisting and have many troops in reserve for the big battle which will follow this one."

It now appears that the bomb dropped into Paris Monday afternoon by a German aeroplane actually exploded. A despatch received here from the French capital says that when the projectile fell in the Porte St. Marion quarter the people in the neighborhood, thinking the noise due to gas explosion ran out from all sides. In a few moments the fire brigade was on the scene as well as the mayor, the commissary of police and representatives of the French aviation service.

It is added that Paris is not taking these bomb attacks very seriously.

The German Government has appropriated $500,000 for the relief of German subjects in Great Britain. Lieut. Rufus Sogbaum, U.S.N., began the distribution of this sum yesterday.

The Times' correspondent at Dieppe sends the following:

"I have just returned from the Amiens districts to send this despatch. A great battle has been fough at Croisilles, in Pas-de-Calais, between Arras and Cambrai, and is probably still in progress.

"The French claim a success towards Guise, but south of it and all Saturday there was heavy fighting."

"On the left I know cannonading was still going on at noon Sunday, and that at five o'clock Sunday afternoon there were no Germans in Amiens.

"Whether, as some declare, the lines between Amiens and Boulogne have been cut, I do not know."

A Times' despatch from Paris speaking of the fighting in the north, says:

"Throughout the fighting of the last few days swarms of aeroplanes have circled the sky.

"The enemy's supply arrangements are reported to have broken down, their men in some cases subsisting on the flesh of horses. The British transport is working admirably. The spirits of the British and French troops are excellent.

Germans try to Break Line at Three Places

LONDON, Sept. 2. — The Daily Telegraph in a despatch from Ashmead Bartlett, its correspondent, says: —

"It is evident that the Germans have been obliged to abandon their attempt to outflank the left wing of the allies owing to large reinforcements of French troops. The Germans are making a desperate effort to beat through the centre of the allied line and occupy Noyon, La Fere and Laon, thus gaining the shortest road to Paris. The reason for this manoeuvre is because at La Fere they strike the main line by Noyon, Compeigne and Senlis, and the other by Laon and Soissons. It seems that they are in fact endeavoring to drive a wedge of troops into a rough circle formed by Noyon, Compeigne, Soissons and Laon.

The grand scheme of German strategy, therefore, becomes apparent. There are apparently three armies all marching on Paris. The mos westerly is that which is operating in the region of La Fere and endeavoring to enter the rough circle formed by Noyon, Compiegne, Soissons and Laon; the centre is that which has been in action at Launey and Signy L'Abbaye, and which is endeavoring to seize the main road via Rethel and march on Reims; and the third is the Crown Prince's army, which is also endeavoring to converge on Reims via Montmedy, Stenay and Vouziers.

Of the disposition of the allies to resist these three attacks we know but little, but with the immense forces which should be at Gen. Joffre's disposal there should be no difficulty in holding them all.

Cruelty to Animals.

The first legislation to be passed for the protection of dumb animals was the work of an Irishman, Richard Martin of the county of Galway. In 1822 Martin introduced a bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals in the British house of commons. Queen Victoria was one of the principal supporters of the Royal Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and it was she who gave the society its name.

A Quitter.

We Can Have Pie

THERE was once a good woman who couldn't make pies, but had two kind neighbors who kept her supplied with that article of food.

One day her two neighbors got to fighting, and so badly injured one another that neither of them was able to make pie for some considerable time.

What did the pie-less one do? Go without pie? Not much. SHE HUNTED UP A COOK BOOK AND FOUND OUT HOW TO BAKE PIE HERSELF.

Canada to-day is in the position of the-lady-who-couldn't-make-pies.

There are many things she does not make at home because she has been getting them so easily from Continental Europe. But now her neighbors in Europe are at war with one another and so—for some time to come—cannot supply those things.

Canada is too thrifty and serious and sensible a housewife to sit with hands folded at such a time.

The manufacturers of Canada will get out the recipe book and learn how to MAKE many of the things that Europe can no longer send us because of the war. And in the making of those things the manufacturers of Canada should have the support of the financial interests and the people of Canada.

While loyally contributing a number of her best sons to help settle things in Europe, Canada will not entirely overlook her other sons who remain at home.

The manufacturers of Canada are now making much of the woollen goods, motor cars, rubber goods, corsets, millinery, hosiery, silverware — and countless other things — that are used in Canada, and generally speaking are making these goods at least as well as they are being made anywhere else. The people of Canada know that most of these things are being made by the manufacturers of this country. They do not know yet whether the manufacturers of Canada are going to serve them still more by making many of the things that were formerly imported from Continental Europe.

The manufacturers of Canada should tell the people of Canada at this time more than ever, just what they are making and the merits of their products. Let them drive home the facts through the great modern message medium — advertising. Let them use the newspapers to inform the people that they "have the goods." Let them explain that notwithstanding the war the people of Canada CAN have "the pie" — "home-made pie," and all the better for being home-made.

And after the war is over — if not before — perhaps our neighbors in Europe will be coming to Canada for some of this "pie"—importing from Canada some of the things Canada now imports from them.

SHIED SHELLS OVERBOARD.

British Sailors Had No Use For Missiles "Aboard Their Yacht."

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Harwich correspondent of The Telegraph gives interviews with wounded sailors and speaks of the plucky way in which the British jackies handled live shells. Many of the German shells which made hits, it appears, did not burst.

"There were five shells in the boiler of one of the destroyers," he quotes one of the sailors as saying, "and if one had burst it would have been all up with the ship."

"What did you do with them?" was asked.

"Oh, just shied them overboard. There was no room for such rubbish aboard our yacht."

In another instance, the correspondent says, it is related that a shell fell on a British ship and as there was no immediate explosion, the sailors rushed at it and pushed it into the sea with their naked hands.

Hundreds of Lives Saved.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—With several hundred passengers, most of them women and children, on board, the City of Chicago, an excursion steamer from Benton Harbor, Mich., caught fire several miles off shore early yesterday. Racing against the flames the steamer made for the Government breakwater just off the harbor, and all the passengers were landed safely a moment before the boat sank.

CITY CHAMPIONSHIPS ARRANGED FOR SEPT. 19

The annual city track and field championships for boys, juniors, intermediates and seniors under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., will be held Saturday, Sept. 19th.

This is the biggest athletc event of the year and it is hoped there will be a large entry list in each group.

There is a beautiful trophy for each class, and the competition is run on a point basis, so that although a boy or man may not be a star in any one event, yet, by making a fair showing in each he may win a trophy.

The Events.

Events for each class:

Howden Cup—seniors over 18 years:

100 yd. dash, run high jump, run broad jump, 12-lb. shot put, stand broad jump, ½ mile walk, 1 mile run.

FOUR MANAGERS TALK OF CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

By John McGraw, Manager of the Giants.

We have been meeting with some hard luck; have played some bad baseball, and frequently have not had a break in the game. All these factors have hit us hard, and we have lost games which we should have won. I am not in the habit of making predictions on pennant races. I never have made one, but I am confident that in the supreme test the Giants will not fail to show that the fight is in them, which has carried them through for three years. We will keep going right along at the fast and hardest pace which we can set in the struggle for the flag.

By George Stallings, Manager of the Boston Braves.

Every one knows I am a little superstitious in baseball, so I am not claiming a flag, but I will say that there are only two clubs the Braves must beat. These are the Giants and Cardinals. I do not figure the Cubs in the running. I have three pitchers who have worked wonders for the last six weeks. They are not showing signs of being under a strain. We moved 25 per cent. faster than the Giants for the last month. Invariably we can beat any club in the league on a few runs, and we have been getting those.

By Miller Huggins, Manager of St. Louis Cardinals.

(Seconded by His Players.)

I do not like to say what chances we have for the pennant, but I have confidence in my men, and they are not backward in making predictions. That we will be in the world's series money and that we have a stronger team than either New York, Boston or Chicago. The players think that we can win, barring unforeseen difficulties. The other teams have nothing on us in any way at present. My pitchers are going along well. The team is hitting and fielding, and the men are one and all taken up by the possibilities before them. The figures show that we have made no sensational spurt to the top. We have merely played good baseball all season.

By Henry O'Day, Manager of the Cubs.

I am not given to making pennant predictions, but right now I see where we have a chance to win the flag. Hard luck in the way of injuries has hit us, but even these have not hampered us greatly. Out pitchers have been going only fairly, but in the last week have shown improvement. Our recent games, ending with the Giants on Sunday, proved disastrous for us, but now that we have got rid of our toughest opposition I look for clear sailing.

COMMENT

As You Like It

A Pembroke fan has selected the following all-star Canadian League team:

Right field—Hunt, Toronto.
Second—Linneborn, London.
First—Bierbauer, London.
Centre field—Lamy, London.
Left field—Harris, Erie.
Catcher—Trout, Toronto.
Shortstop—Mitchell, Ottawa.
Third—Isaacs, Toronto.
Pitcher—Schettler, Peterboro.
Utility infielders — Whitcraft and Dolan.
Pitchers — Heck, Kubat, Brown, and Auld.

There is no longer any doubt but that changes will have to be made in the Canadian League next year. The patronage in Ottawa continued splendid, but the necessity of purchasing many new players, coupled with the terrific expenses on the road and the fact that each trip away meant a dead loss, more than absorbed the profits which the Ottawas should have shown. Erie and Toronto were rank disappointments. None of the clubs ever got more than their guarantees at either place, although the trip to Erie was a costly one. Peterboro and Brantford did surprisingly well with losing teams. St. Thomas directors are ready to throw up the sponge, but Hamilton and London made money. A six-club circuit, dropping Erie and one of the Canadian clubs, looks the only solution. It was a bad year for baseball all around. Salaries incidentally were far too high.—Ottawa Citizen.

When Fred Bramble joined the Senators, after playing the greater portion of the season with Fort Wayne in the Central League, he claimed that the Central wasn't nearly as fast as the Canuck League. He ought to know, but evidently the bugs in Erie think differently.

Jules Kustus, the Saints' heavy-hitting outfielder, underwent an operation for an abscess on his hip. He will be out of the game for the rest of the season.

King and Blount are the only two players who have figured in every game played this season.

As Catcher Lapp of the Athletics has split his right hand, McAvoy has been recalled from Baltimore and will get in on some of the world's series money. McAvoy was drafted last Fall from the Berlin team of the Canadian League.

Grantland Rice says the reason of Merkle and Doyle's slump is that the great pair have gone stale. They have been overbaseballed during the past couple of years.

In 1913 their slump started, and in 1914 they had dropped to .245 for Doyle and .235 for Merkle. What's the answer? After a long, hard 1911 campaign, which lasted until October 25, Doyle and Merkle made the winter trip to Cuba with the Giants. They returned in time to start spring practice at Marlin. In 1912 they had a brief rest, but in 1913, at the close of the season, they signed for another long winter campaign that involved daily baseball until late November, and then a trip around the world. They landed again in time to start spring training at Marlin.

So these two have had almost continual baseball for three years. There were other Giants who went to Cuba and others who went around the world, but Doyle and Merkle are the only regulars who took both trips.

Baseball is a game that eats up a tremendous amount of nervous energy. The wear and tear through a season is something terrific, requires a long winter rest to establish tired mental and muscular nerve cells.

A good story is told on a well-known local baseball bug. "Glad" Graney, the St. Thomas boy, who plays in the outfield for the Cleveland American League Club, has been home for several weeks nursing a dislocated shoulder.

During his stay, like many ballplayers, he was hounded for opinions on different players, etc. Graney, like most men engaged in the business, does not like to talk baseball, being of a rather modest and quiet disposition. The fan referred to, however, had made himself a pest by seeking the player and asking questions.

He is a great admirer of Louis Bierbauer, the Tecumsehs' smart firstbaseman, and while batting them out one day last wek with some fans, in a well-known local rendezvous, he remarked that Louis should be guarding the initial sack for a big league club, and, turning to "Glad," asked him what he thought of it.

"He looks like a nice ballplayer," was the reply.

"Well, then, what keeps him out of the big show?" asked the bug.

Glad saw a chance to put one over and carelessly said: "Why, I understand he is 'cross-armed.'"

Not wishing to display any ignorance of the phraseology of the pastime, the fan let it go at that, but went all over town telling the reason Louis was held back, until some friend enlightened him that there was no such malady and that someone had been kidding him. — St. Thomas Times.

This Brute Gets Forty Years in Sing Sing

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Forty years in Sing Sing Prison was the sentence passed yesterday morning upon Geo. Webb, a negro, who was held for keeping 13-year-old Katherine Larkin a prisoner for four days in a pit under the floor of a public school building.

Horrors at Aerschot.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Ostend reports that refugees from Aerschot, 23 miles northeast of Brussels, accuse the German troops, before they evacuated that place, of having pillaged and burned half the town.

PRONOUNCING NAMES OF TOWNS IN WAR ZONE

After the war the world will know its Belgium and its France as never before. The map-maker is fascinating the minds of men. The foundations are being laid for clearer conceptions of foreign political conditions and topographical relations.

Pure English speech halts somewhat over place nomenclature. Belgium, French, German, and then Dutch, names "fork the tongue," as says the French proverb. Syllables splutter. As one talks of one place, another speaks of the same place by another name, while both are on common ground without knowing it.

In pronouncing the names of towns now on every lip, a few things are worth knowing and remembering. There is no law for proper names, personal or public. Usage alone counts. In the case of the Belgian names—a mixture of French, Belgian, Walloon, Flemish, then Brabantine or any other of the numerous dialects that make up Flanders of old—it is to be noted that the French pronunciation prevails.

Finale Is Mute.

Do not pronounce the final e, which is mute unless with a written accent; nor a final consonant, unless, generally, c, l, f or r, which are the consonants in the word frolic.

Some allowance may be made toward the German or Holland frontier for a certain lengthening in pronouncing. But in Belgium words are pronounced in the French manner. This, as far as possible, eliminates the "h" sound. Avoid a "g" sound in a final "n." The "n" is a nasalized consonant, yet clear and crisp. Pronounce "u" as in duke. Pronounce "j" as "zh."

Practically without exception, accent the last syllable (except in Muelhausen):

A VERSATILE SCIENTIST.

Dr. Adami Has Many Interests Beside Medical Work.

Prof. John George Adami of McGill University, who is one of the leaders of the good roads movement in the Province of Quebec and who was one of the most prominent speakers and workers at the recent International Good Roads Congress in Montreal, is of course best known as a pathologist, but is also known among his intimates as a great believer in wholesome sport and the out-of-doors. Mrs. Adami was a daughter of James A. Cantlie, of Montreal, and a niece of Lord Mount Stephen. Dr. Adami's name has become very intimately associated with McGill University and that he is devoted to that institution is shown not only by his enthusiastic efforts on behalf of the university's welfare but by his action by turning a deaf ear to all offers to tempt him to leave Montreal. He has declined appointment at a very handsome salary to the chair of Pathology at Cornell University, a precisely similar offer from Cambridge. And these were only two of several such offers he has declined. Dr. Adami, besides his medical work, has found time to devote to literature and art, and he is an active member of the Montreal Art Association. It will be recalled that a few years ago Toronto University conferred upon Prof. Adami, the degree of LL.D., honoris causa, as an acknowledgement of the benefits conferred upon mankind by Prof. Adami as an educationalist and by his scientific investigations. Prof. Adami is not only one of the leading pathologists in America; but in the whole scientific world.

The great Koch has acknowledged the importance of Dr. Adami's researches in connection with the development of the system of anti-toxin serum treatment, while his investigation of tuberculosis and the germs of the disease have had an acknowledged and powerful influence in the evolution of the modern systems of fighting the white plague. As a matter of fact he has been in the very forefront of the fight against consumption in Canada, the champion of all the forces arrayed in Canada against the dread disease. Some years ago he was largely instrumental in the organization of the Montreal League for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and in recognition of his scientific researches into the origin and treatment of the disease, and of his energy in attracting public attention to the importance of a world-wide effort to arrest its progress, the great honor was conferred upon him of electing him to preside over the International Tuberculosis Congress held at Washington. He was a promoter of the Royal Edward Tuberculosis Institute, Montreal, and as a royal commissioner reported upon the spread and prevention of tuberculosis throughout Canada. He had the honor of being elected president of the Association of American Physicians.

Prof. Adami is an Englishman by birth and was educated at Owen's College in Manchester, his native city, and Christ's College Cambridge. He took post graduate courses in Breslau and Paris and performed considerable research work there in co-operation with some of the leading scientists of Continental Europe. He was for a time house physician and demonstrator in pathology in the Manchester Royal Infirmary and came to Canada as professor of pathology at McGill twenty-three years ago. He was one of the Canadian delegates to the recent Imperial Health Conference in London.—Chesterfield in Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Gen. Brock's Coat.

One of the most sacred bits in the whole of the Dominion Archives at Ottawa is the case in which lie the coat and sash of Gen. Brock. Probably some of us have for a long time had this great general as our hero of Canadian history. If so, the sight of that coat will be as sacred as anything which could be found within the most holy sanctuary. The coat worn by Gen. Sir Isaac Brock when he fell at Queenston Heights. It is red, of course, with blue revers and gold epaulets and collar. The coattails are turned back, and faced with white; the typical uniform of a high officer of the period. And the most tragic part of it, as it lies there in its case, with its ensign in bits of shattered silk, is the small hole which shows on the upper left hand side. Gen. Brock died from a bullet in the heart. That coat is ample proof of it.

Alongside of it is the sash given to him by Tecumseh. It is a very beautiful thing in gorgeously-colored wampum. Brock always wore it, showing his respect and admiration for the great chief who was so loyal to him.

MOLONEY—HICKEY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's Church, Lakefield, yesterday morning at 8 o'clock when Mr. Michael Joseph Moloney and Miss Mary Alice Hickey were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Father Meagher. Mr. Paul Moloney, brother of the groom acted as best man while Miss Katheryn Hickey, sister of the bride supported the bride. After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Moloney will reside in Lakefield.

Messrs. J. W. Shields, Hamilton, and W. J. Wilson, Perth, are among those registered at the Snowden House.

MONTREAL BANK COMES TO RESCUE

Will Help the City of Montreal With a Loan of $6,000,000

Montreal, Sept. 2.—Arrangements have been practically completed whereby the city will get $6,000,000 from the Bank of Montreal on the security of the civic $7,300,000 which has been hanging fire for some time. The loan is to be temporary, but this will be sufficient to carry on the business of the city until the financial situation is improved.

As a result of the lessons received during the past few weeks to convince the civic authorities of the uselessness of hawking the city bonds on the New York market and elsewhere, a wonderful change has been manifested. Controller Hebert has a new outlook on the situation. "We should never have left the Bank of Montreal; we made a big mistake," he declared yesterday. Mr. Hebert was not prepared to announce anything regarding terms, but stated that the bank was treating the city excellently, and not taking advantage of the present conditions.

SERGT. BROWN RETURNS FROM BONNIE SCOTIA

Sergt. John Brown, of the local police force, arrived in the city last month after a two months' vacation in Scotland, where he signed a matrimonial contract for life and brought back with him a "bonnie Highland lassie" for a fellow subpoena-server, P. C. Paterson. The nuptial knot will be tied on Saturday.

Sergt. Brown claims that Scotland is doing her share of supplying men for the front. He saw the streets blocked for hours in front of the recruiting stations. While in the old country he spent most of his time in Fifeshire, which is on the east coast. When the war first broke out, all the lights of the coast towns were ordered to be extinguished in the evening, and naturally life became rather dreary.

His party sailed from Glasgow a week ago last Saturday, via the steamer Scandinavian, and landed in Montreal last Sunday. All the way across a sharp lookout was kept for warships, but nothing was sighted.

Going over, Sergt. Brown happened to be on the same boat as the Canadian school teachers, and they were also passengers on the Scandinavian.

SILVER WEDDING OBSERVED BY REV. AND MRS. COON

Friends at Tweed Presented Sets of Tea and Dessert Spoons

(Tweed News.)

Friday was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding day of Rev. and Mrs. Coon.

The Ladies' Aid took advantage of the event to give the people of the church and of their friends the pleasure of enjoying the occasion with their pastor and his family. A reception was held in the afternoon and evening, and a very large number responded and conveyed their greetings to Mr. and Mrs. Coon.

A light luncheon was served in the dining-room. Mrs. C. W. Huyck presided at the tea-table and a number of the young ladies of the congregation waited upon the guests.

REV. C. H. COON

On behalf of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Aiger read a congratulatory address and Mrs. J. L. Newton presented sets of tea and dessert spoons. Mr. Coon made a very appropriate reply to the address.

During the evening a program of music was rendered. Those participating in this were: Miss Pratt, Misses R. Sweetman, L. Sweetman, Mr. and Fred Maines and Mr. Knipper.

Other members of the family and friends sent in a number of handsome silver remembrances of the event. Following is the address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Coon:

No doubt your minds have been making a quick, glad holiday trip back to this day, twenty-five years ago, when you two stood before the marriage altar and plighted your troth, each to the other, until death doth us part.

Twenty-five years filled with joy and blessing, with doubtless now and then a shadow; and here you are today enjoying the smile of heaven, with every member of a happy family about you, and a host of friends.

We desire to extend to you our heartiest congratulations at this time, and we sincerely pray that you may continue in the enjoyment of health and happiness and in that measure of success and reward in your work for the Master which is His to give and which He has abundantly promised unto all those who are faithful.

Please accept this small token of love and esteem and good-will.

Signed on behalf of the Ladies' Aid of the Mehtodist Church.

Peterboro friends of Rev. and Mrs. Coon will also extend their best wishes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A CALL FOR CONTINUOUS PRAYER.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—As, not only a Presbyterian, but also as a professing Christian, I, along with others, feel that this is an opportune time for seeking God with all our hearts, and exhorting other lukewarm Christians to do likewise.

I wish, sir, to ask, through your valuable columns, that ministers who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, throw the doors of their church halls open all day long, for praying people to assemble together at any time, to spend a day, or an hour, or a half an hour, or even ten minutes to pray.

Great Britain is on her knees, not only in secret, but heaps of her people are engaged in what many of the Peterborough citizens are wishing now to do.

Schools could be thrown open in the evenings, so that people, having children could find a place near their own homes, for themselves and their children to bow before God, who has a just claim on our openly showing that we place our confidence alone on Him who rules the armies of heaven and amongst the inhabitants of the earth. Our help is in the name of the Lord who made heaven and earth.

Trusting our good ministers will advertise their church halls open for prayer, I am, etc.,

A BELIEVER IN PRAYERS.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—One contingent of our brave volunteers having gone to the front to fight our battles while we remain at home in peace and security, and a second contingent is being asked to join the colours to follow in their footsteps, it is not encouraging to them to know that the proposed distribution of the war fund will treat them and their dependents as indigents and paupered instead of paying over the money to them as their just dues and earned by them under the greatest hardships and privations at the risk of their lives. These families as a whole rank favorably with those who remain at home. It must be mortifying for them to feel that the sanctity of their homes will be invaded by investigators for the purpose of reporting their condition to a relief officer or committee who could hand over the charity to save them from want; and neither these, nor those well to do need expect anything beyond that or any recommendation for their services except the proverbial shilling or other pittance afforded by the Government. It is a misnomer to call it a "relief" fund. Let it be known as it really is, a war fund or at most an indemnity fund. Let us put the whole business on a loftier plane to where it belongs.

Yours etc.,

FAIR PLAY.

Sept. 2nd, 1914.

PRIVATE COMMITTEES.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Private committees have their place and vocation, no doubt, but most people at times like this want the municipality or the government to administer funds collected for public benefits. The writer of the letter of the women's committee does not appear to understand that women are welcome as helpers, but "exclusive" organizations and pink teas are not welcome. The people are the people and do not wish to be represented by no matter how good others except themselves. The public meeting that was wanted weeks ago is called for Friday night and will work out all right this time. It was thrown up before in a most unwarranted manner, and now the mayor has nominated the committee to represent the public. No women's committee can do the work of executing, and they had better give their money and their help to the public fund now being gathered for general relief, and so much needed.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

A SUGGESTION.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—My father in 1837 marched to Toronto with his company in the rebellion of that year in support of the Loyalists. In 1866 the writer and his two brothers went to the front, two of my sons went to the South Africa during the Boer War, and my eldest son served his country 18 years in the Mounted Police. On the above record I am led to think your readers will pardon my presumption in making a suggestion to their representative at Toronto, when I give my reasons for doing so.

I believe the province of Ontario is not only anxious but willing to a man to spend their last dollar in upholding the British Empire, and the time has arrived when action must take the place of talking. And of the many things our Provincial Government could do to help the Empire. I wish in this letter to suggest one of them. And before doing so it is necessary for me to give some explanation of business matters in this district.

For the first ten years at least thousands of the young married and single men have been employed in the lumber camps. During the coming winter this source of employment will be entirely cut off and utterly depriving them of employment, and there is not the slightest doubt these unemployed will be drawn to the cities. When these men have work (which they are always willing to perform), they are law abiding citizens, but I tremble to think what they would be if they were in a state of starvation. A state in which I am afraid many of them will be before the coming winter is over. Now my remedy is this and I can speak from personal knowledge of the fitness of these men to fill the bill.

My suggestion is that the Provincial Government in conjunction with the military authorities, should form companies of sharp shooters throughout all the back country, who during the winter should be put through a course of drilling. As for the use of the rifle they require no training, as I have known many of these men As I have known many of these men to drop a deer on the full jump at a distance of 300 yards or take off a partridge's head at a hundred yards. Each company should be composed of 50 men between the ages of 18 and 40 and they should be allowed $3 a week to board themselves at their homes on condition that they attended drill one week in each month until they were called to active service. A hundred companies could be easily enrolled in our northern country. By doing this Ontario would be creating a force of 5,000 men who for endurance and pluck and the use of the rifle could not be equalled in any country in the world. And also preventing an evil that is likely otherwise to arise this winter, and would be doing something more than talking for the upholding of our glorious empire.

Yours, etc.,

R. C. STRICKLAND.

Not Charity But Work Is Wanted

An excellent start was made yesterday at the inaugural meeting of the Industrial Association of the Province of Ontario which was called by Mayor Hocken of Toronto and held in the council chamber of that city. The local representatives were His Worship Mayor Buller, Alderman Stratton, Mr. Basil Hall of the Board of Trade and Mr. V. Eastwood. Delegates all the way from Windsor to Ottawa and as far north as Sudbury were present.

The main reason for calling the meeting was to discuss ways and means for obtaining money to go ahead with the public works and supply work for the unemployed. It was insisted upon by several speakers that the present state of unemployment was not the result of the war, but had been aggravated by the war. It would undoubtedly become worse, and the fear was expressed that if the real causes behind the economic situation were not ventilated, the people would attribute the prevailing conditions to the war alone, which would in consequence be unpopular. There should be an endeavor to promote a conscious patriotism, and all the governments should be compelled to take stronger measures than they have yet had courage to do. What was wanted was not charity, but continued employment.

The must suitable example of the banks' attitude was furnished by the mayor of Welland. He told of a factory in his town that had large orders, which if filled, would give work for many men. The factory needed money; the bank would not advance it. So the orders were turned over to a Pittsburg firm and Welland's workers remained idle.

The Mayor of Preston said the banks' refusals had stopped public works in his town. If they had the money now the work could go on. Winter would soon be here and weather conditions would prevent it, money or no money. Mayor Buller from this city and the mayor from Oshawa were the only ones in all Ontario that reported having obtained money to go ahead with the work. The trouble in Oshawa had been overcome when the town and the bank had come to an understanding and money was advanced.

After numerous speakers were heard the meeting decided that better and quicker results would be obtained were an executive committee formed and in accordance with this the following men were selected:

Patron, Sir John Gibson; hon. chairman, Hon. W. J. Hanna; chairman, W. D. McNaught, C.M.G.; vice-chairman, C. E. Henderson, president C.M.A. of Windsor; vice-president, W. P. Gundy, Board of Trade, Toronto; treasurer, G. Frank, Toronto; executive, Sir John Willison, Sir Edmund Walker, Toronto; A. D. Young, North Bay, president associated board of trade; J. C. Eaton, T. A. Russell, Controller Simpson, Toronto; Mayors and representatives of Toronto, Hamilton, London, Brantford, St. Catharines, Stratford, Kingston, Belleville, Ottawa, Peterboro, Brockville.

This committee will meet on Thursday of this week at 11 a.m. in the city hall at Toronto.

Mayor Buller when seen this morning was confident that good results would follow.

HERE AND THERE

Canada will not let up sending men to Britain until Germany is defeated. Col. Sam Hughes says the present contingent will be followed by others until the war is ended, so cheer up, boys, you may get a chance to go yet.

The Kaiser says he gets his beautiful thoughts, light and strength from the Bible. His "beautiful thought" must be obtained from the first book of Chronicles where "the devil persuades David to take a census of Israel, and Jehovah acted in wrath, for he sent a pestilence, which slew seventy thousand people for David's fault. But David he allowed to live." Will history repeat itself?

Recent developments of war have brought out the immense usefulness of the dirigibles. Not long ago it was considered quite an accomplishment for an aeroplane to arise from the ground with its single occupant, but things have changed, these near conquerors of the air are arrying a dozen men in addition to the weight of many bombs.

The Ontario government will shortly issue notices to farmers asking for their co-operation in the placing of men on their farms for the winter who are out of work. If men are to be placed, little wages will be counted upon. Many would be willing to serve through the winter months for their board and a nominal sum.

Late War News

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 2.—A telegram received in official quarters from the chief of the Russian general staff declares the Russian reverses in Eastern Prussia is to be regarded as purely local and due to a sudden reinforcement of the Germans with siege guns.

A despatch from Rome says the Austrian Government in preparing to evacuate Lemberg, recognizing its occupation by the Russians is inevitable. Newspapers of Lemberg publish lists of Austrian dead, covering pages. This is the first official admission that Austrians have been worsted in Galicia. As to scene of fighting in France, nothing so complete as the present censorship has been known since the war began.

Petrograd, Sept. 2.—The General Staff announces that the Austrian Fifteenth division was completely routed near Lustchoff on August 28 and 100 officers and 4,000 soldiers were taken prisoners.

NO DECIDED ADVANTAGE IN STUBBORN FORWARD MOVE OF THE GERMANS

Whole Divisions of Infantry Have Been Blotted Out, and Ranks Are Beginning to Show Signs of Demoralization---Some Break and Flee In Confusion

CANNOT SURVIVE TERRIBLE LOSSES

Strong Feeling of Confidence Prevails Among the Allies — German Attack Wearing Itself Out, Hammering Away at Allied Lines Which Give but Do Not Break

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 3.—The Chronicle's correspondent at the front, writing from an unnamed town in the department of Somme, Tuesday, says: "The superiority of the British artillery, coupled with the pluck of the British infantry, is rapidly telling on the German atttackers.

"A few more days such as Sunday and Monday and the German army invading Northern France will have destroyed itself completely.

"No army that ever existed could endure and survive the terrible losses sustained by the Germans in the last few days. Whole divisions of infantry have been blotted out and shattered and German ranks are beginning to show demoralization.

"In the latest assault the Germans manifested unmistakable signs of unsteadiness, and were seen to waver and frequently break and flee in confusion.

"As a result of this prolonged battle, the German line has advanced for miles, but has not gained any decided advantage."

MOST MOMENTOUS BATTLE FOUGHT SINCE WATERLOO

London, Sept. 3.—The battle whose issued is destined to decide whether history will repeat itself in the second siege of Paris, is still in progress. All that the British public know concerning the most momentous battle in which British soldiers have fought since Waterloo, and the fiercest one ever fought, is contained in one sentence of the official report issued last night: "Continuous fighting has been in progress along almost the whole line of battle."

A French official communication supplements this with the information that the allied forces have fallen back towards the southwest to avoid action which might have been engaged in under unfavorable circumstances.

In spite of the fact that the French capital has been removed to Bordeaux, and that the German army of the west is within 30 miles of the outer fortifications of Paris, a strange air of confidence prevails to-day among the allies. The general feeling seems to be that the German attack is wearing itself out in hammering away at the allied lines, which give, but do not break. This feeling of confidence was greatly increased by the news of the great victory of the Russians in Galicia.

Reports from Petrograde (St. Petersburg), tell of the entry of Russians into Lemberg, the capital of Galicia. These appear credible, as news of the defeat of the Austrians in that district has been received from several sources.

The battle of Lemberg probably was the greatest ever fought. Evidently it resulted in a decisive and perhaps overwhelming defeat for the Austrians.

In January, 1914, while still at Bologna, the present Pope issued a pastoral letter strongly condemning the tango.

It has been 174 years since the last Pope Benedicte. On his election to the papacy in 1740 Cardinal Lambertini, assumed that title.

The new pope was born at Pegli, in the diocese of Cenes, November 21, 1854. He was created cardinal only last May, along with Archbishop Begin of Quebec.

Rush of Recruits to Join Kitchener's Second Army

ROYAL CANADIAN REGIMENT REINFORCED FOR TRIP

Men at Valcartier Strive For Places in West Indian Corps in Belief That They Will go to Europe From There Before the Other Canadian Forces—Over Thirty Thousand Men in Camp.

VALCARTIER CAMP, Que., Sept. 3.—To bring the Royal Canadian Regiment up to war strength 400 men will be selected from this camp and immediately sent to Halifax and then to Bermuda to join the regulars there, who up to a few days ago were stationed at different points in Canada. Orders were sent out yesterday for men, and as a result over 2,000 troops gathered in front of headquarters last night. Their names were taken, and 400 of them will be called upon to report probably to-day. At the early morning parade of all regiments in camp, officers requested those who wished to go to Bermuda to step out of the ranks. There was a great response. Many were ex-service men, anxious to join the regulars who, they think, will go to the front before the first contingent from Canada. It is expected that after the R. C. regiments are recruited to war strength they will be sent to France, and a battalion will be taken from Valcartier to Bermuda to relieve them.

There are 31,728 men under canvas here to-day, and about 1,500 more are on the way. It is not probable that the strength of the mobilization camp will be over 33,500 when all the many units have arrived.

A board of examiners, composed of Lt.-Col. Steele and Lt.-Col. Mercer, has been appointed to conduct the weeding out process of officers. There are about 1,500 officers here, about one officer to 25 men, and not more than 500 are needed for the contingent. This means that a great many will be unable to go unless they enter the ranks.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock Hon. Sam Hughes will review every unit in camp, and it will be the greatest body of troops ever assembled in Canada.

Bags of Potash With German Helmets Concealed Guns

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The Ostend correspondent of The Express quotes Leon Hiard, Senator of Hainault, as testifying:

"That the Germans killed their own severely wounded on the battle field, only tending those who would soon recover." There are many signs, according to the despatch, that the Germans suffered heavily at Mons. Returning remnants of those who were in the fight spoke bitterly of British courage. One force of 250 British, it is stated, must have accounted for thousands of Germans. All along their line of retreat they had prepared a defence made with bags full of potash, found in a neighboring factory. Through these were placed maxims, and on top German helmets. The first time the Germans came up to this seemingly friendly line the maxims spoke and soon no Germans were left.

WITHDRAWAL OF FRENCH GOVERNMENT FROM PARIS IS REGARDED AS WISE MOVE

Will Give New Impetus to Defense of the Nation --- Commander of Army Will Defend City to the End

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 3.—General Gallieni, commander of the army defending the city, to-day issued the following proclamation to the inhabitants: "Members of the government of the republic have left Paris, in order to give new impetus to the defence of the nation. I have been ordered to defend Paris against the invader, and this order I will fulfill to the end."

The decision of the French government to withdraw from Paris, while proving a momentary shock to the man on the street, is regarded, both by politicials and strategists here, as being as wise as it is painful. To remain in Paris as the centre of government would be incompatible with the supreme necessities of France at the present moment.

These are to keep the government free to act and to keep the army an unbroken force, which neither can be captured in detail nor shut up in fortresses.

Absence of official announcements from the capitals of the belligerents to-day is the surest indication that the fighting in the east and west continues without decisive results. Such news despatches as escaped the censors tend to confirm the earlier official claims and admissions.

Russia is pressing forward in Galicia after having taken strongly the fortified capital, Lemberg. The Germans are admittedly victorious in East Prussia.

London, Sept. 3.—The Petrograd (St. Petersburg) correspondent of the Post, sends the following on the operations on the Russian front: "Russia is scoring success after success againt Austria and is momentarily expecting news of a signal victory.

Can Guard Against Airships

London, Sept. 3.—The Antwerp correspondent of the Morning Post, after a close investigation into attempts of the Zeppelin airships in Antwerp, says he has arrived at the conclusion that the carrying power of the Zeppelins has been grossly exaggerated and that with proper precautions a city can guard almost wholly against airships.

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 3.—Both British and American ministers at Berne issued a note last evening, warning subjects of their countries that French railways are unable to guarantee communications beyond Paris from to-day. Reading between the lines, the communication was taken to mean here that German cavalry may cut the northern lines of France any day now.

Albanian Town Bombarded

Rome, Sept. 3.—News received here from Durazzo, Albania, says insurgents have again bombarded the town. Two projectiles fell near the royal palace, which is still guarded by Italian sailors. A report received here from Belgrade states that the Servian government has been officially notified that the Russian plan will infallibly lead to the occupation of Vienna. News from Servia also declares great excitement prevails in that country over the reported Austrian defeat. Men from 15 to 65 years of age have been called to arms.

London, Sept. 3.—A despatch to the Telegraph from Copenhagen says that the thirtieth list of losses suffered in war is printed in the German press. Commenting on it, the statement is made that the losses are very heavy, and one instance is given where a whole infantry regiment which had been stationed at Zabern, is lost. The Mecklenburg Grenadiers sustained important losses, and it seems, says the despatch, that more than 20,000 Mecklenburg troops have been lost.

Feeling Among Germans in Buffalo

Hamilton, Sept. 3.—Scout Commissioner Heming, an ex-alderman, who is organizing a home guard here, told a startling story of German reservists at Buffalo. "The feeling in the German section there is intense," he said, "and we have information that there are 7,000 armed Germans in Buffalo alone, who are better equipped than the New York state militia.

"The cry is often heard in the German quarters in the States, 'On to Canada!'"

GERMAN AEROPLANES ARE ATTACKED BY FRENCH

PARIS, Sept. 3.—A fight in the air over Paris took place last evening. Three German aeroplanes hovered over the capital, and immediately two French machines were sent up to engage them.

Meanwhile machine guns mounted on public buildings and rifles kept up a constant fire. By this means one of the German machines became separated from the others and the French aviators flew swiftly in its direction. The Germans opened fire, to which the Frenchmen replied vigorously.

The engagement seemed to turn to the disadvantage of the German, who mounted speedily to a higher level, and holding this position, was saved from further attack. He finally disappeared in a northwest direction over Fort Romainville, after a vain pursuit.

The other German [illegible] escaped the fire of the [illegible] ter circling [illegible] time, [illegible]

CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY.

THERE have been many suggestions made through the press and otherwise as to the benefits to be gained by Canadian and United States manufacturers taking advantage of the war situation, which has caused the importing of immense amounts of goods from Germany and other European countries to cease, and manufacturing them in America. Already the United States manufacturers have not been slow to take in the situation, and now many of those who are financially able to do so, are extending their plants and in every way possible getting ready to meet the shortage that is bound to occur in many lines that have hitherto been imported from Germany and other European countries.

Canadian manufacturers, therefore, should not be slow to take in the situation as well, and, instead of closing their factories because the special lines they have been manufacturing, largely for foreign trade, can no longer be manufactured, should convert their factories to other suitable lines of manufacture which cannot now be imported and in which there are going to be shortages here before long.

The department of trade and commerce, in its weekly report, draws attention to the openings for Canadian trade in the altered conditions. An extract from the report says:

> "As an example, information has been received by an influential body of hardware dealers, that, as it is practically sure that certain goods which Germany has been supplying in increasing quantities, will no longer be procurable, importers must look for other sources of supply, and, wishing to enquire into the prospects of being able to obtain hardware generally from Canada, preliminary steps have been taken to ascertain how they are situated. It seems likely that the chief opening would be for export trade controlled by United Kingdom houses, but, to illustrate the extent to which German competition has invaded this market, trade returns show that in 1913 imports into the United Kingdom from Germany of wire nails reached 19,959 tons, and of wrought iron tubes 37,434 tons. A similar state of affairs msut affect many of the other branches of trade, and in articles for the production of which Canada possesses natural advantages, manufacturers who can produce economically upon a large scale and are advantageously located for export, should have exceptional opportunities for securing export trade, if they are prepared to take it up in a serious manner."

The imports include a vast variety of goods of all kinds, and, according to the classification adopted in the United Kingdom figures, consist roughly of 16 per cent. as to food, drink and tobacco; 9.5 per cent. as to raw materials, and 74.5 per cent. as to manufactured articles. The bulk of the business is, however, in manufactures, and the list covers almost every branch of trade, such as: Apparel, arms and ammunition, motor cars and cycles and parts, chemicals, drugs and dyestuffs, china and earthenware, clocks, cotton manufactures (including gloves, hosiery, lace, ribbons, and trimmings), electrical goods, fancy goods, glass and bottles, hardware, scientific instruments, leather and its manufactures, machinery, brass and bronze manufactures, iron and steel manufactures (including iron and steel partly and wholly manufactured), zinc, pianos, oilseed cake, paper, silk (including ribbons), rubber manufactures, starch, toys and games, woollen and worsted manufactures (including stuffs and hosiery, and also yarns).

It would therefore appear that now is Canada's opportunity to very materially extend her manufacturing; but, while the government is doing much to assist in this matter, it must be borne in mind that it is necessary to make it possible for Canadian manufacturers to procure the necessary capital to meet the demands that would be required in the extending of the different businesses. In order to carry out any great extension of our manufacturing, the banks will have to considerably relax in their present method of doing business, and the government can make this possible.

"ANGELIC VAPORINGS."

FREQUENTLY, of late, we hear certain sinister remarks to the effect that Mr. Norman Angell is strictly under cover, his "theories" having been rendered as nothingness by the present eruption in Europe. The Canadian Courier speaks of that gentleman's statements as "Norman Angellic Vaporings." The opinion of these people seems to be that Mr. Angell believed war to be impossible, and built up theories to that effect. This recalls an incident which occurred last winter in Toronto, when the Ulster situation was to the fore. Mr. Angell was delivering a lecture in Convocation Hall. He prefaced his remarks by stating that he was not there to discuss the probability of war, or the utility of continued preparations for war, and then proceeded to deliver his arguments much as they are given in his books. Immediately at the close of his lecture a prominent gentleman, who evidently did not catch the thread of the argument, asked Mr. Angell what was his opinion upon Ulster, to which Mr. Angell aptly replied: "I have no opinion upon Ulster."

Mr. Angell is not a politician. His arguments are neither obtuse nor ambiguous, and any one who has read his "Foundations of International Polity," which is his latest and best book, cannot fail to see that he has said nothing which the present situation contradicts.

"It is impossible to forecast," he says in the above book, "what influences may direct the action of the Governments — some unforeseen turn of events may render one aggressive."

His main position is that wars of aggression do not bring about the economic conditions for which the offensive side is fighting; that "military force as a means to the end for which states exist," is incomplete. To quote him again: "I beg you to note this, that, because I do not believe in force, I do not believe in defence — that is to say, I do not believe in allowing the other man's force to settle any matter in dispute. . . . I believe that war is what Mr. Bonar Law has called it: the failure of human wisdom; that the employment of force as between civilized men is a mistake. It can be eliminated from human intercourse in two ways: by confronting force on one side with equivalent force on the other, so that neither can be employed. That way is the soldier's way. However costly, burdensome and dangerous it may be, it may be the necessary price of human imperfection. But there is another way: by the growing realization, on the part of those who provoke the use of force, that it is ineffective, a realization that will come of the slow and piecemeal enlargement of understanding on this subject. If that way is ever to play its part in the elimination of political war, as it has already played its part in the elimination of religious war, it will be because those who think they see an error or misconception in the matter, do their best, however feebly or obscurely, to clear it up. That may not be specifically the soldier's work, but it is somebody's work; and I believe that soldiers who respect honest endeavour, even though it may not be in their own field, will not disparage it."

We must concede this outstanding fact, that, in the present instance, in the engagements of supposedly civilized nations, force on one side is being confronted with equivalent force on the other, and we have war. Surely, then, there is only the second (or some still unknown) way remaining in which to prevent other wars — intellectual conceptions must prevail. Rivalry in military armament has produced the very evil which it was forged to prevent.

Only Under the British Flag.

Calgary News-Telegram.

Sergeant Vorster, who fought against Britain with the Boers in South Africa, goes as one of the volunteers from Port Arthur, this time to fight for Great Britain. It is only under the British flag that such things happen.

The Selfish Women.

Toronto World.

There is not a word of reproach intended for women who require the support or assistance of husbands or sons and who cannot therefore spare them to the country. But those who give way to an affectionate selfishness have nothing of the true spirit of patriotism, and are unworthy to stand in the ranks with the noble and self-devoted women of the nation.

The Press as War Auxiliaries.

London Daily Mail.

The press has co-operated in this secrecy. But that is, after all, only to say that the press has understood its duty to the country and has met in every possible way the wishes of the War Office and Government. Newspapers have proved that they can be potent war auxiliaries by the mere fact of concealing secrets vital to the nation's existence from an enemy whose spies are everywhere and whose secret service funds are lavished with inexhaustible prodigality.

British Superiority.

Journal of Commerce.

That even the Germans are prone to admit the superiority of British civilization over their own is seen by the following item, taken from the New York Times: Baron Alvo von Alvensleben, head of a German syndicate holding timber concessions in British Columbia, refused yesterday to comment on a report that the authorities of the Dominion were preparing to confiscate his holdings. When pressed for an opinion, he said only that he was quite confident of obtaining just treatment in any British territory.

Press Influence for Humanity.

Springfield Republican.

The century during which the press had a chance to tell the truth about warfare was a century of increasing amelioration of its hardships and of increasing regard for public opinion. There is a real danger that without such a check much of the ground gained by humanitarian effort and international agreement will be lost. No matter how civilized a nation may be in peace, it cannot be trusted to remain civilized in war, and the domination of men trained to militarism and unrestrained by fear of exposure, leads easily and naturally into shocking abuses. The ugliest part of war is the sufferings of the people of an invaded country; at best these must be terrible, and an invading army is always accused of gross abuses. To meet such accusations the testimony of fair-minded and competent correspondents would be of real value, even if they did not publish a word till all was over.

Just Plain Murder.

New York Times.

Had Antwerp been besieged and had been under bombardment, no protest could be made against the use of the Zeppelin airships for dropping explosives upon its buildings and into its streets. But Antwerp was not under bombardment. This German airship was not part of the besieging force, and by dropping explosives upon the city the persons in control of the Zeppelin showed that they were willing to take innocent human lives, lives of men, women and children, alike, in sheer wantonness, for the killing of the inhabitants of Antwerp by this means can be of no possible advantage to the armies of Germany and has no rational place in her war plans. The crime is similar to that of a person who, conceiving himself to have suffered some offence, should open a murderous fire upon a crowd in the street. Under our laws, the act of such a person would be murder.

Sea Control Will Settle It.

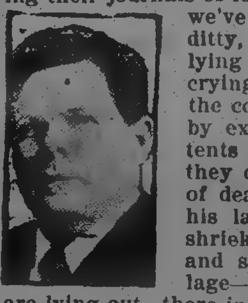
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

If Germany and Austria can be penned up in the heart of Europe, with their external trade cut off and their productive men engaged in warfare and not on the fields and in the factories, they must win a decisive victory in a short war or they must be starved into submission. Of course, they will attempt to outmanoeuvre their opponents and get supplies. In the Civil War here it took the North four years to starve out the South, which did not have a quarter of the resources of the two Germanic Empires now fighting the rest of Europe. And the North commanded the sea.

As the land campaign proceeds it is becoming apparent that the final result will depend on the mastery of the sea and the control of the avenues of trade over which food supplies must move. And the German navy has not yet delivered a blow.

THE HARVEST

By Walt Mason



The kings and the colonels, fatigued by the strain, are writing their journals of losses and gain. "We've conquered a city, we've smashed a redoubt! Oh, sing a glad ditty, with jubilant shout!" The dead men are lying out there on the plain, and women are crying and children complain. The kings and the colonels in blood do not wade; they judge by externals the progress they've made; in tents over yonder they're painting maps red; they don't have to wander through windrows of dead. They're so busy trailing the foe to his lair, they don't hear the wailing, the shrieks of despair. "We've captured a village and seventeen farms! They're given to pillage—God favors our arms!" But dead men are lying out there in the rain; the wounded are dying—your triumph's in vain. In darkness and sorrow the widowed ones wait, still hoping to-morrow may bring to the gate, the step of some darling who went forth alone, when nations were snarling like dogs for a bone. In vain is their sighing, their watching is vain; the loved ones are lying out there with the slain.

M. H. Keilliher, of Montreal, chief engineer of the G.T.R., has resigned.

The Prince of Wales relief fund passed the $10,000,000 mark yesterday.

Vice-President Marshall, of the U. S., authorised a published statement yesterday that President Wilson would be a candidate for re-election.

Floods resulting from recent typhoons have inundated two-thirds of Manila, P.I., causing enormous losses. Conditions are alarming. Thousands have been driven from their homes.

As Morris Thurston, of Dunsford, near Lindsay, was taking his loaded gun out of his boat after duck shooting it went off. He was shot in the arm and chest and died several hours later.

Clad only in night attire, scores of summer boarders at the Colonial Arms Hotel, at Deep Brook, N.S., narrowly escaped death early yesterday when the hotel was destroyed with a loss of $40,000.

Word has just been received of the death in action of Lieut. Bertram Denison of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry. He was a son of Admiral John Denison, a brother of Col. Geo. T. Denison, of Toronto.

TURKEY DECLARES WAR.

U. S. Despatch Says The Porte Has Joined Germany and Austria.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3. — With 500,000 troops mobilised and ready for instant action, Turkey has declared war on the allies. Authentic word to that effect was received here yesterday.

The same authority declared the first move of the Turkish campaign would be directed simultaneously against Russia and England. A flying army would be sent into the Caucasus to strike the Russians on their flank and rear, the other army would go directly to Egypt.

"Turkey has struggled against giving up its neutrality," said a diplomat, friendly to the Turkish program last night. "But she realizes that the present conflict, so far as she is concerned, is only the beginning of a greater and more devastating struggle among the nations of Europe. In the struggle she would have everything to lose, whether the allies won or Germany and Austria were victorious. Therefore, she must defend her own hand."

A Question of Days.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A St. Petersburg despatch to the Reuter's Telegram Co. conveys a semi-official statement to the effect that in well-informed circles in St. Petersburg the opinion is expressed that war between Turkey and Greece is now only a question of two or three days. Numerous Turkish troops, the despatch states, have landed on the shores of Asia Minor at Smyrna, while near Chatalja and to the east of Scutari fortifications are being feverishly thrown up under the direction of German officers.

Germans Out of Breath.

PARIS, Sept. 3. — Commenting on the war situation yesterday, The Temps says:

"It is not the few troops which the Germans can push ahead that can besiege Paris. The important point is the centre, where we perceive a hesitation. The German troops are out of breath, and one of their army corps has been transferred toward their eastern frontier. It is probable that we have in front of us on the centre forces diminished by fatigue, by our fire and by withdrawals to reinforce the East Prussian army.

"In any case our contingents have had their vacancies filled and their ammunition replenished, while the enemy is encountering great difficulty in getting supplies."

Vannutelli Is Injured.

ROME, Sept. 3.—The Tribuna says that Cardinal Seraphin Vannutelli, the Dean of the Sacred College, who is almost blind, fell yesterday and injured his leg. The cardinal fainted from the pain, but soon revived and was taken to his cell in the conclave. He is 80 years of age.

Lichnowsky In Disgrace.

ROME, Sept. 3. — A Berlin despatch states that Prince Lichnowsky, ex-Ambassador to London, is in disgrace with the German Emperor because he reported that England would not go to war and that the Irish controversy would prevent the unity of the British nation.

GERMAN BARON CAUGHT.

He Was Trying To Persuade Irish From Going To the Front.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Baron Lewis Von Horst of Coburg, Germany, was arrested in London yesterday on the charge of espionage. Baron Von Horst has extensive hop interests in California.

A friend who visited Baron Von Horst says he is charged with circulating a manifesto advising the Irish not to enlist in the British army. Baron Von Horst denies this.

For several years past the baron has made his home in London, where his business interests have been large. For a number of years he has been one of the active supporters of a London committee which devoted its energies in opposing Andrew Carnegie and his peace plans, in the avowed belief that Mr. Carnegie was attempting to bring about a union between the United States and Great Britain. He was associated in this work with Miss Lillian Scott Troy of San Francisco, who has appeared several times before the foreign relations committee of the Senate at Washington in opposition to the ratification of Anglo-Saxon arbitration treaties.

BRITAIN MAY RETALIATE.

Mine Sowing Germans Likely To Receive Sharp Treatment.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The Times' naval correspondent, discussing the fact that the German fleet has so far declined the British challenge to a pitched battle by taking refuge in the expedient of sowing mines in the North Sea, suggests that it may be necessary for the Admiralty, which has heretofore declined to condescend to German methods in this respect, to take retaliatory measures in the near future.

"We may either have to use mines for the purpose of preventing German mine-laying vessels leaving German ports," says the correspondent, "or we may decide that crews of vessels used as mine layers should be given short shrift as pirates. It may also become necessary to forbid all traffic at night within certain areas under penalty of vessels contravening these regulations being sunk on sight."

Germans Moving North.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — The Ostend correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Co. reports that an extensive movement of German troops towards the north has been seen from Brussels. It is believed the Germans are going to Antwerp, where an investment and bombardment are expected.

British Guns Killed Thousands.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—One of the 300 British wounded who arrived at Southampton yesterday was a gunner who was stricken blind while tending his gun. He said the Germans came up in closely packed lines and that the British guns simply slaughtered them. He estimated that throughout the long hours the fighting was in progress before blindness overtook him thousands of Germans had fallen.

The villain always gets his on the stage. In real life he gets ours.

Lesson X.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 6, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xii, 28-34, 41-44—Memory Verses, 29-31—Golden Text, Luke x, 27—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson consists of three parts—the question of the scribe whom Matthew calls a lawyer, Christ's great question and the record of the widow's two mites. The first is recorded by Matthew and Mark, the second by Matthew, Mark and Luke and the third by Matthew and Luke. Having answered and put to silence the Pharisees, Herodians and Sadducees, He is now approached by one of the Pharisees, who was a scribe well acquainted with the law. His question is, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" or "Which is the first commandment of all?"

Here was another tempter, and yet the Lord graciously condescended to answer him. If one came to us in the same spirit and we knew it, would we be gracious enough to make reply? Our Lord left us an example to follow Him in all things. He meekly replied to this critic, quoting from Deut. vi, 4, 5; Lev. xix, 18, the summary of the Ten Commandments, which His own hand had written twice on the tables of stone, that the righteousness which is required of us is to love the Lord our God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength and our neighbor as ourselves, adding, according to Matt. xxii, 40, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." The scribe confessed that He had answered well and said that to do this was more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, to which Jesus replied, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The scribe saw more clearly than most of his fellows that God looked for a right heart rather than anything merely outward. He understood the words of Isa. i, 10-15, and all similar words concerning the abomination that Israel's sacrifices were to the Lord because it was all mere form, all outward, without a thought of the forgiveness of their sins or their need of it. In the first sacrifice ever seen on earth man gave God nothing, had no hand in it at all. The Lord Himself did all and provided freely the redemption clothing that man needed (Gen. iii, 21).

The law of God, which is so holy and just and good that man cannot keep it and which has been kept perfectly only by Jesus Christ, who is the true ark of the covenant and the mercy seat, is always intended to lead us to Christ, who is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. x, 3, 4; xiii, 10). The great and all important question is not what we should do or should not do, what we know or do not know, but what is Jesus Christ to us, what think ye of Christ (Matt. xxii, 42). To those Jews who expected a Messiah, a son of David, but who did not understand the prophecies concerning Him and that He was to be truly a man and yet truly God in one person, the question as to how the Messiah could be David's son and also David's Lord was what might be called a poser for them.

According to Matt. xxii, 42, He asked them, "What think ye of Christ?" (or the Messiah). "Whose son is He?" They replied, "The son of David." Then came the difficult question for them, "How doth David in the Spirit, in the book of Psalms, call Him Lord, saying, 'The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool?'" (Ps. cx, 1.) Jesus Himself answers the question. In John xvi, 28, He said, "I came forth from the Father and am come into the world." As Mimpriss says in his harmony, the question can only be answered aright as recognizing the fact that Christ proceeded forth and came from His Father in heaven, and thus is David's Lord, while, as being man, He was "of the house and lineage of David" and so was David's son. In Him were united the divine and human natures (John i, 1-14; I John i, 1, 2). One of the very last titles that He gives Himself in the New Testament is "the root and the offspring of David" (Rev. xxii, 16). David came from Him as His Lord, and as man He came from David. He is the Son of Man, inheriting all things, and He is to sit on David's throne (Luke i, 31-33). Personally I am comforted by the fact that as perfect man He knows me thoroughly, and as God He is able to save, to keep and to present me faultless because I have accepted Him as my Saviour.

He had taught them to beware of Pharisees, Sadducees and Herodians, and now He says, "Beware of the scribes," mentioning their desire for praise of men, their seeming religiousness and at the same time their oppression of poor widows whose offering of as little as two mites sometimes counted more in His sight than the abundance of many rich people. The poor widow of our lesson cast in all that she had, even all her living. This drew her very near to Him. When any one says "This is the widow's mite" as they give some trifle to the Lord, say as kindly as possible, "Make it two, or do not mention it, and do not compare it with the Bible story unless it is all you have."

FOR HOUSEWIVES

Orange Combination.

Slice oranges, bananas, and apples alternately into a glass bowl, sweetening with powdered sugar, and adding a little chopped or shaved ice if desired. In another dish make a dressing of one part olive oil, two parts lemon juice, and one part sherry or rum. Stir well together and add a sprig of crushed mint to give flavor. When the dressing is well mixed, pour over the fruit and place the mint on top.

Iced Tea and Coffee.

The tea should be made fresh, but if there is not sufficient time to make coffee anew, it can be done early in the day. Pour the hot tea over ice, add lemon juice and rind and Jamaica rum, if desired. Put the coffee with a generous allowance of cream and pulverised sugar into a glass jar with shaved ice; cover with a shaker and shake for several minutes. The shaking makes it light, foamy and delicious.

Cream Johnny Cake.

Sieve together three breakfastcupfuls of Indian corn or maize meal, two breakfastcupfuls of wheaten flour, one breakfastcupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, and half a teaspoonful of salt. Work to a moderately thick batter with two breakfastcupfuls of cream, pour into a tin greased with butter, bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven, and serve hot, cut into squares with a well-heated knife.

For the Children

Misses West and Carhart at Tuxedo Horse Show.

At the horse show recently held at fashionable Tuxedo the members of the pony class attracted considerable attention. This class was made up of young folks who exhibited their favorite ponies and horses. Arrayed in the latest riding and driving habits, they presented a very smart, not to say sporty, appearance. Society's little folk are familiar with ponies from their infancy and as soon as they are able to sit in the saddle are taught to ride. They are also schooled in handling the reins and are altogether thoroughly versed in horse lore. The two little girls whose portraits are shown above are Misses J. Warner West and V. Carhart. They were exhibitors at the show.

An After Dinner Trick.

Tommy Brown, a little boy, tried this trick on some of his friends and was thought very clever. Just when dinner was nearly over Bridget quietly announced that the grocer must have forgotten to bring the nuts and raisins. The company were all more or less disappointed, but Tom, the host, seemed very angry at this omission. Impatiently he said to Bridget, "Fetch me the dish in which the nuts and raisins should have been served." Pretending to be very much annoyed, he flourished his own napkin vigorously over the empty dish; then, carefully lifting the napkin, much to the surprise of all, the dish was revealed full of nuts and raisins.

This is how Tom managed the trick. He had got Bridget to sew two napkins together all around the edges and to slit one across the middle. The space between the napkins made a bag, into which Tom had supplied the nuts and raisins. He held the bag between his knees, with another napkin over his lap. While he was gesticulating in apparent disappointment, he had quickly changed napkins. The trick was a clever bit of homemade slight of hand and all shouted at Tom's cleverness.

"Elephant Tag."

In playing the game called "elephant tag" each child takes the name of an animal—dog, cat, kangaroo, panther or anything he wishes, but one must be the elephant, and one must be the mouse. The elephant tries to catch all the animals except the mouse, and the mouse tries to catch the elephant. If the elephant touches one of the animals that animal must go into the menagerie (probably the front yard). He tries to get all the animals into the menagerie without getting caught by the mouse. If there are many children there, can be two elephants and two mice. If one of the elephants is caught he is put into the menagerie, too, but he can be rescued if the other elephant touches him.

A "C" Game.

Each question can be answered by a word ending in "cy."

A stately C? Aristocracy.
A royal C? His excellency.
A deceptive C? Fallacy.
A criminal C? Piracy.
A much desired C? Currency.
A clever C? Policy.
An exclusive C? Privacy.
An aromatic C? Spicy.
A tempting C? Delicacy.
A merciful C? Clemency.

An Intelligent Horse.

A story is being told of the intelligence of a horse belonging to a rustic Scotchman of Ardow, Mull. It lost a shoe and, managing to get out of the field where it was grazing, traveled a considerable distance to a blacksmith, who was astonished to find the horse standing in front of the door holding up a foreleg. The horse was shod and galloped back home quite contented.

Teddy and Miss Rainy Day.

When Teddy meets Miss Rainy Day
He wears a rubber coat of gray,
A drooping hat protects his head,
A big umbrella's o'er him spread,
And on the street he seems to be
A blot of black and gray to me.

But if I peep beneath the rim
Of his umbrella, black and grim,
I find the loveliest surprise
Of laughing lips and merry eyes.
And I laugh back and quite forget
The grayness and the rain and wet.

And 'tis the very selfsame way
With what we call Miss Rainy Day.
Behind her cloak of dismal clouds
Gay little sunbeams lurk in crowds,
And if you look for them you'll see How nice Miss Rainy Day can be.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Bullish estimates on the Canadian crop and on the yield of spring wheat in the United States tended today to make the price of wheat advance. The market closed firm, ⅜c to 1c above last night. Corn scored a net gain of 1¼c to 1⅞c, and oats ¼c to ⅞c. Provisions finished unchanged to 22½c down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 2.—Wheat prices opened fairly steady, influenced by American markets. Afterwards there was good buying in futures and a fair demand for cash wheat, and prices strengthened on all months around 1¼c to 1⅜c up to noon, October leading. Unfavorable weather conditions practically all thru Manitoba and in parts of Eastern Saskatchewan, and the spring wheat districts of the States were factors in causing the advance. Exporters are still going slow. Wheat closed ⅝c to ⅞c higher.

Cash grains closed—Wheat, ⅛c to ⅞c higher; oats, ½c to 1c higher; barley, unchanged, to ½c higher; flax, 1¼c higher.

Inspections were: 265 cars, against 160 last year. In sight today, 360 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—The undertone to the market for oats continues strong. Prices have scored a further advance of 1c per bushel with sales of No. 2 C.W. as high as 67c. Some holders ask 68c.

There has also been a sharp advance in prices for Manitoba barley, with sales of No. 3, to arrive, at 68c to 70c. An active trade continues in flour; the tone of the market is firm with no change to note in prices. Millfeed is in good demand with offerings small. Baled hay is active and firm. A fair trade is passing in butter. Cheese is rather quiet, but the undertone to the market is strong and prices are working steadily towards a higher level. Eggs active and firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 2.—Wheat—December, $1.15⅝; No. 1 hard, $1.23⅜; No. 1 northern, $1.15⅜ to $1.21⅜; No. 2 do., $1.10⅜ to $1.19⅜.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 67 cars, comprising 502 cattle, 1643 hogs, 984 sheep and 250 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

A few choice steers sold up to $8.25 to $8.50; medium, $7.90 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., are selling at $7.50 to $7.75; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7.25; stockers, $5.50 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Not many milkers and springers were offered, but prices remained steady at $50 to $90 each, the bulk selling at $65 to $75.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate and values practically unchanged. Choice veal calves, $10 to $10.50; good, $8.50 to $9.50; medium, $7.50 to $8.50; common, $6.50 to $7.50; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $5.50 to $6.25; yearlings, $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $5; lambs, $7.75 to $8.25, the bulk going at $8 to $8.25; cull lambs at $6.50 to $7.50.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $10.25 and $10.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—At the C. P. R. live stock market receipts of live stock for the week ended August 29 were 1300 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 900 calves. Offerings for sale today were 1200 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1300 hogs and 350 calves.

The tone of the market for cattle is firm owing to the fact that the supply of butchers' stock coming forward is not excessive, for which there is a fairly good demand. Trade was active, with sales choice steers at $8.75 to $9; good at $8.25 to $8.50; fair at $7.25 to $8, and common at $6 to $6.75, while butchers' cows brought from $6 to $7.75, and bulls from $6 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. The feature of the market was the continued good demand from packers for canning stock.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Cattle—Receipts, 15,000; market firm. Beeves, $6.85 to $10.95; Texas steers, $6.35 to $9.35; stockers and feeders, $5.50 to $8.25; cows and heifers, $3.90 to $9.40; calves, $7.50 to $11.25.

Canada Will Protect Aliens.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3. — A statement was issued by the Government yesterday afternoon reassuring German and Austro-Hungarian residents in Canada that they need not be apprehensive as to their safety at the present time. Many residents of this nationality in the west have been particularly anxious, and have been under the impression the Government intends to deprive them of their freedom to hold property and carry on business.

Dissecting the Bluff.

When called by some one unafraid
A bluff will melt away,
Serenely from the landscape fade,
Nor for an encore stay.
Say "Boo!" and look it in the eye
And you will never fail,
When it has measured your defi,
To see the bluff turn pale.

Sit down and let it have its way,
Nor offer a protest,
And it will want you to obey
And work that it may rest,
And things will go from worse to worse
If you refuse to fight,
For it will fancy in your purse
It has a vested right.

But meet it with a frowning front,
At its pretentious scoff,
And show it in a manner blunt
The place where it gets off,
And it will meekly fold its tents,
Prepare at once to quit,
Take baggage, bag and bluster hence
And like an Arab flit.

On timid, unobtrusive souls
It feeds and asks for more,
And as its eye in frenzy rolls
It darkly hints at gore,
But penetrate its thin disguise,
Be merciless and rough,
And you will learn, to your surprise,
A bluff is just a bluff.

A Family Fight

The following table indicates the way in which all the sovereigns whose countries are concerned in the present European war are related by blood or marriage. It makes the tremendous conflict look like a "family fight."

1. King George V of Great Britain and Ireland, everybody's cousin.
2. Tsaritza of Russia, first cousin of King George and of Emperor William.
3. Emperor William of Germany, grandson of Queen Victoria.
4. Queen Maud of Norway, sister of King George.
5. Queen Sophia of Greece, sister of Emperor William.
6. Queen Victoria of Spain, first cousin of Emperor William, of King George and of the Tsaritza of Russia.
7. Nicholas II. Tsar of Russia, first cousin of King George V.
8. Queen Helena of Italy, daughter of King Nicholas of Montenegro.
9. King Albert of Belgium, cousin of King George V of Great Britain and Ireland.
10. Crown Princess Militza of Montenegro, cousin of King George.
11. King Haakon, of Norway, first cousin and brother-in-law of King George, and first cousin of the Tsar of Russia.
12. Crown Princess Margaret of Sweden, grand-daughter of Queen Victoria.

HUNTER FATALLY HURT WHEN GUN IS DISCHARGED

Lindsay, Sept. 3.—The little village of Dunsford and the new summer resort known as Greenhurst were thrown into a state of excitement Tuesday morning, when the news spread that Mr. Norris Thurston had met with a serious shooting accident while out shooting ducks, an accident which claimed his life. Accidents have occurred almost yearly during the duck hunting season in the marshes adjacent to Sturgeon Lake, but the good people of Dunsford never dreamed that one of their popular young residents would be a victim this year.

Early Tuesday morning James Morris Thurston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Thurston, accompanied by Mr. Burwell Kennedy, set out for Greenhurst resort, where they embarked in their canoe and proceeded to bag a few duck. The birds were not very plentiful, and about 8.30 o'clock they decided to return. When the wharf was reached young Thurston proceeded to get out, and, grabbing the gun by the barrel, he stepped out of the canoe, hauling the gun after him. In some manner the trigger came in contact with the side of the canoe, or the wharf, and the discharge immediately followed.

As Thurston was holding the gun in his right hand, the discharge shattered the wrist and passed up the arm, tearing the muscles and breaking the arm just above the elbow. Several grains of shot lodged in his chest, near the shoulder.

Kenendy, his young companion, was horrified at the accident, but lost no time in helping the unfortunate hunter to a nearby dwelling. Medical aid was at once summoned, but it was 11 o'clock when physicians from Lindsay, Drs. Wood and Collison, and Dr. Welsh, surgeon of the Ross Memorial hospital, arrived on the scene. Miss Reid, trained nurse, was also present to render every attention possible to the injured man. By this time Thurston had lost considerable blood, which, together with the shock, made him very weak. The medical men did everything possible to save the young fellow's life, and remained on hand for several hours. In the early hours of evening, however, his condition grew worse, and he passed away about 7.30.

The accident and death has cast a gloom over the community, as the victim was one of the popular residents of Dunsford. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Thurston and is survived also by three brothers and one sister, namely: J. M. Thurston, of Millersmith; Emily and Maud, and Wallace and Lorne, at home.

OPINIONS OF EXPERT ON THE RUSSIAN ARMY

The question of the military strength of Russia is being debated in many circles in Europe just now. The following article, which appears in the Manchester Guardian, is by a military correspondent, who is also a well known war correspondent and has personal knowledge of the Russian army:

"All eyes in Europe are turned toward the army of the Czar. It is the most gigantic military machine in the world, and no one really knows its fighting value. On its peace strength it disposes of a million of men between the German and Austrian frontiers in Europe and the seaboard of Vladivostok in Manchuria. If mobilised in its entirety it would quadruple the astounding numbers of its peace strength.

"We are not, however, concerned with this vast military machine in its entirety. The European army corps of Russia from the point of numbers are considerable enough to give pause to both Germany and Austria if their efficiency is equal to their ponderous numbers.

Have Experience.

"Russian military efficiency has always presented an enigma to the students of contemporary military history. By all the laws of production the Russian army in Europe should be as formidable as any trained force in the world. It has the crowning advantage of experience in modern war. It is accepted by military students that after a protracted campaign which has not been decided by exhaustion the beaten army emerges from the struggle with a knowledge and experience that is almost superior to that of its successful enemy.

"The question is: Was the Slavonic temperament of such a quality that it would profit by the lessons learned so bitterly in the Far East? This is one of the questions to which the students have never yet been able to give a confident answer. Again, is the army, recruited as it is from nearly a dozen races, many of which are secretly hostile to the central Government, a trustworthy instrument? Again the students are at fault.

"The historical record of the Russian army does not give one great hope that the Muscovite, with all his numbers, will ever be able successfully to initite a campaign against an enemy with whom overwhelming numbers are not the chief essential to success. Russia may mobilize her armies in their millions but has she the staff accommodation to manipulate them? Judging by the story of her failure against the Japanese in Manchuria one would say that the Russian officer of today is little better than he was a generation ago.

Slav Mind is Slow.

"The Slav mind, quick though it may be to make plans and estimates, is slow in interpreting them into action and movement. This seems to be a congenital fault and it discounts much of the experience which the rude shocks of Liau-Yang, the Shaho and Mukden brought to an army is Ivan Ivanoff, the Russian soldier, unimaginative, uneducated, students believed to be capable of all requirements.

"The main asset of the Russian army is Ivan Ivanoff, uneducated, docile by the circumstances of his lot, he is the best material for the manufacture of the soldier that has to die in heaps in the world. Unimaginative, he is tenacious and fearless; uneducated, he is devoid of class ambitions and sensitiveness; docile, he may be herded to death or led to victory with equal lack of interest in the event in which he is but an animate pawn. We speak, of course, of the Russian moujik and not of the Poles and Jews that are serving against their will. It is not likely that the Russians will experiment with Polish troops in Galicia or East Prussia.

"These distinctions, however, do not add to the simplicity of the labors of the General Staff, nor do they make for the efficiency of the railway services, upon which will depend any success that Russia could hope for in operations against her German enemies.

Have Material.

"In material the Russians are well equipped. Thought material of war goes a long way, yet it is not the last weight in the balance of success or failure in war. In Manchuria the Russians had the better material in the way of artillery, cavalry and engineering equipment. It was not the material nor the men behind the material that failed. It was the directing mind.

"Nothing will make the writer believe that the Russian officers, taken en masse, are good. Those who have graduated through the war schools are often brilliant theorists, but little more. Those that have not graduated—and this is the huge majority—have, it is true, a little more education than the men they command, but about the same limit of imagination. It is a case of the blind leading the blind.

"The writer's opinion is that the General Staff in St. Petersburg knows within its inner conscience the truth of these assertions, and it is upon this thesis that he doubts the sincerity of the pro-Slav utterances in the Russian capital."

UTTERLY RECKLESS IN ATTEMPT TO DOWN BRITISH

London, Sept. 3.—A despatch received to-day from the Rev. Forbes Phillips, vicar of Gorleston, by the Daily Express, says; "I have just met a French officer who has come from the lines. He says the Germans are making a tremendous effort to crush the British force.

"The idea of the enemy," he says, "is to dishearten and paralyze the allies by a stupendous defeat of the British. He is enthusiastic over the cool brain of the British. He says the kaiser is most bitter over the British coming into the war, so he is throwing army corps after army corps against them, utterly reckless of his men, to gain a dramatic coup and revenge himself.

"The British are inflicting enormous losses on the Germans and doing it with admirable coolness.

"The Germans are firing a perfectly new and highly explosive shell, which has a most devastating effect, he told me. This new gun and shell have been kept a profound secret, and only now have been brought into action. In his military experience, he says, he has seen nothing like this new arm.

"The German cavalry are within a few miles of Boulogne, having come around the left flank of the British. Personally, I do not think they will come in any numbers, as the British warships, which are in the offing, could shell them out of any position here."

How War Affects Sport in Britain

London, Sept. 3.—The call to colors of the English Army threatened at one time, to put a complete stopper on all sports throughout the British Isles. Coming at a time right in the middle of the cricket, and just at the commencement of the soccer season, all the clubs were prepared to cancel their fixtures, but at a representative meeting recently held it was decided to continue the games, and save adding further gloom caused by the war by throwing a large number of professionals out of employment. Only one county, Buckinghamshire, who are in the second division of the County Cricket Championship found it impossible to keep their engagements owing to eight out of eleven of them going to the war. The following well-known players have also responded to the call:—Sir A. White, Yorkshire's captain; Captain R. Baggallay, Derbyshire's skipper; A. H. Hornby, captain of Lancashire; Major H. S. Rush, of Surrey; Captain H. S. Poyntz, Somersetshire; Captain W. M. Turner, Essex; D. C. Robinson, Gloucestershire; A. W. Carr and P. P. Gregory, Nottinghamshire; Sharp and Challoner, Leicestershire; H. J. A. Foster, Worcestershire; and five members of the Hampshire team. Surrey's fine ground, Kennington Oval, has been taken over by the military authorities and their remaining fixtures will be played off at Lords, the headquarters of Middlesex. The call has affected the Scottish soccer clubs to the extent of all the teams having to give up one or two players, and while the English Association clubs have all felt the loss of some players, they are able to replace the men who have gone on active service, as the season does not commence until Sept. st. The grounds of Notts County, Everton, Manchester City and Stockport County have all been seized for use of the toops, but with so many clubs headquarters in the neighborhood, their fixtures will be carried through on other ground without difficulty. All the soccer clubs throughout the country have come forward in a cound practical way by handing over to the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund all the gate money received from the large crows who attended the practice games, and are following this up by giving a percentage of the gate receipts from all the League games until the war is ended. The Scottish Football Assaciation sent a fine example by forwarding a check for $5000.00, and the Rugby Union and Marlebone Cricket Club have each contributed $1250.00.

LOOKING AT THE BRIGHT SIDE

OVER IN A YEAR.
(Vancouver Sun.)

Lloyd's, which has exceptional opportunities for sizing up any given situation, predicts that the war will be over within a year.

QUIETLY EFFECTIVE.
(Guelph Mercury.)

The British have taken so far about 225 German vessels. You haven't heard much about it, have you? The brass band and the press agent can't accompany the navy.

THE OUTLOOK.
(Ottawa Free Press.)

Time, the sea and its control are fighting for the British cause. Winter and hunger will shortly work for the allies. No wonder there is a panic in Berlin, for it looks as if the Cossacks would soon be knocking at the gates.

THE BLUE BEHIND THE CLOUDS
(Minneapolis Journal.)

The student of history, or of revelation, if he looks aright, may clearly enough see the blue behind the dark clouds of the present—and take courage. Storms are for a day, but good weather is the rule. Courage and confidence in the divine plan need not be lost, no matter how serious the outlook. We are too near the present situation, for instance, to see it in its proper perspective.

FRENCH CONFIDENT.
(Hamilton Herald.)

Sir John French's dispatch to the war office doesn't read like the effusion of a general who is in the slightest dismayed at the campaign prospects, nor of one who has any doubts about the ability of the army under his command to hold its own.

CHEER UP.
(Stratford Beacon.)

"Don't be down-hearted." Lord Kitchener's confidence is centred in the final outcome of the war. A costly check on the German advance on Paris would be highly spectacular, but would not insure the end sought—the complete overthrow of German autocracy making for the curse of world-wide militarism.

"AND SHE'S GOT THE MONEY, TOO."
(London Statist.)

Should, however, circumstances arise to render so great an expenditure essential, we have no doubt whatever that out of new savings the country will be able to raise some £300,000,000 of money in the year for war purposes over and above any sums it may obtain by the sale of some portion of its great holding of foreign securities. Thus as far as the financial situation is concerned the position is one of great strength.

Some of the imaginary blessings we haven't would probably make us un happy if we had them.

September Forecasts

A regular storm period beginning in August, will reach its culminating crisis, in central to eastern states on September the 1st, 2nd and 3rd, followed closely to the Atlantic Ocean by rising barometer and change to colder weather.

A reactionary storm period has its central days on the 4th, 5th and 6th. This period finds the full moon on both the ecliptic and the equator, hence there is an eclipse of the moon on the 4th. This is another period in which the general convulsions of earth, sea and air will be most natural. If the barometer falls far below normal — results reasonably to be expected—there will be danger of violent, equatorial storms, reaching inland from the Gulf and south coasts, on and touching the 4th, 5th and 6th. Great electrical storms, and much kindred phenomena, will center on and about the 5th. For many hours, if not days, the true and trusty barometer will give warning from the southern gulf and sea, of West India disturbances heading northward toward our southern coast regions. We do not claim that this forecast must inevitably come true, but we do insist that the astronomic condition at and about this time is such as to warrant this warning to those most concerned. If danger is brewing along our south coasts, or far inland, unmistakable indications will appear, to all who will see them, in ample time to escape danger. Should no danger develop, surely no harm can result from that calm and commonsense watchfulness, which would prove the price of property and life, if the worst should come. This is no sensational alarm, but a calm forelook into the possible and probable face of conditions which would certainly bring alarm and consternation at on hour too late to think or plan or act. If very low barometer and great storms cover the south of this, and other September periods, gales and high winds will blow from northerly regions, followed over much of the country by unseasonable cold and frost.

A regular storm period is central on the 11th, only one day from the center of a mercury period center on the 12th. It must also be remembered that the annual, autumnal crisis of magnetic and electrical unrest falls from about the 8th to the 15th of September. This storm period is therefore coincident with the magnetic crisis, in the mercury period, and nearing the center of earth's autumnal equinoctial disturbance. We conclude that very general, wide-reaching and intense storm disturbances will appear from about Thursday the 10th to Monday the 14th. Auroral displays in the north sky, with phenomenal manifestation and overcharge of electrical and magnetic forces, on all instruments and appliances which are subject to such influence. Autumnal weather will most probably follow

NORMANS WERE BEATEN IN BATTLE AT LOUVAIN

City Destroyed by Germans Had an Interesting History

Louvain, Belgium, destroyed by the Germans, was once the seat of the dukes of Brabant and Burgundy, founders of the Hapsburg family and ancestors of Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria, whose ally has now wiped out the city with fire, making its population of over 43,000 homeless refugees.

The city has had an interesting history, was a strikingly beautiful place, and contained many features of world interest, including its renowned university, many graduates from which institution are residents of Detroit and Michigan. The city was situated on the River Dyle, about eighteen miles east of Brussels. Formerly it was the capital of the province of Brabant and was surrounded by earthen ramparts. These had been leveled and turned into promenades and drives of more than seven miles.

Away back in 891 A. D. the Normans were beaten in battle at Louvain. In 986 the town had its own counts and independence. These counts of Louvain later became the dukes of Brabant. In the fourteenth century Louvain was the great cloth mart of Europe, employing 15,000 workers in its factories and shops. In the sixteenth century plague took 50 per cent. of its population. There were many revolts against the rulers of Louvain, and in 1382 Duke Wanceslaus of Brabant recaptured the town from the revolutionaries, giving the people such harsh treatment that about half of them fled to Holland and England. In modern times Louvaine's textile industry became extinct, the town's principal products being beer, spirits, tobacco, lace, and starch.

Louvain's town hall was considered one of the finest examples of architecture on the continent of Europe. It was a splendid Gothic structure, built in 1447 by Matthew de Layens. Then there was the cruciform Church of St. Pierre, erected in 1425-1497 and adorned with priceless "Old Master" paintings. The churches of St. Gertrude, St. Michel, St. Jaques and St. Joseph were also notable for architecture, paintings and frescoes.

But the glory of Louvain was its university, founded in 1425 by Duke John IV., of Brabant, and richly endowed by its citizens. It was suppressed during the wars of the French revolution, restored after the expulsion of the French from Belgium, and again suppressed when Belgium revolted from Holland. In 1834 the Belgium Catholics founded a university in Mechlin, which, in 1835, they removed to Louvain, and made the virtual successor of Duke John's university, although there was no actual connection with the original foundation. In 1901 the university of Louvain had nearly 1,900 students.

The Catholic Encyclopedia says "the entire history of the university has not yet been written," and that "the regime from 1425 to 1797 being quite different from that adopted at the time of the restoration in 1834."

And now Louvain, its treasures and its spires are said to be crumbling embers, a monument to war.

BELGIAN REFUGEES IN SORE PLIGHT

Paris, Sept. 3.—Mrs. Herman H. Harjes, American wife of the Paris banker, was shocked by the sights she saw among the Belgian refugees. "I saw many boys," said Mrs. Harjes, "with both their hands but off so that it was impossible for them to carry a gun. Everywhere was filth and utter desolation. The helpless little babies, lying on the cold, wet cement floor and crying for proper nourishment, was enough to bring hot tears to any mother's eyes.

"Mothers were vainly besieging the authorities begging for milk or soup. A mother with twelve children said: 'What is to become of us? I saw my husband bound to a lamp post. When I tried to intercede I was knocked senseless with a rifle. I never say him again.'"

Factories Will Help the Patriotic Fund

The committee Mayor Buller has appointed to organize a Patriotic Fund will meet in the Council Chamber on Friday evening at eight o'clock. Already numerous heads of factories have signified their intention of giving the amount of wages their employees earn in one day and Mayor Buller received a letter from Joseph W. Worth of the Bonner Worth Co. in which the employes offered to donate $20 per month from now till the end of the war.

PETERBORO'S BIG FAIR OPENS SEPTEMBER 17

The twelfth annual of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is approaching — two weeks from today and the exhibition will be in full swing. The dates are: September 17, 18 and 19.

The directors have put forth every effort to make the 1914 show a hummer, and, given suitable weather, they feel certain that the citizens and residents throughout the county will not be disappointed. They have made a number of advances in the various departments of the exhibition, and altogether the improvements should commend themselves to all.

Extra care has been taken to secure entertainment features of high class. These will include performances in front of the grand stand, the midway, and fireworks.

"We have a larger number of vaudeville features, and we feel that they will be an improvement over other years," said one of the officials.

The prize list has been issued and circulated, and any who have been missed, and would like to have a copy, the same can be had on application to the secretary, F. J. A. Hall, or at Denne's flour and feed store.

In the long list of specials appearing in the prize list, is a silver cup denoted by Mr. W. G. Morrow. Instead of the competition being for single carriage horses, it is for pairs of carriage horses.

Order for Expropriation to be Signed Saturday

At twelve o'clock on Saturday, his honor Judge Huycke will sign the order, authorizing the City of Peterboro to expropriate the property of the Peterboro Light and Power Co. This morning in the Judge's chamber all the details were arranged with the exception of determining whether the city would pay the $100,000 into the Supreme Court of Ontario to the Peterboro Light and Power Co. W. N. Tilley, K.C., of Toronto, will seek the advice of the company in regards to this matter and will forward their decision before Saturday.

FARMERS ASK FOR FARM HELP

Both Parties Reserve Right to Cancel Engagement

Since the 26th of August ten farmers have made applications for men at the local government immigration office. Since the 28th of August seven men have filled positions with farmers. The men are taken on approval and if their employer is not satisfied he is at liberty to release them or if the employee is not satisfied with his position he is at liberty to leave any time.

Farmers needing men would do well to apply now at the local agency.

DRAGOONS AND 57th REGIMENT IN 11th BATTALION

Valcartier Camp, Que., Sept. 2.—In the organization of brigades and regiments for the Canadian overseas expeditionary force the Ottawa and district corps are placed in the third divisional brigade under Lieut.-Col. Mercer, former commandant of the Queen's Own, Toronto. They are in the eleventh provisional battalion under Lt.-Col. C. H. Worthington, the officer commanding the 3rd mounted brigade in the Canadian militia. The corps assembled in the eleventh battalion are 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons, Peterboro; 9th; Governor-General's Foot Guards; 14th Regt.; 15th Regt.; 16th Regt.; Prince Edward Regt.; 34th Regt.; 40th Regt.; 42nd Regt., Lanark; Renfrew Regt.; 43rd Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles; 45th Victoria Regt.; 46th Durham Regt.; 47th Frontenac Regt.; 49th Regiment; 51st Regt.; Soo Rifles; 56th Grenville; 59th Glengarry Regt.; 57th Regt., Peterboro Rifles.

Lt.-Col. S. M. Rogers, formerly of Ottawa commands the sixth provisional battalion, made up of 101st Regt. Edmonton Fusiliers, and the Ottawa detachment recruited by Major Woodside.

The command of the artillery division is placed in the hands of Lt.-Col. H. E. Burstall, senior officer of the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Public Meeting and the Citizens' Committee

On the evening of August 17th in response to a general agitation the Mayor called a public meeting in the council chamber.

This meeting selected a committee of citizens to represent the city and the citizens in establishing a war-fund booth in connection with the Canadian Patriotic Fund which under the patronage of His Majesty the King deals with those left behind by volunteers for service and in connection with a general fund for the support of those reduced to want by the war, the charity poor to be dealt with as usual. Strange to say this committee at its first meeting voted to betray its orders and handed over its duties to a ladies' committee. To repair this action a meeting of certain citizens has again been called by the Mayor and this time it will act, and it will act in the interests of all concerned. The delay about which there has been so much dissatisfaction both in the streets and in the press is not due to any inaction on the part of the council or the mayor but to the wholly unwararnted conduct of the citizens' committee which met on Wednesday, August 19, when it was decided to leave the field open to the ladies.

No Need for Relief Officer Spending His Own Money

In last night's issue of our evening contemporary the readers were burdened with another lament. The item in question read as follows:—

> "Relief Officer Miller—who is doing as a patriotic individual, what he is not called upon to do as an official—actually paying out his own money for pressing relief — reports that this morning he found two families of volunteers, one of six children, and one of five children, that had nothing for today's dinner. Shouldn't something be done at once to hide our shame?"

In conversation with Mayor Buller this morning The Review was again informed that Relief Officer Miller was instructed by the Mayor at a public meeting to care for the families in need for the time being and see that they were not suffering from lack of food, clothing or fuel. There was absolutely no need of Mr. Miller assisting those people from his own purse and if he did the fault is all his own. His duty, as defined at the above mentioned public meeting was to care for them as he does the other poor of the city.

Mayor Buller remarked that he is unable to see the aim of the paper in heralding before the people on every page the fact that the families of the volunteers are suffering. He thought it would make rather sad reading should the paper stray into the camp at Valcartier. If families are in want they must by this time know where to apply for aid and if they do not apply, continued distress is inevitable.

Four cases have come to the attention of Mayor Buller and assistance was immediately given.

Children Taken to the Shelter

John Doig and wife of the city, were summoned to this morning's police court on a charge of neglect to their children. Satisfactory evidence of neglect was proven and the children were put in care of the Children's Aid Society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PRICE OF FOOD STUFFS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—I see by your valuable paper of Monday last that Salada Tea Company have not only kept their word in not advancing the price of their tea, but have gone one better and have lowered the price of tea five cents a pound. This coming at a time when people need to economize is indeed commendable. Not so with my last grocer, who charged me ten cents a pound more for this tea telling me this package tea had advanced that amount. This statement I found out shortly afterwards to be incorrect, having seen a published interview where Salada Tea people said their tea would not be advanced in price, they having ample stock, and they would protect the public. Surely in this hour of trouble when nations are flying at each other's throat is not the time for us to take an undue advantage of our fellow men, but I regret to say it is being done with nearly every line of food stuff and I think your valuable paper might bring this matter of extorting the last cent out of the people, before the council or suggest some way of regulating prices on food stuff. Thanking you for any thing that you may be able to do, that will benefit the people of Peterborough.

Yours sincerely,
W. J. HARTHAWAY.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

MANY SPIES IN BELGIUM

Arrests Are Frequent and Shooting Follows at Dawn

A correspondent of the London Times gives a graphic picture of the terror of German spies which haunt Belgium. Writing from Brussels he says:

"By the train that took me from Ostend to Brussels came 30 well-guarded, dishevelled spies, gleaned by zealous bands from different points along the line. One of the ticket-collectors alone had caught 24 in the last few days, and he was obviously pleased with himself for this service to his country.

"Later on in the evening, outside a cafe, I was watching seven French airmen arrive with the battered and dilapidated relic of what had once been a luxurious limousine, its top piled high with spare tires, when there was a scuffle just behind me, vicious cries of 'Espion!' and a triumphant member of the Guarde Civique led off a doubtful person in a Belgian uniform.

"At the moment, the mind of Brussels is possessed with espionage. The people of Brussels have found by bitter experience that they have been betrayed by every German stranger with their gates. The hatred of the Belgian for the German is at the moment almost terrifying in its intensity, and it has been bred very largely by this base treachery.

A Spy Catcher.

Many of the stories of spy capture are very dramatic. A citizen of Brussels, too ill to go to the front, offered himself as a spy catcher. He speaks German perfectly and has a pronounced appearance. It is his practice to go the round of the cafes with his eyes very much open. When he sees anyone who seems suspicious he sits down next to him and asks him in a whisper if he is a German. If the answer is "Yes," he says, "Where do we meet tomorrow?" If he satisfies himself that it is a case for the authorities he makes a sign and both are arrested. He is, of course, released immediately on arrival at the police headquarters. In this way he has made many valuable captures.

"Germans have been arrested in Malines dressed as nuns. Their secret wireless stations have been tracked down by wireless telephones. At Antwerp 50 Germans were taken in one day. Any number have been caught wearing Belgian uniforms. They have spied out the land from end to end, and German secret code signs have been discovered everywhere.

"All the spies taken each day are tried late at night. There is no appeal, and a certain number are shot each day at dawn.

"Even espionage has its humorous side. The other evening an apache attacked an inoffensive citizen of Brussels. The man cried out and people began coming to his rescue. Thereupon the apache shouted 'Espion!' and slipped away while the unfortunate citizen was left to make out as good a case for himself as possible in the midst of a large and hostile mob."

The average girl hasn't much time for her kin until after she is married and has little troubles of her own.

MOVING GERMAN TROOPS TO RUSSIAN FRONTIER

French War Office Reports no Sign of Hostile Forces Along Northern Line and Bodies of Men Are Moving Back Through Belgium—Alsace Also Evacuated.

PARIS, Sept. 3. — "In the north there are no signs of hostile troops at Arras, Lille, Bethune, Douai and Lens," according to an official announcement made yesterday.

"Parts of several German army corps in Belgium," the statement continues, "are moving eastward into Germany."

The official statement adds: "In Lorraine our advance continues on the River Sanon. In the south the situation is unchanged. In upper Alsace the Germans appear to have left. Before Belfort there is only a thin curtain of troops.

"Another German cavalry corps has pushed on as far as the line from Soissons to Anizy le Chateau. In the region of Rethel and of the Meuse the enemy is inactive."

"The French centre is holding." This was the cheering news issued from the War Office yesterday morning. Coming on top of a similar announcement at midnight, it meant, the military experts said, that the efforts of the Germans to break the allied armies in two and to surround the terribly harassed left have failed.

The new Minister of War, M. Millerand, has just returned to Paris from a conference with Gen. Joffre. He gives a very favorable impression of the situation in Picardy.

"The German outposts," he says, "have advanced southward slightly, but they are being held back by the British troops and by the French left wing.

"Our lines are holding well, and even where they have fallen back for strategic reasons they have strengthened their positions. The French troops are now feeling the main burden of the German attack," he continued. "The raids of the Uhlans appear to have been stopped along the remainder of the battle line extending to the Meuse.

"It seems that the German forces are temporarily spent. Their own energy must have for the time being worn them down. By sending large masses of infantry, flanked by artillery, into the fire, they sacrificed an enormous number of lives. It is doubtful whether they are able to bring up men fast enough to fill the gaps, and whether they can replenish ammunition fast enough. But a brief rest only means more fighting.

"Nevertheless, the French Minister of War is satisfied that the ravages of the last twenty days have been greater upon the German troops than upon the French.

"The value of the assistance rendered us by the British troops cannot be overestimated," he said. "Their magnificent defence permitted us to gain positions that might have been lost through early blunders."

By "blunders" is is believed that M. Millerand referred to the French forces taking the offensive when the campaign opened instead of maintaining their lines and strengthening the natural defences to resist the impetuous attack of the Germans.

Despite the optimistic statements of the War Minister, no official would predict yesterday that a siege of Paris could be averted. It is reported that the troops of Crown Prince Frederick William have invested Mezieres and have pressed by that stronghold to assist Gen. Von Buelow in their assault on the French centre. Mezieres is the capital of the Ardennes, and is on a peninsula formed by the River Meuse. It is forty-seven miles northeast of Rheims.

Germans Abandon Alsace.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 3.—(Via Rome). — The Germans have abandoned their movement toward the great French fortress of Belfort as the result of the Russian offensive movement in eastern Prussia. The army of 150,000 German and Austrian troops which crossed the Rhine several days ago, accompanied by a large number of heavy Krupp siege guns, has been withdrawn from Alsace and has started for the north through Metz.

The French are now complete masters of Alsace. There are only about 40,000 German reservists left in the upper part of the province, and it is said that a French offensive movement against them will be undertaken.

AUSTRIAN FORCES CRUMPLE BEFORE THE RUSSIAN ATTACKS

Czar's Troops Are Checked by Germans in Eastern Prussia.

PETROGRAD (St. Petersburg), Sept. 3.—The following official communication was issued by the Russian War Office last night:—

"After a battle lasting seven days the Russian army seized heavily fortified positions around Lemberg (capital of Galicia), in Austria-Hungary, about ten or twelve miles from the town. The Russian troops then advanced toward the principal forts.

"After a battle Tuesday, which was fiercely contested, the Austrians were obliged to retreat in disorder, abandoning heavy and light guns, parks of artillery, and field kitchens.

"Our advance guard and cavalry pursued the enemy, who suffered enormous losses in killed, wounded and prisoners.

"The Austrian army operating in the neighborhood of Lemberg was composed of the third, eleventh and twelfth corps and part of the seventh and fourteenth corps. This army appears to have been completely defeated.

"During the pursuit by the Russian troops the Austrians, who beat a retreat from Guila Lipa, were forced to abandon an additional 31 guns. Our troops are moving over roads encumbered with parks of artillery and convoys loaded with provisions of various kinds.

"The total number of guns captured by the Russians around Lemberg amounts to 150."

An earlier official announcement gave the number of Austrian dead in the previous fighting around Lemberg, who were buried on the battlefield by the Russians, as 14,800. The commander of the Austrian division, the commander of a brigade, and the chief of staff of the division were among the killed, and 4,000 prisoners were taken.

Three Russian generals, Samsoniv, Martos and Pestitch, are reported to be among the killed at Lemberg.

The general staff admitted to-day that two army corps, operating in eastern Prussia have been defeated by the Germans there. In the official report it is set forth as follows:

"Two army corps operating in eastern Prussian have been repulsed by a superior German force and have sustained severe losses. This, however, is unimportant, because it has been from the very inception of this war the aim of the general staff to crush completely the Austrian power in order that the way will be cleared for a straight march on Berlin.

"Our contact with the enemy remains unbroken, and fresh Russian troops are arriving on the Austrian fronts. The stubborn fighting continues."

The fortress at Koenigsberg is now completely invested and a part of the city is held by the Russians. The Germans have been very heavily reinforced from the western armies and are now in great strength along the lines of their first fortifications. Despite this fact, however, the march on Berlin will be begun as soon as the Austrian army has been annihilated.

Austrians Admit Defeat.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. publishes a despatch from its Rome correspondent transmitting the official statement issued at Vienna:—

"Recognizing that the occupation of Lemberg by Russian troops is inevitable, the Provincial Government has removed the archives of state and given instructions to the burgomaster as to the conduct of the city after its occupation by the Russians."

The newspapers of Lemberg, the correspondent continues, publish long lists of Austrian dead, covering entire pages.

Telegraphing from St. Petersburg, the correspondent of The Times declares that the war reports given out by the Headquarters Staff in the Russian capital are generally rather meagre, but, in contradistinction to those in Berlin and Vienna, they are always true. Up to the present time they have had nothing to announce but a series of victories. That the headquarters will stick to this plan also when the news is bad is proved by the announcements of yesterday. This attitude shows their confidence in the fortitude and staunchness of the Russian people, which undoubtedly is deserved and augurs well for the future.

FIELD GUNS AND GUNNERS

The field gun has improved wonderfully since the last war in which Germany was vitally interested, 1870-71, and while Germany has been a close student and has experimented liberally, except in some small wars its field pieces have not been thoroughly tested. In field artillery Germany, France and Britain have been working closely on the same lines. It is aimed to produce a gun that is powerful, accurate and yet light enough to be handled quickly and moved smartly from one point to another.

The Germans have the lightest gun and the British the heaviest. The load consists of the gun with its carriage and shield, the limber with ammunition and entrenching tools and the gunners. The total weight of the British gun is 4,480 pounds, of the Russian gun 4,312 pounds, Austrian 4,200 pounds, French 4,184 pounds, Belgian, 3,864 pounds and German 3,852 pounds. It is necessary with these quick firing guns to have an ammunition wagon accompanying them, and often instead of carrying all the gunners on the gun carriage some are on this wagon and thus the weights are better distributed.

Five men and a sergeant is the usual number of men necessary to handle one of these field guns, although with some armies six men are used. In the British artillery the sergeant rides on his horse, two gunners are carried on the gun limber, two on the wagon body. Three wagons usually accompany each gun, on two of which are spare gunners—who keep some distance behind the gun under cover.

THE USE OF SEA MINES

The submarine mine is playing a large part in the present European conflict. Probably it will cause more havoc than in the Japanese-Russian war.

Already one British ship, the Amphion, has been destroyed by a North Sea mine laid by the Germans, with a loss of 120 men. It might be poetic justice that the ship which placed the mine, the Koenigen Luise, was caught red-handed and sent to the bottom. However, the Kaiser's mine-layer already had sown the seed of disaster, and the North Sea may see as many ships hit below the water line as were sunk by mines in the Yellow Sea in the Japanese-Russian struggle.

This may seem barbarous, for there was a day when the submarine was abhorred, as Robert Fulton found out early in the nineteenth century when he sought to interest the British admiralty in this manner of annihilating the most formidable of fleets. Since then the susceptibilities of civilized nations have undergone a change and the submarine mine is now an accepted engine of destruction.

England alone is said to have 20,000 of these mines ready for service, But in military logic, there is a rational excuse for the sowing of contact mines in the open sea. According to the old Roman law, territorial rights in adjacent waters extended up to the middle lines, just as two neighboring states upon a river have their boundaries in the centre of the stream.

Applied to oceans and seas, this was deemed too extended a field of control, and accordingly the territorial limit of three miles, sometimes called a marine league, was set, because in those days the range of artillery did not reach beyond that.

Today the great guns of the newest dreadnoughts have a bombarding range of nearly fifteen miles. Therefore, if the enemy can bombard coast cities from that great distance out at sea, why should it not be permissible to mine the open waters that far off the coast?

The Germans are not new at this form of coast defence, and in this war they are but profiting by past experience. The moral effect of submarine mines was aptly demonstrated in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, when the Prussians defended their principal harbors in the North Sea and the Baltic by means of mechanical and electro-mechanical mines.

The Kaiser's own people were the first to reap the fruit of their own planting. On raising their mine field after the war of 1870 the Germans lost a great many lives through unexpected explosions.

The present type of submarine bomb was perfected by the Italians. There are two types of contact mines, those that explode when struck and those that explode only when an electric current is switched on from the shore. These latter mines are only for harbor defence. They are harmless as long as there is no current, but become active when the electricity is turned on. Thus these mines are a menace to hostile ships, but offer no danger to peaceful vessels.

The mines being planted now in the North Sea are obviously not of the latter type. They are in the open sea, too far from any base of operations to be controlled. They are there ready for action, and unfortunately they have no power of discrimination. They will go off under a friendly ship just as quickly as under the vessel of an enemy.

To make these bombs safe for handling by the planting ships, they are so constructed that they do not become "alive" or active until they have been in the water for half an hour.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSSES.

Terrible Lists of Casualties Published In Papers.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 3. — German casualty lists which have reached here are appalling in their extent. Published under the authority of the German general staff, they occupy nearly six full pages of the official Reischazanger.

No attempt is made to gloss over the terrible extent of the disasters which have befallen the German arms, nor is any comment made on the fact that men reported killed or missing outnumber enormously those listed as wounded.

Travelers who have just reached here from Berlin inform me that half the city is already draped in black.

Killed Hundred Children.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(Via London.)—A despatch from Petrograd (St. Petersburg), say The Novoe Vremya charges that during the bombardment of Belgrade the Austrians destroyed a maternity hospital over which the Red Cross flag was flying, killing 100 children.

Have not heard of any cases of homesickness in the Canadian boys at Valcartier have you? The homesickness is likely with mother at home. It recalls those old words: "Just before the battle, mother, I am thinking most of you.

FRENCH CAPITAL MOVES.

Government Departments Will Be Transferred To Bordeaux.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—A proclamation has just been issued by the Government, announcing that the Government departments will be transferred temporarily to Bordeaux.

The proclamation was issued by the Minister of the Interior, who said the decision had been taken solely upon the demand of the military authorities because the fortified places of Paris, while not necessarily likely to be attacked, would become the pivot of the field operations of the two armies.

The building of supplementary defence works is proceeding vigorously. Several of the gates of Paris were closed to traffic last night.

Sometimes the difference between reputation and character is untellable.

PUTTING OUR FAITH INTO PRACTICE

AS SOON as the first shock of the European war was over, manufacturers and merchants in United States began to ask themselves: "Is it a WORLD calamity? Cannot we get something in the way of benefit to make up in part for the trouble it will cause?"

This is a question the people of Canada might well ask themselves.

The people of the United States are awake already to the fact that many of the necessities of life—yea, and luxuries—that were formerly supplied by Continental Europe must now be produced in the factories of United States.

Already there are indications that the war spells almost feverish activity in many lines of business in United States.

This is a time for the manufacturers of Canada to buckle down to work and make and sell right here at home many of the things the people of Canada have formerly imported from Continental Europe.

And the manufacturers of Canada can count upon the people of Canada to respond to their efforts in this direction. Canadian patriotism is on fire; Canadians never realized until now how deeply they believe in themselves — how strong is their faith in England, in the Empire, in Canada.

Now is the time for Canadians to APPLY that abiding faith—to carry it into the BUSINESS of life.

This much is certain: Most of what we eat and wear and use for months to come — perhaps for years — must be produced on this Continent of North America.

Many Canadian manufacturers — already awake to their opportunity — are arranging to get machinery in motion to supply Canadians with those articles they have formerly imported — the dresses and millinery and perfumes from France; the silverware, enamelware, and hosiery, and countless other things from Germany; the parasols from Austria; the laces and watches from Switzerland.

Soon Canadian manufacturers will begin to tell the people of Canada that THEY — our own manufacturers — have these things for them; soon the merchants of Canada will announce that they are well stocked with these goods — of home manufacture. These announcements will come to the people of Canada in the form of advertisements in the newspapers. Watch for these advertisements, and when they appear read them and respond to them. It is a duty the people of Canada owe to their country, their industries, and themselves.

IMPORTANT TO MANUFACTURERS AND MERCHANTS.

If you are in doubt about how to word your announcement, or if you wish advice of any kind, get in touch with the business manager of The Peterborough Review.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Rooms to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

THE CURTAIN DROPS WITH DOUBLE LOSS FOR PETES

The baseball season for 1914, so far as Peterboro is concerned, is over. When Erie and the locals withdrew from the ball diamond yesterday, after the Yankees taking both ends of a double header, the great summer pastime at Riverside Park was completed. It was hardly a fitting closing, as the visitors won both games; but the class of ball produced will leave the last two games of 1914 imprinted forever on the minds of the couple of hundred fans present.

The day was anything but an ideal baseball day. At noon the rain was falling, and even when the players were on the field a small shower fell. At 2:30, the advertised time of the first game, only 25 fans were on hand, and a few more straggled in before the game was called. Before the last game was over there was something like 250 fans on hand.

Louie Schettler, who pitched the opener last May, and Lefty Dorbeck were the opposing hurlers in the first attraction, and the honors went to the chunky little southpaw after eleven innings of perfect baseball. At the end of the ninth the score was 1-1, and it took the Erie crew two extra innings to shove another across. During the whole session neither team was chalked with an error.

The second game found Bob Sterling and Morse the opposing heavers, and at the close of the seventh the score stood 4-0 in favor of the teammates of the said Mr. Morse. He deserved to win as he held the Petes to four scattered bingles, while the local man was touched for six, two of them and a base on balls coming in one frame, netting two runs.

The details of the last professional ball games to be witnessed in this city for a number of years, according to the average dopester, are as follows:

FIRST GAME.

After waiting for half an hour to see if the rain would blow over, Umps Miller finally decided to play. The batteries were:—Erie: Dorbeck and Cooper. Peterboro: Schettler and Miller.

First Inning.

ERIE — Dawson singled to left. Scott popped to Schettler. Dawson went to second on a passed ball. Colligan filed to Blount. Gygli lifted to centre. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

PETERBORO — Blount singled through short. Welsh sacrificed, Cooper to Patten. Blount went to third on Dolan's grounder to Patten, but was left stranded when Rooney went out, Patten to Gygli. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Inning.

ERIE—Harris flied to Dolan. Patten raised to Welsh. Behan skied to Rooney. — No runs, hits nor errors.

PETERBORO — Byrne flied to Kelly Harris. King singled to right. Fox flied to left, and Miller went out, Dorbeck to Gygli. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Inning.

ERIE — Cooper fouled out to Miller. Dorbeck went out, Schettler to Dolan. Dawson singled. Scott walked, but Colligan flied to King.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

PETERBORO — Schettler flied to Dawson. Blount lifted to the same section. Welsh walked. Dolan singled over third, but Rooney went out Gygli to Dorbeck, the pitcher covering the bag. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

ERIE — Gygli fanned. Harris went out, Schettler to Dolan, and Patten grounded to Fox. — No runs, hits, nor errors.

PETERBORO — Byrne fouled out to Cooper. King grounded to Patten, and Fox flied to Scott. — No runs, hits, nor errors.

Fifth Inning.

ERIE — Behan raised to Welsh. Cooper skied to Dolan, and Dorbeck went out, Schettler to Dolan. — No runs, hits nor errors.

PETERBORO — Miller fanned. Schettler also missed three, and Blount grounded to Gygli. — No runs, hits nor errors.

Sixth Inning.

ERIE — Dawson singled to right, stole second, and went to third on Scott's death at first. Colligan fouled out to Miller. Gygli singled to right, scoring Dawson, but was caught off first. — One run, two hits, no errors.

PETERBORO — Welsh singled. Dolan walked. Rooney was put bunting on third strike. Byrne flied to left, and King grounded to Gygli. —No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

ERIE — Harris fouled to Byrne. Patten fanned. Behan singled, and Cooper raised to Welsh. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

PETERBORO — Fox walked, and Miller hit into a double, Scott to Patten to Gygli. Schettler flied to Dawson. — No runs, hits nor errors.

Eighth Inning.

ERIE — Dorbeck went out, Schettler to Dolan. Dawson grounded to King. Scott grounded to Byrne. — No runs, hits nor errors.

PETERBORO — Blount struck out, Welsh got a hit when Behan and Colligan Alphonse-Gastoned his fly, but Dolan hit into a double, Patten to Gygli. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

ERIE — Colligan flied to Rooney. Gygli skied to Welsh. Harris singled to right and stole second, but Patten grounded to Byrne. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

PETERBORO — Rooney walked. Byrne sacrificed, Dorbeck to Patten. King went out on a grounder to Patten, Rooney going to third. Fox came through with a single over third and Rooney scored. Miller singled, but Schettler hit to short, forcing Miller at second. — One run, two hits, no errors.

Tenth Innings.

ERIE — Behan went out, Schettler to Dolan. Cooper singled. Dorbeck flied to Rooney, and Dawson grounded to King. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

PETERBORO — Blount missed three, Welsh raised to Dawson, and Dolan flied to Behan. — No runs, no hits, no errors.

Eleventh Innings.

ERIE — Scott singled to centre. Colligan sacrificed, Byrne to Dolan. Gygli filed to Dolan. Harris dropped a Texas leaguer over short, and Scott scored. Harris was caught stealing, Miller to King. — One run, two hits, no errors.

PETERBORO — Rooney grounded to Behan. Byrne went out the same route, and King fanned. — No runs, no hits, no errors.

COMMENT
As You Like It

Rube Deneau has released "Nemo" Nasher.

Jack Mitchell makes a big improvement in the Senators. He is the best shortfielder seen here this year.—Hamilton Herald.

The directors of the Northwestern league have decided to curtail the season by two weeks. The National commission has granted the league permission to close Sept. 3, instead of Sept. 17 as originally scheduled. Adverse business conditions, brought about by the European war, are the reasons given for the move.

Any Canadian League players who advance in their profession will do so by draft. The major leagues start to draft on Sept. 5th, and are given till Sept. 20th to complete their lists. It is said the majors will not draft any men from the International League and American Association on account of the inroads the Federals made on the two Class AA leagues. This will probably mean the Class A and Class B leagues will lose a great many men.

The majors pay $1,500 for players drafted from Class A leagues, of which there are only two, the Southern Association and Western League. For players from Class B $1,200 is paid for each man drafted. The Class B include the Canadian, Eastern Association, Texas, New England, New York State, Northwestern, Tri-State, Central, Three Eyes.

The Class AA leagues start to draft Sept. 22nd, and pay $1,000 for players from Class A, $750 from Class B, $500 from Class C, and $400 from Class D. The Class A clubs draft Sept. 30 to October 4, and pay $600 for Class B players, $400 for Class C and $300 for Class D. The Canadian and other Class B leagues can draft from Oct. 7 to Oct 12.

Of the players who are really eligible for a trial in the majors, Mitchell, the Ottawa shortstop, stands out preeminently. Kopp, the St. Thomas outfielder, has speed unprecedented in eighth major or minors. He is a second Jack Thoney on the runways. Under proper tutelege he could make the grade. He is a fair hitter, good fielder, but lacks pep. Of the pitchers, Shocker, of Ottawa, and Steiger, of London, look good enough for the league trials.

There are any number of Canadian League players, however, who could hop right into the International or American Association and make good. Of the pitchers, Kubat, of Ottawa, Dougherty of Hamilton, and Heck of London, all left handers, could hold their own. Brown, of Erie, belongs to Buffalo, so there is no chance of him being drafted as he is already covered up.

For Class A Leagues, Bierbauer, the London first sacker, Smykal, the Ottawa second baseman, Lage, the Ottawa backstop, Catcher Lacroix, of Brantford, pitchers Chase, of Brantford, and Catcher Kelly, of Peterboro, should make good. Howick, the St. Thomas spitballer always looks a good pitcher here, and being a youngster might stick with a Class A club.

Less Artistic, But More Modest.

"Did you visit Statuary Hall while you were in Washington?" asked Maude.

"Yes," replied Maymie, "and I must say that the costuming was very much to be commended as compared to what you see in European art galleries."—Washington Star.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BAKER—KELLY.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's manse yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Rev. R. Pogue united Miss Blanche Edith Kelly, of Norwood, and William Roy Baker, of Dummer, in the bonds of matrimony. They were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Baker will reside in Dummer.

YOUNG—HOLYMAN.

A very pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Holyman, Lock street, when their daughter, Edith Flora, was united in the bonds of matrimony to James Howard Young, of Ottawa, by Rev. R. Pogue. They were unattended. The happy couple left via G.T.R. at 9 o'clock for Ottawa, where they will reside.

ARCHER—DICKSON.

At "Wawbeek" the summer home of Mr. E. H. Dickson, on Bostwick Island, three miles from Gananoque, at 12 o'clock noon on Tuesday, September 1st, was solemnized the marriage of his second daughter, Edwina Ethel to Dr. George B. Archer, son of Mrs. W. B. Archer of Campbellford, of the M.S.C.C. Mission, Palampur, Kangra Dist., India.

The ceremony took place on the verandah, which was beautifully decorated with flags, evergreens, golden rod, and pond lilies. The Rev. Henry Gracey, Gananoque, assisted by the Rev, Henry Dyckman, Westfield, Mass. (uncle of the bride) and the Rev. Dyson Hague, rector of the church of the Epiphany, Toronto, performed the ceremony.

The bride wearing a dress of hand embroidered brussels net, with veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a bouquet of white asters was given away by her father. Miss Naome Dickson, only sister of the bride was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of pale blue chiffon and carried a bouquet of pink asters.

Dr. J. A. Campbell, New York, was groomsman.

The bride's travelling suit was blue moire silk. Dr. and Mrs. Archer left by motor boat at 2 o'clock to catch the train for Campbellford. They will sail from New York for India as soon as ocean sailings for Bombay are resumed. — Campbellford Herald.

GEORGE ARLISS IN "DISRAELI"

George Arliss will be seen on Wednesday next, Sept. 9, for the opening of the Grand for the season in his famous performance of England's greatest Prime Minister, Disraeli, in the comedy of the same name written for him by Louis N. Parker, the author of "Joseph and His Brethren," "Pomander Walk," and the adaptor of "Chanticleer" and "L,'Aiglon." The occasion will mark Mr. Arliss' first appearance here as a star, under the management of the Liebler Company.

"Disraeli" is laid, as to the period in the 70's, in the time immediately preceding Beaconsfield's history-making strokes regarding the Suez Canal. The comedy is directly turned on a trick whereby Disraeli, as Prime Minister, but unsupported even by the members of his own party, pledges the honor of Great Britain in order privately to raise a huge sum for the purchase of the Suez Canal from Egypt at a time when Parliament is not in session. Russia is equally anxious to get the canal, but only in case Great Britain wishes it. In short, Russia is waiting to take its cue as to the strategic value of the canal from Disraeli's own attitude toward it. The Czar's spies infect Beaconsfield's own household, posing even as his employes and as the friends of Lady Beaconsfield. In the device whereby he gets the canal for Great Britain, Disraeli is incidentally successful in turning to ambitious manhood a young nobleman whose thoughts are bent on nonsensical theories regarding the best way to serve his fellowman.

Mr. Arliss' supporting company includes Ernita Lascelles, Florence Arliss, Margaret Dale, Leila Repton, Lilla Campbell, Charles Harbury, Arthur Eldred, Vincent Sternroyd, and others.

The Great Northern Railway Company will install gas electric motor-cars for its short-line work.

LUMBER CAMPS

Decreased Number Going to Woods This Year

Ottawa, Sept. 3.—Ottawa and district will send scarcely more than 15,000 men to the lumber camps this year. Before war broke out it was expected that the men would number from 30,000 to 35,000.

J. R. Booth intended to operate about 30 camps, in which would be about 3,500 hands, but he will send less than 1,000 men to his limits.

The Colonial Lumber Company, of Pembroke, a firm that in other years has found employment for quite an army of men in the woods, will leave their camps in idleness this season, and the Pembroke Lumber Company, another big concern, intends to operate one camp.

Wages of lumberjacks now range from $24 to $30, compared with $28 to $35 a year ago, then the highest they had ever been. The supply of men is in excess of the demand.

SPECIAL EXCURSION.

Special excursion via Canadian Pacific railway from Peterboro to Quebec city, good going Friday and Saturday, Sept. 4 and 5, return limit Sept. 9, tickets good going via Ottawa, and stop-over will be allowed going and returning at all points east of Ottawa. Round trip fare, $9.15.

GERMAN FORCES MOVING NEARER TO PARIS

CORRESPONDENT SAYS AUTHORITIES ARE CONSIDERING SURRENDER OF CITY TO SAVE IT'S DESTRUCTION

NOTHING TO SHOW THAT PERSISTENT ADVANCE OF GERMANS HAS BEEN CHECKED

At Least One Point of Contact is Within Twenty Miles of Outer Fortifications of Paris

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 4.—The Russian commander-in-chief has notified Emperor Nicholas that Lemberg has been occupied, in the following words: "With extreme joy and thanking God, I announce to Your Majesty that the victorious army under General Ruzsky captured Lemberg at 11 o'clock this morning. The army of General Brussilloff has taken Halicz."

Asks Czar to decorate Generals

The grand duke's telegram also entreats the Czar to confer on General Ruzsfy the third and fourth classes of the order of St. Germs, and on General Brussiloff the fourth class of the same order.

A despatch from Paris says two German aeroplanes which flew over Paris Wednesday were later brought down and the occupants were killed. The first prize court held in this country since the Crimean war adjudged on the disposal of four steamships and eight sailing vessels captured from the Germans.

St. Petersburg reports fighting onWednesday resulted in further Austrian defeats, the enemy retreating precipitately and leaving many prisoners and trophies in the hands of the Russians. Near Halicz they left 4,500 dead on the field, and the Russians took 32 cannon and much railway material. On the south, near Warsaw, the Austrian attack was repulsed, and the Russians took the offensive.

Bucharest despatches say the Russians have occupied Czernowitz, in Eastern Prussia, and are marching on Suczawa, near the Roumanian border.

Would Surrender the City

London, Sept. 4, 3.15 p.m.—In a despatch from Rouen, France, the correspondent of the Chronicle says he has learned that the French authorities in Paris are considering the surrender of the city to the Germans in order to avoid destruction of property from artillery fire. This will only be done, the correspondent declares, in case the outer line of the defences of Paris are passed by the invaders.

French and Belgian wounded are being transferred from Paris to other cities, and the great exodus of the population to the south continues.

London, Sept. 4.—The Times' correspondent at Dieppe, telegraphing yesterday, says the Germans are less than 25 miles from Paris. He says all day yesterday the head of the wedge which now forms the German right, was furiously forcing its way to Paris, battering the rear of the retreating French through Creil, Sentis a nd Crepy-en-Valois. The cannonading broke windows in Chantilly, which is only 17 miles north of Paris. Germans are also near Soissons.

Two Boats Sunk by Mines

London, Sept. 4.—A despatch which the censors have permitted to come through only in mutilated form, indicates the destruction by mines of the Speedy, an old torpedo gunboat of 800 tons, and the Linsdell, some sort of a trading vessel, with a small number of casualties.

French Soldier's Diary

London, Sept. 4.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent, wiring on Wednesday from Forges-les-eau, 25 miles northwest of Rouen, gives the following verbatim extract from a French soldier's diary:

Arrived 25th at St. Quentin, where we were engaged in reconnaisance work.

Twenty-seventh, learned Germans were approaching, whereupon we evacuated St. Quentin, destroying the railway and bridges as we left; arrived in evening at Tergnier.

Twenty-eighth, reached Chauncy. This afternoon, twenty-ninth, ordered back to Tergnier, because the Germans had succeeded in forcing the English lines. We passed Montescourt and reached Jussey, where we hold back the Germans momentarily.

"We are ordered to destroy all railroads and bridges on the main line to Paris, and we work all night to the sound of cannon. We assist many refugees all along the way.

"Thirtieth, we are at Compiegne. We heard cannonading continually. We hear the Germans have been badly beaten at St. Quentin. We assist in a duel between a German bi-plane and a monoplane. The bi-plane loses the fight and falls into the allies' lines. The aviator had with him a German boy, six years old, and both were badly injured. Since leaving St. Quentin we have been with the English troops. Rumors of a German defeat at St. Quentin must be false, for the English troops are retiring. We evacuate Compiegne and reach Liancourt."

Liancourt, mentioned in the French soldier's diary as the point to which the British and French had retired on August 30, is in the department of Oise and only about 25 miles north of Paris.

WOUNDED VISITED BY KING AND QUEEN

London, Sept. 4. — King George and Queen Mary today paid an unexpected visit to the Queen Alexandra Military Hospital, where many of the British officers who were wounded in the fighting in France and Belgium are confined. They spent more than an hour in the hospital, and their presence there greatly cheered the disabled soldiers.

The Royal couple visited each ward in turn, shook hands with the wounded, and while the King praised them for their bravery the Queen presented each with a little bunch of flowers. The King and Queen expressed the hope that the officers would recover speedily.

Queen Alexandra, mother of King George, and Princess Victoria also visited the hospital, bringing flowers and fruit to the wounded, and spending some time chatting with them.

$25 FOR WAR FUND

The handsome sum of $25 has been received by the Women's War Fund, from the Milkmen's Association and needless to say, the ladies appreciate the donation very much. Adding this $25 to the amounts already acknowledged makes the total $987.60.

OFFER OF GUNS.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—An offer to pay the cost of four machine guns for the Canadian expeditionary force was received by the Minister of Militia from Joseph Boyle, a prominent Yukon miner, formerly of Woodstock, Ont.

Asquith Denounces Outrages by Germans

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 4.—At Guildhall today, Premier Asquith delivered a remarkable address in the course of which he bitterly denounced Germany for countless outrages which their "buccaneering adventurers" had committed. The greatest crime against civilization was sacking of Louvain.

"This shameless holocaust was an act of blind barbaric vengeance."

Sooner than stand aside under such circumstances he would rather see Great Britain blotted out from the pages of history. He made the cheering announcement that from 250,000 to 300,000 men responded to Kitchener's appeal for recruits but added that still more were needed.

DUCK HUNTER IS KILLED

Gun Was Dischared With Fatal Result

Orillia, Sept. 4.—The duck shooting season opened in Orillia with a sad and fatal accident, when Jack Sando, oldest son of Mr. John Sando, head lineman of the town's electric system, was killed by the discharge of a shot gun.

He and Stanley Hacson were duck hunting in Shingle Bay, at the foot of West Street. Young Sando was rowing and Hudson was in the stern of the boat. The former attempted to pass the gun, a double barrelled shot gun to the latter. He picked it up with the barrel pointing towards himself, when the hammer struck the charge entering the unfortunate young man's chest. He fell out of the boat, exclaiming, "I'm shot." His companion jumped into the water, which was shallow, and carried him to the shore. Drs. Kirkpatrick and Wainwright were hurriedly called, but life had fled before they arrived. The shot made a large hole in the chest and penetrated the lower part of the heart, killing him almost immediately.

GRAHAME-WHITE AS FLIGHT COMMANDER

London, Sept. 4. — Claude Grahame-White, the noted aviator, has been appointed a temporary flight commander in the British navy. Richard T. Gates, who recently resigned from the royal aero club, has been appointed a temporary flight lieutenant.

The Earl of Granard has been appointed in command of the fifth battalion of the Royal Irish regiment, and Baron Sempill in command of the Black Watch Regiment of the New army.

The wife of the Earl of Granard was formerly Miss Beatrice Mills, daughter of Ogden Mills, of New York.

GERMANS SHOT DOWN CITIZENS

Story of Brutalities Practiced at Louvain

Rotterdam, Sept. 2.—(Via London, Sept. 3.)—A vivid description of the suffering in Louvain was given to-day by a Dutchman who arrived at Breda. He was a prominent resident in Louvain when the war broke out.

Describing the massacre at Louvain (already dealt with in despatches), in which the Germans claim to have taken stern measures because they were fired on by the townspeople, he says:

"We resolved to make a dash to the station, abandoning our home and all our belongings except what we could carry. The station was crowded with fugitives. I was just trying to show an officer my papers when the soldiers separated me from my wife and children. All protests were useless. A lot of us were marched off to a big shed in the freight yard, from where we could see the finest buildings of the city and beautiful historical monuments being burned.

"Shortly afterwards German soldiers drove before them 300 men and lads to the corner of the Boulevard Van Tieneff and Maria Theresa street, opposite the Cafe Vermalen. There they were shot. The sight filled us with horror.

"The burgomaster, two magistrates, the rector of the university and all the police officials already had been shot.

"With our hands bound behind our backs, we were then marched off by soldiers, without having seen our wives and children.

"We were locked up in a church and were later joined by other prisoners. That night the church was lighted up by burning houses. Again shots whistled through the air, followed by cries and groans.

"At 5 o'clock the next morning all the priests were taken out by the soldiers and shot, together with eight Belgian soldiers, six bicyclists and two gamekeepers. Then an officer told us that we could go back to Louvain."

"TEACH THEM TO SHOOT," SAYS KITCHENER.

London, Sept. 3.—"Never mind whether they know anything about drill. It does not matter if they don't know their right foot from their left. Teach them how to shoot and do it quickly."

These are instructions which Lord Kitchener gave the officers who are engaged in the work of getting his second army into shape. They throw strong light on the situation. It's a race against time.

SOLDIERS PLEASED WITH THE HOUSEWIVES

The officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Peterboro contingent at Valcartier wish to express to the ladies of Peterborough, their appreciation of the kindness of the ladies in providing the housewives which have been received. They were also grateful for the oranges and gum and intend to keep the gum for the dusty marches.

A SPECIAL SERVICE OF INTERCESSION

A special service of Intercession will be held next week at one of the local churches. The Ministerial Association passed a resolution to this effect this morning.

NEW BATTLE IN GALICIA

Austrians Reinforced and Are Making Stand

PETROGRAD, Sept. 4.—The surrender of Lemberg, capital of Austrian Galicia, is announced by Minister of War Sukhomlinoff.

The general staff announced yesterday that the Russians continue to progress in the northern regions of eastern Prussia. In the south the Germans have been reinforced by troops from the French frontier. They have ten powerful siege guns. The Russians have also been reinforced.

The defeated Austrian troops at Lemberg have been joined by a new army, and a fierce battle is now in progress west of that city. The Russians still outnumber the Austrians.

Austrians Lost 100,000 Men.

ROME, Sept. 4.—(By way of Paris.)—The Russian Embassy has been notified that the Austrians were overwhelmingly defeated near Lemberg, losing more than 100,000 men and 57 cannon.

Retreating In Disorder.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The full text of the despatch of the Grand Duke Nicholas to the Czar on the Russian victory in Galicia, as given out at the Russian Consulate here by Col. Golejewski, military attache to the Russian Embassy, reads as follows:—

"I am happy to congratulate your Majesty on the victory achieved by the army of Gen. Ruzsky, at Lwow, Lemberg, after an uninterrupted seven-days' battle. The Austrians are retreating in complete disorder. In many places they fly panic-stricken, abandoning light and heavy guns, ammunition and supply columns. The enemy has suffered tremendous losses and many prisoners have been taken. In the period preceding this decisive battle the army of Gen. Ruzsky in seven days took forty-four guns and quantities of machine-guns and small arms."

By the taking of Lemberg, says an official report from St. Petersburg, the roads to Vienna and Berlin are opened to Russian armies.

OPPOSING ARMIES AROUND PARIS ARE TAKING UP POSITIONS

Enemy Has Been Checked at Verdun and French are Successful in Lorraine---No Change in Situation in the Vosges

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 4.—It is officially announced that "the opposing armies" around Paris have not come in contact. They continue their movements taking positions."

The statement adds that the Germans have been checked at Verdun, the French are successful in Lorraine and in the Vosges, the situation has not changed.

London, Sept. 4.—Reference to the titanic struggle between the German army under Crown Prince Frederick William and the forces of France, which took place between Rheims and Verdun Wednesday, is made again to-day in news from Berlin. If the Berlin statement proves correct, that three-quarters of a million troops were fighting in that region Wednesday in the greatest battle in history, it would explain much of what has been happening in the western field. To bring troops in that region to anything like the number of 750,000, enormous French forces must have been concentrated at the expense of the French left flank, where the Germans have been making progress with their brilliant dash on Paris.

That nothing further concerning such an historic fight, now two days old, has come through from any source, is regarded as remarkable, even in these days when virtually all springs of information are under official seal. French official communications continue to show an utter absence of pessimism and they are generally regarded as indicating that the situation of the allies is far from being as bad as might be conjectured by superficial observers, judging from the stereotyped announcements of retirements. Some correspondents go so far as to suggest that the invaders of French soil have been fought to a standstill.

London, Sept. 4.—If official reports of Russian successes in Galicia are anywhere near correct, it is scarcely possible to exaggerate the importance of their victory. If the Austrians are as badly crushed in Galicia as the Russian reports would make the public believe, Russian Poland will soon cease to be a point of anxiety to the Russian defence, and the efforts of the Petrograd general staff can be concentrated on an offensive movement toward Berlin. Meagre German reports received here indicate that the Germans are more than holding their own on the border of East Prussia, but the Russian general staff, according to the point of view held in London, doesn't seem greatly concerned over the status of the campaign in this territory, evidently being willing to await the outcome of the movements furthr eastward before throwing Russia's full strength against Prussia.

The veil of secrecy over the western area of fighting, the country north of Paris, never has been harder to penetrate. During the past 24 hours there has been no evidence at hand to show that the persistent advance of the Germans has been materially checked. On the contrary, at least one point of the German contact is now within 20 miles of the outer fortifications of Paris. Late news despatches from Dieppe describe the German right as at the rear of the retreating French through Creil, Senlis and Crepy-en-Valois, towns of 24, 20 and 35 miles, respectively, distant from the boundaries of Paris proper. Fortifications of the French capital extend, roughly, ten miles beyond the city limits. The allied armies probably now occupy the line of siege both to the east and west of Paris.

RUSSIANS LAND AT OSTEND TO JOIN FORCES WITH ALLIES

New York, Sept. 4.—A Russian army of 72,000 men, transported from Archangel, Russia, was landed at Aberdeen, on the east coast of Scotland, on August 27, and were convoyed on special trains to Harwich, Grimsby and Dover, where transports were waiting to take them to Ostend, in Belgium, according to officers and passengers of the Cunard liner Mauretania, which reached here last night from Liverpool.

Every precaution was taken by the English and Russian military authorities, persons on the Mauretania said, to keep the fact that foreign soldiers were being transported to England from becoming known, and the service on the East Coast railway lines was suspended during the 17 hours the troop trains were on their journey. The passengers said that the trip of the Russian troops from Archangel to Aberdeen occupied three days.

It was generally believed by those on the Mauretania who made these statements, that the Russians would be joined at Ostend by British marines waiting there to receive them, and that the combined forces would co-operate with the Belgian army at Antwerp.

Despatches from Ostend early Tuesday morning stated that a large body of troops was landed from transports at that place during Sunday night last, and it is evident that these were the troops referred to by the passengers on the Mauretania. The sending of Russian soldiers by sea from Archangel, which is on the White Sea, necessitating a trip through the Arctic Ocean, around the north coast of Norway into the North Sea, instead of from one of the much more convenient ports of the Baltic, is explained by the fact that ships from the Baltic ports have to pass through the narrow Cattegat in order to reach the North Sea. The Cattegat is understood to be blockaded by a considerable German fleet.

THE RISE IN THE PRICE OF SUGAR.

LAST YEAR European countries produced more than 8,000,000 tons of sugar, practically half the entire output of the world. Now the deadening hand of war has been laid on the sugar beet fields of France, Germany, Austria, Russia and Belgium, just as the season's crop is reaching its maturity, says the Journal of Commerce. As a rule, harvesting begins about the first week in September. While the women of these countries are very efficient farm hands, still they cannot cope entirely with present conditions. This is especially true of Belgium, which has been overrun by German soldiers. In any case, the withdrawal of millions of men from industry and agriculture is sure to make its effects felt.

The consumers of both Canada and the United States have done much to aggravate the situation. They became stampeded at the outbreak of war, and made heavy demands upon local trade. Not only for sugar, but for many other commodities, the panic of the consuming public has been responsible for high prices which now show a tendency to fall to their former level. Aside from this the price of raw sugar has been very nearly doubled over what it was a year ago. The most urgent demands have come from abroad. England has bought cargo after cargo. Great quantities were taken by France; and nations that seldom apeared on the American market for sugar — Greece, Norway, Italy, and others — contracted for thousands of barrels of refined and hundreds of tons of raw for the earliest possible shipment. A prominent American refiner estimated that up to August 22, European buyers had taken up fully 100,000 tons of sugar at that centre and in Cuba, of which the major portion had already been shipped.

It may be, however, that the greater part of the crop of Russia, Germany and France will be saved; and that no additional heavy demand will come from abroad. A reassuring feature of the situation is that the Cuban and West Indian crops of cane sugar are exceedingly large, while there has been a fair yield from the Louisiana cane fields. Under these conditions, it is hard to say whether sugar will continue to advance in price. It all depends upon the ability of the women field workers of Europe to save the sugar beet crop, and the availability of labour to work up the raw material into the finished product. The new sugar duties in Canada should not cause a rise of more than one cent per pound. In the meantime the consumers themselves can do much to steady prices, by refusing to give way to panic and by refraining from making abnormal purchases. There is no possibility of a food famine in Canada or the United States, as both are food-exporting countries. It is well for the consumer to remember this, and then to refrain from aggravating the situation by the undue buying of food products.

DOWN WITH THE WEAK.

IT IS BELIEVED that a considerable amount of the enthusiasm in Germany, for power by means of force, is due to the writings of the German philosopher, Nietsche. This man declares that the Christian religion, if practiced generally, would develop a race of weaklings; that a powerful nation is produced by strong men, and that war and courage do more than does love for one's neighbor, to produce his ideal being, whom he calls the "Superman." No race, he says, can exist without strife and no supermen be produced without it. Down with the weak! is the slogan.

Some such principle had been followed by the ruling class for some time, and when Nietsche came forward with the plan carefully worked out just to its liking—"what oft was thought but ne'er so well expressed"—and explained that the endeavor to obtain power by force was the only just and moral method towards ideal existence, naturally the Kaiser and his generals hailed him with delight. Nietsche has thereby become, if not the foremost philosopher, at least one of the first in Germany to-day.

One need scarcely add that his doctrine assumes a dependent class, is therefore exclusive and so highly impracticable.

ALBERTA'S GREAT CROP.

REPORTS come from the Edmonton district that the estimated farm value of the wheat crop will be nothing less than thirty million of dollars in the Province of Alberta. The Edmonton Industrial Association reports that the crop is of far better grade than was anticipated and that the yield is larger than previously estimated. The yield is especially large in Central and Northern Alberta, ranging from 30 to 43 bushels to the acre. Threshers are at work in various parts of the district. Oats, barley, and rye also show good returns. George Harcourt, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, reports that the Edmonton district will have the best grain yield in its history. The crop will be more valuable, on account of increased prices resultant from the European war.

DEPENDENTS TO BE LOOKED AFTER.

IT IS a source of satisfaction, not only to the wives and families of those who have gone to the defence of the Empire, but to the principals as well, to know that the government has decided to grant a separation allowance of $20 a month to the dependents. This amount, we understand, will be paid direct to the wives and families by the paymaster-general's office, in the department of militia and defence, Ottawa. While the amount is not large, it will go a long way toward keeping the wolf from the door during the winter months. However, we trust this grant will extend to the single men as well, who have left dependents behind, of whom we believe there are many. No doubt the meeting to-night will be fully seized of the conditions of this grant by the government, and, besides, will take the necessary steps to see that none of those who are entitled to receive the grant will be overlooked. It is now up to Peterborough to see that the unemployed within the city's borders are given a chance to make a living, as there are many out of work directly owing to the war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

OWING to a typographical error, Norman Angell was quoted in our editorial yesterday as not believing in defence. The quotation should have read: "Because I do not believe in force, I do believe in defence."

Made in Canada.
Montreal Mail.

"Made in Germany" is about to disappear for "Made in America." The United States is getting ready. Go to it, Canada!

Making Fortunes.
Guelph Mercury.

Over $10,000,000 in Calgary oil stocks have changed hands in the past few weeks. The little chap who got stung on four-miles-out city lots will now proceed to make another fortune—on paper.

Roosevelt Undertook.

Probably the worst piece of luck that ever befell Col. Roosevelt was to have the war break out a couple of weeks after he began to tell the people of the United States, through the newspapers, of the wonderful adventures in South America. For once nobody is paying any attention to him.

All England Asks.
Springfield Republican.

It will not do to put the name of Beatty alongside that of Nelson just yet. But Admiral Beatty seems to have cleaned up the job offered him in handsome style; all that England asks is that Germany will give him and the other sea captains a chance to show that they can do the bigger job just as thoroughly.

The Aggressor's Burden.
London Daily Mail.

The task before the aggressor is, after all, the most stupendous ever undertaken by man. Only a few weeks have passed since the German, Gen. Keim, told his countrymen: "Be under no illusions as to the quality of the French soldiers. I made the campaign of 1870. I can tell you that if we then defeated them, it was with supreme difficulty and only because we had a superiority of one-third in numbers." The Germans have but a bare superiority today. Moreover, those moral forces which exert such an incalculable influence on the human heart in the dim hours of suffering and death are ranged decisively against the German cause. It was a German who said: "Even this world is just."

Not Fooled.
London Times.

The arrangements which have been made to have garbled stories disseminated abroad show the importance which the German authorities attach to this trick. They think that it will have a wholesome moral effect upon us. Well, we think so, too, but not quite the moral effect they expect and desire. They can hardly arrange or defy the truth more ably than their model. Napoleon's lies never deceived us or depressed us, and in the end he had himself to confess that "to lie like a bulletin" was bad policy. The Germans will doubtless in time discover that he was right.

The "Awkward Squad."
New Liskeard Speaker.

They call the men who meet in the skating rink for drill the "awkward squad," or at least that is what the beginners were called when we put on the red-coats some years back. There were about fifty men in the drill last Monday night, and about as many more during other nights. If you want to know a little about soldiering come in and join the squad. Of course, it does not mean that you have to go away and fight, but the time might come when we shall have to stay at home and fight, and it is better that we should know something about it. Come, citizens, get ready for the fray. You will be none the worse for knowing how to manoeuvre, and very much better if the necessity should arise for you to take up arms. Our Parliament and thousands of our wealthy citizens are doing grand things in helping Great Britain, but they cannot do it all. We must all do our part. If you cannot build war vessels, or send money, you can at least learn how to use a rifle and bayonet.

A Dream of the Future.
Lloyd's Weekly News.

The wind of liberty is stirring the dry bones of Europe in an astonishing fashion just now, and Great Britain is once more playing her old and honourable role of champion of Liberty and defender of small nations. There was once a great poet who dreamt a dream of a kingdom of Peace under a Supreme Monarch, exercising a system of law, order, and justice to which all petty kings and governments must submit. That was a dream of the Middle Ages, and is impracticable nowadays. Much more likely is it that Mr. Norman Angell's dream of the twentieth century will come true: that the 'British Empire is a forecast of what the future condition of the world is to be.' The prelude to that must be the defeat of Germany, and then, perhaps, we shall see the first glimmerings of the dawn of that desirable day:

"When there is no breaking in and no sallying forth,
And no outcry in our streets."

When the soldiers have done their sacrificial work in the cause of Liberty and Peace, it will be for the statesmen to see that the sacrifice has not been in vain.

Canada and British Trade.
Canadian Gazette (England).

Some of this trade which Prussian madness has thrown to the winds will be replaced by Canadian factories, and some also will go to the United States, by reason of proximity and similarity of conditions. But with British initiative and Canadian co-operation an important share of it should come to England and Scotland, where manufacturers and merchants have the benefit of a substantial British preference in the Canadian tariff. If such a step should be found practical, the Canadian Government might even be induced to grant duty-free entry into Canada of such of these classes of goods from the United Kingdom as Canada does not herself make. That would be a fresh and most powerful illustration of Canada's determination to make the cause of England and of Freedom her own. When it is a question of tariffs, Canada must think first of her own workers, as England claims to do, but her second care is for the Motherland, a part of whose teeming millions are at this moment in peril of worklessness and starvation. Fighting men Canada is giving freely, money also. Can she also give a freer market?

THE DEPARTING SOLDIERS

By Walt Mason

"Farewell, dear wife," the soldier said, "my country calls, and I must go, to wear a helmet on my head, and shoot at folks I do not know. And men whose names I've never heard will go for me with gun and sword ; the whole blamed business is absurd, and I am sad, and slightly bored. I know not what the war's about, if wise or just I do not know ; I only know I'm going out to make a target for the foe. But keep a cheerful heart, I beg, for I'll return to home and farm; perhaps I will be shy a leg, and maybe I'll be short an arm, but I'll come back, though battered sore, come back in flesh, or as a ghost; I may be brought upon a door, I may be shipped by parcels post ; some way, some time, I shall return, my soul, as ever, fond and true, to watch you trying hard to earn a living for our famished crew. You'll have to till our barren fields, and reap the scanty crops you raise, while I am packing swords and shields, and shooting holes through unknown jays. You'll have to thresh the meagre grain, and yoke the oxen to the plow, while I'm pirooting o'er the plain, a large brass helmet on my brow. I hate to leave these humble walls ; our lives, dear wife, are made a wreck, but I must go where honor calls, and get a bullet in my neck."

PRINCE COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Frederick William of Lippe Had Fired on Other Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 4—Lady Randolph Churchill, who has just arrived here from Germany, via Holland, flatly declares Prince Frederick William of Lippe committed suicide following a mistake made by his regiment in firing on other Germans. Lady Churchill says the prince was commanding a German cavalry regiment before Liege, and in the darkness his regiment fired on a German infantry regiment and nearly wiped it out. The infantrymen had been mistaken for Belgians. Fearing to have to explain to the Kaiser, the prince put a bullet in his head. News of his death reached his widow on Aug. 14.

Germans Informed of Movements.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4. — For the first time since war was declared the Government signal service station has been ordered by the censor to discontinue all reports as to shipping coming in or going out of the St. Lawrence. This order follows the intimation from the Imperial authorities that news about the movement of troops was being sent to the Germans.

Scouting Expedition Wiped Out.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—(By way of Copenhagen and London.) — The Tageblatt publishes a despatch from Thorn, a town of West Prussia on the right bank of the Vistula, describing an ill-fated scouting expedition. A steamer equipped with machine guns and carrying about 70 soldiers, steamed up the river into Russian territory, reaching a point not many miles from Nieszama. The party landed to reconnoitre the country and was attacked by Russian Cossacks and infantry. Only 10 Germans returned with the steamer.

Canadian Reservists Training.

LONDON, Sept. 4. — (Delayed in transmission.) — Nearly 250 reservists from Canada are undergoing special training in heavy gun work at Woolwich arsenal, with a view to joining the new Royal Garrison Artillery brigades which are being formed. Most of these men hail from the ranches of the west.

German Plane Down?

LONDON, Sept. 4.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., from Paris, declares that one of the German aeroplanes of the Taube type, which recently dropped bombs on the City of Paris, has been brought down. The two German aviators on board were killed.

He Will Not Protest.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. — Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador said while at the State Department yesterday he would make no protest against the purchase by Great Britain of munitions of war from American firms.

MANY CONVICTS WOULD GO TO BATTLE FIELDS

Some Are Old Soldiers and Reservists

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—Hundreds of men incarcerated in Canadian penitentiaries, and reporting on parole, desire to redeem themselves and wipe away their offence by going to the front to help fight the Empire's wars. Already large numbers of those on parole have volunteered for service, while over 200 first offenders and others who are still doing time have applied for parole so that they can volunteer for the front.

In the case of men already paroled who have declared themselves ready to volunteer, no difficulty or objection has been placed in their way. The whole parole system, says Chief Parole Officer Archibald, is based upon the principle of placing a man upon his honor.

Any man, therefore, who volunteers for service, thereby gives the best indication of adherence to that principle. After he has volunteered he will be asked to report no more. The declaration that he is willing to sacrifice himself for his country is the last report we desire from him.

A large number of those who have offered to go are reservists and old soldiers.

In connection with those still in the penitentiaries who ask that they be paroled in order to go to the war, the minister of justice will give their application every consideration.

Native Africans Loyal.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. at Cape Town sends the following:—

"The magistrates in the Transkei territories (a division on the east coast of Cape Colony), the population of which is 1,000,000, have been traveling among the natives upon instructions from the Government, explaining the war situation.

"Tens of thousands have been addressed, and the natives everywhere enthusiastically have offered their services to the Government. This is typical of the striking unanimity prevailing among every degree of civilization throughout South Africa."

New Brunswick To Give Potatoes.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Sept. 4.—Acting Premier Clarke announced yesterday that New Brunswick's gift in aid of the Empire will be 100,000 bushels of potatoes.

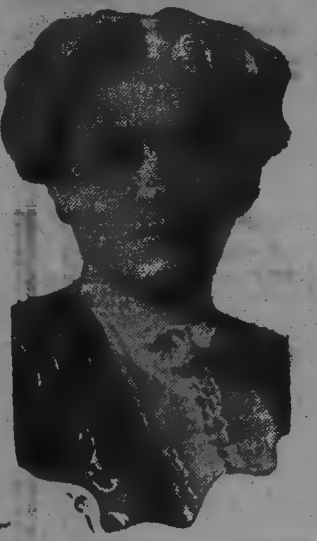
Woman's World

Mrs. Catt, Noted Suffrage Leader and Orator.



MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is one of the most interesting and magnetic of the suffrage leaders. She began life as a teacher in Iowa, was superintendent of public schools at twenty-two years of age, went into the suffrage ranks as an active worker in 1888. Since then she has studied law and medicine and has the equipped mind of the woman who has traveled the world over studying conditions of women in all foreign lands. She is the president of the International Suffrage alliance and has addressed audiences in England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Saxony, Bohemia, Prussia, Hungary and in Africa and the far east. Everywhere the charm of her womanhood won her admiration, and when the alliance met in Stockholm three years ago she was called all over Scandinavia "America's uncrowned queen."

Mrs. Catt is an orator as well as organizer and a teacher of the suffrage school. Her written words bristle with oratory. She has spoken for the suffrage in every state in the Union save Florida, carrying her message before legislatures and constitutional conventions. On her return from Europe, where she has been attending a meeting of the International Suffrage alliance, she expects to take part in suffrage work in New York.

The Empire State campaign committee is making many plans for fall. After election representatives from every state in the Union where women vote will assemble in New York. These women will be actual voters, women who have attained the standing of citizenship in their states and who have learned from actual experience what the privilege of the vote in their hands means. What they have learned they will endeavor to impress upon the doubting Thomases of the state.

QUEENLY KINDNESS.

How the Little Old Boot Seller Was Befriended by Queen Mary.

The kindliness and consideration shown by Queen Mary recently endeared her still more to the hearts of the British public. Some time ago a firm of boot sellers, which for years had enjoyed royal patronage, dismissed their manager for no other reason than that he was too old.

He set up for himself in a small shop in a southwestern suburb and was hugely surprised and delighted when it was indicated to him that Queen Mary had heard of his dismissal and had resolved to transfar her patronage to him. And now the tiny shop sports the royal arms instead of the gorgeous premises from which the manager had been dismissed.

Removing Fruit Stains.

Fruit stains are now in order, and two expert housekeepers have come forward with suggested remedies not generally known and yet labor saving.

The first is pure glycerin. The stain is to be moistened with it before the article stained is sent to the laundry. It is claimed to be quite effectual, and 20 cents' worth of glycerin ought to last a year.

The other remedy is spirits of camphor, applied as soon as possible or before the stain is wet with water or sent to the laundry.

The longest way round is the shortest way home, when traffic is congested.

FOR HOUSEWIVES

Fruit Punch.

Squeeze the juice of four lemons and two oranges into a glass bowl or pitcher. Add a small can of shredded pineapple and put in any berries that you wish. Add a generous quantity of cracked ice and sugar to taste. A dash of rum, a small amount of water and a siphon of carbonated water will complete a delicious drink. If served from a pitcher, put a generous bunch of mint on top.

Plain Johnny Cake.

Follow the above directions, substituting milk, or, better still, buttermilk, for the cream. In both recipes the quantity of sugar may be reduced or altogether omitted, while by many people a very slightly sweetened johnnycake with a faint flavoring of cinnamon or other spice is much liked.

Snap Fasteners For Neckwear.

The fashionable high standing collars and ruches may be made removable. Instead of sewing the ruch or collar into the neck of the dress sew snaps every two or three inches along the facing of the neckpiece and the corresponding parts at equal distances on the neck of the dress. In this way a neckpiece may be quickly transferred to another dress or taken off when a dress is hung in the wardrobe or packed in a suit case.

FABRICS FOR EVENING.

Charming evening frocks are made altogether of net, dull rose or dull blue.

Gray and white craquele mesh lace is used with bright colored taffeta for evening gowns.

White net frocks are best for hot weather dress occasions.

Heavier textured satins are coming in for evening wear.

The Traveling Bore.

The really well bred traveler is quiet. She does not move about in a restless fashion. She does not complain of her fellow passengers. She remembers that she is only one of many thousands who are spending their days speeding over the surface of the earth.

There is a type of traveler who is a public nusance. She boards the train with half a dozen small bags and packages in her arms and spends perhaps the first half hour of the journey getting them settled. When she gets herself settled she finds she needs find some infinitesimal object in the particular package or box that is in the most inaccessible position. When it is disinterred she settles herself again. Then she pulls down the shade to keep the sun out of her eyes and immediately thereafter runs it to the top of the window because the train is too dark. She fidgets and fumes because of the heat and worries because of the draft and scowls at the mother of a crying baby. And she makes her fellow travelers as unhappy as she herself is unless they are endowed with an active sense of humor.

Another unpopular type is the traveler who talks in a loud tone. Fellow travelers are treated to unwelcome details of some unknown relative's toothache or forced to hear a recount of the romance of second cousin somebody's young life.

The well bred traveler speaks in a low tone and refrains from recounting any bit of news that might not well be considered public property.

Then there is the traveler who is careless of the comfort of the other travelers.

Tennis Luncheon.

An appropriate luncheon can be given as a sequel or introduction to a tennis match. One of the most attractive was given around a table decorated in this way:

In the center of the table there was an oblong of green felt—a tennis lawn, of course. This was properly marked off with white chalk, and across the center was drawn a little net. Four small dolls dressed in white flannel were fastened to the green, and in their hands were tiny tennis rackets. To be sure, their pose was rather stolid for tennis players, but they were effective nevertheless.

The color scheme of the luncheon was green and white—with a cream of spinach puree, olives and celery, boiled halibut with white sauce and new potatoes with parsley, chicken breasts in aspic, creamed asparagus, pepper salad with cream cheese balls and wafers and tennis balls of ice cream. Of course the same balls when they are served at Christmas are dubbed snowballs, but they answered their purpose.

The place cards showed little water color sketches of tennis playing, and the favors were bunches of white roses and ferns.

Public Manners.

The actions of some women in public conveyances and in public places at times invite severe criticism. Some women push and shove others in a way that suggests a state of savagery. It is a common habit of women deliberately to take another's place in line. The rule of "first come, first served" is ignored by the thoughtless majority.

Do not wrangle over paying the fare of a woman companion. Either pay it or let her pay it and then stop talking about the thing.

Women thus make themselves conspicuous in a foolish way, men laughing in a superior scorn at the weak, vacillating feminine mind. Decide to correct this error.

The action of a woman in public is the best test of her manners. After all, the behavior when there is no one looking is a fine criterion by which an individual should be rated. So be careful in public.

Courtesy For Sisters.

A large, round table at a certain famous summer hotel accommodated a family the parents of which say they never intend to grow old. Handsome themselves, they were surrounded by four beautiful children, two sons and two daughters. The mother remarked with pride that each boy had a sister to care for until he or she married.

The effect of the arrangement was plainly evident to those who noted the attention the girls received. The boys had been taught to place their sisters' chairs at the table, to help them with their wraps, to see that they had all the necessary attention at the informal hotel parties—in short, to do all those pretty things that many boys never dream of doing until they have met the "one girl," who probably is some one else's sister.

He Thought He Was Handsome.

"So she has quarreled with that ugly beau of hers! He is the ugliest man I have ever seen. What did they quarrel about?"

"She thought she would make him feel good and remarked that handsome men were never worth enough powder to blow them over the fence."

"And it didn't have the desired effect?"

"No; it made him furiously angry." —Houston Post.

First Love Story of Present War

New York, Sept. 4.—Here is the first love story of the European war.

On the day Russia declared war upon Austria, Prof. Earl Van Dusen Burdick, a teacher of foreign languages in Hamilton, N.Y., and Miss Hildegrade Steel of Flatbush, found themselves in Vienna and in a panic. In the rush for the train to leave the city they collided. An apology was offered and accepted, and the acquaintanceship was formed.

What was schedured as a 22-hour journey to Rotterdam lengthened to five and a half days because of war conditions. The acquaintanceship of that journey2ripened into love on the voyage home aboard the Ryndam, with the result that yesterday they appeared in the office of Deputy City Clerk Skully of Brooklyn for a marriage license.

They had with them all the baggage they had saved — four canes, one umbrella and one brown shawl.

A grouch is one of the most useless of burdens.

When the War Is Over

WHEN the war is over what motor car or piano, for example, will stand highest in public favor? What cereal? What range or furnace? What brand of soap, paint, stock food, and so on? The answer is: The make or brand that has kept itself constantly in the public eye DURING THE WAR---by means of advertising in the public press.

Selling courage expresses itself in publicity. The withdrawal or suspension of advertising is a form of economy with a "back kick" in it.

Veterans and Heroes are the men who fight and keep on fighting.

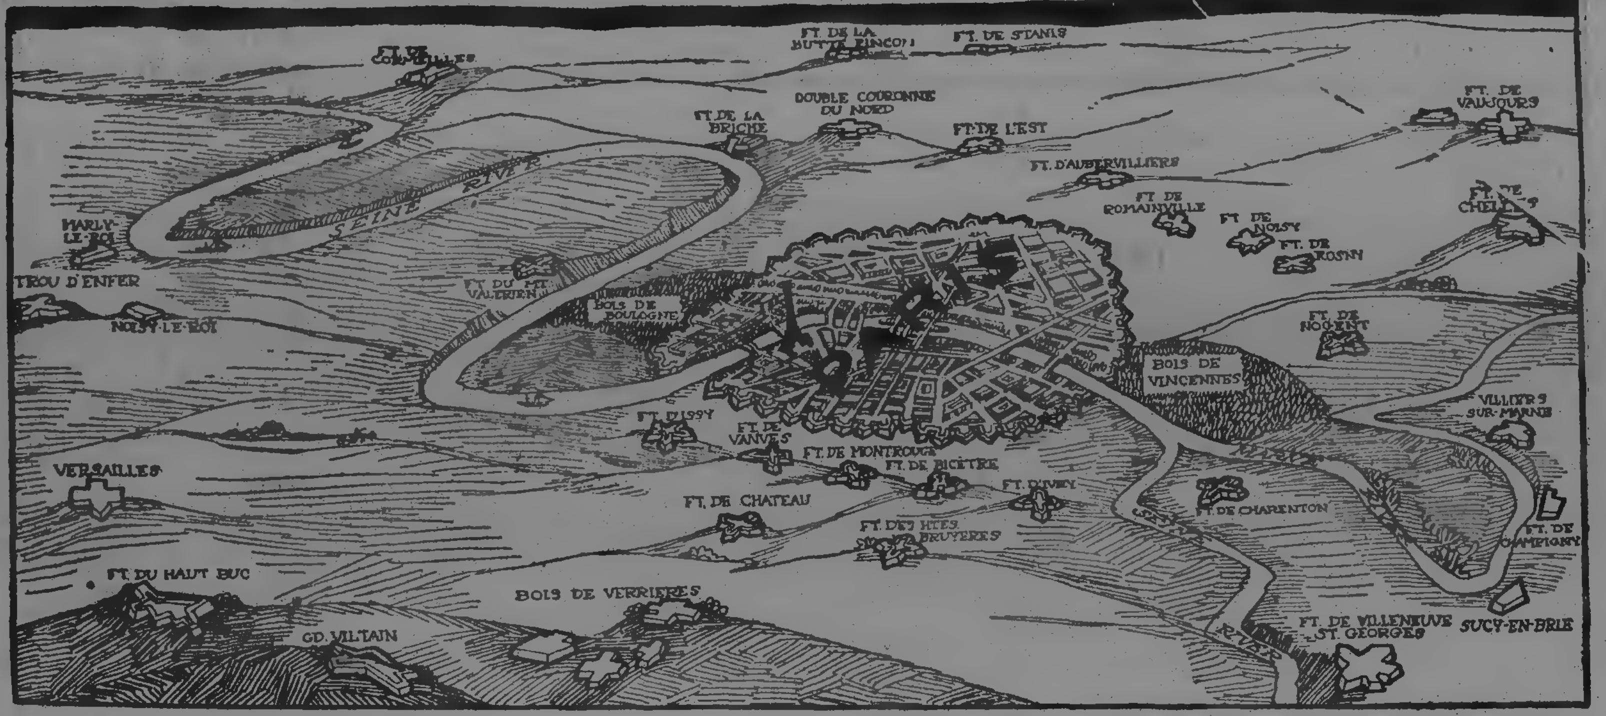
Bird's-Eye Map of Paris, Showing the Encircling Defences of the City and the General Lay-out of the Surroundings



London, Sept. 3.—Obscure as the position at the front is, there seems to be no doubt that the German advance is being pushed forward. The English have reason to hope that the hard marching and severe fighting may at length have told upon the German troops, and that the fresh army brought up by France may be able to arrest the German advance.

On the other hand, the closing up of the German right toward LaFere tends to show that the enveloping movement on this has even now been met and that the general outcome of the fighting in the north remains still in doubt.

If the allies thrust back the German advance, or if both sides maintain their positions, the situation is clear enough, but if not so fortunate, and further regiments are absolutely necessary, then the position is more difficult, and as the fortress of Paris then becomes of great importance, a brief preliminary description of it will not be out of place.

Paris was defended in 1870-71 by a ring of detached forts and was garrisoned mainly by national guards and mobiles. It was not properly victualled, but the energetic measures taken enabled it to hold out for four months. Since 1871 there has been added to the old fortifications an exterior line of forts, and on the line of these new forts the active defence of the city will rest.

Two Fortified Lines.

The old line of fortifications begins in the north at St. Denis, with the forts of La Briche, Du Nord and De L'Est, and continues along through the forts of Dauber, Villiers, Nomainville, Noisy, Rosni, Nogent, Vincennes, Charenton, Ivery, Buctre, Mountrouy, Vanves, Dissi to Mont Valvien. The perimeter of the works is about 34 miles.

The new line of works makes Paris a fortified province. It embraces in its defended area: Enghien, Argenteuil, Versailles, and the forts of St. Germain and Bondy. Its perimeter is more than 80 miles, and, starting from the north, there are, in succession, the forts of Corneilles, Montignon, Domont, Montmorency, Ecouen and Stains, forming the northern group. To the east are the forts of Vauhoure and Chelles. Between the Mine and Sane come the forts of Villieres, Chantigny, Snely and Villeneuve, St. Georges.

To the south is Fort Palaiseau, while the hills from Palaiseau to Chatillion are crowned by various batteries.

On the west Fort Villeras, Hautbuc, Steyr and Marly, with numerous batteries.

WILL NEED 500,000 MEN.

If Paris is invested, the line held by the enemy will be not less than one hundred miles in length, and if this line is held in the same strength as that in 1870, no less than 500,000 men will be required to occupy it. Such numbers will so materially weaken the German army that it is possible that on this occasion the Germans will select one section of defence, the capture of which will enable them to bombard the capital and bring up against the forts selected for attack the heavy Howitzers which played such havoc with Liege and Namur.

The French garrison of Paris must be large. A part of it must consist of the first line of troops, if the defence is to be as active as the case requires. We must assume that by this time, supplementary defences have been constructed in the intervals between the works, and that all buildings which interfere with the fire of the works have been demolished; that obstacles have been accumulated, and that inundations have been prepared.

Lastly, it is probable that the main armament of the lines will not be in the forts alone, but chiefly in concealed positions in the intervals, and that the victualing of the capital has been better assured than in 1870.

In General Gallieni, who has been appointed governor of Paris, France has a good general, in whose vigor, judgment and tenacity she can safely rely. Gen. Gallieni is 60 years of age. He was made prisoner at Sedan, and all recall his great services to France in Pokan and Madagascar. He also held important commands in France. In choosing him for the onerous task of ruling Paris under a siege, the French government has chosen well.

The Russian Successes.

Although Russian official reports of severe and prolonged fighting in Galicia and south of Lubin do not claim decisive victory, there is every reason to hope that the splendid fighting of the Russian troops and the skillful leadership of the Russian armies have taken the measure of the Austro-Hungarian army and threaten it with serious, and perhaps decisive, defeat.

The main Austrian attack was made toward Lubin, but a strong force has also confronted a dangerous flank attack which the Russian army of East Galicia has been steadfastly pursuing. This eastern Russian attack has reached the line of Kamionka and Brozukovita, and threatens to overwhelm Lemberg and to outflank the Austrians.

During their retreat the main Austrian army seems to have fought well. It has wrestled with the Russians during the week of terrific fighting, but last evidences show that it is at last in retreat. If the Austrian communique which has found its way into the Italian press, is to be relied upon, the Austrian government admits its defeat, though not, perhaps, all the consequences which may follow it.

It has been frequently pointed out that the determined Russian offensive toward Berlin could not safely take place until the main Austrian army has been disposed of.

53 KILLED IN SEA RIOT

New York, Sept. 4.—A riot aboard the German steamer Bluecher, at anchor in the harbor of Pernambuco, Brasil, in which three of the Bluecher's crew and 50 of her 800 steerage passengers were killed, was described by passengers aboard the Brazilian steamer Sao Paulo upon her arrival here from Brazilian ports, whence she sailed at the commencement of the European war.

The Bluecher was bound from Buenos Ayres for Hamburg, under the German flag. Upon learning that war had been declared, the Bluecher put back to Pernambuco. She had aboard, the Sao Paulo's passengers asserted, several million dollars for London and 800 Spaniards and Portugese in the steerage. When Pernambuco was reached, the steerage passengers insisted that the ship proceed to her destination and upon refusal a riot was started. The bodies of the passengers killed were thrown overboard.

Capt. Amico said the trouble began with an anti-German demonstration by Spanish and Portugese against the Bluecher's crew. The ship's butcher attacked one of the leaders. The German was killed and other German members of the crew seized arms and began fighting. A hand-to-hand fight ensued. The captain summoned the Pernambuco police who fired right and left. Many of the rioters jumped overboard and were drowned.

CHARGE OF FORGERY.

BENEDICT XV. WILL BE CROWNED ON SUNDAY

Much Excitement Among Members of the Conclave When Cardinal's Name Was Called.

ROME, Sept. 4.—Cardinal Giacomo Della Chiesa, Archbishop of Bologna, Italy, was yesterday elected Supreme Pontiff of the Catholic hierarchy in succession to the late Pius X., who died Aug. 20. He will reign under the name of Benedict XV.

The conclave of the Sacred College, whose duty it is to elect the Pope, went into session the evening of Monday, Aug. 31. The announcement of the outcome of its deliberation was made yesterday morning shortly after eleven o'clock. Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, are on board the steamer Canopic which is not due at Naples until to-day. They were on their way to attend the conclave. Consequently neither of them participated in the election of the new Pope, nor was Cardinal Begin, of Quebec, who is in Paris.

At twenty-five minutes before twelve Cardinal Della Volpe appeared on the central balcony of St. Peters with Monsignor Capostosti bearing the Pope's cross on his right, and pronounced the ritual announcing the election of Cardinal Della Chiesa. To this he added that the new Pope had chosen the name of Benedict XV.

Then the crowd again cheered, and at once began to make their way into the Basilica to hear the benediction of the new Pontiff.

Cardinal Giacomo Della Chiesa, who was yesterday elected Pope by the Sacred College in succession to Pius X., who died Aug. 20, was created a cardinal May 25 1914. He is the Archbishop of Bologna Italy. He was born at Pegli in the diocese of Genes, Nov. 21, 1854, and was ordained a priest Dec. 21, 1878. He served as secretary of the Nunciature in Spain from 1883 to 1887, in which year he was appointed secretary to the late Cardinal Rampolla.

Cardinal Della Chiesa's coronation as Benedict XV. will take place Sept. 6th.

Immediately after his election the pontiff said that he could not imagine how his frail being was capable of enduring the weight of enormous responsibility thrown upon his shoulders, especially at a moment when almost all the countries of Europe were stained with blood, when the wounds inflicted upon humanity were also inflicted on the church and when countless victims of the war were being cut down.

The war, he said, had armed faithful against faithful, priest against priest, while the bishops of each country offered prayers for the success of the army of his own nation. But victory for one side meant slaughter to the other, the destruction of children equally dear to the heart of the pontiff.

When the name of Cardinal Della Chiesa was cried out by the cardinal scrutineers as having received the prescribed two-thirds vote there was much excitement among the members of the conclave. Then followed the traditional formula, the cardinal being asked as to whether he accepted the election. Amid breathless silence he answered in the affirmative, but his reply, owing to profound emotion, was scarcely audible. Immediately all the cardinals removed the canopies from above their chairs, this being the tangible sign that the leadership of the church had passed from them to the newly-elected Pope.

WAS ANOTHER BALACLAVA

Ninth Lancers Rode Down on Battery

LONDON, Sept. 4. — The Daily Mail's correspondent behind the British lines describes the charge of the Ninth Lancers, which occurred at an unnamed spot during the recent series of tactical retreats, as a second Balaclava. He says:

"Terrible havoc had been caused in our ranks by shells from a battery of 11 German guns posted inside a forest near the Belgian frontier.

"It seemed impossible to silence their fire until the Ninth Lancers made their attempt, riding straight at the guns after debouching into the open, and charging under a hail of melinite and lyddite.

"I have not been able to get reliable figures as to the distance they rode, but they reached their goal. Nothing could stop them. They reached the guns, killed the gunners and put the guns out of action. Then, like their prototype of Balaclava, they rode back.

"On the return they fell in greater numbers still from the attack of other German batteries posted at vantage points beyond the valley."

Industries Work Night and Day

Whitby, Sept. 4.—Whitby industries are working day and night on war contracts, principally harness and horse furnishings, also leather and metal fittings for accoutrements.

This relieves industrial distress, but it is feared that the Italians working on the sewer contract may leave to take up arms with their countrymen in Europe. There are several hundred engaged on the town sewers, and these the government are installing at the great Provincial institution under construction on the lake front.

A settlement with the Murphy estate has been made by the town authorities, whereby the site of the sewage disposal works, fifteen acres, has been secured for $1,606. This enables the contractor, Mr. F. F. Fry, of Toronto, who was here yesterday, to begin work forthwith. His contract aggregates $25,000.

LOOK FOR DRAW IF NOT VICTORY

Germans Think Their Army is Unbeatable

BITTER AT ENGLAND

Might Discuss Mediation After Entering Paris

London, Sept. 4. — An American citizen, Philip H. Wood, who has just arrived in London from Berlin, gives an interesting account of conditions in the German capital. "Life is going on practically the same as usual," he says. "There is no more difference than there is in London. The price of food is the same as before the war. The cafes are all open and have their bands playing. There are almost as many concerts as usual. Many of the theatres still have full houses. Save for suppressed excitement, there is very little to show that Germany is in a state of war. I never saw any refugees."

Mr. Wood, who talked with many of the people, observed no anxiety as to the supply of food. Apparently no one was taking any pains to be economical. He was told that there was enough food in the country to last 18 months. There was also optimism as to the result of the war.

"The general view was," said Mr. Wood, "that if the Germans do not win, they will make it a draw. They are satisfied that their army never can be beaten, and that the most the Allies can hope for is a stalemate. Even if they have to retreat from France, they are confident that they will be able to defend their own country for an indefinite time.

"I asked two officers if they had considered the responsibility of defeat. One said, "Yes, it may be just possible; but if so we should not be here. In all Germany there would not be more than 50,000 men left between the ages of 17 and 50."

"My own opinion is that war will be stopepd by mediation within a month. But when I suggested it to a German officer, he said: "It's no good talking to us about mediation till we have occupied Paris and St. Petersburg. Then we might listen to you.'"

Mr. Wood found considerable bitterness against England. He was rarely successful in persuading anyone that England was fighting Prussian militarism rather than the German people.

"They think England wants to crush Germany," he said. "They will all fight to the last ditch rather than submit. I saw no sign of dissenton among Socialists. English people are treated well."

DUKE'S BRAVE DEED

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The Duke of Westminster has distinguished himself on the battlefield. He was in company with Capt. Grenfell and Lt. Percy Tyndham, son of Countess Grosvenor. During a hot engagement, when Grenfell fell wounded, at great personal risk, amid a galling fire, the Duke of Westminster rushed through the battle zone and carried Grenfell to safety.

Seized Short Weight Butter

Kingston, Sept. 4.—Market Clerk McCammon yesterday morning confiscated twelve pounds of butter from a dealer on the market for short weight.

There were twenty-five pounds in the lot offered for sale, and when weighed on the market scales twelve of the twenty-five pounds were each found to be from one-half to one ounce short. The butter was made by a creamery company in Uxbridge, and was offered for sale by a dealer. The confiscated butter will be turned over to the House of Industry.

ANOTHER RECOMMENDATION IN FAVOR OF PETER THOMPSON

Property Committee Wrestle With Much Discussed Question to Accompaniment of Ald. Duncan's Objections

Property committee t ,valst EAOI

At the property committee meeting last evening there were present Ald. Langford (in the chair), Duncan, Saunders and McIntyre, and Mayor Buller.

Assistant Plumbing Inspector Thompson was called upon to explain why the plumbing in the new school in East City wasn't put in according to the by-law. Ald. Duncan produced a copy of the "Sanitary Engineer," a monthly magazine, which contained a plan of the work in the school, and also a severe criticism of the way in which the work had been done, according to their plan. The plumbing inspector claimed that the plan was wrong and misleading. During this interview a few compliments were exchanged between Ald. Duncan and the plumbing inspector which were of a very personal nature. Plumbing Inspector Thompson admitted that he had departed from the by-law, and drew a plan to show whereby the change he had made was a decided benefit over the one that the plumbing by-law called for.

Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Saunders agreed with the plumbing inspector that the changes he had made, whereby a continuous circulation of air was obtained, was a decided advantage over the way the by-law would have had the work done.

Ald. Saunders: "I wouldn't put too much stress on what that monthly said."

Chairman Langford: "I agree with the plumbing inspector in the change he made, but I think he should have consulted the committee before he made it."

Ald. McIntyre disapproved very strongly of the treatment received by the plumbing inspector at the hands of Ald. Duncan.

It was then moved by Ald. McIntyre, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that, providing the plan that the sanitary engineer had was wrong, Peter Thompson be appointed plumbing inspector.

The committee as a whole felt that Mr. Thompson was doing his work in a satisfactory manner.

It will be remembered that the aldermen took sides at a meeting some time ago, when the matter of Mr. Thompson's appoinment as plumbing inspector was discussed. At that meeting, it was decided to send the problem back to the property committee.

A communication was received from Mr. Hare for a bill for $100. He claimed that he had been stopped from dumping ashes at the goose pond and that he had been put to extra expense to that amount in getting rid of them. This matter was referred to the city solicitor.

KOREANS AT SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE TONIGHT

Public is Invited to What Should be Interesting Meeting

The European war having greatly disorganized the sailing lists to all parts of the world, will bring to Canada a party of Korean natives, who are members of the Salvation Army. Col. and Mrs. Hoggard, the Army's first missionaries to the Land of the Morning Calm, and who are still in charge of the work there (which by the way, has grown to a considerable extent in a very short time), took this interesting group of people to the International Congress of the Salvation Army in London, and will accompany them on their Canadian tour.

The visitors who came from Ottawa were met at the C.P.R. station this afternoon and were entertained to a trip about the city.

The big meeting will be held in the Army Temple tonight and the general public is invited.

Everybody interested in missionany work will appreciate the opportunity of seeing and hearing representatives of a class of people concerning whom, until recent years, little has been known.

The Koreans are an interesting people. Their customs are many and peculiar, and well worthy of study. The rule that insists upon the seclusion of women is being slowly but surely broken down, and it is no uncommon thing, nowadays, in Seoul, to see husband and wife riding together in the tram-car.

Ancestral and devil-worship obtain largely among these interesting people. The fear they have of evil spirits is everywhere manifest in various ways, and especially by the idols fixed here and there to protect the Koreans against their ghostly enemies.

Their habits are of the most primitive order. They have no idea of proper sanitation. The wonder is that they are as healthy a race, especially when one remembers the severe winters experienced and the conditions under which they live and sleep during the inclement months. For instance, a poor family living in one room, with perhaps a breathing space of eight feet by eight feet, will keep every aperture closed, and the floor, upon which they sleep, is made hot by means of an ingenious system of heating underneath.

The Japanese are emigrating rapidly in Korea. Already there are nearly 300,000 in the country. Wider streets in the city, electric tram-cars and lighting, the building of railways and other public buildings, everywhere reveal the fact that the old order is passing.

Might Have Been Drowning Case

When David Tully was about to cross Smith street bridge yesterday afternoon, he missed the approach and rolled down the bank into the water. Now the water at this point is about 20 feet deep, but the timely arrival of a man in a boat was the means of his rescue, and a drowning accident was averted. The pulmotor was called out, but it was not used.

MASSED BANDS TO GIVE CONCERT

The 57th Regimental Band will practice tonight in preparation for a patriotic concert which will be given by the Regimental Band and Temple Band at the armouries on Friday, September 11th. Proceeds to go towards the Patriotic Fund. An excellent program will be rendered.

OBITUARY

THOMAS HENRY GLEED.

The death occurred last evening at Nicholls Hospital of Thomas Henry Gleed, after a lingering illness of typhoid fever. He was fifty-two years of age, and up to the time he was taken sick, he was employed by the Canadian General Electric Co. He was highly respected and much esteemed by fellow employees and was a loving husband and an affectionate father. Surviving are his sorrowing wife and two children. His family reside at 213 Bethune St.

The heartfelt sympathy of his large number of friends will go out to the widow and family in their bereavement.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 from Belleghem's Undertaking Parlors, Hunter St., to Little Lake Cemetery.

POLICE COURT

In this morning's police court Thos. Clarry pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk. He procured the $2.

Bert Howden was arrested yesterday on alighting from the train and faced a charge of unlawfully taking away and carnally knowing Miss Minnie Herron. The case was remanded until Friday next.

John Donoghue hasn't been doing enough work lately and was brought up on a vagrancy charge. He claimed that he had spent $66 in less than two weeks and he couldn't see where a man could do that and be held up for vagrancy. His case was enlarged one week and if he is in town at the end of that time he stands a good chance of getting a government job. However, John spoke of his intentions to start for the lumber camp tomorrow.

TAKE OFF YOUR HAT

A remark was made by a citizen who was at the armouries last night that many are rather indifferent when the band is playing God Save the King. He thought it was the least respect that could be shown to the king by doffing the hat when "The King" was being played by the band. Peterborough is not losing any of her patriotism on account of not raising its hat when this popular selection is being played. It is perhaps overlooked by many while others, indifferent, do not think it necessary.

It brings up the old question of the gentlemen raising his hat to the lady, and may be applied in about the same manner. Some dispense with this duty by merely touching the hat, while others make a grand raise of the hat, coupled with a "Chauncey Olcott" bow. But as regards raising the hat on a frosty morning when the thermometer is frozen up—it's rather chilly don't you know.

DEPUTY COLLECTOR, INLAND REVENUE RESIGNS POSITION

Mr. Rorke the present deputy collector of Inland Revenue has sent in his resignation to the minister. He is over eighty years of age and is entitled to the usual retiring pension. Mr. Rorke who was a Liberal appointee is a man who was always held in the highest esteem by the community generally. He feels very strongly that he should be allowed to retire and it is likely his resignation will be accepted immediately. Mr. Buller was appointed to the collectorship recently although until he qualifies as required by law he is rated as a deputy-collector. This, however, has nothing to do with the deputy-collectorship at Peterborough which appointment will be made by Mr. Sexsmith, M.P., at an early date. Mr. Rorke formerly lived in Norwood and in former years opposed at the poll the late Mr. John Burnham, K.C.

RANGES OPEN ON HOLIDAY

The ranges will be open all day Monday (Labor Day) and any member of the regiment who wishes to shoot may do so. Busses will leave the armouries at 8.30 a.m. and 1 p.m., to convey the men to the grounds.

Their lines are cast in pleasant places—the people who fish for compliments.

DIVISION COURT

At the sitting of the Division Court this morning His Honor Judge Huycke rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the case of David Conroy vs. Patrick Allen, Robt. Allen and the McDonald Lumber Co., garnishee, for $40.56.

In the case of Campbell and Best vs. New York Chinese Cafe for $10.55 the parties involved agreed on a settlement. Other cases were adjourned till next court.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

The 57th Regiment, on parade at the armories last night, had a very encouraging turnout, there being a number of recruits. Orders were read as follows:

The following extracts from general and militia orders are promulgated for the information of the regiment:

General Orders—No. 19, Feb. 10, 1914. Lieut. W. W. VanEvery is transferred from the Corps Reserve to the 51st Regiment Rifles, November 15, 1913.

No. 49, March 24, 1914. To be provisional signalling officer,: Lieut. C. H. Ackerman, March 2, 1914. Provisional Lieut. C. G. Kingan is permitted to retire, March 26, 1914.

No. 71—The Colonial Auxiliary Forces Officers' Decoration is awarded to Capt. R. Hounsell.

No. 82—May 12, 1914. To be musketry instructor, Capt. R. Y. Hounsell, April 1, 1914.

To be captain, Lieut. K. G. Lech, April 1, 1914.

No. 115—June 23, 1914. Lieut. (supernumary) E. Worth and W. G. Worth are absorbed with the establishment.

To be lieutenant, Lieut. B. J. Tait, from the 91st Regiment (Canadian Highlanders), April 1, 1914.

Militia Orders—No. 286—Major G. W. Bennett, having passed the required examinations, will have the letters M. S. C. recorded after his name in the militia list.

No. 341—A signalling certificate, grade B, is awarded Lieut. C. H. Ackerman.

No. 2—Rifle practice will be conducted under Musketry Sergeant J. W. Edwards, each afternoon until further orders, provided a sufficient number of men parade, at 1.30 at the armories, to warrant the expense of conveying them to the ranges.

ULTIMATE SUCCESS FOR ALLIED FORCES

The German Attack is Weakening all Along the Line.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—The Temps yesterday evening printed another article, in which it predicts final success for the allies. The newspaper's reasons for its optimism are contained in the following resume of the situation as The Temps sees it: Diminution of pressure by the enemy on the extreme left of the allies' line, absolute inactivity in the centre, and the progress of the French troops in Lorraine and on the right bank of the canal, which passes a few miles north of Luneville, in the Department of Muerthe and Moselle. These circumstances are taken by The Temps as evidence that the enemy has been hard hit and is suffering from losses in men and lack of supplies.

The Liberte quoted a British officer who arrived here yesterday morning from Pierrefitte, twenty-eight miles southeast of Pau, as saying he was wounded in a fierce battle near Compiegne, in which the Germans were driven back several times with heavy losses. He said that the moment he was wounded by a shell the French and British offensive was successful over a front of several miles, the Germans retreating toward the left.

The only official word from the War Office yesterday was the declaration by Gen. Gallieni that the French lines still hold.

"Every attempt of the enemy to break through at any point in the north has been blocked," said the general. "The German centre has thrown its entire weight against our lines, and has been unable to make the slightest impression. Their right has pressed our left back slowly and in complete order, and we have inflicted enormous damage on their forces. The German right is engaged in a most hazardous undertaking. Every mile it is extended its line of communication moves forward that far, and with their centre held, it may be possible that we will yet surprise them." In an official statement issued yesterday the War Office says:

"There has been no contact with the German forces in the region of Compiegne and Senlis since yesterday. Precautions have been taken to stop any offensive movement of the enemy.

"Measures have also been taken to provide for the pursuit of German aeroplanes, especially those of the armored type, which will be prevented from flying over Paris.

"The situation in the northeast is the same as yesterday."

Amiens Is Captured.

LONDON, Sept. 4. — While the struggle which is to readjust the map of Europe is being waged fiercely along the 300-mile battle front, despatches from the various centres of conflict give momentary glimpses of the war's progress in different localities.

From Amiens comes the news of that historic and beautiful French city's fall into the hands of the Germans after a fight lasting three entire days. La Fere, too, one of the weaker of the French fortresses, situated 50 miles east of Amiens, has been seized, according to reports.

Three million French soldiers are ready to defend Paris from assault. New entrenchments outside the city have been begun on a large scale, several hundred thousand men being engaged in the work, under the direction of experienced army engineers. This work cannot be completed within several days, and the Germans are within 30 miles of the French capital.

Despatches state that Germany's troops to the north of Paris, exhausted through days of marching and fighting, sought an armistice from Gen. Paul Pau, the doughty one-armed commander of the French, who refused point blank.

For forty-eight hours German cavalry have been skirmishing with the British-French cavalry divisions near Compiegne and Soissons.

The occupation of Amiens, France, by the Germans was achieved after three days of fighting, according to a despatch to The Daily Mail. The despatch came from Amiens and bore the date of Sept. 1.

Amiens is the capital of the French Department of Somme, and is 70 miles north of Paris.

"The right wing of the Germans," says The Times' correspondent in Amiens, "is too far advanced, and there is a chance that it will be cut and caught between two fires if the British should be found in force. Our centre is resting very well, and the right wing of our army appears to be taking the offensive."

Wounded Soldiers Reach Berlin.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—A despatch to The Evening News from Copenhagen says:—

"Great numbers of wounded are arriving in Berlin daily. The trains are not unloaded until dark, in order to avoid undue curiosity on the part of the public. The wounded are coming mostly from East Prussia.

"Princess Louise of Belgium has been ordered to leave Vienna within 2' hours."

Antwerp's History

Fortified City Once Most Populous in Continental Europe.

Antwerp has always been regarded as Belgium's principal fortified stronghold. Although sixty miles from the sea it is still one of the greatest seaports of Europe, because the broad and deep Scheldt river gives it an excellent outlet. Its population is almost entirely Flemish. Under Emperor Charles V. it is said to have been the most populous city of Continental Europe.

In the middle of the sixteenth century its population was 150,000. The great fairs held then attracted the great merchants of the world. Under the Spanish regime it declined and in 20 years fell to a population of 55,000. The treaty of Westphalia closed the Scheldt to seagoing vessels and it was not opened until the French did so in 1794. Napoleon undertook to revivify it, but it was surrendered to the English in 1814. It began to grow again but was almost ruined in the military operations of 1830 and thereafter.

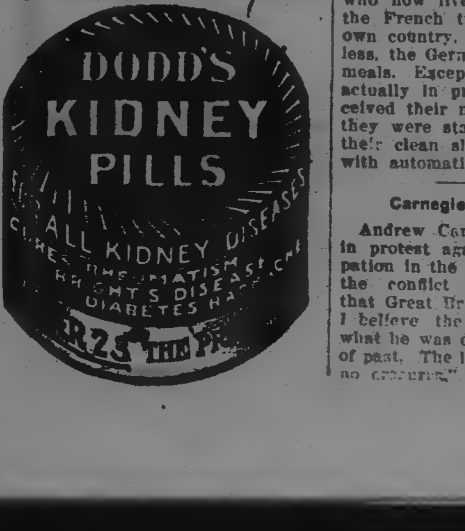
Netherlands retained the right to levy navigation dues on the Scheldt which laid a heavy hand on Antwerp until 1863, when the levy was commuted by the payment of about $7,000,000. The fortifications were built to serve as the rallying ground for the Belgian army in case it was overpowered in the field by a superior force.

Socks For the Soldiers

It is difficult to realize what a perfect war machine the Germany army was and is, said an Englishman who fought with the Germans in 1870 and who now lives at Dover. Although the French troops, fighting in their own country, were starved and bootless, the Germans never missed their meals. Except when the battles were actually in progress, the troops received their meals as regularly as if they were staying in a hotel. Even their clean shirts and socks arrived with automatic regularity.

Carnegie Blames Germany

Andrew Carnegie, refusing to join in protest against England's participation in the war, laid the blame for the conflict on the Kaiser. "I feel that Great Britain only did her duty. I believe the Kaiser did not know what he was doing but this is matter of past. The looms of the gods weave no crrurrs."



THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Darkening prospects that Turkey and Italy would enter the European war brought about new high price records today in the wheat market here. There was a strong close at 3⅜c to 3¾c above last night. Corn rose 1⅛c to 1⅜c net, and oats ⅞c to 1c. The outcome in provisions ranged from 25c decline to an advance of 5c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 3.—Wheat prices were stronger again today from opening. October and December were ⅝c higher and advanced steadily with a fair buying demand. Exporters were said to be buyers of futures in fair volume.

Receipts continue to increase, 357 cars inspected Wednesday and 320 cars in sight today. Despite this fact, offerings in the cash department are light, farmers holding out in anticipation of further advances.

May opened late in the day at 2½c advance.

Cash wheat demand was quiet except for small parcels of spot.

Oats were steady and flax about steady.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—There was a fair enquiry from United Kingdom ports for both old and new crop Manitoba spring wheat, and sales of several loads of the former were made, the wheat being bought on spot. The bids for the latter were out of line. There was some demand for oats and further sales of old crop No. 2 C.W. were made to London at 29s to 29s 3d, but buyers' ideas for new crop oats are away below this figure. The local market for old crop oats is firm owing to small supply coming forward. There was no change in flour for which the demand is good at firm prices. Millfeed is scarce and in good demand. The cheese market is excited and prices at the country boards this week are booming, but the volume of business over the cable is not large. The trade in eggs is fairly active.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—Wheat—December, $1.18⅜; No. 1 hard, $1.26⅜; No. 1 northern, $1.17⅜ to $1.24⅜; No. 2 do., $1.13⅜ to $1.22⅜.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

SIXTY THOUSAND RECRUITS.

Kitchener Gets Enthusiastic Answer to Call—Laborites Approve.

LONDON, Sept. 4. — During the last few days, 60,000 men have joined Lord Kitchener's second army. The recruits are coming in swarms.

The Parliamentary committee of the Trades Union Congress has issued a manifesto, expressing approval of the efforts which the Labor members in the House of Commons are making in conjunction with the representatives of other parties to stimulate recruiting.

The manifesto states that in the event of the voluntary system of military service proving inadequate at the present time, the need would result in greatly strengthening the advocacy of compulsory service. Accordingly, the manhood of the nation should rally to the defence of the country in such numbers as "will demonstrate to the world that a free people can rise to the supreme heights of great sacrifice without the whip of conscription."

The Cockney "H" Again.

The American tourist was taking the rest cure for a day in a London boarding house.

"I shall want no more meals," she said, when the maid brought up tea. "I shall be up for dinner. There's nothing more I want."

Then in the next breath she added, "Oh, yes, there is! I want that hot-water bottle; but that's not to eat."

The cockney maid stood silent for a moment, then said, gleefully, "Oh, yes, it is to 'eat! You want me to 'eat it for you."

PETERSON WENT UP IN THE AIR

Erie Defeated Senators by 4 to 2

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—Ottawa lost a game in the Canadian League pennant race to Erie yesterday afternoon, thus enabling London to creep closer to them. Peterson and Brown were the opposing pitchers and after Ottawa had scored two in the fourth on hits by Dolan, Stewart and Nill, followed by Shaughnessy's sacrifice fly, Peterson held the Yankees scoreless until the eighth, when he went to pieces. Dawson doubled over Powers' head and Callahan singled. Gygli's double scored Dawson and after Harris had fanned Peterson purposely passed Schaeffer to get Petie Behan, filling the bases. The pass proved fatal, as Behan singled over first, scoring both Callahan and Gygli.

In the ninth Brown hit safely and after being advanced to third, he scored when Callahan bunted to Nill. In their half of the last frame, the Ottawas rallied. Shaughnessy singled and Stewart doubled but with a hit needed to tie the score Dolan struck out and Smykal was retired at first leaving the visitors victorious by a two-run margin. Brown held the Ottawas to seven hits and was very good in the pinches, striking out nine and giving three bases on balls. Peterson had things all his own way until the eighth. Roberts, the former Toronto pitcher, replaced him in the eighth and was found for two safeties. Rogers took ill in the seventh inning and retired in favor of Powers. The latter dropped Gygli's long hit in the eighth and it proved the turning point of the match.

BOSTON ONCE HAD INFIELD LIKE ATHLETICS

A ready letter-writer, with a penchant for asking hard ones comes across with an enquiry as to whether baseball ever boasted an infield that could be printed on the same page with Connie Mack's $100,000 collection of hired help.

From the tone of the writer's letter it is easy to discern that he thinks Connie Mack's great infield the last word and the first word in infields; and in this he does not go far wrong; but there have been others.

McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker— they're rated as being worth $100,000 on the hoof.

Still, any old-time fan can recall more than one infield one might name in the same breath with the $100,000 beauties without having his hammer send out an S. O. S. for a cranium specialist.

Boston has had more than one great infield since the battle of Bunker Hill. In fact, the Hub has had several infields of renown and at least one that would bear comparison with Mr. McGillicuddy's splendid young men.

The Superb Four.

Tenney, Lowe, Long and Collins! Probably the younger fan never heard of any of them. Still, if they were selling infields for $100,000 in the days when these boys were playing, Soden, Conant and Billings would have had little trouble marketing that quartette.

Fred Tenney was one of the first holders of a sheepskin to break into big league baseball. The sandlotters left the gates ajar and Tenney strolled in.

And Fred was some ball player.

There isn't a thing in the world that "Stuffy" McInnis can do on a baseball field that Tenney couldn't do better. Ten or fifteen years ago Tenney was to first-basemen what Hal Chase was a few years ago.

As a fielding secondbaseman Lowe was good, but Mack's young man, Collins, is a better secondbaseman than Lowe ever was.

At shortstop Herman Long never had a superior as a fielder. They never even tied this old boy. He's dead now, but when he used to cover shortstop for Boston he covered the position like a tablecloth covers a table. Long at best could make Barry look like a busher.

Better Than Baker.

Baker is some hitter, but as an all-round player Jimmy Collins at his best could make the present-day Trappe butcher look like a peanut shell in a windstorm.

Tenney was the most eccentric of the firstbasemen. They say that when he was a boy he squandered a whole nickel in riotous living and he regretted this waywardness the rest of his life.

When Tenney travelled with the old Boston team and the club owners paid for his grazing they declare Fred invented a solid rubber bun and used to go through the motions of eating it to satisfy his appetite.

Yes, Reitz, Jennings and McGraw —All great.

Now and then Reitz required the services of an osteopath to accelerate his mental processes, but he was sure and steady as the town clock of Strassburg.

Connie Mack has a great infield. But there were others.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Matty and Tesreau each secured a win over Brooklyn yesterday while Philadelphia was trimming Boston. This sends the Giants to the lead as follows :

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
New York	65	51	.560
Boston	65	52	.556

While Ottawa was falling before the Erie team London marked time, hence the gap was lessened to some extent. Their standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Ottawa	74	44	.627
London	67	42	.615

Dr. Smirlie Lawson the famous plunger will in all probability be elected president of the Interprovincial tomorrow at the meeting in Ottawa.

Hugh Gall, captain of Toronto University team when they won the national championship will coach the squad this season.

President McCaffery of the Toronto team is making strenuous efforts to have Blancke, his Duluth pitcher, report for one of the games with the Beavers on Labor Day. This pitcher has made a great record in the North-Western League and looks like a promising heaver. Scout Knotty Lee of the International League team dug Blancke up.

TWO GAMES IN THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE SATURDAY

Tomorrow afternoon at Riverside Park two Mercantile League games will be played. At 2 o'clock the Printers and Drafting Room meet while at four the Wm. Hamilton Co. and the Bankers play. If the Drafting Room desire to be in the running for the flag they will have to win tomorrow and to break their hearts the Printers intend trotting out as strong a team as possible. Wm. Andrews will umpire.

GOLF

The monthly competition was held Sept. 2nd, owing to the inclement weather, the attendance was not as large as usual.

The prizes for the medal round and the driving competition which were presented by Miss Maclennan, were won respectively by Mrs. Aylmer and Mrs. Goodwin.

The approach and putting contest was secured by Miss A. Kingan, prize was presented by Mrs. Gardiner.

Players wishing to compete for Mrs. Suckling's prize, will please sign their names at the club house, draw will be made Sept. 14th.

PRACTICE FOR ALL-STARS.

The following aspirants to places on the All-Star team to play Labor Day are asked to be out this evening at five o'clock on Riverside Park : Barrie, Swanson, Callaghan, Primeau, Hayes, Carson, Smith, Corrin, Huycke, Rahmel, and Cranfield.

Autos Haul Huge Guns

One of the most modern of the German guns is a howitzer which is hauled by motor cars. Its calibre is 11 inches and the piece is 11 feet long. Its shell weighs 136 pounds, which at an elevation of 4½ degrees can be thrown about 6 miles. The charging of this weapon takes eight men. Naturally a piece like this is not easily transported about the country and is useful only against fortresses.

Against this the French have a howitzer of 10.7 inches calibre, which with its total equipment weighs 22 tons. When being moved it is in four pieces, the piece, the carriage, the slide and the platform, and a battery of six pieces exclusive of ammunition requires 21 vehicles that weigh 130 tons.

Virtue is its own record, for which reason it isn't necessary to advertise it.

PARIS AT FEVER HEAT AS CITY IS BEING FORTIFIED

Entrenchments Are Being Constructed all Around the City and Troops Are Pouring Into the Capital to Take Part in Its Defence—President and Cabinet Are at Bordeaux.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—An immense and complicated system of entrenchments is being constructed outside the city. It is reported that the engineers in charge of the work are keeping several hundred thousand men busy.

Following the proclamation of martial law in Paris and the declaration that the city is in a state of siege, troops have been pouring in and are being sent to various points of vantage in forming plans of defence. The advance of the enemy's troops to within 30 miles of the city has awakened the citizens of their danger, and they are flying by thousands toward Bordeaux, to which city the seat of government was moved yesterday.

President Poincare and his Cabinet are now in Bordeaux in offices from which the movements of the French army will be directed without the danger of shells being thrown around them. Paris is now under the control of the military governor, Gen. Gallieni. He will appoint temporary civil officers to act until the President shall return. The French and British troops now occupy a strong position, which is being concealed by the censors, but which is believed to be near Compiegne. Here it is that a fierce attack is to be made upon the Germans.

Only two of the gates of Paris are now open — Porte Maillot on the northwest, and Porte de Bercy on the south.

Beginning last night no person may leave or enter Paris between eight o'clock in the evening and five o'clock in the morning without a military pass. Automobiles may enter freely during the day, but cannot leave without permits. Pedestrians are permitted to pass without challenge through certain gates while other gates are closed. Gardeners bringing fresh vegetables to the city are permitted access at half hour intervals during the night.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO GROW MUCH WHEAT

An Appeal by the Minister of Agriculture

Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, in view of the decreased production of foodstuffs in Europe on account of the war, has issued an appeal to the farmers of Ontario. It is in the following terms :

"Within the next two weeks farmers of Ontario will be busy sowing fall wheat. I therefore would like, through the press, to urge every farmer to devote as large an acreage as possible to this crop this year, owing to the need that may exist because of the decrease in production in the countries of Europe now engaged in conflict, upon which Great Britain depends for a large portion of her supply. Ontario, of course, is not primarily a wheat Province, but I think an extra acreage might well be devoted to this crop under the present unprecedented circumstances. I recognize that the amount that can be sown this fall must be somewhat limited by the plans which have been made during the summer. At the same time, I think special plans should be made to increase the acreage of the crops to be put in in the spring as well. There will undoubtedly be need for foodstuffs along many lines, in addition to wheat, such as potatoes, beans, oats, dairy products, live stock and poultry.

Make Pasture Land Productive.

"I would like to point out that during the past season there were over 3,300,000 acres of land devoted to pasture. Now that there is every prospect of a good supply of labor, I think a great deal of this land could with advantage be broken up and put into crop. Aside from the question of price, it is undoubtedly the patriotic duty of every farmer to do his best to help in relieving the mother country from any occasion to worry over the food supply, either of the men at the front or those at home. Incidentally it may also result in establishing trade connections which will be of great value long after the war is over. This can best be done by using as large an acreage as possible, and by adopting the best methods of cultivation available. The department is willing to do everything in its power to this end."

District Officers to Campaign.

In this connection Mr. C. E. Bailey, Assistant Deputy Minister, is sending out a letter to the forty-three district representatives of the department, urging them to take up this matter at once in their respective districts. They will endeavor to place before the farmers the changed situation from the standpoint of food supplies by reason of the war. The general lines of Great Britain's supply the channels of which will be interfered with, it is pointed out, are wheat and flour, meat, butter, cheese and poultry, and in all these lines Ontario is in a position to aid in filling any deficiency that may exist because of the decreased production in countries from which Great Britain has drawn in the past. The district representatives will endeavor to bring these facts to the attention of the farmers during the next few weeks in various ways.

GOODIER—HARGRAVE.

The wedding took place last night at the Salvation Army Citadel on Dovercourt Road of Ethel A., youngest daughter of Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Hargrave to Mr. William N. Goodier, of Montreal. The bride's father officiated. The bride was attended by Captain Lilian Hargrave, her sister, and the gridegroom by Mr. Alexander McMillan, of Montreal. Little Ethel Cooper was the flower girl. Music was furnished by the Citadel Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Palmer, also the Songster Brigade. While the bridal party entered, the Wedding March was played by Miss Evangeline Gaskin. A song, entitled "God Will Take Care of You," by ten young girls, dressed in white, members of the Sunday School, with which Miss Hargrave has been connected for some time, was also a feature of the service. The wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, 391 Manning Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Goodier will reside at 2040 St. Urbane Street, Montreal. — Toronto Telegram.

Many Write Letters at Valcartier Camp

Soldiers Soon Use up Y.M.C.A. Stationery

Valcartier Camp, Que., Sept. 4.—The work of the Y.M.C.A. at the camp has proved colossal. Basing their estimates on long experience at Canadian militia camps, those in charge of the Y.M.C.A. tents have found their accommodations and supplies altogether inadequate. For instance, fifty thousand letter heads and twenty-five thousand envelopes composed the initial supply of stationery, but it disappeared at the rate of five thousand sheets a day.

Mr. F. S. Shepard, on a flying trip to Toronto has since secured donations of two hundred thousand envelopes, four hundred thousand sheets of letter paper, and the printing of the same from Toronto paper and publishing houses, and this supply should last the camp at least a month.

The dry canteen with its supply of fruit, ice cream and soft drinks has had to stand a tremendous run. A truckload of oranges is unloaded and sold as soon as received, and by actual timing a five-gallon freezer of ice cream was emptied in thirteen minutes. The dry canteen is a tent sixty to eighty, but a second one of the same size will probably be needed.

PRIEST WAS UNDER ARREST AS SPY

Was Held for Forty-eight Hours Without Food

CRUISER TO THE RESCUE

Montreal, Sept. 4.—Arrested as a spy and then released, only to go forty-eight hours without food; then to scramble pell mell on board a British cruiser and find accommodation as best they might on the decks during a ten days' journey in a sea supposedly infested with German warships only too eager to send them to the bottom—such were a few of the interesting experiences which marked the holiday trip of Father J. M. Melancon, Chaplain of the Outremont Convent, who with his brother, Notary Bernard Melancon, and several other Canadian refugees, reached port on the S.S. Canada. Father Melancon was in Venice when he heard the first rumblings of war, conveyed in the news that Austria had sent an ultimatum to Servia. He hurried on his journey to Switzerland and arrived at Bale on the day when Germany had jumped into the fray with a declaration of war against France. Then the difficulties of himself and his party began. Provided only with letters of credit, which became valueless with the declaration of war, Father Melancon was stranded in Lausanne. He and his friends managed, by pooling what little gold they had, to secure passage to Milan, travelling third class in carriages literally crammed to the doors. Throughout the two days' journey the party had nothing to eat. From Milan they managed to reach Rome, where they found several Canadian friends. Here they were enabled to cash letters of credit and express orders, at the offices of the American Express company. Those who had no money were provided by the British consul, Mr. Morgan, with the necessary wherewithal, to reach Genoa, whence, the British subject refugees were informed a British cruiser, which had been placed at their disposal by the British Government, would convey them to Liverpool. The refugees gathered at Genoa numbered over 1,000 and all embarked on the warship. The women and children were first looked after in the matter of accommodation whilst the men looked after themselves. These refugees, included Mgr. P. E. Roy, Auxiliary Bishop of Quebec, Mgr. Bernard, Bishop of St. Hyacinthe, A. Trudel, Assistant Clerk of the House of Commons, Ottawa, M. Brousseau, of Montreal and a few Canadian priests. The men did their own cooking, washed their dishes and found sleeping quarters wherever there was an unoccupied floor space below or on decks. All on board soon became used to conditions and were it not for the constant fear of a few German warships looming large on the horizon, they would have considered the trip a delightful one. On reaching the Bay of Biscay, the Critic was overhauled by a French warship and was boarded by officers of the latter who examined the papers of all the refugees, presumably in an attempt to ascertain whether any French reservists were numbered amongst them. The Critic finally reached Liverpool on the 21st ult., and two days later the refugees joined others on board the Canada for the voyage hither.

GEORGE ARLISS IN "DISRAELI"

It is said by some that not since the curtain was rung down on the careers of Henry Irving and Richard Mansfield has an audience witnessed a performance that could approach that of Mr. George Arliss in "Disraeli," scheduled for the first engagement here at The Grand, next Wednesday, Sept. 9, under the management of the Liebler Co.

The original Disraeli, one of the greatest of English statesmen, authors and wits, has been dead only about thirty years, and is vividly remembered by many living persons. But Disraeli was a man of many eccentricities and a lover of dramatic effect, so that the character has given Mr. Arliss and Mr. Parker, great opportunities. In his portrayal of the statesman, Disraeli, Mr. Arliss has undoubtedly taken a step forward, not only for himself but for the theatrical profession, for his interpretation of the character wil be recalled as one of the artistic creations of the present time.

"Disraeli" deals with the statesman's successful endeavor to gain control of the Suez Canal for England, a work in which he mets with the secret opposition of diplomatic spies. There is consequential intrigue which has been softened by a love story and a glimpse of Disraeli's home life. The dialogue is clever and the costumes of the period, the early 70's, lend the play unique pictorial qualities. Mr. Arliss' company includes Ernita Lascelles, Margaret Dale, Florence Arliss, Lilia Campbell, Charles Harbury, Vincent Sternroyd, Arthur Eldred, Henry Carvel, and Dudley Digges.

THE KAISER'S HENCHMAN

Von Bethmann-Holweg Usually Credited With Sincerity, Abandons It

Germany has had five Chancellors. Bismarck, the incomparable, was a statesman; Caprivi and Hohenlohe, respectively, soldier and courtier; Bulow was a diplomat; Bethmann Holweg, since 1900 the steersman of the Empire's destinies, is a philosopher.

A few years hardly afford an adequate basis for historical judgment of a leader's capacity, but Dr. Theobald von Bethmann Hollweg's Chancellorship has been uncommonly barren of promise.

HERR VON BETHMANN-HOLWEG

It would be far beside the mark to charge the Sage of Hohen-Finow with utter lack of statesmanship qualities. Modest and retiring by nature, there is nothing of the flamboyant in his make-up.

He is generally credited with being sincere and honest, but this reputation suffered severely by his attitude at the beginning of hostilities with Belgium, it having been reported that he was both surprised and chagrined at Britain's regard for a "scrap of paper"—the solemn pledge that Belgium territory should not be violated, a pledge guaranteed by both Great Britain and Germany.

The Length of Wars.

Following is a table showing the time occupied in deciding some of the big struggles of the past fifty or sixty years:

Wars	Years	Duration in Days
Crimean	1854-56	731
United States Civil	1861-65	2,45
Franco-German	1870-71	40
Russo-Turkish	1877-78	334
Spanish-American	1898	101
Boer	1899-1902	96
Russo-Japanese	1904-05	57
Balkan	1912	30

MANY CANNOT GO TO THE FRONT

Col. Hughes Replies to Critics of Militia Officers

OTTAWA, Sept. 4. — Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, issued the following statement last night:

"Many splendid officers throughout the country are being annoyed by contemptible insinuations against the courage and zeal of many officers and men in the service who cannot get to the front.

"The British Government, in response to the offer of Canada to assist, agreed to accept 22,500 men. The Government of Canada transmitted that call to the militia of the country. The Minister of Militia laid down at the very outset:

"That every man must go voluntarily.

"That he, the Minister of Militia, or his officials, would not ask, and have not asked, any man to go unless he volunteers.

"That no man would go who was not physically well qualified.

"That no man would go whose wife or family objected.

"There are seventy-five thousand regularly enrolled volunteers in Canada, and seven hundred thousand men who have had considerable training in past years.

"The response to the call is shown in the fact that, where 22,500 men were asked for, there are to-day on the grounds at Valcartier, upwards of 32,000 men, besides the Princess Patricia's Regiment, 1,000 men, and the regiment of Bermuda, 1,000 men, all practically ready to take the field.

"There are to-day upwards of one thousand officers more than are wanted at Valcartier, gentlemen occupying the highest positions in the business and political affairs of the country, anxiously seeking positions which they cannot obtain. There are thousands more at home who have applied and been refused.

"It is an easy matter for every coward who could not be dragged to the front with logging chains, or who could not be induced under any conditions to go, to sneer at these officers and men of the force who wish to go, but cannot possibly go."

Col. Hughes concludes with the characteristic advice to officers to rawhide their cowardly critics. "It has been somewhat of a puzzle to me," he declares, "why officers who have been insulted throughout the country by a few cowardly critics did not rawhide them as did Major Sam Sharpe, M.P., of Uxbridge, a few days ago. Major Sharpe wired me at the outbreak of the war, volunteering for service. It had been learned that Major Sharpe might not pass the medical requirements, but in spite of everything he insisted upon going into camp in the hope that he might serve at the front. He has the blessing of the minister of militia for rawhiding the cowardly critic. A coward is impervious to any decent treatments—the only way to reach him is by means of a rawhide."

(Uxbridge Times.)

After a campaign of dirt that has extended over months, the Uxbridge Journal and its editor reached the height of even its dirt. It was not only filthy, untrue and contemptible, but this is nothing new. His last week's remarks brought him a deserving chastisement, and a weapon usually reserved for punishing animals was applied to his legs, and when he attempted to use his fists and kick, he was in a jiffy laid flat on his back in the open road. This will probably teach this individual a lesson, as we believe he can only be affected by physical means. Major Sam Sharpe was the man who applied the punishment, and is supported by public opinion, which thinks Gowans didn't get enough. Major Sharpe had reached Winnipeg, on his way to the coast, when war was declared, and at once cancelled his trip and hurried to the capital, where he offered his services to the country in any capacity. That his offer has not yet been accepted makes no difference. Then while the member for this riding was at Ottawa, attending the special session of parliament, the Journal made the assertion that Major Sharpe and others were hiding behind their wives' petticoats and another insinuation too vile for any paper but the Journal. This proved to be the last straw, as the words "liar" and "coward" will provoke any man. When Major Sharpe returned from parliament, his attention was called to the insults of the Journal on Tuesday morning. He immediately went up and met Mr. Gowans face to face at Brownscombe's corner, and with a whip he had just picked out of a cart, publicly horsewhipped Gowans, and when Gowans closed in on him he soon had him on his back. We expect the usual outbreak in the Journal this week, and would ask that the above account, which is vouched for as true, to be compared with that of the Journal. The yelps of the Journal will doubtless resemble those of a soundly whipped cur. Think of it! Thomas Gowans—horsewhipped and downed on the public street by a man smaller than yourself! Think of it! Your back, too, is now branded.

NO REDUCTION IN WAGES.

When the G. T. R. passenger traffic department issued instructions all along the line that expenses must be reduced 25 per cent., it was taken to mean that the salaries of the employes of the department would be reduced 25 per cent. The Review made enquiries from local officials and learned that there will be no reduction in wages, but the order for economical care will affect every other item of expense.

Theories cause us more worry than do facts.

Russian Troops in Eastern Prussia, Resume the Offensive Against Germans

AUSTRIAN DANGER IS PAST

Canadian Press Despatch.

Petrograd, Sept. 5.—The Russian army to-day began a series of operations against the Germans. The troops that have been operating both in the northern and southern sections of Eastern Prussia have been ordered to resume the offensive.

Additional forces are being pushed forward, and at the war office it was stated that fully 20 army corps of the active army, totalling nearly 800,000 men, will immediately be pushed forward on the march to Berlin.

The general staff declares that the Austrian danger is past. It is announced officially that the Austrians have been forced to abandon their offensive everywhere in Poland and in Eastern Galicia, and that they are now beyond the San river, in a demoralized condition.

The war office insists that Russian Poland is now clear of the enemy everywhere.

LACK OF OFFICIAL NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

London, Sept. 5.—The Times, speaking editorially on the lack of official war news, says: "Premier Asquith said on Monday that the government felt the public were entitled to prompt and authentic information of what happened at the front, and the government was making arrangements to that end. We wish we could see any sign that these arrangements were coming into force.

"The country has now been at war for a month, and during that period the public has been furnished with only one adequate official statement regarding land operations of the most powerful army Great Britain has even sent to the continent. During the remainder of this week no further information has been vouchsafed."

STORY OF THE FIGHTING IN GALICIA.

London, Sept. 5.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in Moscow sends the following story of the fighting in Galicia: "The battle lasted three days. The Austrian left wing took the offensive on our right flank, but in a short time our infantry put all the Austrian officers hors de combat, thus causing a panic. We then began a general attack, and the Austrians quickly hoisted a white flag, threw down their arms and surrendered. This happened several times. The Austrian machine guns and artillery worked well, but the men in the batteries were unable to endure our bayonet attack.

"Near Zamosc and Lublin we approached the Austrian position, and, crawling within 100 paces of the Austrian line, we cheered loudly and threw ourselves upon them. Asutrians in front positions hoisted the white flag, and others behind them fled, leaving several guns, a military convoy, money chests and two bags of soldiers' letters."

Fugitives arriving at Vienna from Lemberg state that the Austrian military authorities and the whole Austrian army are demoralized.

Ready to Receive Contributions

Now that the Patriotic Fund organization has been properly completed, and that the people can rest assured the funds so raised will be entirely devoted to the purposes for which they so intend. It is up to those who can do so to send in their contributions as soon as possible in order that the committee can pursue its work. There is any amount of work for this committee to perform, and it should be considered a pleasure as well as a privilege for those who are able to do so to contribute towards the fund without unnecessary delay. The funds which were handed into the Review to be devoted toward the assistance of the families of dependents, amounting to $20 will be handed to the committee.

MILITARY EXPERTS BELIEVE THE FOE ARE PREPARING GRAND ASSAULT ON PARIS

London, Sept. 5.—Sir Phillip Chetwood, commanding the British cavalry brigade which routed the Prussian horse at Cambrai, Landrecies and Le Cateau, on August 28, writes home as follows: "We have been fighting without cessation for ten days. We have had no rest and have been fighting with odds of five to one against us. We have been through the Uhlans like brown paper, but we must have men."

Paris, Sept. 5.—An official communication issued to-day mentions two armies with new designations, "the army of Paris" and the army of the northwest," which leads to the supposition that the bulk of the allied forces is divided betwee the positions in the region of Paris and the Compiegne front, having the region of Verdun for its centre, while only the covering troops are left in Alsace.

London, Sept. 5.—The English public, hungry for news of the operations of the allied armies in the western theatre of the war, has to-day to content itself with the brief official communications issued from Paris. These only whet the appetites of the military experts, who believe the Germans are preparing for a grand assault upon Paris, in the hope of battering down the defences of the capital. This is because the investment of Paris, while the huge mobile army of the allies is outside the city, would not appear to be a logical part of the swift German campaign.

News of the withdrawal of German troops toward the Prussian frontier is not generally credited here, because with their supreme effort in the west as a primary object, the Germans are hardly likely to weaken their forces. News from Northern Belgium indicates that the Belgian troops are recovering from the gruelling punishment inflicted upon them by the German invaders, and are resuming their activities.

In some quarters the belief prevails that the German plans of campaign may be radically changed by the Austrian disasters; but, in spite of this, most observers are of the opinion that Germany must try to continue her advance in the west, without considering the misfortunes of her ally. These misfortunes are now admitted by Vienna, whence the news has come of an official admission that the Russians have captured both Lemberg and Halicz.

The Petrograd war office now estimates the Russian victories in Galicia and the Servian victory at Jadar have so crippled the forces of the dual monarchy that only ten Russian army corps are needed to keep Asutria in check. This releases twenty corps for the invasion of Germany, if Paris falls. The effect already has been discounted in London, as the war office has managed to convey the impression to the public that the capture of the French capital means only a prolongation of the war. This phase of the situation, brought home to the British public, has unquestionably stimulated recruiting. There is no indication that the allies in the west intend to assume the aggressive.

On the other hand, the indications are that if the Germans capture Paris, every effort will be made to render it a barren triumph, by leading the Germans from position to position, in a series of rear-guard actions, until the invaders are exhausted.

Paris, Sept. 5.—An official announcement says: "The enemy is pursuing his wide movement, and he continues to leave the entrenched camp of Paris on his right and to march in a southeasterly direction."

BRITISH PASSENGER SHIPS WITHOUT GUNS.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The British authorities have directed British passenger ships plying between England and the United States to carry no guns. Orders to that effect have been received at the embassy.

TRIPLE ENTENTE SIGNS AGREEMENT.

London, Sept. 5.—Russia, France and Great Britain to-day signed an agreement that none of the three would make peace without the consent of all three nations.

GERMANS SAY ONWARD RUSH IS CONTINUED

La Fere Said to Have Been Captured Without Resistence and Outpost Forts are in the Hands of Invaders

RAIDS ON FORTIFICATIONS

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 5.—What has been described as the arrowhead of the German army, which has been slowly forcing its way through the Anglo-French armies toward Paris, has made further progress, according to a German official report issued to-day, and has now driven the allies back behind Conde.

La Fere has been captured without resistance, says the German statement, and with the exception of ——— (name deleted), which is now being attacked, and Maubeuge, which the Germans have masked, the outpost forts are now in the hands of the invaders. Cavalry raids, too, are being made in the direction of the Paris fortifications, which will, if German accounts are correct, be the next stop of the allied armies.

The news was a great disappointment here, where earlier official reports from Paris to the effect that the Germans had suffered a check near Verdun led to the hope that the advance had at last been stopped.

In the Lorraine and Vosges regions, where the German forces were weakened to strengthen their right flank, the French appear to be holding their own, if not making an advance. The allies take some consolation from the fact that the Russian defeat of the Austrians around Lemberg, which town has fallen into the hands of the Russian emperor's army, with its immense stock of war material and provisions, gives the Russians a base from which they can work and from which they can attack in the rear the Austrian army which has been invading Russian territory.

In a battle lasting almost a fortnight the Austrians have suffered terrible losses, 12,000 having fallen in one place alone, while a Russian general claims to have taken thousands of prisoners and 200 guns. The Austrian retreat, it appears from official advices, has been turned into a rout. Belgium, which saw so many battles during the early stages of the war, is again the scene of fighting. German advices indicate that the Germans are completing a half circle around Antwerp.

HURRY CALL TO HELP THE AUSTRIANS.

Rome, Sept. 5.—News coming from the Austrian frontier says that a strong contingent of German troops has been despatched hurriedly to Galicia to help the Austrians against the Russians.

GERMAN LOSSES SAID TO BE 20 PER CENT.

London, Sept. 5.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Gisorsa, a French town near Beauvais, estimates the total losses of the allies at 40,000, and the losses of the Germans at 200,000.

He says a moderate estimate of the German losses places them at 20 per cent. at least.

London, Sept. 5.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the Standard says the Germans are mourning 100,000 dead.

London, Sept. 5.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Central News says that the German general staff has been moved from Brussels to Mons.

London, Sept. 5. — A despatch to the Central News from Amsterdam reports that Termonde, sixteen miles east of South Ghent has been hastily destroyed and that railway communication is interrupted.

London, Sept. 5. — A despatch to the Daily Mail from Antwerp, timed Friday afternoon, says: "There has been fighting since morning at "Name deleted," where the Germans apparently threatening our communications."

London, Sept. 5.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Petrograd, in an account of the Russian operations under date of Thursday, says: "Of the total Austrian forces in Galicia, probably 12 army corps, and at least four army corps of 200,000 men, have been practically put out of action, anyhow for some time, and 150 of their 500 guns captured."

ITALY TO MOBILIZE?

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 5. — A Despatch to Midi from Rome says "Order for general mobilization of Italian forces was still unsigned at the moment of telegraphing, but it's expected today. Mobilization by individual summons is less active."

King Albert Injured.

London, 3.47 p.m.—A despatch to Central News from Amsterdam says King Albert of Belgium was slightly injured by shrapnel splinters while he was heading the retreat of Belgian troops to Antwerp.

Call to the Colors.

Paris, Sept. 5.—The war office has issued call for volunteers to time-expired non-commissioned officers of army. Men have been required to return to colors for the duration of the war.

Paris, Sept. 5., 3.35 p.m.—It has become apparent to observers that Germans do not intend to engage allied armies sent to [illegible] northwest of Paris. [illegible] dently, is making [illegible] ing movement.

THE FARMER AND HARD TIMES.

THERE IS NOTHING like a practical illustration to prove an argument. For years it has been argued here in Canada that the farmer has the long end of it as against the town dweller, but the farmer refused to see it, and likened the town dweller to a thief and a robber. Whilst the town dweller has great opportunities for acting like a thief and a robber, he runs serious risks that the farmers do not run. The present hard times are an illustration of that fact. When war is declared, the farmer's products go up in price, and the demand for them increases. The town dweller goes out of work and becomes an object of pity. The more the town dweller gets into trouble, the more profit it is to the farmer, because, come what may, people must have food, but other things they can largely do without. In portraying the attractions of the farm, the facts now before us should serve to provide information for the young men and women of the country, and consideration for all those who are capable of profiting by them. Those who do not regard life as it is, namely, as a serious bsuiness, will still look to the moving picture shows, candy and gum as the best we can do here, but those who take life seriously and therefore get the best out of it, will realize that the farmer alone is never forced to go down and out. If he is an ordinary farmer, with fair resources, he can defy mankind and even the elements. War shows us that this is not the case with anybody else, and it should make farming more popular with those who wish to run no risks and who wish to be able to provide for a rainy day, no matter how hard it rains or when.

BABY CULTURE.

THE NATIONAL COUNCILS of Women, no less, the world over, have devoted their latest energies to baby culture. In a word, they have decided that the breeds of babies can be vastly improved by means of prevision, care, commonsense, practical sympathy, etc., etc. This, no doubt, is true. Just as a prize pig is the product of selection, care and a long line of breeding to a standard and class, or, as in the case of a cow, a sheep or a hen, so ought it to be in the case of a baby. Too long has the world worked and slaved to produce prize animals. It is now time for it to devote its energies to prize babies. Peterborough is not to be behind. The natural-scientific spirit is here. This autumn a baby-culture show is to be held under distinguished auspices in this city. Get out your babies and polish them up. Fill them up with ozone to make their cheeks red. But, as no one would expect to breed a prize baby from unhealthy parents, that absurdity will be cut out. In the time of the slave trade in the United States black babies were bred, and they did their parents credit. But they were not bred from the tainted or the weak. So will it be here. Henceforth there will be a premium on health for, at least, all those who wish to go in for baby culture. The rickety, spine-curved, tuberculosed, scrofulous wee thing that has in some cases done duty for the image of God, will be a thing of the past. We will take pride in our babies in future. We will back them, one against the other, for first place. Life will be —when those praying for peace have ceased to encourage the soldiery and have ceased to sing Te Deums for victory—a flush of health and strength. We are about to do as other animals do—eliminate the weak and make way for the strong. This is the day of the Natural. Nature has triumphed over witchcraft and a priori, begging the question so-called reasoning. We will view things from Nature's standpoint, knowing that God made Nature and being no longer too sure that hat we think God also thinks. Vive l' Enfant!

GERMANY'S RISK.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR has staked more upon the campaign along the French frontier than ever was staked in any campaign of which we have a record. Defeat there, or even a prolonged resistance, means disaster, for before he can bring his forces to bear against Russia, the armies of that nation will have invaded Prussia in such numbers that their expulsion will be impossible. In such an event, what does Germany stand to lose?

She has already lost her overseas commerce and a large part of her mercantile marine. She has lost tens of thousands of her finest people and will lose tens of thousands more. She is face to face with domestic conditions which in the event of defeat will mean distress of incalculable gravity. If defeated she will have to pay an enormous indemnity, one that will burden her industries for a generation. Her taxes will have to be so increased that her people will seek to get out of the country as though it were smitten with a plague. She will lose some, at least, of her overseas possessions. If her navy is still afloat she will have to surrender it to the victors. She will lose Alsace and Lorraine and probably East Prussia, which will be given to Poland. She will lose Schleswig-Holstein. The German Empire will be broken up.

These are the things at stake, so far as Germany is concerned along the French frontier. Nothing greater was ever wagered by any sovereign. Napoleon staked his all at Waterloo, and lost, but his only was the loss. France gained. In summarizing these things, we are not attempting to forecast the result of the war. We are only stating what may happen if the invasion of France fails, or is delayed long enough to enable Russia to get her millions into Prussia.—Victoria Colonist.

A NEGLECTED ART.

A WRITER in Conservation draws attention to the lack of interest displayed by our farmers of late years in the art of ploughing. Some time ago Mr. Burnham, M.P., offered a substantial prize, provided a competition was inaugurated and a ploughing association formed. At the last meeting of the Farmers' Institute this matter was fully discussed, and a good deal of interest was manifested, but up to the present time nothing further, so far as we have heard, has been done, and the subject has dropped into innocuous deseteude in this locality. Here is what the writer in Conservation has to say on the subject :

> "The art of ploughing, if not lost, has certainly been much neglected during recent years, and very few of the younger generation of farmers have really acquired it. In travelling through the country one sees repeated evidences of the lack of interest in this very important branch of tillage operations. Ploughing, as the first and heaviest operation in preparing the soil to receive the seed, should receive particular attention.
> "Many attribute the present-day lack of interest in ploughing to the advent of the two-furrow and machine plough. In using two-furrow or machine ploughs, it is necesary first to acquaint oneself with the workings and mechanism of the plough, to be thoroughly familiar with it when in operation; little or no difficulty will then be experienced in obtaining satisfactory results. A plough suitable to the soil should be chosen. If the soil is loamy, and requires to be turned flat, choose a plough with sufficient width of share, a board with ample turning capacity, a beam high enough to permit the use of the jointer when turning under green or coarse manure, and sufficient length of handles to enable the ploughman to control it with ease. If the soil is heavy and inclined to cement, use a narrow plough—one that will set the soil up, give a good harrow edge. and have sufficient press to the board to place the furrow over so that it will not fall back. In using either a single or two-furrow plough, care should be taken to turn over the whole furrow and to leave no part unploughed. Get away from the cut-and-cover plan. Teach the boys that anything worth doing is worth doing well, especially ploughing. The old adage that more grain grows on crooked furrows than on straight ones is a poor incentive, and is not helpful in building up a reputation as a model farmer. Plough the back field as carefully as the field adjoining the road, and see that all fields are ploughed in such a way as to attract attention by their neatness. It is cheap and efficient advertising. Good ploughing pays; if a fair crop can be grown on a field which has been poorly ploughed, a better crop can be grown on a well-ploughed field."

Highly Intelligent, Too.

(London Times.)

At this juncture have the authorities any use for a man of 30, physically fit and highly intelligent, who for a reasonable consideration will go anywhere and do anything, even though it involves certain death? I am he. Box B 398, The Times.

Neighbors Pulling For Aaron.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Aaron Rodgers, living in Derbyshire, England, recently took a 72-year-old bride to his 84-year-old bosom selecting her from 100 applicants. A few weeks later she left him and now his neighbors are expecting a Mrs. Rodgers No. 5.

Determined.

London Times.

There must be no question of peace except on our terms. Even if all our allies were struck down, we should continue the war until the enemy has relaxed his grip, and, as Russia, at least, is equally well prepared for a long war, any misfortunes — which are not, indeed, to be foreseen, but may befall anyone in war — must not turn either Russia or ourselves by one hairsbreadth from our resolution. No disasters must affright us. We are fighting for the liberties and even the existence of Europe, and we must make the world learn what it means to turn the thoughts of our people and their stupendous energies to war.

Remorseless Conquest.

Chicago Tribune.

But if Germany asserts that she has a right to punish Belgium with the loss of her independence because Belgium refused to assent to the nullification of her pledged neutrality and thus to become a passive ally of Germany against a nation with which she was at peace, then Germany will forfeit the approval of the neutral world. With such action Germany's policy would be stripped naked of moral claims and stand forth in the ugly guise of remorseless conquest. There would be nothing left of her claim then that she is defending civilization from barbarism, even if there were much to it now.

War and the Workers.

London Daily Herald.

Correspondents complain that overmuch attention is devoted in the papers, even our own, to tidings or rumors from the war arena. They say that man does not live by militarism alone, rather he dies thereby; that the nation has other interests, even today, apart from firing lines.

We cordially agree about the other interests. All workers ought to know them. The struggle of the toilers for existence has become harder than ever. The European war has simply piled up added difficulties, intensified straits, and in some cases agonies. The need for the wage-slaves' evangel and attack is not less but immeasurably greater than it was a few weeks ago. The toilers' own particular war against social wrongs and unceasing exploitation should now have increasing momentum.

SOARING PRICES

By Walt Mason

The clock strikes one, the noon hour's done, I must resume my toiling; man dare not sleep if he would keep the blooming pot a-boiling. For every hour the price of flour and other grub's advancing ; all things suffice to raise the price, the C. of L. enhancing. There's threat of war in Labrador, according to despatches, so we must pay far more to-day for cheese and parlor matches. There's too much rain in Southern Spain, fresh rain and kindred liquors, so we must blow far more, you know, for overshoes and slickers. The war on Serbs affects such herbs as we are fond of chewing ; it takes more cash for succotash and all the greens we're stewing. The crop of hay at Hudson's Bay is poor, so folks are saying, so Hyson tea is costing me just twice what I've been paying. Blight killed the geese in Northern Greece; I would not care a button, but that, amazed, I find it raised the price of beef and mutton. This graft seems queer to me, my dear ; it makes no odds what chances, on land or sea, on lake or lea, the C. of L. advances.

GUNBOAT SPEEDY SUNK?

Old British Torpedo Boat Hits Mine While Rescuing Sailors.

LONDON, Sept. 5. — Additions to the official communication regarding the torpedo gunboat Speedy says:—

"The missing include the skipper and four men of the Linsdell. Two men were seriously injured.

"The remainder of the crew of the Linsdell had been picked up by the Speedy before the latter struck a second mine.

"The Speedy was an old torpedo gunboat of 800 tons and prior to the declaration of war she was engaged on fishery protection on the North Sea."

This additional information regarding the probable loss of the torpedo gunboat Speedy of the British navy and of a merchant vessel of some kind is all that the British censors have thus far permitted to come through.

Strathcona Horse For Front.

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The Government announces that Lady Strathcona has given $50,000 for the maintenance of the Strathcona Horse, which are to be sent to the front with the overseas expeditionary forces as a regimental unit.

To Encourage Shipping.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5. — Great Britain yesterday took steps to encourage commerce with her ports and through the British embassy announced that as little suppression of shipping would be done as possible. The statement follows:

"In order to prevent loss to subjects of neutral powers and to encourage continuance of trade, the British Government has taken steps to set free expeditiously and without reference to prize court as many cargoes as possible, even though in some cases cargoes may be liable in law to condemnation as prizes. An executive committee with full powers to deal with such cases has been appointed.

Cruiser Sinks Austrian Ship.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The sinking of the Austrian steamer Bathori by a British cruiser in the Bay of Biscay was reported yesterday afternoon.

The Austrian refused to heave too until the cruiser put a shot across her bows. The warship then took off the crew of 26 and sent the steamer to the bottom. The prisoners taken include a German imperial staff officer.

The Bethori was a steamer of 1,33[illegible] tons. She plied between Fiume and French ports, and was last reported in Havre roads Aug. 5.

Special Session In Manitoba.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 5. — Premier Roblin has handed out the following:

"A special session of the Legislature will be called at once to consider a measure to provide ways and means to meet the conditions created by the war, and a further measure dealing with payments on real property.

The Premier did not state the date the house will meet, but it is believed it will be about Sept. 15.

CHANGE IN NAME OF RUSSIAN CAPITAL

"St. Petersburg" is no more. The misty marshes where its towers stand are hereafter to be known as "Petrograd."

"Burg," meaning "borough" in English-speaking lands, frowns in the harsher sense of "fortress" or "stronghold" in German. Luther sang of "ein feste Burg." "Grad" is an exact equivalent, as in Biograd (Belgrade). The Russian peasant speaks of his capital as "Tsarigrad," the Czar's strong town.

Peter the Great, who founded the Muscovite capital, spoke German and welcomed Germans to his lands. Their descendants are numerous about the capital. Such places as Kronstadt have German names that will have to be dealt with. St. Petersburg has long been the only great capital to bear a foreign name with its own people.

Germany is strict about using a German name whenever possible. "Luttich" for Liege and "Lowen" for Louvain are becoming almost as familiar as "Lothringen" for Lorraine. In Berlin the custom extends to the most ordinary words.

"Petrograd" is a first-class name; easy to spell, truthful and not very long, for a Russian one. Complaint might be made on behalf of St. Peter, whose name the town has borne so long ; but Russian higher criticism may have disposed of him. Many Russians had already slighted him by referring to their capital simply as "Petersburg."

AVIATOR'S LIFE SAVED BY HIS NERVY WORK

The daring escape of a French military aviator from a seemingly hopeles position is described in the "Figaro." The hero of the story is a cavalry captain who has become one of the most expert of the French flying corps.

Returning from a long reconnoitering flight, the aviator, owing to a breakdown, was compelled to descend when still about 12 miles from the French frontier. After examining the machine the officer found the fault to be irreparable.

Just at this moment an Uhlan lieutenant with a troop appeared in the distance, advancing at a gallop. Rapidly taking in the situation, the French officer smashed the petrol tank, and then, with arms crossed, and standing in front of his aeroplane, calmly awaited the approach of the enemy.

As soon as the German lieutenant was near enough, the aviator shot him point blank. He then set fire to his machine, which by this time was well soaked in petrol, and, jumping on the horse of the dead lieutenant, made off at full speed, vainly ursued by the Uhlans, whose horses were inferior to that of their officer.

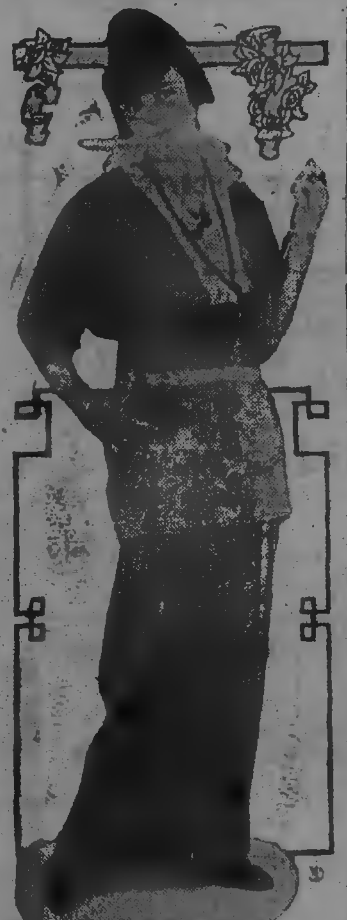
FETCHING MODEL.

Smart Gown With Plaited Skirt and Short Overskirt.



APRICOT CRAPE GOWN.

The box plait, so long treated with disdain, has not only returned, but is occupying a place of popularity in the fashions of the season. On the gown of apricot colored Canton crape illustrated here the foundation skirt is closely box plaited and is topped by a plain little overskirt fastened in front by bullet shaped yellow buttons, edged with white. On the bodice the low shoulder line is evident. High buttoned boots with light tan suede tops add the finishing touch.

BEAUTIFUL LINENS.

Cottons, Too, of Rare Attractiveness For Summer Suits.

This season it is somewhat difficult to distinguish between linen and cotton in the heavier weavings, as they appear so similar, and many of them are provided with the excellent mercerized finish which not only gives them a silky appearance, but renders them less easily creased.

The principal weavings for tailor cut linen suits are the fine twill known as gabardine, ottoman, poplin, tussah and the neat surface that was originally seen in casement cloth. Most of these come in double width (forty inches) and in charming colors—mauve, linen green, dark and saxe blue, delicate gray and biege tints, old rose and shrimp pink.

An ultra smart linen suit was seen the other day made of shrimp pink linen, the skirt with a very deep tunic set in large plaits and finished with white pipings and buttons down the front. The simply cut and loose coatee was also piped. Admirable new touches were provided by the little kilted basque and the striped white and black collar and cuffs. The black Napoleon hat worn with this costume was of hemp, with roses in the cleft crown.

Rubberized Bathing Caps.

Bathing caps that are especially desirable have visors of rubberized silk mounted on a stiff frame. These caps would save much discomfort from the bright sunlight of the seashore. Some very pretty bathing caps, made of the rubberized silk, are shirred into a rosette over each ear.

The small corsage bouquets of rubber flowers that made their appearance last year are still in evidence for the bather, and sometimes rubber flowers are used as trimming for bathing caps.

Porch Pillows.

Nothing is more enjoyable than porch pillows for the hammock or easy chairs, and a balsam pillow is more delightful than any other.

The odor quiets the nerves, refreshes the tired one and induces a restful nap.

A pretty slip for such a pillow is best made of tan linen with a pine tree cross stitched upon it.

BLOUSE FANCIES.

The neck cord fastening to the simple white blouse is an attractive feature.

Crepe de chine blouses have chemisettes, collars and bands of hemstitched Paris muslin.

Some of the new blouses have darts in them and fitted girdles.

All tones of yellow, especially maize, are in favor for separate blouses.

Figured crepe de chine blouses make a delightful change.

Long kimono sleeves, tapering to the wrist, are as popular as ever.

Burnt banana and green apple are among the new colors.

Tomatoes Farcied.

Cut the tops from six large tomatoes, but do not peel them. Scoop out the insides and mix with one cup corn, one-fourth cup breadcrumbs, three teaspoonfuls melted butter, three teaspoonfuls milk and salt and pepper to taste. Dust the inside of the tomato shells with salt and pepper and fill with the mixture. Sprinkle dried breadcrumbs over the top and bake.

War Time Trip to the Fair

(The Khan.)

My brave-eyed, grave-eyed country girl
So saddened by the war,
I took my darling to the Fair,
Where smiling faces are.
Her dress was neat from head to feet,
Her face was flushed, and bright and sweet,
And as we moved a-thro' the stir,
The people turned to look on her.

My blue-eyed, true-eyed country girl,
My semaphore,—my star!
All in that happy human whirl
Her soul forgot the war.
We stood to hear the music play,
Her face was smiling glad and gay,
Fast in that mighty human burr
The well-pleased people looked on her.

My brown-cheeked, round-cheeked country girl,
Tonight I brought her to the Fair,
The rockets in a mad'ning swirl
Were lashing all the upper air.
She gave a cry as though the sky
A soaring meteor rushed on high,
And even in the evening blur
The watchful people gazed on her.

My brave-eyed, grave-eyed country girl,
I think that I can see her now,
For in a crush a little curl
Trailed down upon her snowy brow,
So she forgot far fields of fear,
Laughter, light and love were here,
Safely thro' the wondrous stir
I walked in heaven that night with her!

My blue-eyed, true-eyed country girl,
The Fair attracts the fair,
In all that wondrous laughing whirl
She was the fairest there!
But, best of all, her soul forgot
The trodden fields where millions fought,
Her heart of gold knew no alloy,
She walked with peace, and love, and joy!

Paid With Interest.

In Burnaby's "Travels in America in 1759" the following incident is related:

The captain of a British man-of-war cruising off the Massachusetts coast left his wife in Boston. On one of his visits to port she came down to the wharf to meet him, and she was publicly kissed by her loving spouse. This violation of the law was at once reported, and the captain was brought before the magistrate and sentenced to be publicly whipped. There was no getting out of it, and the captain submitted quite gracefully.

Just before the departure of his ship he gave an elaborate entertainment, to which all of the magistrates were invited. After the festivities were over and every one had shaken hands with the captain and was going over the side the magistrates were seized by the arm and stripped to the waist. Each one was led to the gangway, where a vigorous boatswain gave him thirty-nine lashes on the bare back and then hustled him over into a boat amid the cheers of the whole ship's company.

HOT WEATHER AILMENTS

A medicine that will keep children well is a great boon to every mother. This is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. An occasional dose keeps the little stomach and bowels right and prevents sickness. During the hot summer months stomach troubles speedily turn to fatal diarrhoea and cholera infantum, and if Baby's Own Tablets are not at hand the child may die in a few hours. Wise mothers always keep the Tablets in the house and give their children an occasional dose to clear out the stomach and bowels and keep them well. Don't wait till baby is ill — the delay may cost a precious life. Get the Tablets now and you may feel reasonably safe. Every mother who uses the Tablets praises them, and that is the best evidence there is no other medicine for little ones so good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

An Educational Reformer.

Dr. John Harold Putman, inspector of public schools of the City of Ottawa, who introduced the novelty in public schools in Ontario of abolishing sessional examinations as promotion tests, thus arousing much discussion throughout the province, and at the same time earning the gratitude of the children, is one of the best known educationalists of Ontario, and has been long identified with the teaching profession in Ottawa.

Dr. Putman, the author of this radical departure in school administration, is of English and German parentage, and was born forty-eight years ago in Lincoln City, Ont. His interests are many. He is the author of "Britain and the Empire," and several other contributions to Canadian literature, is a Free Mason of high degree, and ex-alderman of the city of Ottawa, and a past president of the Ottawa Teachers' Association.

War Cripples College Work.

Work in several departments of the university will be seriously held up because it is impossible to secure shipments of goods from Germany. Prof. Squair said the other night that practically the entire supply of chemicals and other equipment used in the departments of chemistry and physical science are obtained from Germany, and, as these had not arrived before the outbreak of war, it will now be impossible to secure them this year. It is possible that American firms can provide substitutes for these materials and equipment, but all the American colleges will be similarly situated.

You probably get enough good advice, but you can't live on it.

CRUSHING THE KAFFIRS.

Treated Like Slaves, Even by White Children In South Africa.

In "The Real South Africa" the author, Ambrose Pratt, says that the Kaffirs are not only enslaved by the Boers, but it would seem also by the other whites, who ought to know better. The white children born in South Africa acquire incurable habits of pride and indolence before they reach their teens. Their manners are haughty and overbearing:

"The first day I landed in South Africa I witnessed a small incident that will tell its own story. Strolling through the city of Durban in the early morning I saw a great hulking Kaffir carrying a bundle of papers to the door of a news agency, where a little boy about ten years of age was waiting to receive them. The Kaffir very respectfully placed the bundle on the steps at the child's feet and moved away. He was immediately recalled and most imperiously. 'You cheeky devil!' shrilled the child. 'How dare you leave the papers there! Take the bundle into the shop at once and untie it!' The Kaffir silently and humbly obeyed.

"'Now sort the papers!' ordered the child.

"Again the Kaffir obeyed. When his task was completed the little boy contemptuously pointed to the door. 'Get out!' he said.

"The Kaffir inclined reverently and backed out of the shop as though taking leave of royalty. The child did not even smile. The sneer on his face was fixed."

Bear Attacks Truro Couple.

While driving to Clifton, N.S., one evening recently, Mr. C. E. Matatall and his wife, while near the farm of W. D. McCurdy, were startled by the carriage wheel striking some object in the roadway, which seemed to be a dog or steer. They were, however, soon undeceived, when a very badly ruffled young Bruin, who had evidently chosen the centre of the road for his bed, attempted to get into the carriage to get even with the disturbers of his slumbers. It was only after a strenuous use of his whip on the young Grizzly's back that he was kept at bay long enough to make a rapid getaway from his vicinity. The occupants of the carriage were considerably scared at their unexpected adventure.

Doctors Speeding.

The Government of Quebec and the police authorities are considering favorably the suggestion of Dr. Genier, a member of the Automobile Club of Canada, that the Red Cross displayed on the autos of physicians and surgeons should be officially recognized, and that the speed regulations should not be made to apply in cases where doctors can establish the fact that they are responding to professional calls. Most magistrates recognize that some such distinction should be made, but under the present law they can make no exception, no matter how urgent the circumstances.

No Milk Bottles In Sickroom.

Milk bottles should never be taken into a sickroom, for as they are usually returned to the milkman they may thus carry infectious diseases into other homes, says the United States department of agriculture.

Every milk bottle left at a house where there is an infectious sickness should be boiled before being returned. The best thing to do in such circumstances is to provide one's own milk bottles or covered dishes into which the milkman may pour the milk from his bottles.

The duty of each individual to his neighbor in this connection is most important. The board of health may be called to disinfect milk bottles properly after they have been in a home where there is sickness.

Bottles should be given reasonable care before they are returned to their owner. The practice of pouring vinegar or kerosene or other liquids into them temporarily when not in use should by all means be discouraged. The containers should be washed in cold water first and finally in warm water before they are returned to the farmer supplying the milk.

Opening a Bottle of Milk.

Before removing the cap from a bottle of milk the cap and the neck of the bottle should be washed and carefully wiped with a clean cloth. The cap should not be pushed down into the milk. It may be easily removed with a sharp pointed instrument without injuring the contents.

The bottle when once open should be kept covered, and the milk should be kept in the original bottle until it is used up. The original cap should not be replaced, but instead an inverted glass may be put over the top of the bottle. The bottle when not in use should, of course, always be left in the refrigerator, and any milk that has been poured from it into another vessel should not be poured back.

Onions and other foods having a strong odor impart their distinctive smell to milk that is left uncovered. This is an additional reason for always keeping milk in a covered receptacle.

Summer Care of Milk.

When milk is delivered it should be put into the refrigerator at once. A very brief exposure to summer heat makes it unfit for use.

If it is impossible to have the bottles put immediately into the refrigerator provide on the porch a box containing a lump of ice.

In planning a house arrange to have the refrigerator set in the wall, with an opening on the outside. It is always possible to provide locks for these boxes or refrigerator doors and supply the milkman with a key.

The interior of the food compartment should be wiped every day with a clean cloth and thoroughly scalded as often as once a week.

Under no circumstances should the drainpipe of an icebox be connected with a sewer.

GOOD LUCK TO HIM.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief in Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

WAS CAPITAL OF FRANCE FOUR DECADES AGO

Seat of Government Was Moved to Bordeaux in 1870

FRANCE'S THIRD PORT

The transfer of the French seat of government from Paris to Bordeaux makes that city the capital of the nation for a second time. Shortly after the founding of the Third Republic the government moved to Tours in 1871. When the Prussians moved on Tours, the government moved on to Bordeaux.

Bordeaux is 350 miles southwest of Paris, and has a population of 240,000. It is located on the west bank of the Garonne, sixty miles inland, and it is in the centre of the Medic wine-growing district.

During the terrible days of the French revolution Bordeaux suffered almost as much as Paris. It was the headquarters of the Girondists at that time. It was at Bordeaux that the proclamation of Napoleon III's dethronement was decided upon by the last assembly meeting held there before the government went back to Paris.

Bordeaux is the third port of France in commercial importance. The great harbour there is capable of containing 1,000 ships of any size. Large ocean steamers can ascend at all tides. It would be easy to land English troops in the city.

Bordeaux's university is attended by over 2,000 students, and has a library of 200,000 volumes.

There are a series of forts on either bank of the Garonne river leading to Bordeaux and there is a ring of fortifications of minor importance on the inland outskirts of the city. While an armed force of size could easily take the town, it is improbable that the Germans could send such a force that distance and maintain a line of communications.

Soldiers of the King

War clouds gather over every land,
Our flag is threaten'd east and west;
Nations that we've shaken by the hand,
Our bold resources try to test.
They thought they found us sleeping, thought us unprepared,
Because we have our party
 wars;
 But English men unite
 When they're called to fight
The battle for old England's common cause.
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her
 so.

It's the soldiers of the King, my lads,
Who've been, my lads, who've seen, my lads,
In the fight for England's glory,
 lads,
When we have to show them
 what we mean;
And when we say we've always won,
And when they ask us how it's done,
We'll proudly point to every one of England's soldiers of the King.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—The Patriotic Fund is launched in Peterborough. Relief will be given not only to the families of men who have gone to the war but to those who are in need of assistance through the war. The latter assistance is needed probably much more even than the former when we consider that so far this year the revenue of the United States has fallen one hundred of million of dollars by reason of the war and that the President of the United States says that he is calling for a war tax accordingly and that Canada is for the first five months $15,000,000 behind in revenue and will likely be $50,000,000 at the end of the year. This deficit is all due to bad business and bad business means lack of employment for those who are accustomed to work.

The meeting last night was a great one and shows that the people of Peterborough when they take a thing up in a public way are able and willing to carry it out.

READER.

THE TEA SITUATION.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—We read with interest Mr. Harthaway's letter which appeared in your yesterday's issue, and we trust that that gentleman will pardon us if we say that he is quite mistaken. He never saw anything over our name in which we stated that "we would not advance prices." What he did see, without doubt, was a statement saying that we "could see no reason why teas should be advanced in price." That was at one period.

Unfortunately there was an embargo placed on tea by the British Government, thus preventing us from shipping any of the 9,921 chests of tea we had stored in London ready to ship. On top of this came the news of the German steamer, "Schneefels" (carrying tea for us from Ceylon to Boston) being seised at Gibraltar. Added to this was the fact that freights of any kind were difficult to obtain and they had advanced twenty-two shillings per ton, while war risk insurance on shipments went up to £5 per £100. Then sterling exchange advanced from $4.87 for £1 to $5.03 which we are now paying.

This gave us a new view of the whole matter, and what we could not see the day that interview appeared, we could see when the circumstances, related above, were presented to us, and we, perforce, had to raise our prices ten cents per pound. We could see no quantity of tea in sight for months, and what was coming forward from Ceylon was costing us much more on account of increased charges.

Ten days afterwards the embargo was taken off in England, and we immediately lowered our prices five cents per pound.

This is our position today.

We might say that it is notorious in the tea trade throughout the world that the people of Canada have been for years, and are today, served with better tea at a lower price than any other people in the world.

We would like to add that it is absolutely impossible for any firm or individual to sell tea, such as we do, at a lower price.

We are,

Yours truly,
THE "SALADA" TEA CO.,

ALSATIAN'S OPINION

Editor Review,—

Dear Sir,—I have a copy of the New York Staatszeitung, a German paper in which the editor, Mr. Herman Rider, blames the British Empire for pressing the sword in the hands of the Kaiser. This editor has a lot of vile lies in his paper, and he wants to make the German population in the States and Canada believe that the Kaiser is an innocent angel and that the people of Germany didn't want war. Some of the Germans believe that, but I can tell this man that the Kaiser and all his military and aristocratic hordes and nearly the whole population wanted the war for the last ten years. Nobody knows it better than we of Alsace Lorraine. I can not understand why those Germans in the States stick so to the Kaiser, for years they thronged to the States in such vast numbers as refugees from militarism and autocracy, I thought they had become children of liberty and looked with horror upon the conditions from which they have escaped, but they are born as slaves, and after a little liberty, they like to go back to those slave holding states of Germany. There is another parasite of the Kaiser in the States, his name is Hugo Munsterberg, professor of Harvard, he is heart and soul with the war lord and does whatever lies in his power to make German militarism triumphant throughout the world, but he is too cowardly to go himself and fight, he rather blows like all the Germans, perhaps he is looking for an order of the Prussian red or black eagle, or the red and black plucked rooster as we call it in Alsace. This Prussian military bully and hypocrite William II. is to blame for this all destroying war, but "tacts est alea," the Russian Cossacks ought to capture him and send him in the lead mines in Siberia for life; a bullet would be too good for him. This blasphemous man who wears an imperial crown giving the iron cross first and second class to his sons with his shameless words, "God has been on our side and has brilliantly supported us. This iron cross has three classes and was established by King Frederick William III. of Prussia in the year 1813 for merit and bravery in the war. Now what merit and bravery have these princes done already. Just because the allies withdraw their troops, the Kaiser gives orders of the iron cross to his sons. This same iron cross was given to a whole lot of officers and to a few soldiers in the last Franco-Prussian war, 1810, for extraordinary bravery in the field and what was their reward for it? The officers got fine easy government jobs in Alsace Lorraine and the men got nothing and as a German proverb says, "Nothing is good for the eyes." I know a few of those men personally, they are now men of 68 and 72 years of age, callous hands from toiling, their faces brown from the weather, some are crippled, with the famous iron cross on their breast, going from town to town, grinding the handorgan, selling lead pencils and matches and beg for alms and for to do this, they must have a government license, which costs them yearly a big sum. This is the reward the fatherland gives them, for leaving their families, their homes and everything that was dear to them and risking and giving their lives for the king of Prussia. The following line from Lihiller's "The Conspiration of the Frisco at Germa. "The moor has done his duty, the moor an go" is well applied here. The Prussian soldiers don't fight like all other civilized and uncivilised nations, they are worse than the huns under Attilla, they are absolutely barbarians, they treat people like dogs, they steal everything they want, no matter how well they may be treated, they behave filthily, brutally, officers more than the men, most of the officers are drunkards and they have drinking bouts. The best proof for this is their behaviour in Louvain and other Belgian towns and villages; they are impudent and cruel towards the ladies. Even in time of peace, they are brutes towards the soldiers. I could write a big volume of the maltreatments of the Alsatian soldiers in the German army. In a few cases these acts were committed by officers, in the great majority by non-commissioned officers or by the "old soldiers," that is men who have a year's service behind them. The cruelty mostly takes the form of slaps in the face, spitting in the face, punches and kicks, beating with sheathed sabres and bayonets, with riding whips and harness straps, forcible jamming of ill-set helmets on the wearer's head, compulsory baths in icy water, followed by a scrubbing down with scrub brushes till the blood comes, compulsory squatting in muscle-straining attitudes until the victim collapsed or wept for pain, unreasable fatigue drill, turning the men out of bed at midnight and making them climb to the top of the cupboards and stand on the toes holding out a rifle with both arms, sweeping and scrubbing out the bedrooms with tooth-brushes. No wonder when some of the recruits commit suicide in consequence of long protracted ill-usage, and some desert to free France and join the foreign legion for Africa, where they have it far better than in the German army. They are barbarians with their own soldiers in time of peace, how more brutes are they in war time and with other people. They needn't send any missionaries to the heathens, they need them far more in their own country. In the Franco-Prussian war 1870 they stole everything that was loose, especially pendulum clocks. All over France they are called "voleurs des pendules," in English 'clock thieves.' In the Boxer insurrection in China a few years ago, the officers and the men stole everything that they could get hold of, when they came back, they had carloads of stolen goods from the Chinese. A man who was there with the Germans told under oath, that the officers gave them the order to kill everybody, even the emperor himself in an order on the army said, "destroy everything so no Chinamen will look squint-eyed at us Germans." Not even the babies in the cradle got spared, they took the poor creatures on one leg and smashed their heads on the wall. The wild beast always sleeps in the Prussian, and when it gets awakened it is not so tame. Their own celebrated poet Schiller gives it splendid in his poem "The song of the bell," where it says in one verse,

"Horrid is it to wake the lion,
Horrid is the tiger's fang,
Yet the worst of all the horrors
That is the man when he is mad."

and this is meant for the hordes of huns, who call themselves Germans, including their majesty Kaiser William II. Nobody will more appreciate than the population of Alsace-Lorraine, when those huns' get driven over or in the Rhine by British and French troops. Then we can say as the peasant in one of Moliere's comedies, "Vous l'avez voulu, George Dandin."

Thanking you for kindly permitting me space in your valuable paper I remain,

Yours very truly,
EMILE BAUMER.

THE TRENT CANAL.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I notice by a recent copy of your paper that you say you are informed that the report "that the Trent Canal opening (which I see had been arranged for) would be delayed on account of the Grand Trunk Railway not having replaced the present fixed steel bridge with a swing bridge," is not correct.

I know it is your aim to give your readers correct information on all matters so I will give you the facts as we see them here.

The railway has a very heavy fixed steel bridge spanning the river, and before any boat can pass a steel swing bridge pivot pier and abutments will have to be built, which will take at least three months to build after the contract is let, the tenders for which have not even been asked for yet. Your informant's idea that the G.T.R. Company would put in a temporary swing bridge to carry their big hundred ton mogul engines, which would cost many thousands of dollars (merely to have the canal opened officially) is too absurd for comment. We do not know what work there is yet to do on the lower sections but I do know there is enough work to be done on the canal about here to require all this season and a good part of next season to finish it. I was talking to the engineer the other day about what work there is yet to do and he said there was seventy thousand yards of submarine rock to be taken out on section No. 4 which would take well into next season to finish.

Your informant says that "the chief cause of the delay is the war which has paralyzed supplies." This is not a fact as there has been no delay on canal work and the government says that all public works are to be gone on with as usual. I am anxious to see the canal opened but one can't do it by misrepresentations. I can't understand the object of your informant in misrepresenting this matter for if he had made any effort at all to get at the correct facts he could have got them.

Yours truly,
CAMPBELLFORD.

Toronto May Lose Rev. John McNeill

Toronto, Sept. 5. — Rev. John McNeill, pastor of Cooke's Presbyterian Church, has received, and is likely to accept, a call from the largest Presbyterian Church in Denver, Colorado. The selection committee encountered disagreement in their choice before Mr. McNeill was finally decided upon. Mr. McNeill has been advised by doctors to leave Toronto, owing to the health of his oldest boy, whose condition, it is said, would improve in a different climate, and the pastor is considering the change for this one reason. He will inform the Toronto Presbytery at the session on Tuesday next of his decision.

SAFETY FIRST

This seems to be the motto on the tongues of the many visitors and members at the Independent Order of Foresters' tent, which again holds the premier position at the head of Society Row. A warm welcome awaits all brethren and their friends who visit this spacious tent, which is fitted up with mission oak furniture and beautifully decorated with ferns, palms and cut flowers. G. A. Mitchell again assumes charge, and is assisted by the genial deputies, Frank Egan and John W. Pointon, who look after the wants of the many visitors.

A chat with Brother Mitchell on the Order's wonderful progress, particularly with reference to the readjustment of rates, is most interesting. He expresses himself in a most enthusiastic manner in behalf of the loyalty and good-will shown the officers of the Order at the time when they were doing that wonderful mission work — educating the members to fully appreciate that in order to continue the splendid work this organization is doing it was necessary to have their Order placed on an actuarily sound basis, so there would be no disappointments for the many beneficiaries in the future. Now the financial question of the Order is settled for all time, he rejoices to know that they can go out and complete the great fraternal work that was adopted by this Order over forty years ago. He reports that he has recently visited several High Courts on the American side, where the greatest enthusiasm reigns among the members, and in spite of the depression of business on all sides, he predicts a most encouraging record for the coming fall. He is most enthusiastic in his expressions regarding the splendid investment one makes when taking a policy in this great Order. The member is put under true protection the moment he enters the Order. At any time he is sick he receives a sick benefit of $3 to $5 per week, free doctor, and in many cases free nurse. Over and above this, he can carry a policy of from $500 to $5000, with the privilege of drawing 70 per cent. of it at any time he might be permanently and totally disabled through accident or disease. This is a time one needs protection, and how many in the insurance world are ready to deal so generously with their policyholders as this? In explaining this policy he shows where a young man at the age of eighteen insures his life for the benefit of his parents to the extent of $1000. It means a great comfort to these parents to know their boy has been so thoughtful and has shown such consideration for them. During the time he is interesting himself in this great fraternal work he learns to appreciate the true spirit of brotherly love. He also receives a splendid education in learning to deal with matters in a parliamentary manner. With all these benefits, including his sick and funeral benefits, he finds that in carrying this policy he has one of the best investments he could possibly make, for if he reaches the age of seventy, and has not had reason to ask for his permanent and total disability benefit, he will receive $700 in cash, and all he has paid for that $700 is $540. Such a policy as this should appeal to every right-thinking man and woman, to say nothing of the other fraternal branches, such as their sanitariums, which are splendidly equipped for members who are afflicted with tuberculosis, and where the members are treated free of cost, and their orphans' home where any child of a Forester is cared for. In carrying out this promise, over 850 little children, who possibly would have been left at the mercy of the world had their parents not been Foresters, are looked after.

FUNERAL HELD TODAY.

The funeral of the late Thomas Henry Gleed took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery. His death, which occurred at Nicholls Hospital, was due to tubercular meningitis, and not typhoid fever, as stated.

SOLDIERS WIVES APPEAL FOR HELP

Ottawa Will Give Fund of $50,000

Ottawa, Sept. 5. — Two women whose husbands have gone to Valcartier with the volunteers, leaving their families dependent on the bounty of the city or other contributors, made appeal at the board of control for grants to support them during the absence of the men upon whom they had depended for sustenance. The applicants were Mrs. J. O'Brien and Mrs. J. W. A. Donaldson, both of whose husbands had been employed on civic works. Mrs. O'Brien applied in person and Mrs. Donaldson sent a letter.

Mrs. O'Brien stated that since the enlistment of her husband, one of their children had died last Monday and the family was in needy circumstances. She had understood from the previous discussion at the board of control that the families of civic employees going to the front would be looked after, but she did not like Charity Officer Keane coming to the house as she did not want the neighbors to think that she was an object of public charity. This was the gist of her statement to the board.

Mrs. Donaldson's letter was along the same lines. Both women were referred to Col. Elliott who is looking after the organization of the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

This action was taken in view of a recommendation received from a special committee of the city, that the city contribute $50,000 to the national fund, instead of receiving individual appeals. Mayor McVeity expressed the opinion that this would be the preferable course and the board endorsed the recommendation of the special committee.

ONE ON THE CLERK.

A farmer went into a shoe store to get foot-wear for his daughters.

"I want some heavy shoes for outdoor work," he explained.

"Do you want them for the girls to milk in?" asked the clerk, who thought he ought to say something and didn't know what.

"No," replied the farmer, gravely, —"I have buckets for that.'

NEW POPE SMALLEST MAN EVER ELECTED TO PAPAL CHAIR

Rome, Sept. 5. — the new Pope is physically the smallest man ever elected to the throne of St. Peter. He is very near-sighted and wears glasses. The mind which will direct the affairs of the church in the coming years is such as commanded the admiration and respect of the famous Cardinal Rampolla, Secretary of State during the Pontificate of Pope Leo XIII. A brother of the new Pope is a retired admiral of the Italian navy; another is a retired captain.

Dressed Very Simply.

Of a deeply religious nature, when he lived in Rome, he walked daily to celebrate the five o'clock morning mass. So simply was he dressed that he was often mistaken on the street for a poor priest seeking charity. Instead of living as he might have, as an under Secretary of State, he occupied poor and meagre apartments that he might devote his income toward charity.

Pope Benedicte XV. is a member of the Knights of Malta, and is using their cross in his coat of arms.

As a strange coincidence, Cardinal Della Chiesa occupied cell 57 during the conclave just closed, the same cell that was occupied by Cardinal Sarto, elected Pope Pius X.

Pope Benedicte was born November 21, 1854, in Genoa, where he attended the university, graduating in law, Latin, and theology.

Getting out of life what there is in it without the bitter rind is what might be called the measure of success.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

The usual meeting was held this week, President J. J. Hartley occupying the chair.

Most of the evening was spent reviewing the Labor Day Committee's proposals to provide entertainment for the crowds on Monday next. The programme provides good sport, and it is to be hoped that Jupiter Pluvius will give place to Old Sol on the eventful day.

Other topics were discussed. The tax on necessities of life, the proposed Free Labor Bureau for the city, the help to be given those left by our defenders, and the support that labor men chould give to sister organizations, etc., made the session an interesting one.

COLUMN FOR BOY SCOUTS

The regular weekly meeting of the Senior Troop, Peterborough Boy Scouts, was held at the Armouries last night with a fair attendance. The Scouts are not going to Toronto this year, as H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught cannot attend for a review of the Scouts.

Orders for the Week.

Monday — Troops meet at the Armouries in full uniform and with staves, at one o'clock sharp.

Tuesday — Ambulance class meets at Knox Church at 7.30 o'clock sharp.

Thursday — Junior Troop meets at the Armouries at 7.30 o'clock in full uniform and with staves.

Friday — Senior Troop meets at the Armouries at 7.30 o'clock, in full uniform and with staves.

All members of the Junior Troop, Boy Scouts, are requested to meet Monday afternoon at one o'clock sharp at the Armouries.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH EPPS.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon in Nicholls hospital of Joseph Epps, aged 23 years. He had been a resident of Peterborough for about one year. He came here from Ashford, Kent. He leaves his parents and two sisters to mourn his loss. The funeral will be held on Monday morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of Thos. Holden, 205 Smith street, to Little Lake cemetery.

EDWARD GERALD HICKSON.

Edward Gerald Hickson, the three-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hickson, 521 Cedar Street, passed away yesterday evening. In the loss of their little son Mr. and Mrs. Hickson will have the sympathy of their many friends. The funeral was held this afternoon to the Ennismore Cemetery.

MRS. JOSEPH BALL.

It was with deep regret that the many friends of Mrs. Joseph Ball learned of her death, which occurred suddenly last evening. Her maiden name was Louisa George. She was 65 years of age, and she had been a resident of Peterborough for the last 40 years. She was a member of St. Luke's church. Those left to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband, are: Two boys, William, of Peterboro, and Walter, of British Columbia; also two sisters in the city, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Bauclere, and one sister in England, Mrs. Dunsford. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 260 Rogers street, on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

CALL TO PRAYER

The Ministerial Association met in special sesion yesterday to consider an appeal which has been sent out by the representatives of the different denominations to all the churches in Canada. The circular asks for the setting apart of Wednesday, the 9th inst., as a day of prayer and intercession, in view of the present world crisis.

The ministers are unanimous in acceding to the request, and are making preparation for such a day as will be honouring to God and expressive of our sense of dependence on Him.

It is earnestly hoped that the entire city will not only feel the need and propriety of such action, but that high and low, rich and poor, both within and without the church will co-operate to fulfil the purpose of the arrangement. Four union meetings will be held, two in the centre and two in the south end of the city. In conection with the afternoon meetings, the merchants and business people are respectfully asked to close their places of business from 3 to 4 o'clock, that they and their employees may have a part in the services. It is expected that without any proclamation or further overture than this notice that the Merchants' Association and other societies will co-operate. There will be no lengthy addresses, but an endeavour will be made to make each service such as will reach the hearts of the people and bring our city into line with the purposes of the Most High, Who has promised that when His people call He will answer.

The afternoon meetings will be held in Murray Street Baptist Church, in charge of Revs. Rollins, Davidson and Wilson, and at the same hour (three o'clock) in Park Street Church, in charge of Revs. Phelps, Keith, and Cunningham.

The evening meetings will be in George Street Church, Revs. Sawers, Pogue and Grobb in charge, and Knox Church, conducted by Revs. Conners, Johnson and Clarry.

Announcement will be made from the various pulpits on Sunday, but all concerned are urged to regard this as their invitation and to make the day a subject of earnest prayer in the meantime.

KOREAN PARTY INTEREST ARMY TEMPLE AUDIENCE

Col. Hoggard Tells of the Salvation Army in Korea.

MUCH PROGRESS MADE

There was a large crowd present at the Army Temple on Friday evening to hear Colonel and Mrs. Hoggard and their band of eight Korean men and women, who are returning to their native country by way of Canada after attending the Salvation Army Congress in London, England. The party was greeted with hearty cheers on entering the hall. It is nearly six years since first the Army flag was planted in Korea, but it remains to stay, as the people are rapidly adapting themselves to Christian ways and religion. There are two thousand five hundred native Korean Salvationists in Korea today.

The Colonel Speaks.

Colonel Hoggard addressed the audience in a brief manner on Korea, where he and his wife have seen signal service.

Korea has a population of twelve millions, the size of the country being some six hundred and twenty miles long by four hundred miles wide.

The natives of Korea receive the Gospel with great enthusiasm, and once they become interested in the work of God they are most zealous workers. Before they join the ranks of the Army they must spend eighteen months on approval. They become efficient enough in a year's time to teach their fellow-men, and many of them go to China, where they are doing great work in converting the Chinese.

Remove Their Shoes.

When entering a building for service the Koreans remove their shoes, but leave on their hats, and when one attempts reading their boks, he must read from the bottom to the top of the page.

Mrs. Hoggard introduced the party which is composed of six men and two women. A boy in the party caused some amusement to the gathering. Mrs. Hoggard asked if he were a boy or girl, and all thought he was a girl, but were sadly mistaken, as he was a young boy, with a long queue hanging down his back. However, he looked very much like a handsome Korean girl, which was intensified by his long hair.

Marriage takes place in Korea when the participants are but fourteen years of age. The wives are purchased for the boys by their parents and given to the boys, neither party in the marriage being allowed to express his or her opinion on the matter. The woman is blind-folded until after the marriage, and then she is permitted to gaze upon her husband.

The women seldom leave their native Korean country, and when walking on the streets they must wear a green veil over their faces, which hides their features completely from any on the street, only a small aperture being open for the benefit of the eyes.

The Korean women do not look upon any male face but that of their husband or son, and preserve throughout their lives a bashfulness toward men. However, these conditions are gradually giving place to more modern and Christian ideas.

Altogether the visiting band was a splendid type of Christian Koreans, and are praised very much by Colonel and Mrs. Hoggard for their valiant Christian work among their fellow-men.

The Koreans sang and spoke in their own language, and was interpreted by one of the party into English.

One of the most interesting items was the showing of how the public schools are carried on in Korea.

The natives have a kind of a singsong way of learning their lessons, and when several are together they make quite a diversion of tongues and noise.

The Koreans were all dressed in native costume, the use of which, together with their customs, was explained by Colonel Hoggard.

Miss Hoggard sang very acceptably. The Temple was crowded, and the audience applauded several times during the evening, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. The party left this morning for Toronto, from where they go on to Winnipeg, Regina, Medicine Hat, Calgary, Vancouver, Seattle, San Francisco, and sail from there to Korea.

Adjt. McElheny wished them all God's blessing, a safe journey home and much success in their work there.

MR. AND MRS. J. J. TURNER RETURNED FROM ENGLAND

Arrived in the City This Morning After Extended Visit

The Review interviewed Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Turner, who arrived from Bristol, England, at 6 a.m. today. They sailed from Canada before war was declared, on the "Andania," and arrived at Plymouth the day after war was declared. Their ship was met far out of the harbor by Government inspectors, and a thorough investigation was made before they entered Plymouth harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner intended staying at Plymouth, but it is a garrison town, and they were obliged to go to London. London is in a state of turmoil — perhaps the greatest in many centuries. Tens of thousands of soldiers are marching through the streets to their destinations. It was not an uncommon sight to see a horse being unhitched in the street, the militia confiscating it for use.

Recruits are enlisting in London by the thousands. Kitchener is beloved by all and cheered to the skies. Theatres and music halls are all featuring patriotic songs and plays.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner saw part of the British army embarking for Belgium and France from Bristol. Thousands of soldiers united in the one song:

It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
It's a long, long way to go,
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
To the nicest girl I know.
Good-bye, Tipperary,
So long, Lester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my best girl's there, I know.

One can imagine the scene of many thousands singing this song. It's a sight never to be forgotten.

Buglers march through the streets of England calling out the men on a minute's notice. They are leaving their homes amidst many sorrowful scenes, and in many cases children and wives are saying good-bye to fathers for the last time. It is pitiful, indeed.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner were at Beck's Hill, the famous watering place, where three spies were caught tampering with the water. Promptly they were court-martialed, and shot at sunrise.

The Kaiser's nephew was attending a school at Beck's Hill, but left some two weeks before war was declared — it was known by many Germans in England that war was imminent long before the English realized it, and thus the Kaiser's nephew and other students throughout England left while they could in safety.

In East London German merchants are changing their names in front of their shops in order to be safe from the wrath of the English.

An Englishman told a German baker that his bread was not fit to eat; the German replied that it was plenty good enough for any Englishman. This caused a riot, which resulted in the complete demolition of the German bakeshop.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner were asked to pay $500 for a berth on their return, but finally obtained one at a considerable reduction, and sailed from Bristol on the Royal Edward, and throughout the voyage not a light was to be seen from the outside of the ship. It was a risky voyage, considering the danger of collision with other ships, wreckage, or icebergs, but, however, they came through without mishap, and once more are glad to set foot on Canadian soil.

ORDER IS SIGNED BY THE JUDGE

Authorizing City to Expropriate Power Plant

Today at twelve o'clock Judge Huycke signed the order authorizing the City of Peterborough to expropriate the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., Ltd. The committee composed of the Mayor, the City Solicitor and Ald. Johnston appointed to decide whether to pay the $100,000 into the court or to the company as yet has arrived at no decision. In the order they are given the option of paying it to either.

Should the money be paid to the company complications may arise while if it be paid to the court the city will have to pay the company 5 per cent. on the money and will receive but 3 per cent. from the court, thus they will lose 2 per cent. or $2,000 per year.

WHERE LIABILITY IS INCURRED

When Horse is Hired From Liveryman

An interesting case was tried yesterday before His Honour, Judge Huycke, when Nicholas Rensetti was sued for damages by Blewett & Middleton, for the over driving of a horse on a hot day last summer and causing its death. The liveryman stated that the horse was hired to go to Warsaw, but had, in fact, been driven as far as McCracken's Landing, and the judge found that in the case of where a man hires a horse to go a certain distance and drives it a greater distance and an accident happens to the horse, that the person is liable for the loss or injury to the horse, under such circumstances.

G. N. Gordon appeared for Blewett & Middleton and F. D. Kerr appeared for N. Rensetti.

Letter From the Mayor

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—A patriotic fund committee, consisting of a number of citizens, has been appointed to receive and disburse funds for the relief of the families of those who have gone to active service in the present war, and those who in consequence of the war may be in need of relief. This committee has appointed a sub-committee to actively canvass for funds, but as immediate funds are required, and also in order to lighten the work of the canvassing committee as much as possible, I am directed by the committee to ask the citizens of the city and county of Peterborough to make immediate and liberal contributions to the fund. Mr. F. Adams, city treasurer, has been appointed treasurer of the fund, and contributions may be sent to him.

There is no need at this time of pressing the urgency for contributions to this fund, or the duty of all patriotic citizens to support it, as the duty of caring for the families of those who have gone to fight and give their lives in the defence of the Empire and of our Dominion, has been fully recognized, and the need to assist those who, in consequence of the war, require relief, is as strong.

The committee will take every precaution to see that the families of the soldiers are properly cared for and that the funds entrusted to them will be carefully administered.

Permit me to request that the contributions to this fund be liberal and prompt.

Yours very truly,
W. BULLER,
Mayor.

HERE AND THERE

Remember this is the supreme test of the man who stays at home. Britain's motto is "Business as usual." This motto is displayed in every commercial and financial newspaper in the United Kingdom.

It may be necessary for the Canadian government to take over the gold mines in Canada and then we'll get a straight account of the doings in these mines, and perhaps get a line on the "salted" ones.

There are only three reliable "funds" on the go now. The Patriotic Fund, the Hospital Ship Fund, and the Red Cross Society Fund. So do not give to any more.

"War has proved the insignificance of the stock exchange," says the Canadian Courier. "The broker is sometimes inclined to claim that his business is the most sacred on earth, next to that of the foreign missionary. Yet the world is getting along pretty well, while both of them take a holiday." The brokers can stand this holiday, and are living so far, but if they are closed up much longer it will be a case of organising a "Broker's Relief Fund."

REFUSED TO ALLOW BAIL

Bert Howden Must Remain in Jail Till Hearing

G. N. Gordon appeared on behalf of Bert Howden in this morning's court, offering bail of $2,000. Magistrate Dumble absolutely refused to grant bail on considering the points of the case.

The case of Charles Rose and William Barr who were caught at the C.P.R. station last Thursday working the short change game was again remanded at today's police court until Friday next.

AFTER TRADE FOR CANADA

Trade Commissions Asked to Supply Details of Openings

SOME WAR NOTES

Ottwa, Sept. 5. — The Canadian trade commissioners throughout the world have been notified by Sir Geo. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, to supply the department with details of all possible openings for Canadian trade. The commissioners are particularly requested to supply full information in regard to goods obtained by this country from Germany before the war. Wherever possible, samples of German goods are to be forwarded.

These will be placed at the disposal of Canadian manufacturers. This step has been taken by the department in furtherance of the campaign to secure for Canadian manufacturers trade positively held by Germany.

Insure Volunteers.

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 5. — The city council has decided to place $1000 insurance on the life of each of the 22 men who have gone to the front from this city.

Patriotic Fund Grows.

Ottawa, Sept. 5. — The Minister of Finance today received $25,000 from Messrs. Hiram Walker & Sons, Limited, Walkerville, Ont., for the Canadian patriotic fund. Messrs. Walker are giving $25,000 to the fund and $25,000 for Canadian war expenditure. Subscriptions for the patriotic fund sent direct to the Minister of Finance now amount to $102,249.25.

Hamilton's Grant.

Hamilton, Sept. 5. — The board of control recommended a grant of $20,000 to the national patriotic fund. The city has also voted $5000 for relief work, and this will be handled separately.

Aid for Member.

Riverdale, Sept. 5. — Lodge No. 319, Chosen Friends (Toronto Council), meeting, resolved to raise a special fund to meet the insurance levies and dues of Mr. Charles L. Elhorn, 91 Moscow, who has gone to the front.

French Courage.

Paris, Sept. 5. — Big losses by the French at a battle around Amiens were due to the inability of the French officers to control their men, who insisted on charging the German artillery positions. Hundreds of Frenchmen, it is said, were mowed down in these mistaken exhibitions of courage.

The French lines held against the German attack when the plans of the staff were followed and the forces remained on the defensive.

Cartier Celebration.

Montreal, Sept. 5. — The celebrations which were to have been held here and elsewhere in conection with the Centenary of the Birth of Sir Etienne Cartier have been postponed owing to the war. The statue of the Canadian statesman that was to have been unveiled here was left in Brussels, where its sculptor, A. C. Hill, was compelled to leave.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 5.—The city council will furnish every volunteer leaving this city for the war with a sweater coat and cap. Nine hundred are already at Valcartier.

RICH PRIZES OF WAR

1. Canadian Imports from Germany—$14,478,833.

Canadian Imports from Austria—$1,674,349.

We should substitute Canadian-made goods for these.

2. German exports to world—$2,165,688,000.

Austrian exports to world—$525,700,000.

But such prizes are small compared with these. Why not go after them?

3. Beyond all this, Canadians import $626,664,420 worth of goods annually from the world (including, for instance, $449,950,048 worth from the United States). Why not, in the present emergency, get the Canadian people to buy much of this at home, so as to lessen unemployment? Cannot quality and price be made right?

Note:—Statistics in 1 and 3 are for year ending March 31, 1913; in 2 for 1912.—Industrial Canada.

LOCAL MARKET

It has been sometime since the market had such a large attendance as it had this morning. The prices of butter and eggs were a little higher than last week. The apples were somewhat cheaper. It is the general opinion that apples are going to be scarce for this fall and winter. The late potatoes will be a light crop owing to the lateness of the rain.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—War prices in earnest were realized today on 'change. A world-wide urgent demand for wheat and flour was the power that lifted values. After an advance of 6c to 6⅞c a bushel, wheat closed wild at 5c to 5⅞c above yesterday's finish. All other leading staples, too, showed decided net gains; corn, 1⅛c to 1⅝c; oats, 1⅛c to 1⅝c, and provisions, 5c to 60c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 4.—Wheat prices opened unchanged to ½c higher, advancing steadily thru the first two hours 2⅛c to 3⅞c. Oats opened unchanged to ½c higher, and in the same time had gained 1⅛c on both months. Flax opened 1⅛c to 3c higher.

Liverpool cables were delayed, but private advices say the market there was higher. This influenced the local market.

Offerings of cash wheat are light despite the high values, farmers continuing to hold. Oats were in good demand. There was little enquiry for flax.

Wheat trading in futures has been heavier than usual. Later, the advance of the day was not maintained, the close being down ½c from the high points, but 2⅛c to 3c higher than Thursday's close.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—The feature of the local grain market today was the demand from London buyers for Manitoba spring wheat. Sales of 10 loads of old No. 1 northern for nearby shipment at 45s and 20 loads of new crop for October, also at 45s, and on spot sales were made of 200,000 bushels of wheat to exporters for shipment from Fort William within fifteen days. No. 1 northern sold at $1.26; No. 2 at $1.23½, and No. 3 at $1.21½ per bushel c.i.f. Montreal. There was also some demand for Manitoba barley from Glasgow, and sales of two loads of No. 3 were made at 89c. The local trade in oats is rather quiet, but the tone of the market is very firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 4.—Wheat—December, $1.22⅜; No. 1 hard, $1.28⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.18¼ to $1.27⅛.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 4.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.25⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.24⅝; No. 2 do., $1.22⅝; December, $1.24⅝.

CHEESE MARKETS.

CORNWALL, Sept. 4.—The offerings on the Cornwall cheese board today were 1517 colored cheese. The price paid was 15¼c, which establishes a new record. The highest price ever secured here before was 14⅞c. At this date last year 13⅞c was paid for 1391 boxes of cheese.

CATTLE MARKETS

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 2500; market dull; beeves, $6.70 to $10.25; Texas steers, $6.20 to $9.30; stockers and feeders, $5.40 to $8.15; cows and heifers, $3.25 to $9.25; calves, $7.50 to $11.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,000; market lower; light, $8.90 to $9.35; mixed, $8.55 to $9.35; heavy, $8.45 to $9.20; rough, $8.45 to $8.60; pigs, $8 to $8.50; bulk of sales, $8.75 to $9.15.

Sheep—Receipts, 11,000; market higher; native, $4.85 to $5.80; yearlings, $5.65 to $6.60; lambs, native, $6.25 to $7.90.

TERMONDE BOMBARDED.

Belgian Town Sustains Attack and Ghent Is In Peril.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Ostend says it is announced there that the Germans are bombarding Termonde (Dendermonde), a fortified town of Belgium, sixteen miles east of Ghent. The town had a population of about 10,000. Ghent itself was reported in previous despatches as fearing a bombardment.

Engagement Reported.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Ostend, timed 7.45 last evening, says:—

"At this moment fighting is proceeding in the district between Alost and Termonde, Belgium. The railway near Alost has been blown up. Travelers from Brussels were obliged to pass through Ninove and Alost, and then to return south to Denderleeuw, whence they proceeded by the way of Gottegem and Ghent to Ostend.

"At Ninove six German Uhlans who were patrolling the country encountered a patrol of gendarmes and were killed."

FRENCH LOSSES 100,000.

Of That Number In Northern Army Probably 30,000 Are Dead.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Standard's Paris correspondent in a telegram yesterday says that the losses of the French northern army which has been operating in Belgium and between Paris and the Franco-Belgian frontier are estimated at 100,000 killed, wounded and missing. It is estimated that the majority of the missing are dead, and the total number of dead is said to exceed 30,000.

The German losses cannot be estimated with the same probability of accuracy, but it is thought that the German forces opposing this part of the French army must have lost fully 150,000 men, of whom between between 25,000 and 30,000 are estimated to have been killed.

"Pubs" Will Close Early.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The licensing authorities of London have decided that after Monday next all saloons must be closed at 11 p.m. The order was made as a result of a request by the military authorities. The question of club bars will be dealt with later. Restaurants will be allowed to remain open as usual for the sale of food only.

Bulgaria To Stay Neutral.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—A Havas agency despatch from Athens says that the Bulgarian Minister to Greece has assured the Government that Bulgaria has decided to maintain the strictest neutrality until the end of the war.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

The Sunday school will resume meeting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, instead of at 10 a.m.

Mr. Rollins has returned to the city and will conduct both services, preaching in the evening on "A Woman Who Saved a Nation."

CHURCHILL EVOKES ENTHUSIASM ON BEHALF OF NAVY

Leaders of Parliamentary Parties Unite in Big Meeting at Guildhall in Beginning of Campaign to Stimulate Recruiting.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—In the historic Guildhall of London Premier Asquith yesterday started the crusade to stimulate enlistment under the British flag, which he intends to push throughout the country. He is calling upon every able-bodied Briton of military age to come to the help of his country in the hour of need.

PREMIER ASQUITH.

The Premier opened his address with the heartening announcement that up to to-day between 250,000 and 300,000 recruits had responded to the call of Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of War.

"We now find ourselves involved with the whole strength of this Empire in a bloody arbitrament of might versus right," the Premier declared, "that has been entered into with clear judgment and a clear conscience. What would have been our place among the nations if we had been base enough or so paralyzed in our sense of honor and duty to be false to our word and faithless to our friends? We should have been standing by with folded arms and with such countenance as we could command while this small and unprotected state, Belgium, was defending her vital liberties and making a heroic stand against overwhelming forces."

The Premier made the declaration that his object was to impress on the people the imperious urgency of this supreme duty.

Referring to the Indian troops, Premier Asquith said that two divisions of that magnificent army were already on their way. Their association with the home and the dominion troops, he declared, would maintain the flag which symbolizes unity and which no arms could dissever or dishonor.

As to the progress of the war, the Premier declared that in his judgment, in whatever direction he looked, there was abundant grounds for pride and comfort. "I will not say more," he said, "because I think we should bear in mind that we are at the present time watching the fluctuations of fortune in the early stages of what is going to be a protracted struggle. We must cultivate patience, endurance and steadfastness, and every one must do his or her appropriate part in the common cause."

Bonar Law declared that the way to peace or war had been in Berlin for nearly a generation. The head of the German Government had merely to whisper the word "peace" and there would have been no war. "He did not speak that word," Mr. Law continued, "but drew the sword, and may the accursed system for which he stood perish with it."

Mr. Balfour said that Great Britain had entered the war because honor and interests could not be divorced, and because of a nation which strove for great power, but which was utterly ignorant how to see it.

Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, spoke briefly.

"You may rely with good confidence upon the strength and efficiency of our naval forces," he said. "That defence will enable you to live and work and draw the means of life and power from the uttermost ends of the earth.

"It will give you time and it will give you the means to create the powerful military force which this country must wield before the struggle is brought to its conclusion. You have only to persevere to save yourselves and to save all those who rely on you. You have only to go right on and at the end of the road, be it short, or long, victory and honor will be found."

ATHLETES ANSWER CALL TO THE COLORS

Lord Kitchener Rapidly Filling Up His Army

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The events in northern France and the campaign started by Premier Asquith and other leaders, have given immense impetus to recruiting, and it is confidently predicted in official circles that Lord Kitchener soon will have the half million men he desires. Cricketers, football players and other athletes who at the beginning of the war were inclined to keep their engagements, have now cancelled all their games and are flocking to the colors.

The association of rugby football organizations has cancelled all its matches, most of the players having joined the forces. Every player in last year's international team is either serving the army or navy, or in training for service. Every Salvation Army corps in the country has contributed its quota of men to the army or navy and other members of the organization have volunteered for Red Cross work.

Swat the dirt and the flies will disappear.

CRIPPLED GUNBOATS AT KIEL

May be Victims of Another Naval Battle

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Official Information Bureau has issued a statement saying:—

"According to information derived from a trustworthy source seven German destroyers and torpedo boats have arrived at Kiel in a damaged condition, and it is understood that others have been sunk in the vicinity of the Kiel Canal."

Several theories are advanced regarding the foregoing announcement. One is that the vessels were engaged in the Heligoland Bight battle of Aug. 28; the other that they have been engaged in the Baltic with Russian or British warships. The first theory is the one generally adopted.

Impossible.

"But they will never adopt the habit of getting behind a newspaper at breakfast and contributing only grunts to the conversation."—Pittsburg Post.

SALVATIONISTS UNDER ARMS

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Hundreds of officers, bandsmen and private soldiers of the Salvation Army have donned the King's uniform and are now serving in France or with the British fleet.

In the naval skirmishes the other week several Salvationists participated. One who was a member of a party of nine Salvationists told off for duty in the forward of H. M. S. Liberty at the end of the battle with the enemy was the only one of the company surviving.

MOSLEMS TO PRAY FOR GERMANY

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A despatch to The Evening Standard from Paris says it is learned that the Vienna papers have received a telegram from Constantinople stating that prayers for the success of the Austro-German arms have been ordered in all the Turkish mosques. The correspondent adds that this is believed the first time on record that Moslems have offered prayers on behalf of Christians.

The Austrian Forces Are Now Valueless

Russian General Staff Gives Out Complete Story of the Operations on the Galician Frontier, and Reports That Captures of Austrians and War Supplies Have Been Huge, Says Bulletin

PETROGRAD, Sept. 5.—Via London.)—The Russian general staff yesterday issued the following account of the fighting which led to the capture of Lemberg, capital of Galicia:

"In the offensive against the Lublin-Kholm front the main Austrian forces deployed on the Zavichost, Tanoff, Bielgoray, Tomachoff and Belz line. The second Austrian army, composed of the third, eleventh and twelfth corps and five divisions of cavalry, gathered in the region east of Lemberg in order to cover this operation.

"When the Russian troops were taking the offensive the Austrian concentration had not been completed, and topographical considerations compelled the enemy to reinforce this army still more with the troops of the seventh, thirteenth and fourteenth corps, thus making a total of twelve divisions and several brigades of the Landsturm.

"Our troops in the Lonthk, Dubno and Proskuroff districts crossed the frontier on Aug. 20 and marched on Lemberg for the purpose of thwarting the Austrian covering movement and acting against the flank of the enemy. This offensive was hampered by the numerous affluents of the Dneister river, flowing across all the routes. Moreover, the enemy possessed on the Dniester a series of fortifications designed to protect bridges, where they menaced the Russian left flank and communications with Russia.

"In the period between August 17 and Sept. 3 the Russian left wing advanced 220 versts (about 147 miles), fighting all the time. The bulk of the hostile forces entrenched in powerful positions at Kamenka and Galitch offered battle and were thoroughly defeated in a desperate contest.

"Between Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 in one district of the upper course of the Guila Lipa alone, where the enemy's line was broken, the Austrians lost 12,000 men in killed and wounded.

"The retreat of the enemy after his defeat at Lemberg assumed the character of disorderly flight and panic, and the Russians took 200 guns, together with baggage and tens of thousands of prisoners. It is believed that the remnant of the second Austrian army is now no longer of any military value.

"Concerning the operations of the Russian army in Galicia official reports say that the enemy is retreating, after desperate fighting near Halicz, leaving 4,500 dead on the field. The Russians took 32 cannon and railway material."

FIGHTING ON IN AFRICA

Togoland, German East Africa and Cape Colony See Brushes

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Fighting has now taken place in three African colonies as a consequence of the European war—in Togoland, in Cape Colony, and in German East Africa.

In Cape Colony, the Germans have invaded the Gordonia District from a fortified position on their side of the Orange river, whence there is a railway and communication with Luderitabucht, the port of the German diamond industry and with Windhuk, the capital of Southwest Africa.

The Germans keep 3,000 white troops in Southwest Africa besides 5,000 black troops and there is a military system compelling German settlers to bear arms. There are about 5,000 settlers.

The South African defence force under Gen. Botha, have checked this invasion at Upington, a village on the Orange river, with a population of 3,000, many of whom were attracted by the local copper mines.

The fighting in East Africa is said to have been undertaken by Boers and gunboats. This is not surprising, for the Boers who trekked there during the South African war, fell out with the Germans, and crossed the frontier. They have not forgotten their grievances against the Kaiser's administration.

Whatever is the result of the war, it is difficult to imagine that the system of government by mailed fist will continue in the German African colonies. Herr Dernburg had much difficulty in pacifying the German settlers in the colonies when he toured the dark continent.

There is a large population of British Indians at Dar-Es-Salan, who trade with Zanzibar, but a practical difficulty which the Germans will experience is that they will no longer be able to purchase goods, because the German silver currency is not likely to be accepted by Indian traders just now.

"So I have always maintained," replied the brunette. "Let's go and get a fudge sundae."—Kansas City Journal.

STEPS TO HELP TRADE

Lloyd George Announces Movement to Meet Failure of Exchange

LONDON, Sept. 5.—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced last night that an arrangement has been arrived at to remove the difficulties caused by the breakdown of foreign exchanges.

Under this arrangement the Bank of England will provide acceptors with the funds necessary to pay at maturity all bills contracted before the moratorium was declared. Acceptors will be under obligation to collect from their clients the funds due them as soon as possible and apply those funds to the advance made by the banks, for which interest will be charged at two per cent. above the ruling bank rate.

The bank undertakes to claim repayment of any amount not recovered by acceptors from their clients for a period of one year after the close of the war. Until the end of this period the banks' claim will rank after claims in respect of post moratorium transactions.

In order to facilitate fresh business and the movement of produce and merchandise from and to all parts of the world, the joint stock banks have arranged, with the co-operation of the Bank of England and the Government, to advance to clients the amounts necessary to pay their acceptances at maturity where the funds have not been provided in due time by the clients of the acceptors.

It is officially announced that the Government is now negotiating with a view to assisting a resumption of foreign exchange between the United States and Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Rome, dated Sept. 3, says;

"According to a report from Servia the Secret Service Society 'Naroda Obrana' is preparing a revolutionary movement in Bosnia and Herzegovina, which will break out simultaneously with similar movements in Austria and Hungary."

Stranded Aeroplane Sunk.

HARWICH, Eng., Sept. 5.—A British submarine has brought in a German airman and his mechanic, who were found floating on their fallen aeroplane. 60 miles off the coast. After rescuing the men the submarine sunk the aeroplane.

MEETINGS WILL BE HELD AT THE TEMPLE

The Salvation Army has not been included in the special services to be held next Wednesday, but the day will be observed at the Temple by two meetings, one at three o'clock and the other at eight o'clock.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

DOUGHTY—SCOBELL.

A quiet wedding was solemnized this morning at the bride's home, 218 Sherbrooke Place, when Miss Cora Augusta Scobell was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Harry Maxwell Doughty, by Rev. H. J. Keith. The bridesmaid was Miss Eva Scobell, sister of the bride, and Mr. Harry Portsmouth assisted the groom.

They left on the G. T. R. for Buffalo and points west. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Doughty will reside on Aylmer street.

DELAFOSSE—HALPIN.

The marriage of Miss Clara Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Halpin, Hunter street, to Mr. Francis C. DelaFosse, of Montreal, was quietly performed this morning. They will reside in Montreal.

Christ Church was prettily decorated on Wednesday, for the wedding of Miss Vera Bonnell, youngest daughter of the late Dr. Bonnell, with Dr. Norman Taylor, of McBride, British Columbia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Taylor, father of the groom, Miss G. Boyd played the Wedding March and Mr. C. Dowding sang Perfect Love, during the signing of the Register. The guests at the home of Mrs. Bonnell were confined to relatives and after refreshments and expressions of good wishes for the future Dr. and Mrs. Taylor left by the 3.30 train for their new home in the far Pacific Province.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Reid left this morning to spend their vacation at Moorfield and Toronto.

Mrs. George Stenton, Water St., is visiting friends in Toronto.

At the August examination in special course for Ontario teachers at the University of Toronto, Miss M. A. O'Connell, of St. Peter's Separate School, was successful in passing with first-class honours. Miss O'Connell is one of the city's able teachers.

Mr. J. H. Renwick, organist and choirmaster of George Street Methodist Church, has returned from his holidays and will have charge of the music, as usual, on Sunday.

On August 24th, at Moosejaw, Sask., Egbert H. Morden and Miss Sarah Ward were quietly married at the Baptist parsonage. Mrs. Morden is the second daughter of Robert Ward, of Peterborough, and has been teaching at Pasqua, Sask. They will reside near Gap View, Sask., where the Morden brothers are prosperous farmers. Bert Morden is the youngest son of S. P. Morden, Chatterton, Ont.

So many requests have been made to Miss Dorothy Allan that she will again sing Sir Edward Elgar's great patriotic solo, "Land of Hope and Glory," that she will do so at the morning service at St. Paul's Church tomorrow. Rev. Mr. Pogue is preaching on "The War and Some things to be remembered in connection therewith and the whole service will be of a patriotic character.

In the evening, Mr. Maurice Park will sing the beautiful Aria from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death."

William Cain, Toronto, is spending the week end in the city.

A. E. Caddy, Campbellford, is registered at the Snowden House.

Mr. H. Gallagher, Toronto, is in the city, the guest of friends.

Mr. R. A. Finn, Guelph, and J. P. Munn, Rutland, Vt., are among the guests at the White House.

Mrs. W. G. Mick left this morning for Napanee, to visit her sister, Mrs. Chas. A. Walters.

STONEY LAKE BREEZES

The latter part of August was an exceedingly busy time on the lakes. Many visitors flocked in at the last moment to catch a few breaths of our life giving ozone.

Mrs. Priestman of Winnipeg, is spending her vacation with her sister, Mrs. H. Sutherland at "Inglstane."

Mrs. Woods has had extensive improvements made to her cottage near Burleigh.

Dr. Race has had a new launch house built for the "Estelle." In design it eclipses anything on the lake, being very ornamental.

Mr. Charlton reports having done a very good business at Kawartha Park store. He will keep it open till the middle of September.

Mrs. R. Harstone and family returned home to Peterboro on Monday, having occupied the Gordon cottage "Oaklands," all season.

Mr. Noble has commenced the construction of his cottage in Kawartha par, near the new government wharf.

Dr. Watson is making splendid progress with his bungalow on the Burleigh channel.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Johnston of Toronto spent an extended holiday at Viamede. Mr. Johnston is the brother of the late Pauline Johnston, the noted authoress.

Auto Association Shows Right Spirit

At a special meeting of the Peterborough Automobile Association held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Thursday evening, it was decided unanimously to make a grant of $100 to the City Relief Officer for the immediate benefit of the families of those of our citizens who have gone to the front.

It was also decided to notify the City Relief Officer that arrangements have been made to place cars at his disposal from time to time in order that he may economize time in making his visits. The secretary has received notice from the Ontario Motor League that all motorists becoming members of the association during the remainder of the season will be entitled to membership for 1915 also.

MR. JAMES K. HACKETT COMING IN "OTHELLO"

Mr. James K. Hackett is one of the most popular English-speaking actors on the stage, and the announcement of his coming is always sure to inspire interest, for it insures an evening of rare delight. Fine acting and artistic stage presentation are qualities not too often met in the theatre, but both are always present in any production which bears the Hackett name. Memory runs back to his many great successes which have attracted a universal public, notably "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Pride of Jennico," "Rupert of Hentzau," "John Glade's Honor," "Don Caesar's Return," "Samson," "A Grain of Dust" and "The Bishop's Candlesticks." What roles could have offered a finer apprenticeship for the great characters of tragedy? And what finer opportunity for an actor of Mr. Hackett's personal and artistic attainments than in the character of the immortal Shakespeare's jealour Moor? For a strictly limited tour, and to establish it in his permanent repertoire, this excellent actor is to play Othello. The opportunity is one which no true theatregoer will venture to overlook and the star will assuredly be welcomed by capacity houses when he appears at the Grand on Friday next, Sept. 11th.

OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES ARE APPOINTED FOR THE LOCAL PATRIOTIC FUND

CANVAS FOR FUNDS

President — His Worship Mayor Buller.

Vice-President — Mr. D. O'Connell.

Secretary—Mr. S. R. Armstrong.

Treasurer—Mr. F. Adams.

Executive Committee—The above officers and Messrs. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Judge Huycke, W. H. Bradburn, W. G. Morrow, Major Eastwood, Col. Young, J. Crane, B. D. Hall, R. J. Soden, James Lynch, James Kendrey, A. H. Stratton, Geo. Ball, A. W. Cressman, H. Navey, W. G. Howden, E. A. Peck, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Ald. Stratton and Ald. Johnston.

The above efficient set of officers were last night elected to supervise the Peterboro branch of the Patriotic Fund and General Relief Fund association. The meeting, which was attended by some 60 prominent citizens, first heard a few explanatory remarks from Mayor Buller and J. H. Burnham. The latter expressed himself as heartily in favor with the excellent movement taken by the citizens of Peterboro, and promised to do all in his power to help it along. There will be three classes of people in this city who must be cared for during the coming winter. There will be the dependents of the men who left their homes to fight for the Empire there will be the people who were placed in poor circumstances as a result of this great war, and, finally, there will be the ordinary charity of the city. The latter will be looked after in the ordinary way, viz., the charity board; but the former two will be helped by the Patriotic and Relief Fund. Mr. Burnham stated that the government will provide $20 per month for the families of the volunteers, and that the volunteers themselves would send home about $20 per month; but besides this it was up to the committee to see that the families suffered in no possible manner; thus the fighters at the front would have no home cares whatsoever. He was absolutely sure that the course taken by the citizens of Peterboro and other centres in establishing this Patriotic Fund was the correct one and would undoubtedly be a success.

Mayor Buller followed Mr. Burnham's remarks by the assertion that the families of the volunteers have not as yet suffered. If the fact that they were in want was brought to the proper authorities, and with a good set of officers in charge of the work, they would be well looked after in the future. It was the intention, he stated, to have a committee formed at a later day to assist in the work of relieving the general poor of the city during the coming winter, hence the three classes of people which Mr. Burnham spoke of will be well cared for. He also stated that at a meeting of the finance committee it was resolved to donate $500 to this Patriotic Fund and to give more if the subscriptions did not aggregate to the expected amount.

Basil D. Hall, president of the board of trade, presented a resolution which was passed at the last meeting of that body, in which it was recommended that the city provide the fund, and realise the amount by having another mill added to the tax rate next year. This idea met with the disapproval of Rev. James Rollins, who thought that those who have made a little more money than others in this country should be moved by patriotism to give some of it for such a good cause. It would, he thought, do away entirely with the patriotic feeling to have rich man and poor man alike pay for it next year. While on the floor, Rev. Rollins also expressed his surprise at the city of Peterboro granting but $500, and his feelings along that line were also voiced by Messrs. Jas. Kendrey and E. G. Patterson, but Mayor Buller assured them that the city would donate more should the occasion demand it.

The election of the above officers then took place, and they retired to the board room, and returned in the course of an hour to the general committee, and reported as follows:

Moved by R. J. Soden, seconded by B. D. Hall, that a committee composed of Major Eastwood, Col. Young, Messrs. W. G. Morrow, E. A. Peck, J. Crane, James Lynch, B. D. Hall, G. A. Gillespie and Ald. Stratton, be appointed to ascertain how many families of the men in active service will require assistance, and the rest of the executive committee be appointed to ascertain how many families there are in the city who will require relief through their bread-winner being out of work in consequence of the war.—Carried.

Moved by Judge Huycke, seconded by James Lynch, that Messrs. W. G. Morrow, A. W. Cressman, W. H. Bradburn, Major Eastwood, James Kendrey, James Lynch, D. O'Connell and Mayor Buller, be a committee to devise means of raising funds for the association.

Moved by J. H. Burnham, seconded by H. Navey, that the mayor be authorized to act as a committee to disburse relief in the meantime.—Carried.

Moved by E. A. Peck, seconded by B. D. Hall, that the committee issue an appeal at once for subscriptions to the fund.—Carried.

Moved by D. O'Connell, seconded by J. H. Burnham, that the relief committee composed of Messrs. H. Rush, W. G. Howden, James Lynch, Col. Young, Mayor Buller and Geo. A. Gillespie, be authorized to distribute relief.—Carried.

The fund committee will immediately make arrangements for a canvas for funds in each polling subdivision.

This report was accepted and the general meeting then adjourned. During the meeting Mayor Buller reported the following contributions:

Among the gentlemen, in attendance were:

His Honor Judge Huycke, Messrs. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Leo A. Gillespie, M.L.A., W. G. Morrow, R. E. Layfield, T. W. H. Young, G. Stewart Cameron, James Rollins, F. W. Miller, John Crane, R. CLERGY IN CITY PULPITS

All but one Have Returned From Vacation

SPECIAL SERMONS

On the War and Labor Will be Delivered

Vacation time for the clergymen of this city has come to an end, and with the exception of Rev. F. J. Sawers, who has not yet returned from England, all the ministers will be in their pulpits on Sunday.

Rev. H. J. Keith has just returned from a trip to western cities, and Rev. R. B. Grobb, who has been at his home in St. Catharines, returned to the city today.

Special mention will be made of the services to be held next Wednesday afternoon and evening, as follows:

The afternoon meetings will be held in Murray Street Baptist Church in charge of Revs. Rollins, Davidson, and Wilson, and at the same hour (three o'clock) in Park Street Church, in charge of Revs. Phelps, Keith, and Cunningham.

The evening meetings will be in George Street Church, Revs. Sawers, Pogue, and Grobb in charge, and in Knox Church, conducted by Revs. Conners, Johnson, and Clarry.

The war which is now raging in Europe will be treated from various standpoints, as will also the labour question.

CHILD DEAD AND FATHER IN HOSPITAL

The sympathy of many friends will be extended to Mrs. Joseph M. Gray, 500 Gilchrist street, who has lost her 16-months-old son, Norman, who died this morning.

Last Monday the child sustained serious injury in a fall at the father's sawmill.

Yesterday Mr. Gray was taken to the hospital, suffering from a badly lacerated arm, the result of an accident at his mill, when his left arm was drawn onto the saw.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE FRONT

COMPLETE CHANGE IN LINE OF BATTLE

Latest News Produces Excellent Impression in Paris---Many Who Left Hurriedly, Will Return.

GERMANS LEAVE SEINE VALLEY

Have Come to Recognize British as Particularly Hard Nut to Crack

RUSSIAN TROOPS IN FRANCE

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 8.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegraph Co. from Paris, reviewing the situation in that quarter, says: "Official statements regarding the situation at the front indicate the French had advanced about 10 miles up to noon Monday. This latest news from the front has produced an excellent impression in Paris. Unofficial news and that brought back by soldiers returning from the front is even more encouraging than are the official statements, and people here are convinced that things could not be going better for the success of the French arms.

"Paris has undoubtedly lost a large proportion of its population, but the return of many of those who hastily departed during the last few days, is confidently expected."

RUSSIAN VICTORIES MEAN MUCH.

London, Sept. 8.—A despatch to the Times from Athens says the Russian victories over Austria appear to have cleared the air somewhat in the Balkans, although the danger of complications cannot be said to have entirely passed. It is believed the Russian victories assure the neutrality of Turkey and Bulgaria.

LINE OF BATTLE UNDERGOES CHANGE.

London, Sept. 8.—"There has been a complete change in the aspect of the line of battle in France within the last 48 hours," says the Havre correspondent of the Morning Post. During the first half of last week the entire valley of the Seine from Paris to Havre was closely menaced by Germans. This menace has ben suddenly frustrated and the Germans seem to have disappeared from that section.

"The complete manner in which the Germans last week had penetrated into the valley of the Seine is shown by consultation of the map. Germans held Beauvais and their cavalry outposts had reached as far as Pontoise, Rouen and Harfleur. A line drawn through these three cities is virtually a straight line from Paris to Havre.

"Suddenly comes a changed aspect.

"The Germans abandoned the lower Seine valley and they stopped their western sweeping movement. Why? I have no hesitation in asserting that this was due in a large measure to the British action, south of Chantilly, after the battle at Compiegne, in which terrible losses were inflicted on the Germans. The British burned the forest of Compiegne, which met with sentimental objections from the French, but the action was effective in driving large forces of the Germans from cover. The Germans have come to recognize the British as a particularly hard nut to crack, and this has saved the Seine for the time being.

"The Germans found better game to the east than the effort against the British, which merely meant sacrificing thousands of German lives. The Germans are sweeping around to crush the eastern forces of the French as between the jaws of a nutcracker. These hordes count upon annihilating the French armies of the east and devouring Paris at leisure."

LATEST CASUALTY LIST FROM BERLIN.

Berlin, Sept. 8.—The twentieth casualty list, just published, contains 1,180 names, including 185 dead and nearly 1,000 wounded. The total casualties thus far published aggregate 2,273 dead, 1,500 wounded and 3,249 missing.

250,000 RUSSIANS SAID TO BE IN FRANCE.

Rome, Sept. 8.—(Via London)—According to the Rome Tribunal there is in France a total of 250,000 Russian troops. This newspaper attributes Emperor William's presence at Metz to this concentration of Russians.

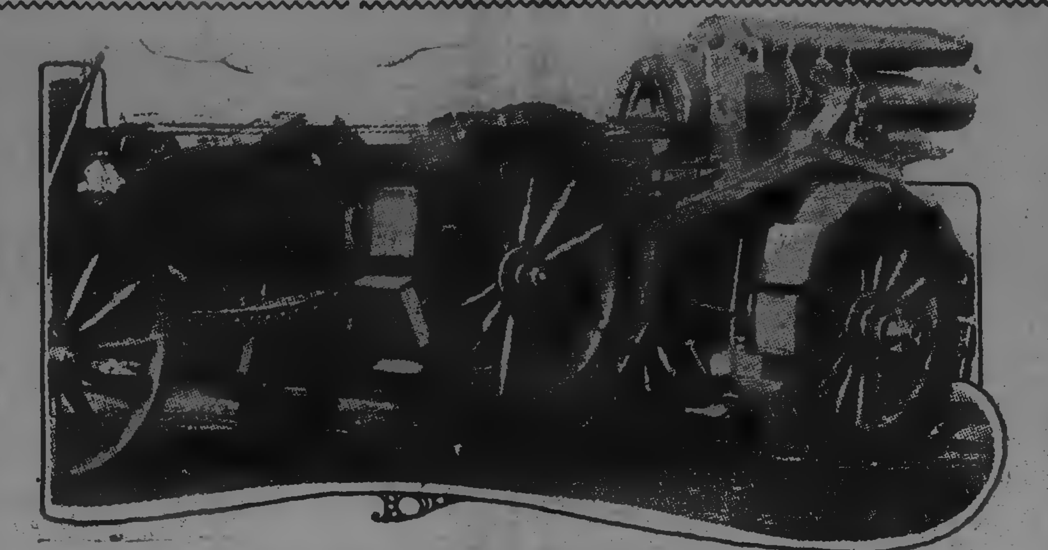
ATROCITIES COMMITTED BY KAISER'S SOLDIERS

Commission Reports Shooting of Inoffensive Persons, Pillaging of Towns and Houses—Belgians Compelled to Fight Against Russians

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 8.—A News Agency despatch from Antwerp received here today says the report of the commission appointed by the Belgian government to investigate the charges of German atrocities finds that atrocities were committed by the Germans at Louvain, Vise, Aerschot, Onsmael and in the district of Malines. Inoffensive pedestrians, cyclists and peasants, the report says, were shot by the Germans, who also robbed treasuries and burned and pillaged houses and towns on the pretext that the inhabitants fired at the German troops.

The commission found that Belgians were deported to Germany to aid in gathering the harvest and that in some cases Belgians were compelled to fight against the Russians. It also is declared that men were shut up in churches while women were outraged. Men, women and children, the report concludes, were compelled to march in front of German troops showing the white flag in order to induce the French troops to approach.



HEAVY FIELD GUN WHICH THE GERMANS ARE USING.

This style of weapon is usually used as a siege gun, but the Germans are using them in the field, after surrounding the wheels with "caterpillar feet." The principal projectile of this gun is shrapnel, but it also fires a high explosive shell at times.

DECISIVE BATTLE NOT FAR AWAY

Allies Trying to Ascertain Reason for Strength of Eastward Wing of Germans

Western Valley of Seine is Now Cleared of the Enemy

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 8.—The public is waiting breathless with the hope that the allies have finally taken the offensive but the cautious tone of official communications issued from France, indicate the forward movement of the allies is only a feeler to ascertain the reason for the strength of the eastward wing of the Germans. No matter what the movement may mean, a decisive battle cannot be long postponed.

Meantime the western valley of the Seine, recently overrun by Germans has been cleared of the enemy and has been given a breathing spell.

The unexpected swing of the Germans has caused a re-adjustment of the lines of the allies. The movement of the Germans was ascertained so promptly by the aeroplanes of the allies that abundant time was given for the shift.

ORDER TO WIND UP OAK LAKE CHEESE COMPANY

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—An order winding up the Oak Lake Cheese and Butter Co. of Peterborough county was made by Chief Justice Falconbridge at Osgoode Hall to-day, on application of George J. Young, with judgment for the creditor for $293.30. The company was incorporated eight years ago.

RUSSIAN VICTORY

Strong Fortification on Dniester River is Taken

Canadian Press Despatch.

Washington, Sept. 8.—The Russian embassy here to-day issues the following statement: "On Sept. 5 our troops took the strong fortification of Mikolaev, on the Dniester river. The moats of these works were covered by a flanking fire from artillery placed in steel cupolas, and the whole of the works was surrounded by a triple line of wire entanglements.

"We took 40 guns and a large store of supplies and ammunition."

GERMAN IMPERIAL GUARD REPORTED CUT UP BY THE BRITISH

Crown Prince Said to Have Been In Midst of Regiments Wiped Out by British Troops—French Wing of the Allies Line Was Also Successful—Germans Forced to Retreat.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A Boulogne despatch to The Evening News says: "A telegram has been received from Gen. Pau, announcing a victory by the allied forces under Field Marshal Sir John French, commanding the British, and Gen. d'Amade at Percy-sur-Oise, about 25 miles north of Paris.

"The allies were drawn across the northern line with the centre at Percy. The British troops were on the left, and the French on the right. The former bad in front of them the Imperial Guard, under Crown Prince Frederick William.

"On both wings, it is reported, the allies were successful. The German left was held by the French and retired to the north.

"The Imperial Guard, who were ordered to surrender, were annihilated by the British. It is reported that the crown prince was in their midst."

The official bureau says: "Gen. Joffre's plans are being steadily carried out. The allied forces, acting on the offensive, have been successful in checking and forcing back in a northeast direction the German forces opposed to them."

The French War Office has made the following official statement:—

"The allies are now engaged in a general action on battle lines extending from Nantuil-le-Haudouin through Meaux, Szanne and Vitry-le-Francois, extending as far as Verdun.

"The fighting is very vigorous and the action of our own troops is powerfully assisted by the British army.

"The German troops, who had advanced day before yesterday and yesterday as far as the region of Coulommiers and La Ferte Gaucher, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, last evening were compelled to retreat.

The following official communication was issued last night:—

"First, the allies have advanced their left wing without energetic opposition from the enemy.

"Second, the situation is unchanged in our centre in the centre of Verdun, our forces alternately advancing and retreating. There have been some partial successes on our right in the Vosges.

"Third, the advancing troops and the allies defending Paris have had several combats on the Ourcq river with the results in favor of the allies.

"Fourth, the Minister of War has telegraphed to the governor of Maubeuge, expressing the Government's admiration for the heroic defence, and saying: 'You stop at nothing to prolong resistance until the hour of your approaching deliverance, which I hope will be soon.'

"The commander-in-chief has placed the name of the governor of Maubeuge in the order of the day for his splendid defence."

It was officially announced last night that the Germans are retreating from the line of Nanteuil-le-Hardouin to Verdun after a vigorous action with French and British troops.

An earlier official statement given out in Paris yesterday said that a general action had started on the line from Nanteuil-le-Hardouin to Verdun, a distance of 120 miles. It was then said that thanks to the vigorous action of the French troops supported by the British the Germans had "started retiring." Unofficial advices from Berlin also have indicated that a battle of tremendous importance was being fought in the territory described.

Senlis Evacuated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8. — The French Embassy announced yesterday that it had received a cablegram from its Government at Bordeaux saying that the French town of Senlis was evacuated by the allies, and that the north and south movement of the German army continues.

The despatch was as follows: "On Sept. 5 the north-south movement of the German armies continued. Coulommiers and Eportay are the bases of the German army. This army was attacked by us at Sanit Soupplets, on the right bank of the River Ourcq.

"Senlis has been evacuated by us. On the road from Montmirl to Chalons the second army has sent its advanced guard. As for the third and fourth, the heads of their columns are on the road from Chalons and Buray.

"The line of the fifth army has reached the road from Triancourt, moving through the Argonne. Our 20th corps was fighting at Gerberviller against the sixth German army."

NUMBERS FOR DRAWING CONTEST

One Prize Has Not Yet Been Claimed

The lucky numbers in the drawing contest in connection with yesterday's Labor celebration were 1388 and 1159. As yet the holder of the former has not turned up, while the second number was held by Mrs. W. H. Chambers, who received the gold ring donated by J. H. Burnham, M.P. The owner of ticket No. 1388 can claim the prize on applying at either of the evening newspaper offices.

The cultured young woman from Boston was trying to make conversation.

"Do you care for 'Crabbe's Tales'?" she asked.

"I never ate any," replied the breezy girl from the West, "but I'm just stuck on lobsters."

SERGT. DUNKERLY'S FAMILY AT LONDON

London, Sept. 8.—Mrs. (Sergt.) Dunkerley and her four children, of Peterborough, have come to live with her father, Harry Smith, of 1076 Trafalgar street, while Sergt. Dunkerley is at the front. He was ordered to join the regulars immediately after war was declared. His family will remain in the city while he is at the front.

This morning Mr. Smith was down town with two of his bright little grandchildren, and with Harry Smith, his son, who is at the School for the Blind.

"Where is your daddy?" asked the reporter of the pretty little girl.

"My daddy's at Quebec, to see the soldirs go 'way," she replied proudly. She did not know that in a short time her daddy would be on Europe's battlefields.

Sergt. Dunkerley was for a number of years at Wolseley Barracks.

GERMANS HAVE LOST GROUND

Violent Fighting on the French Centre With French Holding Their Ground

FRANCIS JOSEPH REPORTED DEAD

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 8.—It is reported unofficially in Paris this afternoon that the Germans to the east of the city have asked for an armistice to bury their dead and care for their wounded. It is understood this request has been refused by the allies.

Paris, Sept. 8.—Violent encounters have occurred on the French centre between Fere Champenois and Vitry le Francois, at the southern point of the forest of Argonne. The French have fallen back nowhere.

The Germans have lost ground.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY AT THE CARPATHIANS.

Paris, Sept. 8.—According to reliable advices which have reached here, Russian cavalrymen are now upon the crest of the Carpathian mountains.

ALLIES TAKE PRISONERS AND GUNS.

Paris, Sept. 8, 3.25 p.m. — The French and English troops engaged in the battle now progressing to the east of Paris have taken numerous prisoners, including a battalion of German infantry and a company serving rapid fire guns. They captured also many gun carriages.

EMPEROR DEAD—NEWS SUPPRESSED.

London, Sept. 8.—The African World, a weekly publication, has received information through what it regards as a reliable Austrian source, that the Austrian Emperor died twelve days ago. News of the Emperor's death was suppressed in Austria-Hungary, the paper says, on account of the dangerous international situation.

BELGIANS HELPING THE RUSSIANS.

Paris, Sept. 8.—A despatch from Petrograd to the Havas Agency here says the Belgian and Russian governments have entered into an agreement which authorizes Belgian reservists and recruits of 1914 to attach themselves to the Russian armies, which seems to bear out reports that Russian troops have been landed in Belgium.

MANOEUVRES OF GERMAN FORCES.

London, Sept. .8—The world's greatest puzzle to-day, says the Chronicle's Paris correspondent, is the disappearance southward of the German host which was supposed to be ready to dash itself against Paris. To the close student, it appears its incidental aim may be to reach the southern and somewhat less strongly fortified side of Paris, but I think, on the whole, it is larger and bolder than this.

In the first place, an official communication reveals that there are three German armies moving southward. Friday's communication stated that the enemy had reached LaFerte, passed Rheims and is passing along west of Argonne. It is evident that it cannot be the same army which reaches LaFerte, 35 miles from Paris, which passes Rheims, 85 miles from Paris, and which passes the Argonne forest, 125 miles from Paris.

The chief necessities of German tacticians now, are as follows:

First—To get out of reach of the Belgians.

Second—To keep as far as possible from the ever-increasing British contingent.

Third—To immobilize the army of Paris.

Fourth—To reduce the length of line of communication and recover a direct touch with Germany.

Fifth—While accomplishing these ends, to smash other French armies.

Sixth—When the German armies are united, to be able to march directly on either Berlin or Paris, as circumstances may direct.

The present movement to the eastward is apparently with the object of accomplishing these things. The German army which has come south from Mons will join, at Epernay, 15 miles southwest of Rheims, other German armies, of which we have so far heard nothing, but which evidently have been moving southward from Luxemburg and Ardennes.

This immense strategical overturn may involve the German abandonment of Belgium and northern France, but it immediately threatens the French armies before Vosges with a rear attack.

Left Wing of the Allied Forces Makes Progress

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. .8—An official communication issued at Paris this afternoon says that the left wing of the allied armies, comprising portions defending Paris, continues to make progress. The advance reaches from the banks of the river Ourcq into the region of Montmirail. The Germans are retiring in the direction of the Marne river, between Meaux and Sezanne. Near Vitry the movement of the retirement is confirmed on the Germans' side. On the French right the German division attacked Salins and [illegible], but was repulsed to the [illegible], passing the forest of [illegible]. Further to the east French troops re-occupied the crest of [illegible] and the pass of [illegible]. There is no change in the situation in the province of Alsace.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, SEPT. 8, 1914

WAR'S UNCERTAINTY.

IT APPEARS necessary that a word of caution should be addressed to the Canadian people at the present time. There seems to be some disposition to underrate the magnitude of the conflict and of the exertions which it will impose upon the people of this Empire.

It is only fair to give, as far as possible, a true and sober account of what is impending. Germany is a very strong power. Her population is one-third larger than that of either England or France. Her army, which proved its efficiency in 1866 and 1870, has in all the years which have passed since then been steadily working to improve itself, and been repeatedly enlarged. The German navy is the creation of many years and has had the special care both of the Emperor and of the people. No effort has been spared to raise it to the highest point of efficiency. The German people are united and determined.

Side by side with Germany stands Austria-Hungary, with a great army of the modern type, very different from that which was defeated in 1866. Austria-Hungary has also, of late years, begun to expand her navy. Against these two powers are arrayed on the continent the armies of France and Russia. That of Russia has been much increased during the last two years and is believed to have learned much during and since the war with Japan. It was at that time unequal in quality to the Japanese army, which had been trained under the auspices of German officers. Now it has to face the bulk of the Austro-Hungarian army and a part of that of Germany. It would be rash to predict the victory.

Meanwhile, Germany is hurling the bulk of her forces against France and reinforcing them by Austrian army corps. The French army is a creation of the present republic. It is admirably organized and trained, and incomparably better than that of Napoleon III, which failed in 1870. The spirit of the French, which has never been better since the mobilization was ordered on the 1st of August, will give it great force, and Frenchmen and Englishmen are justified in hoping for its victory. But in such a case, who can foretell the event? Even the best judge of troops, intimately acquainted with both armies, could not pronounce with certainty, unless he had had the opportunity of gauging the most important factor, the capacity of the German and French commanders-in-chief and of their staffs. But this is, as far as both armies are concerned, almost an unknown quantity, for none of the principal leaders of the two great continental armies has had personal experience of the command of armies in war.

Thus the Canadian people should keep in mind the element of uncertainty which always exists in war, and the need for that steady and unruffled determination which is ready alike for good and for ill-fortune. They should cultivate that fortitude which will meet with even mind whatever events are in store.

Lord Kitchener's speech of August 25th shows how great is the task before the British Empire. The existing forces, the royal navy and the regular army, have proved ready and are in position. But a new army has to be created and the navy has to be strengthened.

If the first great conflicts—for nothing that has yet happened has been more than a prelude—are favorable to the allies of England, great exertions will be needed to follow up and reap the benefits of a first success. If fortune should be less favorable, a gigantic effort will be needed to make good the ground lost. The first decisions cannot be far distant; but the war will hardly be short. The issues are so great that neither side will yield so long as the possibility of further efforts remain.

In short, there is every reason for Canadians to avoid showing an excited, feverish temper, unreasonably exhilarated if the day's news seems discouraging. Steady, cool-headed persistence is needed.

THE BRITISH NAVY.

PUBLIC OPINION in Great Britain is beginning to realise the enormous value of the services rendered already in the war by the British navy. The Naval and Military Record remarks on the fearful anticipations which, in the few days before the war began, filled all the United Kingdom that British shipping would be ruined and supplies of food and raw materials cut off. The most careful enquiry, said the Naval and Military Record, tended to confirm this anticipation; it was felt that we dare not—so great were the risks—be optimistic. In the months immediately preceding the outbreak of hostilities, a sub-committee of the committee of imperial defence considered in detail the problem of how the people of the United Kingdom were to be fed during war time. With the most expert evidence at their command, they came to the conclusion that the peril was a real one, and that the government ought to take precautionary measures in order to minimise it. One of the first acts of Mr. Asquith's administration, when war was inevitable, was to announce that the government itself would take 80 per cent. of the risk which shipping would run under the war conditions which were then developing. A war risk office was immediately opened, and a rate of five per cent. quoted. Day by day followed, and though it was known that several German cruisers were still at large, no news was received of any loss. Gradually the confidence of shipowners and shippers was re-established. Private firms showed no hesitation in undertaking war risks at a lower rate than the government office. Within a few days the premium fell from five to four guineas, and eventually it was brought down to three guineas. Even at this figure underwriters were prepared to undercut the government office. British shipping, which was at first disorganized by the dramatic circumstances under which war was declared, has since been resuming its normal course. As a nation, we may congratulate ourselves on the astounding victory which a supreme fleet won in insuring to us ample supplies of food and raw material, without striking a blow. Never was so remarkable a demonstration given of the vital importance of sea power to a people who live by and on the sea. The navy opened up a pathway for British trade, and at the same time and by the same process strangled the oversea trade of Germany.

THE BRITISH NAVY.

THAT THE CHILDREN of Great Britain should be taught to say: "Thank God and the British navy for my dinner," is the interesting suggestion that comes from the naval expert of the London Times. There is more point to the suggestion than is generally understood.

Today the British Government is able to publish lists of retail prices for food-stuffs above which no merchant dares to go. The prices are notably reasonable. The Government is able to take this action because of the splendid system of provisioning the country made possible by the maintenance of a free ocean by the British fleet.

In his reminiscences published a few months ago, former Imperial Chancellor Von Buelow of Germany remarks that Free Trade is a theory founded upon the idea that war is impossible. Great Britain has undertaken to make Free Trade a fact. She is not a self-supporting country in any sense of the word. She draws her food supplies from many countries by her splendid system of commerce. If she has got to have Free Trade, she has got to have also a fleet immensely superior to any other fleet or probable combination of fleets. Otherwise she is at the mercy of any nation which cares to make war on her. For everybody must admit now that war is a very lively possibility. Without an uninterrupted system of mercantile trade, such as is maintained at present by the grace of superior naval power, the British people would be starving. Canadian provinces might vote their hands off, but they could do nothing to aid.

The importance of pointing out this actual condition of affairs is obvious because Great Britain has always had a large number of men in public life who scream against all naval votes, particularly the most necessary large ones. These men have their reflectors in Canada. The first lesson of this war is that the British fleet cannot be too strong. From the greyhounds and bull-dogs in the North Sea today radiates the confidence that inspires Britons the world over. So long as we win out there, we can afford to lose everywhere else, because our victory will be all-important and our losses will be incidental.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SPEAKING at the directors' luncheon at the exhibition the other day, Hon. Geo. P. Graham admonished those before him not to be "business cowards," adding; "It is our duty to keep everything running as nearly as possible on full time." His words were timely, and it is a fact that some of those before him did not take kindly to his remarks.

A WORTHY MOVEMENT in Ontario is the organization of an industrial association, composed of representatives of the provincial and municipal governments, boards of trade and of the Canadian Manufacturers' association. The object of the association is "to see that the wheels of Ontario's industrial machinery are kept in motion as much as possible; that work not charity, should be given to the workless, and, above all, to seek the development of a better spirit of practical patriotism among government leaders, bankers and kings of industry."

Hearing Both Sides.

(The Square Deal.)

"So you don't call on Miss Bright any more. Quarrelled with her?"

"Well, not exactly, but I told her I preferred to have her kiss me before and not after she kissed her pet dog."

"What did she say?"

"She said I evidently forgot that the dog might have his preferences, too."

Waste Not, Want Not.

Scottish American.

The great cry of the American people today, and has been for the past few years, with ever-increasing intensity, is the high cost of living. The price of food has been going up all the time, and the complaint is that the wage-earners find it difficult to live decently. There is a good deal of truth in that. But then, on the other hand, there is an enormous amount of money spent for luxuries and unnecessaries, and some things that are injurious to health. Would you believe that in these days of the high price of food that the people of this country last year spent for luxuries and things not necessary the enormous sum of $5,000,000,000? What an amount of food and clothing that would buy. It would certainly have provided food for every poor family in this country for the year. And what was this $5,000,000,000 spent for? Here are the figures as given by Dr. Biederwolf:—Jewelry, $800,000,000; candy, $200,000,000; chewing gum, $21,000,000; soft drinks, $120,000,000; theatres, $750,000,000; tobacco, $1,200,000,000; millinery, $90,000,000; intoxicating liquors, $2,000,000,000.

No use complaining about the high cost of living when people spend immense amounts of money for such things as can be done without, without depriving the stomach of necessary food.

MEAN WORDS

By Walt Mason

It's ill to say unpleasant things about your noisome neighbors; for all your mean and thoughtless flings are edged like swords or sabres. The man you speak about will hear your words, all fraught with malice, and on your dome he'll put an ear, or, trying, bust his gallus. I used to roast my neighbor, Wax, as hard as I was able; I said he wasn't worth the tacks to nail him to his stable. Of course he heard the things I said, my observations dizzy, and now and then he punched my head, when he was not too busy. I tired of swellings on my brow, that old Bill Wax imparted; they grieved me sorely, and my frau was almost broken hearted. And so I changed my method, then, and called Bill Wax a dandy; I said he was the best of men, as sweet as sugar candy. Now, kindly, gentle words have wings, as swift, or pretty near it, as ugly words possessing stings, which jar and jolt the spirit. My pleasant words reached old Bill Wax, flew to him, fairly humming; no more he grabs his battle axe when he beholds me coming. I don't indulge in harsh words now, those words which tear like teasles; and Bill comes o'er and milks my cow, when I have got the measles.

MEN AT THE HEAD OF RUSSIA'S ARMY

Gen. Sukomlinoff and Grand Duke Nicholas Both Brilliant Cavalrymen.

Russia's gigantic army—numbering over six million men—is under the chief command of two men, namely, Gen. Sukomlinoff and the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaiovitch. The latter directs the operations in the field and the former remains at St. Petersburg as Minister of War.

Unlike most of his predecessors at the War Department, Sukomlinoff is a Slav and a Russian Nationalist. His work, until summoned from Kieff a few years ago to assume the task of reorganizing the military forces of Russia, as Minister of War, was entirely concerned with the strategic problem of the western frontiers of the Empire. He took part in neither the Chinese nor Japanese wars, nor in any of the Asiatic campaigns, but fought brilliantly in the Turkish war of 1877 under the celebrated Gen. Dragomiroff, whose favorite lieutenant he was and whom he succeeded in command of the south-western Provinces, with headquarters at Kieff.

Till he went to St. Petersburg as Minister he knew little or nothing of court circles, but reached the capital with the reputation of being the ablest strategist, the most clever organiser, and the most capable commander of the entire army, as the one man, above all others, destined to play an important role in the war with Austria and Germany. Of course he encountered numerous obstacles in his task of placing the Russian army upon a fighting basis, since it was necessary for him to remove many officers of high rank and political influence in order to make way for men more capable. The Czar, however, and Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaiovitch, realising the excellent work which he was doing, backed him up through thick and thin, and not even the sensational scandal in connection with the divorce of the lovely Mme. de Butkewitch, in which he played a leading role, and her subsequent marriage to him, were able to shake his position. By profession he is a cavalryman.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS NICHOLAIOVITCH

As for the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaiovitch, he is probably the tallest member of the reigning house of Russia, and looks what he is, a born cavalryman, spare of figure and of exceptionally distinguished bearing. He won the St. George's Cross for conspicuous gallantry on the battlefields of the Turkish war of 1877, is the eldest son of the late Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaiovitch, who commanded the Russian army in that campaign, and was for several years at the head of the military district of St. Petersburg and of the capital, and as such responsible for the safety of the Czar, the reigning house, and of the Government. Like Gen. Sukomlinoff, he is married to a divorcee, his wife, Grand Duchess Stana, one of the daughters of the King of Montenegro, having secured a dissolution of her union to the late Duke George of Leuchtenberg, in order to wed him.

The salt production of the United States last year was double the value of that of ten years ago.

To Work Gun Factory.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A despatch to The Chronicle from Amsterdam says that the Germans are preparing to re-open immediately the gun factories at Cockerill, near Liege. These factories, covering 375 acres, were among the richest prizes captured by the Germans in the war. The whole concern has been taken over by the Prussian War Office, which has offered the Belgian workmen fifty per cent. increase in wages to remain in their places.

Belgrade Still Holds Out.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Rome says that according to reports from Nish, Belgrade is still putting up a magnificent defence and giving an heroic example of the endurance of both the soldiers and the civilians. DR. ROBINSON GIVES HIMSELF UP TO PROVINCIAL POLICE SAYS HE IS INNOCENT OF CRIME

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—Dr. Clifford K. Robinson, charged with the murder of Miss Happy Yorke, of Tamworth, surrendered himself to Provincial Detective Greer yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The officer and the much-wanted doctor met by appointment on the steps of the city hall. During the time between his disappearance on or about July 18 Dr. Robinson has been in Ontario. Until seven or eight days ago he was at Kingston; then he came to Toronto and stayed at his brother's home. Detective Greer was put in charge of the Tamworth case when the body was found in the doctor's house. Within a few days ago he suspected Dr. Robinson was with relatives in and near Kingston and through friends of the doctor began negotiations for his surrender voluntary yesterday.

In giving himself up Dr. Robinson said he wanted to be relieved of the nerve-straining suspense to come forward voluntary was a relief. In a signed statement he avowed his innocence. In part he stated:

"If Blanche Yorke could speak she would tell the world that I was innocent of wrong-doing, but upon another man should rest a very heavy burden. I have no desire to conceal the truth, and when the time comes for me in court to give evidence in my behalf, I am certain that I will be able to satisfy the court of my innocence."

T. C. Robinette, K.C., has been retained to defend Dr. Robinson whose trial will likely be set for the fall assizes at Napanee, Sept. 22. A remand will probably be made until the spring sitting. The provincial authorities have their case ready now. "We have a good case against him," said Detective Greer.

Since the time of the crime Dr. Robinson has undergone a change. He is frailer and pale-looking. His three brothers, John W., William and George accompanied him yesterday.

RESISTANCE OF AUSTRIA IS BROKEN, SAYS THE RUSSIAN WAR OFFICE

Possibility of a Famine in Austria is Now Evident, Says Official Statement—Austrian Despatch Admits Capture of Lemberg and Says Huge Battle is Now in Progress Near Hrubieszow.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8.—The following official announcement was given out yesterday:—

"The Austrian army corps between the River Vistula and the River Bug are retreating with enormous [illegible]

"The resistance of the enemy has been broken.

"There are evidences of the possibility of a famine in Austria."

The Russian general staff, in an official communication, last night says:—

"In the sphere of operations around Rawawa (32 miles northwest of Lemberg, in Galicia), the Russian forces continue a number of serious engagements. The Austrian army which has been operating in the direction of Kholm is retiring, repulsed by the Russian troops, which have taken numerous prisoners, together with artillery and ammunition trains.

"Five hundred Austrian soldiers are in the hospitals suffering from dysentery, which is said to be ravaging the ranks of the enemy. On the German front there have been only insignificant skirmishes."

Awaiting Aid, Say Austrians.

VIENNA, Sept. 8.—The main Austrian army of invasion, commanded by Gens. Moritz von Auffenberg and Dankl, are desperately engaged today with an overwhelming Russian force between Hrubiescow, Russian Poland, and the Galician border.

The Russian troops are commanded by Gen. Rusky, who recently forced the Austrians to evacuate Lemberg, and it is stated here that the Russians outnumber the Austrians four or five to one. The Austrians are heavily entrenched and are fighting on the defence, pending the arrival of reinforcements from Germany.

Gen. Von Auffenberg in his official report admits that his armies are hard pressed.

In Galicia the Austrian forces on the San river have been reinforced and the Germans are bringing up their heavy guns. The centre of the Russian attack is the fortifications at Przenysl, west of Lemberg. The Austrian position there is heavily fortified and new guns have been mounted which command a sweep of the river. These guns proved very effective, and the Russian supply train was completely destroyed.

Surrounding Przenysl.

ROME, Sept. 8.—An official report from Russia says that Russian troops are surrounding Przenysl, a very strongly fortified town in Galicia, fifty miles west of Lemberg. It is known that the town soon will be taken by storm. The fall of Przenysl, it is said, would mean the loss of the last Austrian stronghold in Galicia. It would then clear the way to a Russian forward advance to the junction of their forces in the East Prussian frontier.

Unofficial news which has reached here states that the Austrians still continue their fight southwest of Lemberg.

Will Open Road To Berlin.

LONDON, Sept. 8. — The Times' correspondent wires from Petrograd that if the overthrow of the Austrian armies in the battle now raging in southern Poland is as complete as that around Lemberg, the road to Berlin will be wide open.

The Austrians have made despairing appeals to Germany for help.

Military observers in Russia believe that the German plans in France must be profoundly modified by Russia's successes in Galicia.

Fortifying Vienna.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—After the news of the fall of Lemberg became known in Vienna, the correspondent of the Havas Agency says more than 20,000 men were set to work with feverish haste on the fortifications of Vienna, and many thousands of others began fortifying the banks of the Danube.

REV. R. POGUE REFERS TO LOCAL CONDITIONS

pirates who are seizing the food supply of America do not instantly relax their hold, Congress should temporarily prohibit exports of grain and provisions. It is a crime to open new markets for men who, coldly calculating upon the forthcoming panic in those markets, are now, in a year of plenty, drawing blood from their own countrymen."

Our Government then ought to prevent that, and it ought to punish as traitors to their country, any who would make the attempt to make money out of their country's misfortunes. But it ought also to take immediate steps to prevent unemployment: to see that every man in the country who can work and is willing to work is given work. It is not for me to say how the Government can do this. But it can be done if our statesmen only set themselves seriously to consider ways and means of doing it.

2. Then our Mayor and councillors ought at once to begin such civic works as will give employment to men who ordinarily are engaged in such work. I appreciate the difficulties which our city officials have had in the way of getting money. I am now quite glad, however, to know that these difficulties are now being overcome and that the city will be able to give employment to a considerable number of men for some time to come.

Then our councillors and public men generally will render a patriotic service, as well as a service of brotherly love, if they will urge employers instead of dismissing their employees and curtailing their output to increase both workmen and output. That, too, can be done — at least in a number of departments of industry. There is really no reason why there should be unemployment in this country. The very fact that Germany and other countries are no longer shipping goods into Canada ought to lead our capitalists to set about the manufacture of these things at home, and so give employment to all our people.

And, then, where it is really necessary to limit the output, do not reduce the staff of workers. Work them short time if necessary. Short time is better than no time. But the man who overworks his employes just now in order to be able to dismiss others is not acting in a patriotic way.

And let what I am saying apply to help in the home. No householder is really doing a loyal service who dismisses her help and does all the work of the home herself in the hope of economizing. Now is the time to take on an extra servant if your money will at present permit it. Do not imagine that by doing all your own work in the home that you are really denying yourself for your country by doing so. Such conduct is on a par with the custom of some who deny themselves certain luxuries during Lent and then at the close of Lent, finding themselves ten or twenty dollars the richer, go and spend it on some other form of luxury. I can believe that at the close of this war there will be many who will be richer than they were before it began. But just to the extent that they will be richer others will be poorer, their country will be poorer. If there is to be any economizing — and there must be much of it,—let it be not in service but in luxuries. A noted social worker has said that this crisis is not going to be a crisis of high prices so much as a crisis of unemployment. Every Canadian, therefore, who in any way controls employment, whether it be the men who direct the policy of our banks and who withhold money from those who need it to keep the wheels of industry moving, or the storekeeper who dismisses help when he could well continue to give employment without becoming bankrupt, or the mistress who does without help which she could afford to engage, is really acting in an unpatriotic way, and is helping to create the distressful conditions which each might try to prevent.

Let me say this word also in the interests of us all and of our country, and specially of labor. Do not let us lose confidence in one another, in our God, or in the final outcome of the war. Henry Ward Beecher has a famous lecture on "Want of Confidence" in which he tried to show that the explanation of hard times and business depression was want of confidence on the part of the public. A member of the British Parliament who is a writer on, and a student of social questions says, "Secure in their island home, the British people are quite able to get on with their work, and it is the first duty of every man to act confidently and to endeavor to inspire confidence in others. The basis of trade is confidence, and it is a lamentable thing, where men of standing, and especially writers in the press, spread idle fears."

Again let me say: let us have faith in God and in one another. We are children of God, and though we may fail Him and act more like the children of the Evil One, He does not forsake us. He is watching over all. Not a sparrow falls to the ground without His notice. In quietness and confidence shall be our strength. God has not given us the spirit of fear but of power, of love and of a sound mind.

CHIEF ENGINEER OF G.T.R. RESIGNS

The resignation is announced of Mr. B. B. Kelliher, chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. The circular issued by Mr. Morley Donaldson, vice-president and general manager of the line, states that Mr. H. A. Woods, as assistant chief engineer, will assume charge of the engineering department of the railway, with headquarters at Winnipeg.

Mr. Kelliher's health has not been satisfactory for some time past, and he has, therefore, asked to be relieved of his duties in order that he may seek a complete rest. Few men have had such a strenuous career. For 30 years Mr. Kellliher has been engaged in railway construction and is to-day recognised as one of the foremost mountain engineers of his generation. His work has taken him out with the pioneers on surveys through the wildest regions of the continent, and superintending the work of the great railway armies, he has lived for long periods under the most trying conditions of climate and environment. For 10 years he has been actively engaged in the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the great work which called for the finest engineering talent that could be procured. For nine of these years Mr. Kelliher has been the engineer in charge of this immense construction scheme. A few days after his appointment as chief engineer, the first sod of the Grand Trunk Pacific was turned at Manitoba Sand Hill. That was on August 28, 1905, and the laying of the steel began in September, 1906, at Portage la Prairie. In winter and in summer the railway builders pushed forward with their twin ribbons of steel towards the Rocky mountains. The first 800 miles to what is now the city of Edmonton presented comparatively few problems, but 250 miles west of Edmonton range after range of seemingly impenetrable mountains reared their heads. In May, 190,8, another construction army began its work at Prince Rupert, working eastward, along the rocky banks of the Skeena river and through the coast range. In April of this year the east and west trail blazers met and the last spike was driven at Nechako Crossing, marking the practical completion of the most modern of transcontinental railways.

Mr. Kelliher was born in Ireland and educated at Dublin university. After serving as an apprentice to a civil engineer in Dublin and being engaged on the surveys for the Mitchellstown and Fermoy, and the Galway and Clifton railways, he proceeded to the United States. From 1886 to 1890 he was with the Union Pacific railway, and from 1890 to 1896 was assistant engineer of the Northern Pacific road on the Cascade and Pacific divisions. After further experience as division engineer of the Oregon Short Line, he was chosen for the difficult task of locating a line through the mountains of Colorado from Denver to Salt Lake City, for the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific railway, joining the Grand Trunk Pacific on the completion of this work, as division engineer at Winnipeg.

Yankee Ware Improves.

Figures made public by the United States Geographical Survey show that the pottery production in 1913 was the largest in the history of the industry. This is believed to be due to the improved texture, finish, color and decoration of the American product, which now equals, if it does not surpass, most of the best of the imported ware.

LORD KITCHENER'S GREAT COLLECTION OF CHINA WARE

Although Lord Kitchener is the busiest man in London at this moment he has had to find time to engage a new housekeeper for Broome Park. He had much difficulty before he found the ideal, having interviewed nearly a hundred. Finally he dropped on a treasure. It is said Kitchener selected her because she wore a bonnet and had her hair plastered down smooth as you please, all the other applicants having their locks "done" in the latest style, crowned with smart millinery. To the majority of the aspirants he never uttered a word, but just nodded, not unkindly, and indicated to them to pass on!

The new housekeeper is responsible for every little bit of china in his wonderful collection, and she has strict orders that not a soul is to touch it or dust it but herself. He is just crazy over china, but that's an old story. What a business man he is. Every scrap of the collection and indeed everything else he possesses is insured, and since he has been in England this time he has had several fresh policies made out.

It does not look very much as if he was going to marry, for I heard, the other day, he had made a new will — he is quite rich, having saved since the days he was a lieutenant — and it seems the bulk of his fortune is to go to the nation.

He is the man of the hour, and runs in and out of Buckingham Palace as if he were an intimate relative of the royal family and has tea with the Queen when he can possibly manage to do so. Wherever he resides his little camp bedstead is put up in his room, the floor of which has not a vestige of carpet and the furniture is just such as is used in camp. Several of our great soldiers live in this way, notably Lord Roberts and Lord Methuen. This is in order that they should not miss luxuries if they have to go into active service.

Pointers on Feathers

The tail and wing feathers of turkeys are used mostly in making dusters.

Feather boas are made from white chicken feathers curled with hot irons.

Milliners buy white chicken wing and tail feathers, and many white turkey feathers, which they either curl or let straight and dye different colours.

Muffs, fans, and featherbone also call for use of feathers.

In handling turkey feathers, an authority says the body plumage should be kept separate and the long wing feathers left by themselves. The tail feathers should also be divided from the rest; it does not take very many of these to weigh a pound.

What dealers call "skirt" feathers are those just in front of the large, stiff tail plumage.

Turkey wing feathers have a special classification.

In shipping, the tail plumage is generally made up into a special bundle.

Pointers are stiff feathers from three to six inches long.

If the feathers are "quilly" (that is, if there are many stiff ones among the body feathers), there is a reduction of price in the market.

It is estimated that five chickens will yield a pound of feathers.

By the introduction of ventilating devices a lead smelter works in Hungary reduces the illness among its employes from 73 per cent. to three per cent.

A new bracket to hold a broom clear of a floor is provided with a lock to prevent theft.

SLEEP AS AN AID TO BEAUTY

A great part of your life is spent in sleep. If you didn't sleep you wouldn't have any life, and if you don't sleep well you can't live well. The way to sleep well is to act well.

It isn't your good deeds that keep you awake. Conscience can murder sleep, but before conscience can do its deadly work you have to give it something to work on. Take a good thought to bed with you, the remembrance of something beautiful, the desire for something better.

If you have failed in something during the day, don't worry about it. Thrust out the morbil thoughts and fill their place with thoughts of the good things, the big things you are going to do the next day.

Don't think too much about sleeping when you go to bed. Lie down grateful for the rest that is coming, grateful for the ending of the day, and hopeful for the dawning of the morrow. If your mind has been freed from painful thoughts, sleep will come without coaxing.

Don't try to solve any vexing problems after you get to bed. Your mind will be much clearer in the morning. Save your worries for when, refreshed by sleep, you can approach them with renewed mental and physical vigor. Keep each worry in its own day.

Fresh air helps to soothe mind, and body, and induce sleep. Keep your windows open. Unless there is a decided draft you won't catch cold. Don't use drugs. There is nothing more harmful. Practise self-control, keep your mind at rest, and you will sleep like a child.

Remember: Sleep is Nature's own remedy for weak bodies and brains.

HOW GOLD WAS STACKED UP ALL READY FOR WAR

Bullion Was Gradually Accumulated For Months by Great Powers.

Nowadays the "sinews of war" are money bags to a greater extent than exer before. Given the more or less certain prospect of war, how does a first-class Power go about the accumulation of gold through its leading financial institutions, the national banks?

The answer is to be found in the financial history of Europe during the last year and a half, which was, as we all know, one of extreme tension in world politics, with the possibility of the General war, which has now broken out, on the immediate horizon. It is said that, in 1913, the Kaiser summoned the Governor of the Imperial Bank and asked him whether German banks were equipped for war. When he was told they were not, he is said to have replied grimly, "When I ask that question again, I want a different answer."

Getting Ready.

With this broad hint echoing in his ears the leading German banker set to work. By maintaining a discount rate of 6 per cent. at the Imperial Bank from Jan. 1 to Oct. 27, 1913, by active bidding at the London gold auctions for the gold which arrived weekly from South Africa, and by several changes in monetary legislation, the gold was steadily piled up, which might enable the Governor of the bank to answer "yes" when again asked whether German finance was equipped for war.

From a gold fund of $184,000,000 on Dec. 31, 1912, the Imperial German Bank increased its reserve to $336,000,000 on June 30, 1914. From different sources it accumulated another $30,000,000, which it gave the Government to be added to the $30,000,000 of bullion lying for so many years in the vaults of the Julius Tower at Spandau, Germany's national war chest, which had been ready for instant use since 1871.

Against this $60,000,000 the government issued small notes which were not, however, secured by the gold in the event of war.

France and Russia were meanwhile not at all behind in the work of gathering the world's surplus gold to be added to their reserves. Russia and France were from the beginning in a much stronger position in respect to gold than Germany, even at the outbreak of the war. France piled up her gold holdings in eighteen months from $616,000,000 to $792,000,000, and Russia, with a reserve already approximating $800,000,000, materially increased the amount.

Russia began getting her house in order by withdrawing the large balances which she had kept in German, French, and English banks, and which in time of peace she had counted as a part of her gold reserve, having the same security as coin and bullion in the vaults of the Treasury or the State Bank.

Austria-Hungary has not undertaken, under the monetary reform of 1892, to pay gold freely in the redemption of notes, and her gold fund of approximately $250,000,000 has remained comparatively unchanged in amount.

The entire gold production of the world during the eighteen months ended on June 30, 1914, was approximately $705,000,000. Of this amount, about $200,000,000 is required for the arts and $150,000,000 went to British India. This left about $355,000,000 to be applied to monetary uses, and the whole of this amount was absorbed by the four great central banks of Germany, France, Russia, and Austria-Hungary.

Issued Small Notes.

As far back as 1908 Germany had begun the taking of steps to insure the fullest support from her banks in the event of a European war. She did this by issuing small notes which gradually supplanted gold in the currency and she also made the notes of the Imperial Bank legal tender. The small note policy became so popular that eventually this circulation rose to about 26 per cent. Russia pursued the same policy with regard to small notes and the consequent gold reserve in the State Bank was increased, in five years, by $170,000,000. Belgium, too, followed the same course, whereas France deferred similar action until such time as war should break out. The Bank of England still pays gold for notes, but the general policy of keeping gold in circulation has been abandoned.

So that the actual outbreak of hostilities finds the national banks of the belligerents in a strong position so far as their gold reserves are concerned. It will not be the purpose of these countries to carry on the war by issues of paper money. Gold has been husbanded against needless duns and as a guarantee of national solvency. To issue large amounts of paper currency means to increase the price of commodities required by the government for war purposes, ultimately to impoverish labor, and to place a burden upon national finance. Taxation accumulated funds and loans will continue to furnish the money necessary to finance the war.

Role of Aircraft in Present War

Up to the present the aeroplanes and dirigibles have not played the decisive role in the war that many enthusiasts predicted. Three or four dirigibles have been brought down by the allies; several aeroplanes have been winged by both sides; a French birdman, the famous Garros, drove his machine into the gas bag of a huge German dirigible and both plunged to the earth; a German dirigible has been dropping bombs in Antwerp, injuring a few non-combatants. That is the history of this new weapon to date. Of course it is impossible to say what valuable information regarding the opposing armies has not been gathered by aeroplane scouts. That will not be known until after the war, but we have heard in one important battle where the French army found it necessary to change its plans owing to the unexpected appearance of a large German army. Since the French army was well supplied with aeroplanes, it would appear that the [illegible] had not been well done when a large German army was permitted to get close to the French lines before being discovered.

Accuracy in Bomb Dropping.

In the Balkan war aeroplanes did some useful scouting, but both balloons and aeroplanes were rather a disappointment when it came to offensive warfare. It was found that the bombs were not dropped with any degree of accuracy, and that many of those that were accurately placed failed to explode. Of course the flying corps of the armies engaged in the Balkan war are not to be compared for assumed effectiveness with those that are employed in the present struggle, and it may be that before the war is over the claims of enthusiastic aeronauts will be vindicated. Hudson Maxim, the inventor, is of opinion that the aircraft will cut little figure, because the aim of the bomb droppers will be poor. The world's record in bomb dropping, so far as we were aware, was made by Lieut. Riley E. Scott, an American, who invented a device for dropping explosives, and who won the French Michelin bomb dropping contest. He dropped twelve out of fifteen 15-lb. bombs in a 60-ft. target from a height of 800 feet. Now, an aeroplane that is within 800 feet of the ground would be easy prey for marksmen, and one of the guns that have been specially invented to operate against aeroplanes would bring it down in a few seconds. If the aeroplane flies at a much greater height, apparently, the bombs will be cast at random.

It is upon their dirigibles that the Germans chiefly depend. They have a well organized fleet of these craft, consisting of four squadrons of four balloons each, with two held in reserve. Each ship is commanded by a military or naval officer, with two lieutenants. Four helmsmen work in relays; two helmsmen attend to nothing but the rudders for horizontal steering. An engineer and four assistant engineers handle the motors, of which, on the latest Zeppelins, there are five of 1,000 horse-power each. There are two wireless operators, a couple of machinists and from three to six gunners, according to the size of the ships. Each of them carries from four to five tons of explosives, and the marine dirigibles convey as much as eight tons. The bombs are dropped with much greater accuracy from the dirigibles than from the aeroplanes, for the simple reason that the dirigibles can float motionless in the air while the bombs are released. It is claimed that from a height of 5,000 feet bombs can be dropped into a circle of fifteen feet, although this seems incredible.

For Night Attacks.

It seems likely that the dirigibles will be used chiefly for night attacks, as was the case in Antwerp; but of course when lights are extinguished much of the bomb-dropping will be chance work. If they are thwarted, they may adopt the time-honored method of naval attack and through the night will approach the spot they mean to attack and as soon as it is dawn begin to hurl their explosives overboard. It is not likely that the dirigibles will do much daylight fighting, for they can be put out of business easily by the aeroplanes, some of which mount quick-firing guns. The aeroplane is faster than the dirigible, and is not so readily put out of action. It was found in the Balkan war that the piercing of the wings of an aeroplane with bullets did not greatly interfere with its effectiveness.

Moreover, modern military aeroplanes have been equipped with light armor plate, which will turn bullets from their vital spots. The dirigible, on the contrary, carries no armor, and a mere fragment of shell, or a bullet well placed, is likely to destroy the gas bag and bring the monster to earth. Up to the present it is said Germany has spent $28,000,000 on aircraft for military purposes; France has spent $22,000,000, and Russia $12,000,000. Italy has spent $8,000,000, Austria $5,000,000, and Great Britain $2,500,000. In both France and Germany there have been public subscription in addition. Last year the nations now engaged in war spent together the immense sum of $22,000,000 upon dirigibles and aeroplanes. A considerable part of this amount went for experiments, the fruit of which is yet to be seen. For instance, it is said that France has developed a gun to be used against aircraft. It hurls peculiar bullets that fly out in all directions, and then explode, releasing knives and hooks that are calculated to do more damage than ordinary bullets or fragments of shells. — Mail and Empire.

Shears with their handles extended to one side have been invented to enable a person to follow a pattern more closely.

LITTLE THOUGHT OF DANGER AS THE SHELLS FALL

Vivid Impression of What Modern Warfare Means

A vivid impression of what modern warfare means is given by the following letter, written by a wounded French soldier.

"I am in a field hospital now with a nice little hole in my left shoulder. It feels as if some playful joker had touched it with a lighted cigar.

"The wound is washed and dressed by a pretty little dressmaker who has turned nurse. She is so sweet and lovely and kind-hearted that one should like to get wounded for the sole purpose of being nursed and bandaged.

"Part of our army was marching along the broad sunny road toward Charleroi. The road was bordered on either side by a vast cultivated plain, where little groups of peasants were harvesting.

"The peasant girls and the old men were as busy as if there was nothing but peace on earth.

Army Looked Like Serpent.

"Sometimes when we reached an elevation I looked backward and saw our army like a huge serpent, cover the road for a distance of many miles.

"The hearts of the troops were light, but their faces were grave. Everyone felt that he was engaged in an action on which the fate of nations depended.

"There were many jokes, for the French soldier is always bright, lively, happy and brave.

"The commissary is perfect and the men have been so excellently looked after that the soldiers' spirits have been kept up in good shape.

"In a distance on our left clouds of dust hover over the field and now and again our ears catch the sound of moving troops, and the trampling of horses' feet. Apparently they are moving parallel with our columns. It is rumored that they are British troops, but nobody knows but the commanders, and they keep silent.

"We know not even where we go.

"Heavy cannonading is heard ahead, and it becomes more frequent as we advance.

"Aides bearing despatches gallop by us every few minutes.

Could See Enemy.

"Arriving at the crest of the hill we drop ourselves there. Right in front of us on the opposite hill and advancing into the valley below is the enemy.

"Their advance is covered by the artillery on the hills behind them. A mighty roar behind us shows that our own artillery is coming into action, shelling the valley below.

"It is strange that in the face of death and destruction I catch myself trying to make out where the shells are falling, as if I were merely an interested spectator at a rifle competition. I was not the only one experiencing these strange feelings. I saw many curious faces all around me bearing expressions full of interest like an audience highly fascinated by a theatrical performance.

"These impressions crossed my mind in a thousandth part of a second, followed by numerous others, always alien from the seriousness of what is happening. The human mind is inexplicable.

"We begin to shoot. Between rounds I hear many funny expressions used, proving that the speakers' thoughts are far from a realization of the terrible facts. It is not heartlessness or anything like that.

"Volley after volley we sent at the enemy.

Queer Sensation.

"The German bullets passed mostly over our heads. Instinctively we stopped, although when one hears a bullet it has already passed. It is a queer sensation when one is first in a rain of bullets.

"We are ordered to advance. Alternately dropping ourselves to the ground to fire and then jumping to our feet to rush across the open, we gradually approach the enemy.

"The earth now is shaken by incessant cannonading. The air is torn by the continuous roar of rifle fire. We rush forward to seize a piece of ground surrounded by low dykes.

"Half way across the intervening space I was struck and lost consciousness. I only regret that I could not have seen the finish of this my first battle. But I will be back on the line again—and I hope it may be on the first fighting line and that I may have my old comrades by my side."

NAPOLEON'S MAXIMS

The following are some of Napoleon's maxims, taken from H. A. L. Fisher's "Napoleon."

"Unity of command is a first necessity of war."

"Love is the occupation of the idle man, the distraction of the warrior, the stumbling block of the sovereign."

"The first quality of a commander-in-chief is a cool head."

"He lies too much. One may very well lie sometimes, but always is too much."

"A great captain ought to say to himself several times a day: 'If the enemy appear on my front, my right or my left, what should I do?' If he finds himself embarrassed, he is ill posted."

Following an Army

The track of an army over any country is disgusting; the dirt of it is hopelessly foul. Even the odd places where a few trains stop in war time become unclean. When an army tramps it leaves a dirty mark far each way on the right and left of it.

The Man Who Keeps His Head

There's a man who fights for England,
And he'll keep her still atop,
He will guard her from dishonour
In the market and the shop,
He will save her homes from terror
On the fields of Daily Bread,
He's the man who sticks to business
He's the man who keeps his head.

Let the foe who strikes at England
Hear her wheels of commerce turn,
Let the ships that war with England
See her factory furnace burn,
For the foe most fears the cannon
For his heart most quails with dread,
When behind the man in khaki
Is the man who keeps his head.

Brand him traitor and assassin
Who with misor's coward mood,
His his gold locked up in secret
And his larders stored with food,
Who has cast adrift his works
Who lies sweating on his bed,
And who snarls to hear the laughter
Of the man who keeps his head.

Let the poor man teach the rich man
For the poor man's constant strife,
Is from day to day to seek work
Day by day to war with life,
And the poor man's home hangs ever
By a frail and brittle thread,
And the poor man's often hungry
But the poor man keeps his head.

When the ships come back from slaughter.
And the troops march home from war,
When the havoc strewn behind us
Threats the roar that lies before,
Every hero shall be welcomed
Every orphan shall be fed
By the man who stuck to business
By the man who kept his head.

—A. G. Spiller.

KHAKI COLOR IS DUE TO ACCIDENT OVER A WASHING

Khaki, the dun-colored material now so widely used for military uniforms, was discovered by an accident. For many years the British troops in India wore a cotton cloth of a greenish-brown, but it always faded when washed with soap.

While talking over this defect with some British officers a business man from England said that a fortune awaited the manufacturer of a cotton drill that would not fade. One of the officers—a young man—took the hint.

When he got home he employed a skilful dyer, and the two began a systematic search for an olive dye that when fused on cotton cloth, would not yield to soap or soda. They spent years in experiments, but without success, and had almost begun to give up hope.

One day, however, they found among numerous scraps of dyed cloths one that retained its color under the most severe tests. The puzzling part of it was that this scrap had been taken from a piece of cloth which had gone through the same processes, but which had failed when tested. For a long time the experimenters tried to solve this riddle. The one bit of cloth mentioned was the only piece that kept its color against all attacks.

Finally, by the merest chance, they hit upon the secret. The dye in which this scrap had been dipped had remained for a time in a metal dish of a peculiar kind. This metal, in combination with the chemicals of the dye, had furnished the very thing needed. They made the experiment with other pieces, the dye held, and their fortunes were mad.

Electrical apparatus has been invented by a Californian to operate phonograph and motion-picture projector in unison so that phonograph records and pictures illustrating them will be produced simultaneously.

GIANT STURGEON IS CAUGHT BY INDIANS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. W. J. Speers, of London, Eng., whose knowledge of Western Canada dates back to 1880, has just completed a tour over the Grand Trunk Pacific railway between Winnipeg and Prince Rupert. Mr. Spears made this journey with a view to obtaining for those interested in England the latest data on the natural resources of the territory opened up by the new transcontinental railway as it passes through British Columbia.

"In their scenic beauty," said Mr. Spears, "these regions have a wonderful asset. There is not a monotonous moment on the trip. Scene after scene unfolds itself—lake, mountain, wooded glen and glacier. The valleys are wide, allowing the full majesty of the peakes to be realized. In these valleys are areas of gently sloping land of a soil admirably suited for agriculture. In their richness they reminded me of the valley of the Nile. Dairying and mixed farming have a bright future there and I feel convinced that British Columbia's greatest centres of population will eventually be situated along the lines of this railway.

"Berries of all kinds grow wild in the greatest profusion, and the flowers are similar in their beauty to those found in Switzerland. There is ample lumber to assure the success of the sawmills, which are rapidly making their appearance at various points. Mineral wealth is also being developed, while the rivers teem with fish. I was brought up in a trout country, but I have never enjoyed fishing such as I did on this trip. The trout in northern British Columbia is of a quality, texture, size and fighting nature that makes him a king among fish. While fishing on the Nechako river I came upon a party of Indians. They had just landed four giant sturgeon. The largest of these was nine feet long and weighed 300 pounds. I secured a photograph of this fish after it had been killed. It would appear that Canada has no reason to go to Russia for its caviare when such sturgeon as these can be caught."

Use Dog Teams to Draw Machine Guns

Various methods for the transportation of machine guns have been employed by the different military Powers: wagons, draught and pack animals, motors, and soldiers' backs. The Belgians have lately experimented with dog teams, and the results seem to be very satisfactory. The guns and the ammunition are carried on light two-wheeled carts, each drawn by a pair of dogs.

The dogs are harnessed with yoke and breast strap, giving the animals great freedom and ease and at the same time, being closely coupled complete control is secured. On good roads or in open country the driver may ride. It has been shown that the rate of march compares favorably with that of horse-drawn guns.

The advantages claimed for the dog teams, aside from the cheapness, are that they may be used in country which would be impassable for larger animals; they present a smaller target for hostile fire and can utilize scanter and lower cover in going into position. Well trained dogs pay no attention to hostile fire.

In some cases where it would be impossible for the teams and driver to cross a fire-swept zone the dogs and guns have been held back under cover while the driver worked forward to a position by crawling and taking advantage of every possible cover. Once in a position the driver whistles, the dogs are released, and cross the open space at a run to join their master.

Holland is also experimenting with dog teams for machine guns.

FATE OF A TRAITOR

German Soldier Had Red Cross Badge

In a long and vivid description of the fight near Ostend, Mr. H. Donohoe records in the London Daily Chronicle a dramatic incident, which an hour later had a tragic sequel. Amongst the first of the uniformed soldiers coming from a motor-car that had taken part in an unsuccessful dash on the town was a tall man of six feet, dressed in service grey uniform and wearing the long boots of a Uhlan. As he ran he flung away a belt containing a Mauser pistol and cartridges, and he was seen to make frantic efforts to tear off a Red Cross badge which he was wearing on his left arm.

He was captured; and the proceedings of a hastily convened court-martial lasted barely five minutes. The three officers, stern-faced and silent, listened intently to the recital of the charge.

"'Have you anything to say?' asked the president. The Uhlan admitted having been taken with arms and a Red Cross badge on his arm, but denied having used his weapon to shoot Belgian combatants. An examination of his weapon, however, showed that it had been recently fired. There was a hurried whispered conversation between the members of the court-martial; the two junior members nodded their heads in assent. Slowly and deliberately, the General spoke: 'You have doubly merited death because of your conduct. You are utterly unworthy of mercy; therefore, I can show you none. You must die, and the sentence will be carried out immediately.'

"The accused man seemed to reel, but by a superhuman effort he pulled himself together and tried to speak, but the words stuck in his throat. He saluted with his left hand, and was led away muttering something which was inaudible. Fifteen minutes later he had ceased to live."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GOOD DEEDS.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Wil you allow me as an ordinary outsider to say how much pleasure it gave me to see that the young men of the Y.M.C.A. took flowers to the sick. If we could all only realise that it is better at least for one claiming to be a Christian, to give than to receive how different would our conduct be. Women of course have always done so. Yet we know it is the only way.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

PRAYERS ON WEDNESDAY.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Please ask the ministers to put dumb animals in their prayers on Wednesday. I think if the Creator knew how they were going on cruel to each other He would stop it. In fact I would suggest, Sir, that it would be a good idea if we asked to have all things wound up as I can see nothing but trouble ahead the way the women are going on too. If God made a mistake in starting the universe off wrong and letting the devil and a woman spoil the moral nature of man what has that got to do with physical nature? Why should that be so far as God had to do with it and not man or man's forbears, just a wild holocaust of murder and pillage. Sure Eve and her husband did not wreck the whole universe but only the people here but yet it all looks the same through the scope. Let us pray to have it all changed and when mankind is born again what will the universe look like. Will it be the same? and will the animals stop? I am not so sure. It may be after all that if we want to behave ourselves we had better just try.

PATRIOTIC FUND.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—May I add a word to the many suggestions about the Patriotic Fund.

First, I believe this is a national affair and should be dealt with by the nation, if not by the nation, then by the province and if not by either of these, then by the community and by the community I mean not only the City of Peterboro but at least the whole county of Peterboro. The city has no right to monopolise this duty nor to bear the full brunt of it. The duty or privilege of providing for the victims of the war belongs just as much to the county as the city.

The contingent represents not the defence of the city any more than the county.

Now I do not wish to deprive any person the privilege of contributing individually to such a noble and patriotic purpose. There is nothing to prevent any person or persons taking it upon themselves to look after a family or families, paying them weekly or monthly such sums as will supply their need and if they add comforts, so much the better.

There is a considerable sum already subscribed. How long will it last? Will the citizens keep sending in reserves so that the original fund will not be annihilated? If not is there not a danger of the hardships we have already heard of being repeated?

If such a contingency arises where are the funds to come from? To my mind the suggestions of the Board of Trade extended to include the whole county is the only and proper way.

Why should not the county levy a special war-tax rate as well as the city? I believe the farmers of the county, who alone are reaping and will reap a benefit from this war, would readily back up their council in anything they would do in this regard. It's worth trying. And I believe these farmers would realise their responsibility and nobly rise to it with honour and credit to themselves.

I do not know whether it is the intention of those who have contributed to repeat at stated intervals but it appears to me that if each contributor would pledge a weekly or monthly amount and pay it in to the treasurer regularly, it would greatly simplify matters for the committee who is administering the fund.

Having made this suggestion, I propose to live up to it and will pay the sum of $1.00 per week, paying it weekly or monthly, as desired, during the period of the war, or until notified to the contrary. Should such a course be considered preferable to a lump sum by the committee. I consider the monthly or weekly plan is the ideal way, unless the Board of Trade plan, including the county, as suggested is adopted.

Yours truly,
DEAD HEAD.

Peterboro, 7th Sept., 1914.

BOTH SHOULD HELP.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—A largely attended meeting of the citizens of Waterloo, Ont., was held, at the call of the mayor, for the purpose of forming a branch of the Canadian Patriotic society. As we all know, Waterloo is principally composed of Germans, either by descent or birth, of whom the mayor is one. Not only did they form a patriotic league, but the meeting was most enthusiastic. All the patriotic airs of the British Empire were rendered by their band and vigorously encored, thus showing their admiration of our free institutions in common with the rest of us. Among other things, the mayor announced that the council had decided to insure to the extent of $1,000 every volunteer going to the front from Waterloo, and that any dependents would be properly cared for during their absence. This, together with the $20,000 voted by the York county council, and other benefactions throughout Ontario, ought to be an incentive for the mayor and council of the city of Peterborough to greater efforts, and to the warden and council of the county of Peterborough to a single effort, which they have not yet made, while enjoying the peace and prosperity afforded by the folds of the British flag, which has braved for a thousand years the battle and the breeze, and in defence of which our brave volunteers are fighting.

Yours, etc.,
GENEROSITY.

Sept. 8, 1914.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Please tell an old reader if the prayer meeting on Wednesday is for the purpose of dictating to the Most High. We are supposing that God has no duty to the world, or, if He has, that He will not do it unless begged to do it. Now, if He knows what is best for us, and is willing to do it, what is there left for us to ask Him to do? The idea that the Great Jehovah is standing on one side, waiting for us to think of what we ought to have, when, as finite beings, we do not know it, is a poor one. If we say our prayers as a confession of dependence, well and good, but if we are going to take it for granted that God will not do the right thing unless we ask Him to do so, I think we are going too far.

Is the prayer to ask for peace at any price—right or wrong? If so, I will fight it as a danger and a wickedness. But if it is to have the wicked turned from murdering the innocent, then I am ready to join in; only why is God wantonly letting the guilty murder the innocent? There is little use praying to anybody like that.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOMAS TEBB.

Mrs. Thomas Tebb, of Washington Territory, U. S. A., passed away at the home of her brother, Mr. William Rutherford, whom she was visiting at Nelson, B. C. The late Mrs. Tebb, who was a sister of Mrs. B. Shortly, of this city, was born in Peterborough and resided here for a number of years. Her husband and family survive.

MRS. WM. WOODS.

Peterboro friends will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. William Woods, of Toronto, on Sunday. The late Mrs. Woods was before her marriage, Miss Emma Mabel Pedlar and she resided in this city.

PARENTS BEREAVED.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ivey, will sympathize with them in the death of their infant daughter, Gladys Myrtle, which occurred yesterday. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence, 658 Aylmer St., to Norwood Cemetery.

SUDDEN CALL TO NIGHTWATCHMAN

Geo. Mitchell Was Stricken Early This Morning

George A. Mitchell who resided at the corner of Lake and George Sts., dropped dead this morning about 4.15 while walking south on Stewart Street between Townsend and Wolfe. Deceased had been employed as nightwatchman with the Lundy Shovel and Tool Co. and about 3.30 this morning had a weak spell. He left the factory and proceeded to the residence of a fellow employee named Ward who lives at 147 Stewart Street. He arrived there and requested Ward to come to work in his place and also phone for Dr. Eastwood. Mitchell started to return to the factory but had proceeded only a short distance when he fell. Ward who left his home about five minutes later found the body on the sidewalk. The Police Department and Dr. Eastwood were notified and the latter decided that death was due to heart trouble or a hemorrhage of the brain.

The late Mr. Mitchell was born in the township of Emily, County Victoria some 62 years ago but had resided in Peterboro for over half a century. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Bruce Lee, 213 Charlotte Street, also two brothers, Robert James and Thomas both of this city, to mourn his sudden demise. The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon from the residence of Mrs. Lee to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock by the Rev. R. Pogue.

REV. F. J. SAWERS HAD INTERESTING TRIP TO ENGLAND

Rev. F. J. Sawers, who has just returned from England, where he took a special course at Oxford and visited important cities in England and Scotland, reports having had a very enjoyable vacation.

After the college course, which was taken by 130 Church of England clergymen from all parts of the world, Rev. Mr. Sawers visited many of the historic points in England, the cathedrals and colleges, all of which were of special interest to him.

In spite of the war, business continues, and the British public now thoroughly realise the tremendous conflict in which they are taking part.

Great enthusiasm is evidenced everywhere at the gifts from Canada.

Cities and towns are filled with soldiers, and they present a wonderful sight as regiment follows regiment. Mr. Sawers saw many of these soldiers and also much of the fleets.

The Boy Scouts, he says, are doing a great and useful work, as they act as messengers. At all bridges and tunnels, the guards, with fixed bayonets, are to be seen.

Rev. Mr. Sawers spent three weeks in the east end of London and for five Sundays preached in the churches of the East End. He also visited Sir Conan Doyle and Lady Doyle.

He was impressed very much with the politeness of the people and their hospitality.

WHY NOT?

The policy of selling city debentures to citizens for the purpose of raising money for public works was agreed upon. Why is it not carried out? Does the council wish to wait until the frost comes and money spent will be practically thrown away? Why is an opportunity not given to people of buying debentures and WHY is work not gone on with? There will be a day of reckoning with the unemployed if something is not done in such a crisis as this.

GEORGE ARLISS.

Will portray the part of Disraeli, in Louis N. Parker's great play of that name.

George Arliss and his company under the management of the Liebler Company, will present Louis N. Parker's play "Disraeli" at The Grand tomorrow (Wednesday) evening.

In this comedy Disraeli is shown at the height of his career, but at a time when many of the most influential men and institutions of Great Britain were not in agreement with the popular view of his abilities as Prime Minister. Thus the Bank of England refuses to lend money necessary to buy the Suez Canal from Egypt, although the sum is comparatively a small one, and the Russian representatives stand ready to outbid Great Britain. Disraeli, by a coup made up in equal parts of constructive statesmanship and shrewd reading of human nature, obtains the canal, and thereby realizes his cherished dream of having Queen Victoria declared Empress of India. There is a delightful romance of engrossing interest, running through the play, showing Beaconsfield in the position of match-maker.

In the supporting cast will be Ernita Lascelles, Florence Arliss, Margaret Dale, Lelia Repton, Vincent Sternroyd, Charles Harbury, Arthur Eldred, and St. Claire Bayfield.

REV. R. POGUE REFERS TO LOCAL CONDITIONS

The Duty of Governments and Civic Authorities to Prevent Unemployment

In the course of his sermon on Sabbath evening the Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's Church had some things of a practical nature to say on the subject of War and Labor, and specially as the war effects our local conditions. In summing up his message he said :—

1. We must try to make our Governments and civic authorities see that it is their duty to prevent unemployment so long as the war lasts. Indeed that should be the duty of a Government at all times. It is the duty of Governments to see that every man who can work has an opportunity of doing so, and thus is given the privilege of realizing his own highest good and that of society. But specially it is the duty of Governments to do this in such times as the present.

The Government has already intimated that it will deal quickly and effectively with any attempt that may be made to unduly raise the price of food. It is one of the sad things of human nature that there are thousands all over Canada, and in other lands where was is raging, and where men have lost their all, who are only too ready to make money and grow rich out of the misfortunes of their brethren. A writer speaking of the rise of prices in the States has this to say as to the cause. "The scarcity now reflected in this city in the outrageous prices at which food is held is not the legitimate result of the war. It is the result of greed. It is not due to shortage. It is due to speculation. It is not a consequence of the convulsion of nature. It is a consequence of a corner. It has no relation to existing supplies, which are abundant and with no immediate outlet. It is related to a ruthless gamble in futures and is based altogether upon the hope that in time devastation in Europe will enable food gamblers here, with governmental assistance, to exact famine prices for their hoarded supplies."

And here is his remedy. "There is only one complete remedy. If the

THE WILL OF THE KAISER

The "Memorial Cards" of the Kaiser, now suppressed, which were on sale in London last week, have had their counterpart in Paris in the form of the Kaiser's will. The following is a translation, necessarily somewhat "bowdlerised" from the extremely frank French :

I, William the Shameless, Emperor and King of sausage-eaters, savages and barbarians, recognizing that I am completely misled and mad with much pride and ambition, am making my own will before I am taken to the cage, previous to my execution.

Bequests.

Then follows a lengthy list of bequests. Here are a few :

1. My fortune to all the widows and orphans and people of whose bereavement I have been the cause.

2. To Belgium, as a souvenir of her heroic defence of Liege, the Cross of Honor in diamonds, my sword, and the right to jeer at me to the end of the century.

3. To France I restore by force Alsace-Lorraine, her clocks, and her billions of francs.

4. To England I give back her title, which I usurped, viz: "King of the Seas."

5. To Servia I give Austria.

6. To Russia, all my cannon, as a surety of universal peace.

7. To Austria I leave my last cartridge, in order that she may end the business in honorable fashion.

8. To all the other countries that I have forced into mobilization and war I give the wealth that remains in my empire.

9. To my family I give the nothing I have left.

As executors of this will I choose William Deibler et Cie, to whom I regret I cannot give my head, which is claimed by all the world.

Deibler is, of course, the Paris executioner.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

DIVIDING THE SPOILS OF WAR

Will There be a Peaceful Settlement

Here's an important question that has been asked by a citizen: "What will they do in the event of capturing the Kaiser and his country. Will England, France and Russia dispute over the spoils and perhaps come to a clash among themselves? The only improbable point about this question is the capturing of the Kaiser and his country.

It is not improbable, though, that the allies would dispute over the spoils. We all know that Russia can be greedy if she wants to. Russia is daily spending enormous quantities of money in the upkeep of her vast army and quite naturally would like some ample recompense for this expenditure. France also is to be considered very strongly in the event of sharing the supposed spoils, and though England would undoubtedly be the peace maker between these two countries — she would quietly but surely put in a strong claim.

Belgium has been practically the centre of the fight for some time. The little country is laid in ruins and her land marred with unsightly German graves—what must be her recompense? She is at the mercy of her allies to a certain extent.

We had thought that such a war as is presently being waged was highly impossible—our hopes were shattered. We may think that a settlement among the allies would be a minor affair and pass off quite peaceably — but our hopes may again be shattered. The end of the present war in favor of the allies might be the beginning of a war among themselves. Students of history will easily recall such happenings in the past, and it is not improbable in the future. Meanwhile we are anxiously awaiting news of success from the front.

MUCH DEPENDS ON OUTCOME OF PRESENT BATTLE

Allies and Germans Now in About Equal Strength

SITUATION CRITICAL

LONDON, Sept. 8.—News received here from the theatre of war in France shows that more than 4,000,000 men are engaged on both sides in that country. Of that number, 2,000,000 are Germans and the rest are with the allies. The number of British, French and Belgian troops is said to equal that of the invaders.

According to unofficial advices, both flanks of the German army have been turned. The French army under Gen. Joffre, and the forces commanded by Sir John French, are reported as having defeated the Germans. It is said, however, that both the German and French armies are face to face with absolute disaster because they are in critical positions and that a defeat for either would be fatal. The battle line extends over an irregular line of 120 miles from east to west, and 50 miles from north to south. The reported defeat of the Germans from Lille is declared to be due to their fear of attack from an army of British and Russian reinforcements believed to have landed at a port on the English Channel.

Reports current in military quarters say a portion of the British expeditionary force is at Maubeuge, a French fortress of first-class in the Department du Nord, assisting the French garrison there in a defence which is being stoutly maintained. Official German reports admit that the fortress still resists.

Military experts agree with French officers that Paris will not be besieged as long as the French and British armies remain active in the field. It said the possession of the city itself would have a sentimental value. The German general staff is believed to realize that fact and consequently more depends on the battle now raging than on any move since the war began.

In the region from Vitry-le-Francais to Verdun, the German strength is declared to be enormous. Most of the German forces withdrawn from Alsace-Lorraine are supposed to be attacking the allies round Verdun. The armies of the Crown Prince Frederick Wilheim, the Duke of Albreant of Wurtemberg and the Crown Prince of Bavaria are also included in these positions.

The Kaiser himself, it is reported, has been directing the new movement. He is reported as having joined the army that is directed by his heir. The Emperor's presence on the battlefield there has not been confirmed, however.

The present move of the Germans is supposed to be an attempt to crush the allies, especially the French centre and right, which include 13 or 14 army corps. Students of military science say the operations in the east of France on which the Germans are now engaged, is a critical one, and that it may lay them open to a most damaging offensive. The Germans are apparently engaged in a line of considerable magnitude. The general situation favors the allies beginning an offensive movement. The French army on the allies' left and the British army moving forward to co-operate with the French armies to the right of the British. The allies are expected to take advantage of the situation and to force a decisive struggle.

A cablegram from the French legation at Antwerp confirms the previous announcement of the success of the Anglo-French troops in driving the Germans back 15 miles beyond St. Quentin, inflicting terrible losses to the enemy.

The news contained in the French official communication that the Germans had fallen back before the vigorous advance by the allied troops on the line from Nanteuil-le-Haudouin to Verdun indicates that the Anglo-French forces have got on the flank of the German right wing, which passed by Paris on the north and was marching eastward to join with the crown prince's army coming south.

It has been suggested by military experts that Gen. von Kluck's movement to the southeast was taken as a matter of precaution before the movement by the allies from the coast. It is possible it is this new army which has reached Nanteuil-le-Haudouin, thus getting on Gen. von Kluck's flank. The engagement took place Sunday, and that evening the Germans began their retirement.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. yesterday gave out the following German official statement:

"The German army administration reports that in the west, the allied armies are in retreat between Paris and Verdun, and that the German troops are pursuing them. Paris is empty, and the only scene of animation there is around the railway stations, which are filled with thousands of fugitives. The leading newspapers do not consider that Paris will defend itself to the utmost."

Word received says that train service between Paris and Dieppe has been suspended.

Triple Pact Important.

ROME, Sept. 8. — (Via Paris.)—The Corriere d'Italia, commenting yesterday on the undertaking signed by the powers of the Triple Entente, in which it was agreed that none of the three would accept terms of peace without the previous consent of the other two, says that the undertaking will have enormous importance. In addition to its effect on Germany, it will serve as a warning to certain Balkan states, the paper declares.

DINANT IS DESTROYED BY INVADERS

Germans Burn City and Shoot Hundreds of Citizens

LONDON, Sept. 8.—An Ostend despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says:—

"The Germans in a few hours, by shell fire and incendiarism, destroyed Dinant, on the Meuse. Hundreds of male inhabitants were shot, including one party of one hundred prominent citizens, who were executed together in the Place d'Armes.

"The Germans alleged that the civilians had fired shots into Dinant from the heights. While the shooting and burning were going on the women residents of the city were confined in the convents.

"Among those shot were M. Hummers, the wealthy manager of a large weaving factory, and M. Poncelot, son of a former Senator. The latter was killed in the presence of his wife and children. Germans appeared at a branch of the National Bank, where they demanded the cash in the safe. The manager, M. Wasseize, refused to hand it over, whereupon he, together with his two sons, was shot.

Is Chasing Nurnberg.

HONOLULU, Sept. 8.—The Watson Navigation Co.'s steamer Wilhelmina reported on arrival here yesterday that she picked up a wireless message from the Australian Dreadnought Australia, then in Hawaiian waters, saying that she was in full chase of the German cruiser Nurnberg, which left here Sept. 1.

PATHFINDER IS DESTROYED BY GERMAN MINE

Fifty of the Crew Were Picked up

LONDON, Sept. 8.—It is learned on reliable authority that the captain and fifty of the crew of the British cruiser Pathfinder, which was sunk by a mine in the North Sea, have been saved.

It was officially given out last night, that four men were killed and thirteen wounded, and that 242 men are missing; of the missing about fifty have been picked up.

The destruction of the Pathfinder occurred about four o'clock Saturday afternoon at a point ten miles northeast of St. Abb's Head. Scotland.

While she was patrolling the coast the cruiser struck a mine which exploded near her magazine. Trawlers 10 miles distant felt the shock. From Eyemouth, 14 miles from the scene of the explosion, a huge cloud of smoke was visible on the horizon. A torpedo-boat destroyer was the first to the rescue. She was followed by the St. Abb's motor lifeboat.

The Pathfinder was literally blown to pieces, and the sea was strewn with the wreckage.

The devastating effect of the explosion on the Pathfinder is emphasized in the report of Coxswain Nisbet of the St. Abb's motor lifeboat, which first arrived to give assistance. He says that for a mile and a half the water was strewn with wreckage of every conceivable description.

A message received in London states that in addition to the motor lifeboat several steam drifters hurried to the spot where the Pathfinder sank, and adds that it is learned on reliable authority that the captain of the Pathfinder and some 50 or 60 of his crew were saved.

About ninety of the crew of the Pathfinder, dead and wounded, were picked up by torpedo boats and taken to a hospital at the naval base. Capt. Leake and several other officers were saved. According to an official announcement the casualties among the officers were one killed, nine missing, one seriously wounded and one slightly wounded.

The Pathfinder was built for scouting purposes and was very fast. She re-entered the service last October and was reported a short time ago as having engaged a German cruiser.

SUBMARINE'S DARING FEAT.

British Craft Penetrated Harbor Under German Fleet.

HULL, Sept. 8.—Early last week the destroyers and submarines of the British fleet, by close surveillance, discovered a passage between the mines which the German destroyers used in coming out to the North Sea. With that information in hand, a flotilla of submarines and destroyers proceeded to round up the German ships. When the operation was finished one submarine was missing, and had been given up for lost, when she suddenly reappeared with a startling story.

The submarine had actually penetrated into the harbor of Bremerhaven, where she fired two torpedoes. The Germans were panic stricken. In the midst of the panic the submarine "went to sleep" on the bottom of the harbor.

For hours the ship and crew remained there while the harbor was being trawled, but fortunately the trawlers did not pass over her. As soon as he considered it was safe the commander gave the order to proceed out of the German harbor, the submarine returning across the North Sea without any mishap.

Gypsum mining in the United States is steadily increasing, the production last year being nearly 2,600,000 tons.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 140 cars, comprising 2249 cattle, 1936 hogs, 851 sheep and lambs and 936 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers by the load sold at $8.60 to $9; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., are selling at $7.50 to $7.75; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7.25; stockers, $5.50 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A few milkers and springers were offered. Prices for them were unchanged at from $50 to $90 each, the bulk going at $55 to $75.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate and values practically unchanged. Choice veal calves, $10 to $10.50; good, $8.50 to $9.50; medium, $7.50 to $8.50; common, $6.50 to $7.50; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $5.50 to $6.25; yearlings, $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $5; lambs, $8 to $8.25, with a few choice at $8.50, the bulk going at $8.25; culls, $6.50 to $7.50.

Hogs.

There were 1936 hogs reported, but out of these there were 1200 shipped direct to the Swift Canadian Company from the northwest. Prices were lower, and should there be many more come from the northwest provinces prices will likely go lower still. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $9.75, and $9.40 f.o.b. cars, and $10 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market a weaker feeling prevailed, and prices were fully 25c per 100 pounds lower than last Monday for butchers' stock, which was attributed to the increased offerings and the somewhat limited demand, as packers in most cases had carried over fair supplies of dressed beef from last week. Trade was rather slow, even at the lower range, and demand was principally for good to choice steers, of which a few loads changed hands at $8.50 to $8.75, and the good stock at $8 to $8.25. Some choice butchers' cows went at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. There was also a weaker feeling in the market for canning stock, and prices declined 10c to 25c per 100 pounds. Demand was not so keen, but a fair trade was done at $5.50 to $5.75 for bulls, and cows at $3.75 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.

The market for hogs was unchanged from last week. The prospects are that values will remain firm, owing to the fact that there is a good export trade now doing in Canadian bacon at profitable prices.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs was easy, but there was no further change to note in prices. Offerings were large, but the demand was only fair.

The trade in calves was fairly active, with sales of choice milk-fed stock at 9c, and of grass-fed at 7c to 8c per pound, live weight.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.50 to $8.75; do., medium, $6.75 to $7.75; do., common, $5.50 to $6; canners, $3.75 to $5.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6.25 to $6.50; do., bulls, $5.75 to $7.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $85; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $55 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50.

Hogs, off cars, $10.40.

Calves, $6 to $20.

Trying To Rouse China.

PEKIN, Sept. 8. — Protesting to the Foreign Office against its note of Sept. 3, addressed to the diplomatic representatives in Pekin and referring to the transgression of Chinese neutrality by the landing of Japanese troops at Lunkow, Baron von Maltzan, the German charge d'affaires, declared yesterday that Germany would hold the Chinese responsible for permitting Japanese and British soldiers to cross her territory.

TO INVADE HUNGARY

Russian Armies Make Unexpected Move

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8. — Two Russian armies are marching to invade Hungary from the east and north, while a third is forcing back combined Austrian and German forces that are trying to avert a march on Posen, and thence straight on Berlin, according to an announcement made by the general staff yesterday.

The entrance into Hungarian territory, probably will be made through Borgo and Uszek passes, in the Carpathian Mountains. The way through was cleared after the capture of Czernowitz and Lemberg. The forces that will proceed through Borga Pass are said to be five army corps (200,000 men), and those headed for Uszek Pass eight corps (320,000 men).

The Russian advance covers a line that commences at Tilsit, northeast of the fortress of Koenigsberg, and extends across Poland, through Mlawavt, then west of Warsaw through the province of Radom into eastern Galicia. The Russians besieging Koenigsberg have mounted heavy siege guns to command the citadel.

The Austrian armies in Russian Poland are being pressed hard, and the Germans are rushing reinforcements to their relief. The Austrians have failed to make any decisive stand east of the San river. The German forces sent to reinforce the Austrians have fortified positions along the line of the San, but so far their artillery has not come up, and the Russian advance is being pushed in an attempt to carry the positions before they are made more formidable.

Cruiser Sold To Turkey Has Attacked British Warship.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8. — The stranding of the British cruiser Warrior, reported to the German Embassy yesterday in a wireless message from Berlin, remained a mystery to-day. The message read:

"British cruiser Warrior stranded, probably as a result of fight with cruiser Goeben while escaping from the Bosphorus."

Huge German Losses.

OTTAWA SENATORS TAKE CHAMPIONSHIP THIRD TIME IN ROW

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Ottawa	76	45	.628
London	72	43	.626

With this narrow lead is Frank Shaughnessy's Senators the champions of the Canadian League. By winning from Peterboro yesterday afternoon by 6 to 2 they won the flag. The morning game had to be postponed on account of rain and, in the afternoon the diamond had to be cleaned and burned with gasoline to make play possible. The score:

Peterboro 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 0 0—2 6 2
Ottawa ....2 1 0 0 0 3 0 0 x—6 14 0

Batteries: Tracey and Kelly, Shocker and Lage. Umpire, Freeman.

The Reislingites made a great bid for the rag and finished the season by winning three games yesterday with the following scores:—

Had the Blountmen won one from the Ottawa team the Cockneys would have won the pennant by two points.

CHEMONG INDIAN TEAM WAS EASILY VANQUISHED

The Chemong Red Skins paid this city a visit in connection with yesterday's Labor Day celebration and during the course of the afternoon they opposed a local all-star aggregation in a seven inning game of ball.

This Indian outfit was minus any Chief Meyers or Benders or in short, they were out of their class. The locals scored 18 runs in the first three innings and then they made arrangements to have Carson, who was working in left field for them, to go on the mound for the visitors. He did well with the result that the game grew a trifle more interesting. At the end of the seventh the score was 20-5. Smith who pitched for the All-Stars had very little trouble in winning and could easily have pitched a no hit game.

After hours of work and using up six pencils we present the following box score:—

COMMENT

As You Like It

Another name added to the Indian list—Robert M. Carson.

When the game was over Chief Carson was thanked and promised a couple of fish. Pretty fishy that stuff.

Jack Pilling deserves credit for the efforts he's making to give the fans abundance of amateur baseball. No blame can be placed on him for the poor showing of the Indians as authorities higher up made arrangements for the game and asked him to supply the local team. His team wasn't the best all-star team that could be selected as several so-called stars refused to turn out for practice. The men that practised got the places.

The Mercantile League game on Saturday resulted in a win for the Drafting Room over the Printers by 4-3 and in a 6-0 win for the Bankers from the Wm. Hamiltons.

While many scribes are praising Frank Shaughnessy here's to Doc Reisling. He fought hard from the first week in May till the finish and though he lost he had fans in every centre on the circuit pulling for him.

Trout will immediately join the Leafs who are making a great bid for a first division berth.

When the Braves and Giants marched onto the field yesterday they were tied and when they withdrew they were still tied each having won one of the double header. They now have won 68, lost 53 and have a percentage of .562.

Little Dickie Rudolph beat old Matty out in the morning but Jeff Tesreau held the Boston crew to four scattered bingles in the afternoon.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATED WITH PARADE AND SPORTS

Large Numbers of Members of Local Unions Were in the Parade to Riverside Park

Notwithstanding the cool weather, the 1914 celebration of the local Trades and Labor Council, held yesterday, was a big success. At 1 o'clock the parade, which embraced representatives of every local union, left Central park, headed by the band of the 57th Regiment, and proceeded via George street to Hunter street, west to Aylmer, south to Charlotte, east to George, north to Hunter and east to Riverside park. All along the route numerous citizens gathered and followed to the park, where an excellent field day of sports was most successfully carried out.

The following was the complete list of the winners:

Boys under 10, 50 yards—1st prize, baseball bat, value $1; 2nd prize, baseball bat, value 75c.—Elmer Hearne, E. Legon.

Girls under 10, 50 yards—1st prize, doll, value $1.50; 2nd prize, doll, value $1—D. Hayward, H. Conroy.

Boys under 14, 75 yards—1st prize, baseball glove, value $1.50; 2nd prize, baseball glove, value $1—F. Rutherford, E. Dugan.

Receipts of Ball Games for the Patriotic Fund

Next Saturday will be Patriotic Day for the Mercantilers. Two of their best games of the season will be staged at Riverside Park and the gate receipts will be donated to the Patriotic Fund. Dr. Wrightman, owner of the grounds, has kindly donated the park gratis and all officials will be honorary. It is anticipated that a large number of fans will be on hand.

At 1.45 o'clock the Red Caps play the De Laval and at four o'clock the Bankers and Drafting Room next.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL MEETING

D. W. Dumble, acting for T. Hurley, waited on the North Monaghan Council last Saturday with a plan of Mr. Hurley's property described as lot 11, concession 12, parts 22 and 25, registered plan 31 and part of lot 14, registered plan 11. The plan was accepted on motion of Messrs. Forster and Young.

The Reeve reported having received a letter from Wood and Wearing, relative to Lockie's Road. The clerk was instructed to write the firm that the township does not own the road in dispute.

H. G. Forster was instructed to remove the crusher screen from the C.P.R. station and store it for the winter.

The payment of $4 to Samuel Carver for work at a ditch on the 11th concession, was authorized.

A culvert will be put in on Western Ave. at Chamberlain Street, on the motion of Messrs. Forster and Young. The treasurer was instructed to send out all boundary accounts.

It was decided that Reeve Howden should take action as will provide for the poor and unemployed, until other provisions are made.

The clerk reported that it was necessary to subdivide the township into three polling subdivisions and it was decided that a by-law be passed providing for the same as follows:

P.S.D. No. 1.—All west of Monaghan Road as far west as S.S. No. 2, this being the dividing line between the township lot 8 and 9 and bounded on the north by the Smith township and on the south by the Otonabee River.

P.S.D. No. 2.—Comprising S.S. No. 1 and 3, also part of No. 4, in North Monaghan or in other words all that territory lying west of the dividing line of the township, lots 8 and 9; on the east of Smith township on the north by the Smith boundary, on the west, Cavan boundary and the Otonabee river on the south.

P.S.D. No. 3. — Comprising all that territory, bounded on the west by the Monaghan Road, on the south and east by the Otonabee river, on the north by Lansdowne Street in the City of Peterboro.

A by-law was given its several readings, authorizing the Reeve and treasurer to borrow from the Bank of Ottawa, the sum of $480, in addition to that already borrowed, with interest at 6 per cent.

The meeting adjourned to Monday, September 14, at 2 p.m., in Mr. Bradburn's office.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

SCHOLEY—GREENHALGH.

All Saints' Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday afternoon, when Miss Betsy Greenhalgh became the wife of Mr. Clarence Scholey. Miss Dorothy Bryett assisted the bride, and Mr. Thomas Kay was groomsman. Rev. R. B. Grobb officiated. They will reside on Chamberlain St.

HAYES—O'GRADY.

The wedding took place this morning at 9:30 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Douro, of Miss Mary A. O'Grady, of Otonabee, and Mr. William John Hayes, of Douro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGuire.

The engagement is announced of Miss Olive A. Reinhardt, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Henry Reinhardt, of Montreal, to Mr. Gordon Russell Langley, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Langley, of Schenectady, N. Y. The marriage will take place on Saturday, September 19.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Norton, of Belleville, formerly of Oshawa, Ont., announce the engagement of their daughter, E. Florence, to Mr. Henry Hamilton Cashbourne, third son of the late Mr. Charles Cashbourne, of Lachine. The wedding will take place very quietly towards the end of September in St. Thomas' church, Belleville.

Miss Jessie Miller spent Labor Day in Toronto.

Mrs. T. J. Blois, 265 Rubidge St., is spending a couple of weeks with friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Milling, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sharp of Napanee motored up to Peterboro on Sunday last and spent the holiday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Gray, Brock St.

The home of Mr. A. J. Johnston, 19 Deninstoun Ave., has been the scene of a very happy reunion since last Saturday when all the living members of his old home met for the first time in twenty-eight years. Those present from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wallace of Riverside, California, Mrs. Thos. McJanet of Ottawa, Mrs. J. H. Billington of Winnipeg, Mr. Fred Johnston of Toronto, son of the late Geo. H. Johnston, also Mr. Johnston's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hilford.

Mrs. Billigton left Peterborough in December, 1886, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace left in October, 1888, none of them have returned until their present visit, and of course they see many improvements in Peterborough and while their visit recalls many sad memories, the joy of the home coming more than compensates them.

Mrs. McJanet left the city this morning and Mrs. Billington leaves on Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace will remain for a little longer.

Mr. Fred Noyes, Rochester, spent the holiday with his parents, East City.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Edmonds have returned to Detroit after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cowie, Simcoe street.

Mr. J. F. Diamond, who has succeeded Mr. Ed. White, at District Manager of the Massey-Harris Co., has moved into the city from Kingston, and is located at 545 Homewood Avenue.

Mr. Wm. Moher and Wm. Hayes, returned to Ottawa today, where they will resume their studies at Ottawa College.

PATRIOTIC CONCERT.

St. Paul's Presbyterian church choir, assisted by friends from other choirs, is making arrangements for the holding of a great patriotic concert. The entire proceeds will be handed over to the civic fund for the relief of the needy. Fuller details as to date will follow in the course of a few days.

The White Man's Burden

People are finding out that a lot of the troubles that go to make up life's burden are caused by

Tea and Coffee Drinking

Tea and coffee contain a drug, caffeine—from 1½ to 3 grains to the cup. It not only stands to reason, but has been demonstrated scientifically and in practical experience, that this steady drugging is a foe to health and comfort.

A great army of people have found freedom from ills due to tea and coffee by changing to —a delicious, pure, food-drink, made from whole wheat and a bit of molasses. No caffeine, no drug, no harmful ingredient.

POSTUM

Even children drink Postum freely with benefit; they can't do that with tea or coffee.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum, must be boiled, 15c. and 25c. pkgs.

Instant Postum, a soluble form, made in the cup instantly, 30c. and 50c. tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds and the cost per cup is about the same.

A DAY OF INTERCESSION

"Oh, Thou that hearest prayer, unto Thee shall all flesh come."

"He shall be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when He shall hear, He will answer thee."

THE DAY OF INTERCESSION—WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 9.

United Services—3 p.m., Murray Street Church; 8 p.m., George Street Church.

Every Christian church and organization in our city has received the same invitation to unite in these services, and those outside of every church and Christian organization will be welcomed.

The southern section of the city will hold services at 3 p.m. in Park Street Baptist church, and at 8 p.m. in Knox Presbyterian Church.

RED CROSS COMMITTEE PACK SUPPLIES FOR THE SOLDIERS

The Red Cross Committee met on Monday afternoon, at the Y.W.C.A. and packed the first box to go to headquarters in Toronto. The contents of the box were made up as follows:

Donations: Rubber sheet, 29 pillows, 34 pillow slips, 9 pair flannelette blankets, 113 cotton bandages made by the nurses at Nicholls' and St. Joseph's Hospital, also bandages made by the Peterborough Nurses' Association, 8 dozen cheese cloth handkerchiefs, 4 slings.

There were also made from materials bought by the committee:

28 hospital shirts, 52 flannel bandages, knitted scarves and wristlets.

The committee desire to thank all those who so promptly did their work, and also those who have sent contributions, whether of money or materials. Donations in money are urgently required to provide for materials already bought, and to help the Red Cross Society, in their future work, and may be sent to Mrs. F. L. Roy, Treasurer of committee, or left at Mr. Kent's Drug Store.

A PATRIOTIC RALLY HELD AT PRENEVEAU

Havelock, Sept. 8.—The lawn social held on the grounds of Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Preneveau, on Friday evening, was a decided success.

The grounds and verandahs which were gaily decorated with flags, bunting, etc., and illuminated with Chinese lanterns and other lights, presented a most festive appearance while an orchestra led by Mr. Thos. McQuaig of Blairton furnished delightful music during the serving of supper and at other times.

Popular singers from Havelock assisted in the program and rendered in a very inspiring manner many excellent selections while lofty patriotism characterized the burning speeches of Rev. Mr. Holdsworth, Rev. Mr. Skeene, Rev. Mr. Demill, and Mr. Butcher.

Mr. Denike who acted as chairman performed his duties in a very happy manner.

The young men of Preneveau and Blairton who have been unceasing in their efforts during the week to make the event a success, united in singing "The Maple Leaf," "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," and "Just Before the Battle, Mother," while Mr. Joseph Little's two solos delighted the entire audience.

Towards the end of the program Mr. Sexsmith was called on to speak and told of the work to which the ladies of Preneveau were devoting themselves, viz., making comforts and conveniences for soldiers going to the front, showing samples of same, such as soldiers' sleeping helmets, cholera belts, socks, etc. To the purchase of material for the same the proceeds of the evening would be used.

The best of feeling prevailed throughout the entire evening and the gathering dispersed about 12 o'clock after singing God Save the King and cheers for the King, the Empire and Lord Kitchener.

The proceeds amounted to about $60.

TWO MEETINGS IN NORTH MONAGHAN

Funds Are Wanted For Those in Need

At a meeting of the North Monaghan council on Saturday when all the members were present, Reeve Howden explained that the meeting had been called for the purpose of devising means to provide for the poor and those who cannot secure employment under present conditions, mostly due to the war.

Some discussion followed and on motion of Messrs. Young and Forster, it was decided to call two meetings, one at May's schoolhouse on Thursday evening, September 10, and the other at the Town Hall on the following Friday evening. At these meetings, some definite action for the securing of funds will be taken.

DONATIONS TO THE FUND

Donations to the Patriotic Fund not previously mentioned through the press are: Mr. E. A. Peck, $20; Mr. H. Rush, $25; Mr. S. R. Armstrong, $10; A Friend, $5; Mr. R. Ruddy, $10; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. ————, $5; and the employes of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., $4 per month. The total in the hands of the treasurer, F. Adams, now amounts to $329.

Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons have offered the use of the Grand Opera House free for one night to the patriotic and relief fund committee, to be used in raising funds. The matter has been left with Messrs. J. Crane and W. Stocker to make arrangements for some entertainment, the proceeds of which would go to the Patriotic Fund.

HERE AND THERE

America can supply Europe with grain and produce, but the immense difficulty is obtaining enough ships to transport this food from America to Europe. It is up to England to keep ocean traffic open.

Germany can—by all appearances—be made to submit by the slow process of shutting off her food supply. She has enough food for a year but at the end of that time the food problem will assume great proportions.

It's not too soon to start your Christmas shopping. There's just a chance that things will be rather dear about Christmas time and besides saving some money now—you will not rush the girl behind the counter quite so much by getting Christmas goods now.

* * *

"To take Paris or die" is now said to be the watchword of the German army. A good many are dying but we haven't heard of the Kaiser having any close calls.

Turkey has been befriended in the past by Germany, and has had her army trained by German officers — and quite naturally Turkey must side with Germany — but there's some men behind Turkey who don't like the idea of committing suicide.

The end of this war will perhaps see better times for down-trodden Russia.

It's a case of soon saying good-bye to the straw hat. However a good many of them have seen signal service this summer.

The big problem with the school boy is: "When's the next holiday coming?"

Once more the truant officer is performing his duties—so far they've been rather light, but there's no telling. "These be war-like days, and all's fair in love and war."

British business is standing up well under the war strain. Practically all markets, except those of European countries remain open to Britain's commerce.

Again we are informed that monkey fur will be "the thing" for trimming dance frock and gowns this season. A military tendency in styles will also be quite noticeable.

We can hear it coming. What's that? "The Retreat," "The Barricade," "The March," and numerous other military named dances.

* * *

England will not need to call out the suffragettes for duty on the war field for some time yet.

When this war ends, builders in Belgium and France are going to be real busy, considering the number of fine buildings that are being destroyed.

Toronto Exhibition comes at a bad time. It usually rains about the first of September, and besides, mother is real busy "doing up" fruit—not saying anything about dad's numerous duties.

BRANCHES OF THE TEMPLE CORPS

The new Sunday school under the auspices of the Salvation Army was successfully opened on Sunday last, under the leadership of Mr. George Leggatt. The people of the neighborhood have taken very kindly to this new move, and, notwithstanding a heavy rain, there was an enrollment of 40 to start with.

Mr. Leggatt and his band of workers expect to double this next Sunday.

Quite a goodly increase is taking place in the Sunday schol started a few months ago in Browston, where Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have charge.

Both of these Sunday schools are branches from the Temple corps.

JAMES K. HACKETT.

who will present Shakespeare's Othello, at the Grand Opera House, Friday, of this week.

When an actor approaches the work of the immortal Shakespeare as a true artist, with love, and reverence and understanding, the result is bound to be an achievement that will take rank in the enduring annals of the stage. Such an occasion, however, is so rare as to come not more than three or four times within the knowledge of the average theatregoer, and when such an event approaches the true lover and student of the theatre does not fail to profit. The announcement that James K. Hackett, so popularly admired throughout the country for his excellence as an actor and for his charm of vigorous manhood, will be seen at the Grand Opera House next Friday, Sept. 11, as "Othello," will attract universal attention. The occasion is unique, as far as this city is concerned, in that the star is playing a very brief fall tour in this classic role; and his coming to us at this time and under such circumstances is a compliment. So fine an actor cannot fail to receive a most cordial welcome, not only from theatregoers in general, but from Shakespearean students in particular. Miss Beatrice Beckley will play Desdemona, while other strong names in the notably fine supporting cast are Mr. Albert Howson, Mr. William Conklin, Mr. A. L. Barrett, Mr. Redfield Clarke, Mr. Bernard Thornton, Mr. William Wood, Mr. A. A. Stewart, Mr. Frank Williams, Mr. George Ellis, Miss Ruth Blackburn, Miss Jeanette Grant and Miss Mabel Inslee. Mr. Arthur Weld will conduct a special orchestra augments by players from the New York Philharmonic Society in a special arrangement of incidental music from Verdi's operatic setting of the play. The sale of seats will open at the box office tomorrow morning.

TRAFFIC CENSUS ON ROAD TO LAKEFIELD

Nearly 1500 Vehicles Used Road in Seven Days

Mr. W. Henry, superintendent of the Children's Shelter, forwarded to Toronto to-day the report on the traffic on the Lakefield road from August 31 to September 6. The census shows a heavy traffic, 1,441 vehicles having used the road during the seven days. The heaviest traffic was on Saturday last, when Mr. Henry took count of 368 vehicles.

Similar information is being secured from many parts of the province by the commission on good roads and highways, and money is to be expended where investigation shows improvements are needed.

SITUATION CONTINUES TO BE SATISFACTORY

GERMAN RIGHT RETREATS BEFORE THE BRITISH AND FRENCH CENTRE ADVANCES

SAYS TABLES ARE TURNED

British Army Fast on Flank of Retreating German Right Wing — Everything Points to Movement Being Definite Retirement

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 9.—An official communication issued this afternoon says the situation remains satisfactory. The German right is retreating before the English. The French centre is slowly advancing. The situation on the right is unchanged.

The statement says:

First—On the left wing, although the Germans have been reinforced, the situation remains satisfactory. The enemy is retreating before the British army.

Second—At the centre our advance is slow, but general. On the right there has been no action of the enemy against the great circle of Nancy. In the Vosges and in Alsace the situation remains unchanged.

London, Sept. 9.—The correspondent of the Chronicle at the front in France telegraphs: "The tables are turned. The right wing of the German army, which was considerably battered by the heavy fighting of the last two days, is continuing its retrograde movement. It is falling back, with the British army fast on its flank.

"Everything points to the movement being a definite retirement rather than a temporary retreat. The greater part of the German forces holding Amiens withdrew Tuesday morning, and the German wounded were rushed to Arras. When I left the neighborhood of Amiens at noon a small French force was waiting in the vicinity to re-occupy Amiens as soon as the last German soldier had withdrawn, which was expected Tuesday night.

The allies' left wing is giving the retiring army no respite, British cavalry being especially active. The allies are making every effort to detach the harried German right wing from the main body and annihilate it. In an effort to prevent this, the German commander seems to be directing a rearward march upon Cambrai and Tournai, evidently with the intention of attempting to repass the Belgian border east of Lille. Each instant the rearward progress of the Germans is gaining momentum.

"It is the beginning of the end."

GERMANS SURRENDERED IN GROUPS.

Paris, Sept. 9.—British officers and soldiers arriving from the front to-day declare the four days' battle, which still continues, to the east of Paris, is being carried on furiously. They assert the French captured a considerable number of field and machine guns, while the Germans often surrendered in groups. Sir John French, they say, looked perfectly satisfied with the situation, going about the lines smoking a cigarette as if on the parade ground.

REGIMENTS TO LEAVE HONG KONG.

Shanghai, Sept. 9.—Reports received here to-day from Hong Kong say the Cornwall and Gloucestershire regiments have been ordered to Marseilles. The troops will leave Hong Kong Sept. 14, using the Pacific mail line steamer Nile as transport.

She will be accompanied by the hospital ship Delta, convoyed by a British cruiser.

BERLIN CLAIMS CAPTURE OF MAUBEUGE.

Berlin, Sept. 9.—Official announcement was made to-day at the army headquarters that the French fortress of Maubeuge, on the Sambre river, had fallen. The Germans took 40,000 prisoners, including four generals. Four hundred guns were also captured.

Dr. Ludwig Frank, of Manheim, a prominent Socialist member of the Reichstag, was killed Sept. 3 during a charge against the French at Luneville. Prince Frederic William of Hesse has been wounded.

Emperor William's "Deep Regret" At Destruction of Belgian Cities

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 9.—"There has been published in Copenhagen, a telegram which Emperor William sent to President Wilson under date of September 4," telegraphs the Copenhagen correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph." In this message Emperor William protested against the use by the English of dum-dum bullets and against the participation of the Belgian population in war.

"Emperor William adds in his communication to Mr. Wilson that his generals have in certain cases been compelled to punish Belgians and he expresses his deep regret at the destruction of Louvain and other interesting places."

A MESSAGE FROM KING GEORGE TO HIS PEOPLE IN THE BRITISH COLONIES

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 9.—The official information bureau today gave out the following message from King George to the British colonies

"During the last few weeks, peoples of my whole Empire, at home and overseas, have moved with one mind and purpose to confront and overthrow an unparalleled assault upon the continuity of civilization and the peace of mankind. The calamitous conflict is not of my seeking. My voice has been cast throughout on the side of peace, my ministers earnestly strove to allay the causes of strife and to appease the differences with which my Empire was not concerned. Had I stood aside when in defiance of pledges to which my kingdom was a party, when the soil of Belgium was violated and her cities made desolate, when the very life of the French nation was threatened with extinction, I should have sacrificed my honor and given to destruction the liberties of my Empire and of mankind.

"I rejoice that every part of the Empire is with me in this decision.

"My peoples in self-governing dominions have shown beyond all doubt they whole-heartedly endorse the grave decision it was necessary to take. My personal knowledge of the loyalty and devotion of my overseas dominions had led me to expect they would cheerfully make great efforts and bear great sacrifices which the present conflict entails.

"The full measure in which they have placed their services and resources at my disposal fills me with gratitude and I am proud to be able to show the world that my peoples overseas are as determined as the people of the United Kingdom to prosecute a just cause to a successful end.

"The Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and the Dominion of New Zealand have placed at my disposal their naval forces which have already rendered good service for the Empire. Strong expeditionary forces are being prepared in Canada, Australia and New Zealand for service at the front and the union of South Africa has released all British troops and undertaken the important military responsibilities, the discharge of which will be of utmost value to the Empire."

Newfoundland has doubled the number of its branch of the Royal naval reserve and is sending a body of men to take part in the operations at the front. From Dominion and Provincial governments of Canada, large and welcomed gifts of supplies are on their way for use, both by my naval and military forces and for the relief of distress of the United Kingdom which must inevitably follow.

All parts of my oversea Dominions have thus demonstrated in a most unmistakable manner, the fundamental unity of the Empire amidst all its diversity of situation and circumstances."

A message similar to the foregoing has been addressed to the Prince and peoples of India.

OFFICIAL BUREAU ON SITUATION

Uses Adjective "Very" For First Time

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 9.—It is too early in the day as yet to judge how far the allies will be able to push their present advance to the east of Paris against the German invaders but from what can be gathered from fleeting glimpses of the battle zone, permitted by the censorship, British and French armies seem to be effectively driven home their advantage and gaining impetus as they progress. British optimism which became pronounced with the first announcement of the "turn of the tide" has been further heartened by a continuation of promising reports from the front. For the first time since the commencement of hostilities, an official British report has described the result of operations as "very" satisfactory.

Heretofore this adjective has never been used in any official report. This fact coupled with the announcement of the French Government that it expects its stay in Bordeaux to be short and General Joffre's general order to the troops that the time has come to drive back the invaders, is accepted here as an indication that the German retrograde movement is likely to be of a permanent character.

Observers in London claim that if the allied attack on the German centre and to the left of the centre where the battle is raging so stubbornly, with alternate advances and retirements, should be successful, a wedge will be driven between the German right and left which will place the enemy's right in a highly dangerous plight.

Lord Kitchener's "unknown factor" heretofore held to be a secret which has so altered the situation at the front is now known to be the arrival of forces from India.

Two divisions of infantry and a brigade of cavalry constitute these forces. A dozen Indian potentates have been selected to accompany this expeditionary force.

These include Sir Pertah Singh, Sir Ganga Bahadur, Mahara Ja of Bikaner and Sir Bhupindra Singh, Mahara Ja of Patiala.

COME IN YOU ARE WELCOME

London, Sept. 9.—The hospitality of the British nation has been offered by the government to those who lost their homes and have been rendered destitute by the destruction of Louvain and other Belgian towns.

There are indications that the invitation will be accepted on a large scale, and the government has arranged for the reception and entertainment of the sufferers in London.

Empress Relief Fund

Ottawa, Sept. 9. — The department of external affairs has issued a notice to the effect that persons having claims against the Empress of Ireland relief fund should send to the department for an official claim form, which is to be filled in and returned before Sept. 30. All such claims will then be forwarded to London, to be dealt with by the committee in charge of the fund.

Four Killed at Crossing

Ocean City, N. J., Sept. 9.—Three men and a woman, passengers in an auto travelling 40 miles an hour, were killed to-day when their machine struck the locomotive of a freight train at a crossing at Palmero, near here.

They were: Dr. Mathew S. Borden, J. Harvey Wood, Mrs. Wood and Leo Guifreund, all of New York. A fifth passenger named Ryan was badly injured.

COMPLETE VICTORY FOR CZAR'S FORCES AT RAWA, GALICIA

Petrograd Hears That Austrians Are Retiring Everywhere.

TOOK GERMAN PRISONERS

Roumanians Hold Demonstration in Favor of Russia and France.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Rome, Sept. 9.—A despatch from Petrograd to Messagero declares a great battle at Rawa, in Galicia, 32 miles northwest of Lemberg, is over, and that the Russians have won a complete victory. The Austrians are said to be retiring everywhere. Among the prisoners taken by the Russians are a large number of Germans. The Austrians have evacuated Russian Poland.

London, Sept. 9.—A telegram received here from Bucharest says the Russian victories in Galicia over the forces of the dual monarchy have aroused the Roumanians to almost fanatical excitement. Two hundred thousand Roumanians demonstrated yesterday in the streets of Bucharest in favor of Russia and France.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The Russian embassy has given out the following: "On Sept. 8 a general engagement took place along the whole of the Austrian frontier. In the centre the Austrian army is falling back. Near Rawa Ruska a stubborn battle is being fought with considerable Austrian forces. Our troops are also attacking the strongly fortified position at Gorodok, west of Lwow. On the left bank of the Vistula river our advance is developing very favorably."

ALGERIANS FORCE FOE TO RETREAT

Made Heroic Charge at Critical Moment

ON TO THE TRENCHES

Many Pieces of Artillery and Machine Guns Captured

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 9.—A feature of Monday's action was another heroic charge by Algerian riflemen. At a critical moment it became necessary to carry certain positions and after artillery had prepared the way, two thousand Algerians with fixed bayonets, charged the position at double-quick without flinching, under a storm of shot and shells.

They never stopped until they reached the trenches where they wrought fearful carnage. Many pieces of artillery and machine guns were captured.

After the Algerians came infantry and artillery and the wedge driven into the line forced the Germans to retreat. They were pursued by the same Algerians who inflicted the terrible losses.

OPERATED ON PRINCE ALBERT

Second Son of King George Had Appendicitis

Canadian Press Despatch.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 9. —Prince Albert, second son of King George has been operated on for appendicitis. His condition is reported today satisfactory. Prince Albert was taken from the British cruiser Collingwood the early part of the month and brought here for the operation.

SPIRIT OF INVADERS IS DIFFERENT

From What it Was When They Left Belgian Frontier

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 9.—The opinion in Paris is that the German progress toward Paris was too precipitate as they arrived out of breath and to all appearances out of ammunition and the spirit of their army seems very different from what it was when they left the Belgian frontier. A despatch from Basel says the Germans have evacuated Upper Alsace. The Daily Mail correspondent at Boulogne sends a story of how the Germans surprised the Gordon Highlanders after the battle of Mons and killed their colonel. On retiring from their trenches they were fired on from a field by what they supposed to be a French picket and while endeavoring to explain they were English, were surrounded by Germans and most of them shot down. The Daily Mail correspondent at Milan who has been in Vienna describes Austro-Hungary as in a state of deperate muddle and fear. The armies at first half-hearted, now openly mutinous are threatened not only by the approaching Russian avalanche but by a revolution of famine and bankruptcy.

NO RUSSIANS IN FRANCE

Embassies Dery the Presence of Czar's Troops

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 9.—The Standard quotes Russian and French embassies as denying the presence in France of a Russian force.

Pardon for Defaulter.

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—A pardon has been granted by the governor-in-council to Harry Minchin, former city treasurer of Calgary, who has been serving a term in Edmonton penitentiary for the making away with $5,000 of civic funds. The case is one which has attracted a good deal of attention, and was the subject of an appeal to the supreme court of Canada here last spring.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 9, 1914

AN INSULT TO LOYAL CITIZENS.

ONE would have thought that when the leaders of the two political parties were able to forget their political differences when it came to the matter of joining hands with the Mother Country in defence against a common foe, the Examiner could do likewise. But not so. The people of our beautiful and loyal neighboring village of Millbrook were handed a gratuitous insult in Saturday's edition. It is well known to everyone hereabout that the village contains some of the most loyal citizens in the Province, but the majority possess that most unpardonable sin of being Tories, and as a consequence are fit subjects for the Examiner's castigation. In a diatribe on "Profession and Possession," the writer in the Examiner goes on to say:

> "On the other hand, the display and parade of loyalty are not infallible indications of its possession. We have seen instances where the loudest mouthers of loyalty, the most enthusiastic flag-wavers, were found wanting when it came to the pinch. A citizen said to his neighbor, last night, that it was remarkable, that though Millbrook had a battalion yet it had not furnished one recruit for the overseas contingent. Whether or not this is true, its truth would be no great surprise. Men who make too great parade of their loyalty in season and out of season, expend too much of it to have any for use when the demand for its reduction to action comes."

The village of Millbrook, however, does not possess a battalion, but has a company of militia. Millbrook has always sent a fair proportion of men to Canada's aid whenever called upon, and has done so in the present case, in fact has done as well in proportion to its size as any place in Canada. From what we know of Millbrook and its environs, we know of no section that will respond quicker to the call of dtuy, and it ill becomes the Examiner to make the remarks it has, but to many it is "no great surprise."

THE MAN WHO WOULD BE SUPERMAN.

THE BARBAROUS BEHAVIOR of the German army in Belgium has been so demoniac that it is almost incredible to us in Canada. It is made more understandable by a perusal of the works of Frederick Nietzche, a philosopher whose books have had a profound influence upon the German mind. "Life itself is Will to Power," he says in an aphorism which is an epitome of his whole doctrine. The Prussian lust for world dominion is based upon a belief in the righteousness of might. The Kaiser has shown himself an apt pupil of the author of "Thus Spake Zarathustra." He believes himself the Superman who shall cast religion, morals and sentiment out of his scheme of things and triumph through sheer strength and will. Prussianism is Nietzschism on a war-footing.

> Militarily established civilization still stands high above all so-called industrial civilization; the latter, in its present form, is in general the meanest mode of existence that has ever been.
> Democracy has always been the death-agony of the power of organization; modern democracy is a decaying form of the State.

Such is the philosophy of the harsh teacher, and such is the doctrine which the Prussian war lord seeks to impose upon those free nations who now believe in democracy, in peace and in brotherly love. "Write with blood," saith the teacher, and with blood the pupil [illegible] his challenge to the world.

In the spirit of Nietzsche the Kaiser went to war. The sacred obligation of his nation to respect the neutrality of Belgium the Prussian bully sneered at; he tore up his sworn pledge, as if it were no more to be esteemed than a "scrap of paper." Ruthlessly Wilhelm II tells the nations that his most solemn obligations are not worth the paper they are written on. To the disciple of Nietzsche it would be a sign of shameful weakness that a strong man should be fettered by his own pledges. "Pangs of conscience are indecent," declared Nietzsche. "Morality must be shot at."

No consideration has value to the Kaiser, now that he adjudges the time has come when he shall realize his strength, when as a Superman he seeks to impose the sovereignty of his will upon a conquered world. "The weak and helpless must go to the wall," he proclaims, in the words of his teacher. "It is all up with man when he becomes altruistic. A man loses power when he pities."

Certainly it has been a pitiless warfare that the Kaiser has waged. He has made terrorism his weapon. He has fought not alone with the rifle, but has added the horrors of the bombshell and the torch. In the light of the writings of Frederick Nietzsche, the world must believe the stories of cold-blooded murder and brutal outrage that come out from blighted Belgium. The Kaiser has no indecent pangs of conscience; he is ruthless and without regret; for his only morality is based on a belief that nothing is good save what increases the feeling of power in men, and that nothing is bad save what proceeds from weakness.

A sacred agreement with Belgium is spurned—because Belgium had a foolish belief in the code of civilization and stood athwart the path of brute strength. The world sees the death agonies of defenceless men and hears the screams of outraged women. The flames of a great city reach the sky. And why not? asks the Kaiser. Is not his purpose to be set above all the cowardly ethics of mankind, above the slave morality on which his teacher said modern civilization is based?

The world knows that Wilhelm of Prussia is a liar, a firebrand and a murderer. Yet, in all his atrocities, he has done nothing he himself does not believe to be right; for he has no religion save that of his own lust for power. He believes himself the Superman who shall conquer the world, and he glories in the burnt-offerings of his soldiery.

"We deny God; we deny responsibility in God; thus alone do we save the world." So spake Zarathustra. The Kaiser, though he calls upon the God of his fathers to help him, is in his real philosophy an athiest, believing that there is no Being Supreme above himself. He must win his own way to salvation. His religion is conquest, and the more barbarous the more righteous is his creed, for in barbarism is the fullest realization of strength. Wilhelm has taken up arms against the world in the spirit of Nietzsche, who wrote:

> "Against war it may be said that it makes the victor stupid and the vanquished revengeful. In favor of war it may be said that it barbarizes in both its above-named results, and thereby makes more natural. It is the sleep or the winter-period of culture; man emerges from it with greater strenght for good and for evil."—Toronto Telegram.

THE ART OF LIVING.

TO ONE SWEET SOUL who lived among us too short a space the panorama of life and its living was spread in a fine and true light. He saw, through much pain and many struggles, the things that endure beyond those of this world. In that brief "creed" of living which has come to us from Robert Louis Stevenson are set the guide-posts to a finer conception of life and its duties that is contained in many a bulky book. To some it is a part of what they know and love; to others it is unknown. What is it to you?

"To be honest, to be kind. To earn a little and to spend a little less. To make, upon the whole, a family happier for his presence. To renounce when that shall be necessary, and not to be embittered. To keep a few friends, but these without capitulation — above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself. Here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy."

Here is material for a year of writing and a lifetime of thinking and doing. For it is, in truth, a mustard seed of happiness and helpfulness. The art of living is of all human subjects with which we have to deal the broadest and most beautiful. It is well for men and women to dip into it as deeply as their mental equipment and the stature of their souls will allow. It is an art too much neglected in these hurried days. The tendency toward material gain, the craving for position and personal place, the increasing appetites for fame and fashion, are all more or less hostile to its development and its growth. Deserving of the highest and most prominent place in the catalogue of human attainments, it is often made secondary to those far inferior.

To "get along" in the world seems the shibboleth of the newer generation, rather than to live nobly and well. This is not strange, neither is it a phase of the times to be greatly feared. As with most things of the sort, time is needed to right it — time and the work and words of those who see above the mountain tops of materialism into the clear sky of common sense and the spirit.

Out of this marsh may grow and bloom the best flowers of the future. The mistakes of today are the foundation on which we build the lasting towers of tomorrow.

As with honesty, kindness loves most to dwell in little things. Both are like the notes of a great organ, honesty the bass and kindness the treble. We cannot see the player — and his name is legion — but out through the aisles and naves and transepts of the world floats the music. In perfect harmony it gladdens and soothes, the fair melody drowning many discords and marking time to the march of our better selves. —Montreal Daily Mail.

A Taking Way.

(Sydney Bulletin.)

A Melbourne paper, speaking with some pride of a local pickpocket, says: "His talent for purloining tie and breast-pins has won him high distinction among the crooks of the Commonwealth, who recognise him as the absolute genius." Why not? Why may not genius be an enormous capacity for taking pins?

A Model Battle Prayer.

(Saturday Evening Post.)

The old Prince of Anhalt, field marshal of Frederick the Great, having been ordered to bring his army to a junction with Frederick's, found himself confronted by a superior body of the enemy, through which he must cut a way. Disposing his troops for battle, the marshal tok off his hat and said, very solemnly:

"Heavenly Father, I ask You to give me Your aid to-day, that I may not be disgraced in my old age. And if you can't help us, please don't help those dogs of Austrians, but just let us fight it out among ourselves."

For true reverence, we commend that to the several sovereigns who are now assuring their own peasants that heaven is going to assist them in slaughtering peasants who speak a different tongue.

Irreparable Human Losses.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It is civilization that is being shot down by machine guns in Europe. That great German host is not made up of mercenaries, nor of the type of men that at one time composed armies. There are Erlichs serving as privates in the ranks and in the French corps are Rostands. A bullet does not kill a man; it destroys a generation of learning, annihilates the mentality which was about to be humanity's instrument in unearthing another of Nature's secrets. The very vehicles of progress are the victims. It will take years to produce the intelligence that was ripe to do its work. The chances of the acquisition of knowledge are being sacrificed. Far more than half of the learning on which the world depends for progress is turned from laboratories and workshops into the destructive arenas of battle.

CAREFUL TALK

By Walt Mason

Of course we'll talk about the war—that can't be helped, by jings; for that is what we're living for, to talk of Vital Things. We'll talk until our throats are hoarse, we'll jabber day by day, but let us, in our brave discourse, be careful what we say. Why sit upon the grocer's bench, or stand along the curbs, and roast the Germans or the French, the Austrians or the Serbs? The justice of each nation's cause can't settled be by you, so you'd be wise to shelve your jaws, and cease your howdydo. The feeling now is too intense; why make it doubly deep? 'Twere better far to paint your fence, or else dehorn your sheep. This combat gives my soul a wrench, and starts the scalding brine; for I have friends among the French, and German friends are mine; and there are Britishers I love, and Russians I admire, and, oh, I hate to see them shove each other in the fire! How I look forward to the day—God grant it soon may come—when all of them will cease to slay and sound the martial drum. And meanwhile I can do no good by springing foolish talk, so I shall saw my pile of wood and get my corn in shock.

Kaiser Has United British Empire

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Lord Curzon of Kedleston, former Viceroy of India, addressing a recruiting meeting at Hull, said:—

"The 'Pinchbeck' Napoleon of this war has succeeded in uniting all parties in the British Empire."

"Great Britain," the speaker continued, "was going through with the business until she had struck the 'New Napoleon,' and his accursed system, to the ground forever."

Lord Curzon said that the country had shown great forbearance with the limitation of the official press bureau, and he believed the Government was conscious of a need for some better form of war correspondence.

Steam Trawler Blown Up.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(Delayed.)—Another Grimsby steam trawler, the Nevigo, has been blown up by a mine, which exploded under the engine room. The skipper and two engineers were injured, but, with the rest of the crew, escaped in the boats before the vessel sank.

ORGANIST TELLS OF HIS ARREST

F. G. Killmaster Was Collared by Police Officer

"It was done quite quietly, but very purposefully, though perfectly politely. The English police officer who had followed me about for a whole afternoon as I walked about the city of Chester, laid a strong hand on my shoulder, got a firm grip of my coat collar, and, walking along beside me, questioned me quickly, demanding that I give a clear account of myself. This, fortunately, I was easily able to do."

So, briefly, does Mr. F. G. Killmaster, organist of St. Paul's church, London, Ont., tell of his extremely trying experience when arrested as a German spy on August 3, Bank Holiday in England.

Followed from Ship.

"I didn't have to produce any papers," added Mr. Kilmaster, "and the constable didn't have to take me along to the police station either. He was satisfied with what I told him.

"He told me, after he had assured himself regarding me, that not only had he himself been watching me all afternoon, but that detectives had been shadowing me since I left the ship by which I arrived.

Real German Spies.

"There were in Edinburgh when I was there 125,000 troops leaving the Waverley station. Trains ran day and night with them. It was pathetic to see the tearful farewells bravely made the best of, but superb to see the fighting spirit alive in everyone, soldier or civilian. I think I noticed this most in Scotland.

"The Alaunia, on which I returned, was crowded with the 1,100 passengers who occupied the room usually allowed for 700. There was a persistent story current that three German spies aboard had menaced the safety of the ship. One was landed at Queenstown; the other two, who had rushed the wireless room, according to the story, were held on board. I did not see them, and I give the story only as I heard it."

Sister in Germany.

Mr. Killmaster is anxious about the safety of his sister, who is now in Dresden, and from whom he has had no word. A Miss Egglestone from England, a friend of hers, is in Berlin, and also out of touch with friends.

"But," said Mr. Killmaster," it was splendid to see the way the Canadian high commissioner handled the work of sending money to Canadians stranded on the continent. 'We're sending what we think they'll need at once. Time enough to see about repayment later,' he said."

Ordered to Economize

PARIS, Sept. 9. — A sergeant of infantry, wounded in the engagement near La Ferte-Gaucher, says: "On Monday morning the enemy weakened again and fled. We pursued them twenty miles, keeping up a steady fire that worked havoc in the German ranks, while not a shot was fired on their side.

"We succeeded in cutting off a detachment and captured seven cannon, two machine guns and many prisoners. One sergeant of infantry admitted that his men had scarcely any ammunition, and had been ordered to economize it to the utmost limit possible. We learned afterwards that an order of the day had been read to the troops announcing six or seven great defeats for France."

An infantry officer, wounded north of Meaux, said that the Germans seemed tired out. He counted 600 dead in a single trench. The French infantry charged, as at Charleroi, against machine guns, and, in spite of strong positions, broke the enemy's line. The retreat of the Germans was precipitate. They seemed to lack ammunition.

Twenty-eight Prussian prisoners, the first to be seen in Paris in the present war, arrived at St. Lazare station yesterday. They had become separated from their regiment and lost their way. They asked a peasant near Meaux if the Germans had taken Paris and how to get there.

The peasant replied that he thought Paris had fallen and would conduct them to the right road. When it was too late the Prussians found he was leading them into the British lines.

THE APPLE MARKET.

Cobourg, Sept. 9.—Farmers state that unless the apple market brightens soon, quantities of the early fall varieties will rot in the orchards. At present very few sales are reported. Apples are a medium crop in this district, and there are a large number of fine orchards, applec ulture being a staple industry of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham.

BATTLE AT LEMBERG WAS THE BLOODIEST IN WORLD'S HISTORY

The eight-day battle at Lemberg, in which 2,500,000 Russians and Austrians were engaged, was the bloodiest in the history of the world. For days the troops were engaged in hand-to-hand fighting, and the losses were tremendous, being approximately 250,000 wounded, killed and missing. The Austrians had five army corps annihilated and probably lost, all told, over 130,000 men. On one battlefield alone near Lemberg the Russians say they buried 14,500 Austrian dead.

Losses in previous great battles were as follows:

Battle	Country	Men	Country	Men
Waterloo	French	40,000	Prus'n & Eng'sh	22,000
Wilderness, May, 1863	Federal	18,000	Confederate	12,000
Wild'ess camp'n, May 1864	Federal	50,000	Confederate	32,000
Sedan	German	9,000	French	17,000
Woerth	German	9,270	French	3,000
Gettysburg	Federals	23,000	Confederates	30,000
Antietam	Federals	11,832	Confederates	8,000
Mukden	Japan	40,000	Russians	97,000

The Austrians are certainly bearing their share of the burden of the war in this campaign. On the northeast they are being swamped by the Russian hosts, and on the south the Servians and Montenegrins are scoring great victories over them on land, while the Anglo-French fleets are bombarding their seaports on the Adriatic.

INCREASED ACTIVITIES IN CANADIAN COTTON MILLS

The war in Europe is causing greatly increased activity in the cotton industry in Canada. Cotton factories that were running on short time for months previous to the breaking out of hostilities are now being operated at full capacity. In many plants the employees are working overtime three or four nights a week, while in some plants night and day shifts are being employed. Although much of the overtime and employment of double shifts is due to rush orders from the Government, conditions in the cotton industry are such as to justify the belief that practically all employees of Canadian cotton mills are assured of continued employment at full time.

The imports of manufactured cotton into Canada have been running at about 60 per cent. of the production in Canada, or 37 per cent. of the consumption in this country. While the largest importations have come from the United Kingdom there have been substantial imports from Germany, France and Switzerland also. The shutting off of imports from Germany and the curtailment of imports from France and Switzerland means that much of the cotton that has been imported into Canada form these countries will now have to be made in this country. The Canadian cotton mills are also being called upon to supply a portion of the trade that formerly went to the United Kingdom. This is due to the increased cost of cotton imported from the United Kingdom owing to increased freight rates, exchange, and insurance, and to uncertainty on the part of many dealers regarding delay or loss in shipment.

The condition of stocks in the retail trade in Canada at the commencement of hostilities was another factor in bringing about the increased demand upon the Canadian cotton mills. For some time previous to the breaking out of the war the consumption of raw cotton in Canada had been very much under normal. Unsatisfactory business conditions had resulted in dealers allowing their stocks to run down. Many dealers who did place orders for future goods made their orders subject to later instructions as to delivery. It is a significant and most encouraging fact that since the commencement of hostilities most of such orders have been released for immediate delivery. The release of those orders, together with the receipt of new orders from regular customers who had delayed ordering because of uncertainty as to the crop and business conditions generally, and orders from other dealers who had formerly ordered abroad, are giving the cotton industry in Canada a great impetus at this time.

The putting of cotton to new uses to replace other imported raw materials that cannot be secured is still another reason for the increased activities in the cotton industry in this country. It has been customary to use jute in the making of sugar bags and of flour bags for export purposes. Jute, in its raw state, comes from India, and as a rule is manufactured in the United Kingdom. The holding up of several shipments of jute has resulted in a dearth of jute in Canada and the substitution of heavy cotton for jute in the manufacture of flour and sugar bags. If the importation of jute continues to be impossible or is materially curtailed, it may be necessary to use heavy cotton instead of jute in the making of oil cloth. Other possible uses for sotton are being investigated by Canadian manufacturers, and as one of them puts it, "new uses are being discovered every day."

Thus, the outlook for the cotton industry in Canada is brighter today than it has been for some time. It is true some manufacturers are a little uneasy regarding the supply of dye-stuffs and chemicals, which have come in the pastf rom Germany, but the general opinion is that with some readjustments and perhaps some changes in shades, sufficient dyestuffs and chemicals to meet the Canadian demand will be secured. Everything points to a busy winter for all the Canadian cotton mills and to continued employment for their 14,000 employees.

BRITAIN'S CALL TO ARMS FROM KITCHENER

The war situation and the necessity of rallying wholeheartedly to the support of Earl Kitchener is set out as follows by the military correspondent of the London Times:

It is most important that the public, at this critical time, should rally wholeheartedly to the support of the great Field Marshal who has taken off his coat to see the country through this war, and means to fight it out with all the tenacity and the perseverance befitting a great occasion in the national history.

This is no time for precedent, red tape, and routine. The country is in for the greatest war of its history, and it must rise to the height of a great responsibility. Let it be clear to all that, though politicians in the past have babbled about great wars they have never seriously faced such a situation, nor does Lord Kitchener now find under his hand the means for waging war on a great scale. Whether it is organization, numbers, arms, equipment, or anything else that goes to make an armed force formidable, we are dreadfully in arrears, and the present generation, by its efforts and its steady patriotism, is called upon to make good the neglect, the selfishness and the callous indifference to defence which has characterized our peace-loving, but not peace-ensuing, nation in the past.

A Nation in Arms.

What is the situation? We are fighting a nation in arms of seventy million people, and we have no good reason to suppose that they have any object in life but to crush us if they can. We have stout allies and many other advantages for which to be thankful, but our two foremost allies, France and Russia, have certain characteristics to which we must not remain blind. France has already thrown the whole of her manhood into the war. She can do no more, and except for her new contingent of recruits she cannot even increase by a man her power in the field. Russia is a mighty power with immense capacity for defence, but with untried and unproved offensive powers. We may beat back the German attack, but behind the first German line are immense reserves, and we must take it that Germany will fight this fight through as the well-known saying has it, "to the last breath of man and horse."

Electric automobiles have been adopted for garbage collection in Paris after a series of tests showing them more economical and flexible than other vehicles.

Paris has opened a municipal laboratory to analyze the liquors sold in the city's cafes.

Another Belgian Town the Victim of German Barbarity

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9—Termonde has been almost entirely burned by the Germans, who first raided the cafes and drank everything discoverable. Then the soldiers violated the women and forcibly seized all the jewels and money they could find.

The Germans have required the burgomaster of the city to make heavy requisitions deliverable to-day.

Describing the burning of Termonde by the Germans, a Ghent correspondent says:

"By midday Sunday the blaze had assumed gigantic proportions, and by Sunday evening not a house stood upright. This had been verified at Zele, where there are thousands of refugees from Termonde. The Germans also pillaged Zele. The suburb of St. Giles also suffered from bombardment and fire."

LEAVING DUTCH FRONTIER.

Holland Is In Fear of an Invasion and Inhabitants Are Flying.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 9.—A Dutch newspaper is authority for the statement that the Germans are steadily approaching nearer to the Dutch frontier. Inhabitants of Belgian territory adjacent to the Dutch frontier are fleeing over the boundary, forsaking their belongings. Many destitute fugitives have arrived in Dutch Flanders. More than 2,000,000 residents have left Paris, through fear of siege by the Germans. This does not include the 25,000 evicted from their homes in the environs of the city, because of the necessity for razing their houses to allow for an unobstructed sweep of artillery defenses.

Tried to Kill Guard.

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 9.—An attempt was made Monday night to kill a guard on duty at a bridge near the village of Belle River. Ashot was fired from ambush, but did not take effect. The would-be assasin escaped, and the provincial police and railway detectives are now working on the case.

Socialist Leader Killed.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—(Via Amsterdam.)—It is announced that Ludwig Frank, the noted Socialist leader and member of the Reichstag, who has been serving in the German army, was killed in the fighting near Laneville on Sept. 3.

Two More Ships Sunk

GRIMSBY, Eng., Sept. 9. — (Via London.)—Wreckage of the trawler Neigen has been picked up in the North Sea and news has reached here of the sinking by a German cruiser of the trawler Capricornus.

With these two vessels the total number of Grimsby trawlers sunk by German ships or mines since the commencement of the war is sixteen.

Belgian Colors as Disguise.

LONDON, Sept. 9. — German fishing boats decked with Belgian colors, according to a Reuter despatch from Ostend, have been sowing mines near the Sandettie Lightship. In consequence of this the mail boat was unable to leave yesterday morning.

Persons arriving in Ostend yesterday report having seen German scouts near Bruges.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Wheat prices tumbled in headlong fashion today, chiefly on account of reported pictories for the allies being taken to mean the possibility of sudden peace. A reaction ensued, but the market closed heavy at 5c to 5⅛c net decline. Corn finished ¼c to 2⅛c off, oats down ⅛c to 1⅛c, to 1⅛c to 1[illegible] down, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a loss of 47½c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 8.—Wheat prices were easier this morning and trading was fairly active, exporters being on the market as good buyers of futures. Winnipeg opening prices were ¼c to 1½c lower, oats ½c lower, and flax 1c to 3c weaker for October and November. A gradual decline occurred in wheat to the extent of ⅝c to 1⅝c under high points. At noon prices stood October $1.15, Dec. $1.16⅜, and May $1.23¼. Oats were fairly steady until near the close, while flax was week, October declining to the extent of 5½c.

The depression generally was caused by heavy receipts and consequent hedging sales with a considerable amount of profit-taking. Further declines occurred at closing, the loss for the day being 3⅛c to 3⅞c for wheat. The cash demand for all wheat and oats was good with offerings few, while flax was quiet.

Cash grains closed: Wheat 2½c to 3½c lower, oats 3c to 3½c lower, flax 5c lower, barley unchanged.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8.—Owing to the weakness in the wheat markets Saturday and today there was practically no demand from foreign buyers today for Manitoba spring wheat and business for export account was dull. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is firm with a steady demand for carlots. There was considerable inquiry from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour for October-November shipment and sales of several round lots were made, some for shipment to Norway. The local market is firm with an active trade passing. Demand for millfeed is good, but offerings are still somewhat limited. In butter the feeling continues strong and prices are steadily working toward a high level, finest creamery selling at auction at 29¼c. The trade in cheese was quiet and the tone of the market seems easy on account of the falling off in the demand from English buyers. Exports last week were 67,000 boxes, compared with 90,613 for the previous week and 77,672 for the corresponding week last year. Demand for eggs is good at firm prices.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Sept. 8.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.17¼; No. 1 northern, $1.16¼; No. 2 do., $1.14¼; Dec., $1.16¼.

CHEESE MARKETS.

STIRLING, Sept. 8.—At today's cheese board 425 boxes were offered; 265 sold at 15 13-16c; balance refused.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 8.—Five hundred and five white packages were offered today. Four hundred and twenty sold at 15 7-16c; 30 at 15 5-16c; balance refused at 15 5-16c.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 67 cars, comprising 1070 cattle, 888 hogs, 854 sheep and lambs and 239 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Loads of choice, heavy steers are worth $8.65 to $9, and one buyer stated that he would pay $9.50 for the right kind; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., are selling at $7.50 to $7.75; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7.25; stockers, $5.50 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a light supply of milkers and springers, and prices were high for choice quality.

Prices ranged at from $60 to $90, and two extra quality cows were reported at $110 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate and values practically unchanged. Choice veal calves, $10 to [illegible]; good, [illegible]; medium, [illegible]; common, [illegible]; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

Omemee, Sept. 9. — Mr. G. E. Broderick, inspector of public schools, was in town last week on business.

Miss Thirza Currie, who has been holidaying in town, returned to her home in Cardinal last Wednesday.

The missionary society of the Methodist Church held a meeting at the home of Mrs. R. J. Milligan Thursday afternoon last.

The Omemee council met on Wednesday evening last in the council chamber, Coronation Hall, and along with other business fixed the rate for this year at 19 mills.

Mr. Bert Horton commenced his return journey to Cleveland in his car taking with him as far as Toronto Mr. A. Williamson. Mrs. Horton and Miss Evelyn went by train to Toronto and will meet Mr. Horton there. They have spent the past two weeks with Mrs. Horton's parents in this place.

Those interested in our high school will be glad to know that a large number of new pupils are attending. Some come from near Lindsay. This speaks well for the work done in our school.

Miss McCrea is visiting at Lake Rosseau with her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Eaton.

Mr. A. C. F. Winslow, formerly of the Bank of Toronto staff here, and later of the staff of the Welland branch of that bank, has enlisted for active service and is now at Valcartier Camp. Before going to Valcartier Mr. Winslow was on guard duty on the Welland Canal. Mr. Winslow holds a commission with the 46th Durham Regt.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Ernest MacPherson have returned from their honeymoon and are occupying their new home.

Mr. Albert Stinson and Mr. J. E. Jones were in Dunsford last Thursday afternoon attending the funeral of the late Morris Thurston.

Mrs. D. Magee returned last Thursday evening after spending a holiday with friends in Dunsford and Lindsay.

Miss E. McCrea was a visitor to Toronto last week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. MacPherson were in Toronto last week attending the funeral of the late D. C. McLean of Toronto.

Reeve Mulligan and Mrs. Mulligan left last Friday morning for North Bay and other points in Northern Ontario.

The many friends of Miss Mary Jardine were deeply grieved to learn that she had passed to the great beyond. Word reached Omemee that she had died late Tuesday night. Miss Jardine was well known around Omemee, and until recently was a head nurse in the new Toronto General Hospital. The funeral took place from the Presbyterian Church on Friday afternoon to Emily cemetery.

Miss Laura Curry, of the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, spent last Friday with her grandmother, Mrs. Curry, in town.

The war situation, rather than depressing real estate transactions, has the appearance of livening things up. Last week two houses changed hands—Mr. James Bushnell has purchased the house owned by Miss Adams, and Mr. J. H. Best has purchased the house occupied by Mr. Bushnell and owned by Mr. Fergus Porter of Janetville.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR LOCAL FIRMS

Mr. C. E. Jamieson announced to the Board of Trade last evening that he had received a letter from the Trade and Industry Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute asking him to make a report on the particular class of goods hitherto purchased by dealers in this locality from firms in Austria and Germany. He was also asked what goods could be made here to supply other parts of the Empire.

This is the golden opportunity for local firms to get extensive advertising, as this committee of the Royal Colonial Institute is co-operating with Chambers of Commerce throughout the Empire.

Relief Committee Down to Business

The Relief Committee in connection with the Patriotic Relief Fund met yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, the following being present: H. Rush, chairman; Dr. Young, Jas. Lynch, W. G. Howden and Mayor Buller.

A local lady was present and asked for a ticket to Quebec where she wished to live with her mother-in-law and be near her husband who is at Valcartier with the 24th Battery. On motion of James Lynch and Mayor Buller it was decided not to furnish the ticket but the Relief Officer was authorized to provide for her in Peterboro.

The meeting decided that until the committee receives information as to the sums which the families of the soldiers will receive from their husbands and the government, the Relief Officer give such relief to such families as he finds necessary. He will be forwarded a check for $100 to assist him in this work.

His Worship the Mayor reported that Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons have offered the use of the Grand Opera House for a night to enable a Patriotic concert being presented. Mr. John Crane and Mr. W. Stocker were making arrangements for the concert. Mayor Buller also referred to the baseball games of the Mercantile League and the football match to be played at Riverside Park next Saturday and the proceeds to go to the fund.

Mr. W. G. Howden gave out the cheerful information that a number of farmers have signified their intention of contributing produce. Relief Officer Miller has offered his shop at 348 Water Street as a store room.

CAMP LIFE AT VALCARTIER

Pte. Taylor Tells How the Boys Are Getting Along

SAYS IT'S HEALTHY

Under the Blankets Early and up With the Birds

The Review has received an interesting letter from Pte. Odely Taylor, now at Valcartier and who before enlisting with the local contingent of volunteers, was on the reportorial staff of The Review.

Pte. Taylor says :—

Everything is satisfactory here except the weather. It rains for three or four days at a time. We had our review yesterday (Sunday) before a great crowd of spectators and we also had a cold and exceedingly damp rain.

As for general affairs of the camp, everything is routine with variations such as night marches which are interesting and instructive to the men. The local company was one of the best in the march past on Sunday and the boys received their share of applause. About thirty members of the 66th of Sault Ste. Marie form part of our section of A. Company. Our officers are working hard and in all probability, Lt. C. H. Ackerman and Lt. Jones will accompany the battalion to the front. The former has been actively engaged in practically all the drills and has shown himself to be a most efficient subaltern. Camp life is almost the same as at the annual camp at Petawawa, only on a more extensive scale.

The boys generally "hit" the cold ground about 9 p.m. Each bed consists of one rubber and three blankets and your kit for a pillow.

It is healthy. We rise at 5.30 a.m. and you can depend upon it, the atmosphere is somewhat chilly. After blankets have been folded, the tent rolled and cleaned, the men are put through a short physical exercise by Sergt. Major Dunkerly who was Sergt. Instructor to the 57th regiment. This is followed by breakfast consisting of bacon, coffee or tea, potatoes and bread.

After breakfast parades and musketry practice are held and dinner is usually called at 12.30, and parade is called again at 2.30. Spare time is spent by the boys in sewing on buttons and by the way, we are very grateful to the ladies at home for their kindness in sending the housewives.

The various squad drills are carried on during the afternoon by the section commanders. Several night attacks and night marches have been carried out. The men show an aptitude for the work and are being whipped into shape.

In the evening when off duty, we make a "bee-line" for the canteens. Here the soldirs meet one another and each feels he is one of one great family. Visitors are plentiful and every time the autos appear with their loads of maidens, the boys make a general rush. Yesterday about thirty of the local boys gathered and as the auto loads of girls passed we gave vent to some classic Peterboro yells, and a few "delightfully" rendered songs.

Everywhere we meet Peterboro boys. Some in camp are "Buck" Dean with the Winnipeg contingent, also Bill Smith, Hugh Wallace, "Frisky" Bell, "Pete" Campbell, and others too numerous to mention.

Lt. Harold Matthews is here and is with the Ottawa artillery.

Only about ten of the Peterboro volunteers failed to pass the rigid examination which took place shortly after our arrival but they will likely remain in camp and may be taken with the second contingent.

PETER THOMPSON IS APPOINTED

Not a Word Said When Council Makes the Appointment

At last night's council meeting the following by-laws were passed :

By-law No. 1850, appointing Peter Thompson plumbing inspector, at a salary of $600 per annum. There was no discussion. Mr. Thompson is now in complete charge of the plumbing.

By-law No. 1847, authorizing the construction of sewers on streets, highways and roads named in the by-law, and the issuing of debentures for the payment of the same.

By-law No. 1848, authorizing the city of Peterboro to enter into an agreement with the corporation of the township of North Monaghan, re outfall sewer.

By-law No. 1849, to provide for the borrowing of $73,000, and to hypothecate certain debentures of the city to secure repayment of the said loans.

WOODEN POLES NOT ALLOWED

For Railway Siding Into C.P.R. Station

"CALL THE BLUFF"

At a meeting of the City Council some time ago a letter was read from the Peterboro Radial Railway Company, in which the city was requested to supply trolley poles for the siding to the C. P. R. depot. No action was taken, hence a similar letter confronted them last night. According to the agreement between this company and the city, the latter should supply the poles, and in the communication it was stated that the railway company have the necessary poles, which they would sell to the city for the work. If the city did not take immediate action they would go ahead and insert wooden poles.

City Solicitor Gordon explained that the poles were to be placed on private property (C. P. R.), and thus the city was not compelled to furnish the poles. The Mayor was very indignant over the fact that the Radial Railway Company intended inserting wooden poles, and termed it another "hold-up."

"We'll just call their bluff," remarked Ald. Green, "and tell them that wooden poles were forbidden."

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Anderson, the matter was left in the hands of the Mayor, Ald Duncan and the City Engineer, with power to act.

125 Appeals.

A letter was received from the City Solicitor asking permission to employ valuators of property to give evidence at the court of revision. Mr. Gordon was present, and stated that there would be some 125 appeals, mostly from George St. merchants, and to prevent loss by having the assessment reduced, he advised employing expert valuators. On motion of Ald. Green and Anderson, the City Solicitor was given permission to employ such men.

The Retail Merchants intend employing solicitors and valuators, and to be prepared to fight for their rights the city decided the above step advisable.

Just for Peace.

A communication from Peck, Kerr and McElderry requested the city to pay $109, the expenses of the township of North Monaghan, in the recent outfall sewer problem, which came before the Provincial Board of Health. After a lengthy discussion, during which Ald. Green strenuously objected to paying it when not compelled to, the Council, in an effort to have things run as smoothly as possible, decided to pay the above amount.

The following motion of Ald. Anderson and McIntyre was carried : That upon the by-law being passed to issue debentures for the cost of constructing pavements recently completed for which assessments is being made and the debentures being issued, the city treasurer is directed to deliver the same to the manager of the Bank of Montreal at security for loans advanced against them.

About two thirds of the mileage of government railways in Switzerland rests upon steel ties.

PAVING COMPANY READY TO START OPERATIONS

Board of Works is to Investigate With a View of Arranging For Paving Being Done.

Ald. Stratton is quite a traveller. esterday he went to Toronto and secured a convention for the city. The day before he was in Belleville and when he spoke of his trip to the railroad town at the council meeting last evening his theme of conversation evinced the fact that he was laboring for Peterboro. He met a representative of the Foley and Gleason Co. and was informed that the paving company were ready to start work at once if the city had the money to do their share.

Ald. Anderson let out the information that already there had been many offers for debentures and in his opinion it would not be improbable that sufficient money would be raised to allow the city to go ahead with some of the paving anyway. It was finally decided to leave the matter with the chairman of the Board of Works and City Engineer to order the paving being continued immediately if it be possible.

CITY WON'T WASTE TIME AND MONEY WITH EXPERIMENT

Pass up the Idea of Making Pipes for Sewer Work

Will Proceed With Outfall Sewer at Once They Say

The question of when the work on the outfall sewer would be commenced came before the City Dads last night. Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works, informed the council that they had decided to go ahead at once. The City Engineer and he intended attempting to manufacture the pipe but as Hall and Taylor, a local firm, could do it a great deal cheaper, they wished the opinion of the council on the matter. It was generally understood that by manufacturing the pipe, time would be wasted and the work delayed so it was decided to buy the pipe.

The question of which firm would obtain the work was left in the hands of the city engineer and Ald. Duncan.

The chairman of the Board of Works also brought up the idea of procuring an excavating machine which would enable the city to go on with the work when the ground is frozen. The matter was left to the Board of Works but it was generally opined that it would be a better plan to give the work to the men.

DAIRYMEN'S CONVENTION COMES HERE

Will Hold Forth for Three Days in January

A GRANT OF $120

Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Reception Committee, attended the meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairying Association held in Toronto yesterday. The purpose of his presence there was to urge that association that the next convention be held in Peterboro.

Ald. Stratton reported to the City Council last night that he was successful in inducing the association to hold their next convention here and the dates would be January 6-7-8. In regards to the grant Ald. Stratton informed them the city would not exceed the grant given the last time which was $125.00.

Several councillors took exception to giving any grant but the matter was laid over for the time being.

Some credit is due G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., who as an officer of the association used his efforts to bring the convention here.

POLICE COURT

Archie McDonald pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly and mixing this up with profane language at today's police court—$2 and costs.

William Wallraven was up on a charge of vagrancy. His case was remanded for further investigation, coming up September 16th.

John Shannahan has been indulging too freely lately and recently lost control of himself, putting himself liable for two dollars.

Jerry Van Norman has been causing a disturbance at his home on Water Street and has not been giving his wife enough money to run the house in a proper style. He was fined two and costs.

The case of Joseph Condon, of Douro, threatening to murder his sister, Josephine, was remanded until Friday.

To drive household sewing machines there has been invented an electric motor driven by a storage battery.

LIGHTS IN EAST CITY TWINKLE

Ald. Anderson Draws Defects to Attention of Council

Ald. Anderson continues to look after the interests of the residents of Brooklyn. Last evening he brought up an unsatisfactory condition of lights in the residences of some of the folks beyond the bridge. It appears that since the Vermont Marble Co. tapped the lighting system, bad light in some of the houses has been the result. Ald. Anderson took the matter to the Peterboro Light and Power Co. but as the city takes over their plant on the first of October, they would not undertake to produce a remedy which was installing a special line for the Vermont Marble Co.

His Worship stated that at present the city was powerless but all similar trouble would be rectified after the first of next month.

Ald. Green suggested that the shades over the small lamps which are to be found on some streets be re-enamelled. He claimed better light would result. The matter was left in the hands of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Ald. Duffus launched the meeting into discussing bad sections of road by asking them when the west section of Homewood Avenue and Smith Street from George to the G. T. R. would be looked after. The Mayor mentioned a hole on Weller Street and another in front of the Peterboro Creamery but the list was brought to a close and the matter referred to the City Engineer.

GOOD GRUB AND PLENTY OF IT

In a letter received from Major Bennett at Valcartier, he states that the men are all in fine condition. He states that the equipment that the soldiers have received, such as boots, uniforms, towels, etc., are of the very best. He states that the food is still maintaining a high standard, and that there is plenty of it.

GENERAL RETREAT BY THE AUSTRIANS

PETROGRAD, Sept. 9.—The Russian forces are making satisfactory progress along the Austrian front, where there have been serious engagements, according to the Russian official statement, which says:

"In the Rawa region, the Russian commander, Gen. Ruzsky, has fought a fierce battle against strong Austrian forces. The Russian troops have delivered an attack against a very strongly fortified Austrian position near Gorodok.

"On the left bank of the Vistula the offensive movements of the Russians have proved favorable to their arms."

Signs of General Retreat.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A despatch to The Evening News from Petrograd says the Russian newspapers publish a report from a highly authoritative source to the effect that there are signs of a general retreat of the Austrians on their whole front between the Rivers Bug and Vistula.

The fortresses of Przemysl and Jaroslau, on the River San, and Cracow, on the Vistula river, are the only obstacles the Austrians now have to prevent the Russian advance.

Przemysl is a strongly fortified military camp fifty-one miles west of Lemberg, with 42 forts and 40,000 men, who have been reinforced by the soldiers who escaped from Lemberg and Poland.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Nish, Servia, says the Servian army has begun the invasion of Bosnia, and has crossed the River Save near Mitrovitch.

While the Servians attempt the conquest of Bosnia from the north Montenegrin troops expect to effect the conquest of Herzegovina from the south.

Fear Hungarian Revolution.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—A Petrograd despatch to the Havas Agency says that according to information received at the Russian capital, the Austrians fear that a revolution will break out in Bukowina, a crown land of Austria-Hungary, in the region of the Carpathian Mountains, where Hungarian sentiment is reported to be growing in favor of Russia.

An official statement given out here yesterday says that Russian cavalrymen are now upon the crests of the Carpathian Mountains.

Continuing, the announcement says that the Russian offensive against the Austrians in Galicia continues successfully. The Austrian fort at Nicolaieff, about twenty-five miles southwest of Lemberg, has been captured by the Russians, notwithstanding the fact that it was protected by armored turrets and three lines of fortifications, and a triple line of entanglements. The Austrians retreated from Nicolaieff, abandoning their supply trains, the Russians took many prisoners, and captured also forty guns and great quantities of ammunition.

The Austrian forts at Nicolaieff, which has been captured by the Russians, have enormous strategic importance. The city is at the intersection of the railroad lines leading into the Carpathian country.

Italians of Trieste In Mourning.

ROME, Sept. 9. — Despatches received from Trieste, an Austrian seaport on the Adriatic coast, say that mourning there is general, as the 97th and 27th Austrian infantry regiments which lost 4,000 men in Galicia, were composed of Italians from the Istria peninsula.

GERMANS TRYING TO REPAIR TERRIBLE INROADS MADE BY THE ALLIES

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Despatches received yesterday from France announced that the Kaiser and the general staff were hurriedly rearranging the disorganized German battle line following the repulse of their troops by the allies on the French centre caused widespread jubilation here. It is said that the Anglo-French troops violently attacked the Germans, causing the invaders right army terrible losses. The reverses were of such a drastic character that Gen. von Kluk, the German commander, asked for an armistice to bury his dead and gather his wounded. The request was refused.

Gen. von Buelow's army is said to be hurrying to the assistance of Gen. von Kluk in an effort to prevent his troops from being scattered or captured. The Kaiser is strengthening his centre by every available means. The French centre has been greatly reinforced by both British and French troops, but the Emperor hopes to gain a decisive victory by a new movement.

The following official statement was given out yesterday afternoon by the War Office:—

"The left wing of the allied armies, comprising portions of the force, defending Paris, continues to make progress. The advance reaches the banks of the River Ourcq in the region of Montmirail. The Germans are retiring in the direction of the River Marne, between Meaux and Sezanne.

"Violent encounters have occurred on the French centre between Fere Champenoise and Vitry-le-Francois in the southern portion of the forest of Argonne. The French have fallen back now there. The Germans have lost greatly near Vitry. The movement of retirement is confirmed on the German side.

"On the French right a German division attacked on the axis of Chateau Salins and Nancy, but were repulsed to the northward, passing the forest of Champenoux. Farther to the east the French troops re-occupied the crest of Mandry and the peak of Fourneaux.

"There is no change in the situation in the Province of Alsace."

Military observers say that the retreat of the Germans and the rearrangement of their lines now in progress is believed to be due to fear of attack from the rear by an army of British, Russian and East Indian troops, now believed to be in Belgium and France. Russia's force in that army is placed at 250,000 men.

Virtually all the news of the fighting in France received here yesterday, deals with the success of the allies left wing in driving back the German right. In spite of the reported reverses to the latter the encounter now taking place between the centres of the opposing forces is the more important.

The Germans, after their powerful swing of their right toward Paris, which enveloped the allies' left wing and drove them back within the cover of the guns in the outer fortifications surrounding Paris, have now restored their attention to the country southwest of Verdun. The two forces came in contact yesterday along the line between Virty and Fere Champanoise, near the southern border of the Department of Marne.

The French were faced with the alternative of meeting the Germans or of falling back again and permitting the German centre to move forward to a position where it might envelop the entire French right and force 150,000 to 200,000 men to surrender or to retreat in Switzerland.

However, the French had been reinforced by British and met the attack. The Kaiser's army is pounding the French centre with a force made up of the combined armies of the Grand Duke Albrecht, Crown Prince Frederick William and of Gen. von Hausen.

Violent encounters have occurred in the forest of Argonne, in which, according to the latest advices the French have taken many prisoners, including a battalion of German infantry, a number of rapid fire guns and many gun carriages. Details of the fighting between the British and French columns of the allies' left flank, which is still driving the Germans back on their right wing are hourly expected.

For the first time since the campaign began in France, the German force is opposed by one superior in number. Gen. von Kluk is dropping back, after having suffered heavy losses. The army of Gen. von Buelow is being rushed to his aid.

More Aircraft For Germany.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A despatch to The Express from Amsterdam says:

"According to a Berlin message, statements made by members of the Reichstag, on the subject of naval expansion, point to the building of 12 torpedo boat divisions, six airship divisions, a number of mine-layers and other craft.

"The rapid construction of three warships and two smaller cruisers is also advocated."

Tried To Stir Up Holy War.

MILAN, Sept. 9.—(Via London.)—The Eccolo confirms the reports of the discovery by the Italian authorities of a plot by German emissaries to stir up the Mohammedans in Tripoli to a holy war. It is said the plan was intended to ensure Italy's permanent neutrality by occupying her attention with internal troubles in Tripoli.

KAISER BLAMES MINISTERS.

Berlin Despatch Says Bethmann-Hollweg and Von Jagow Resigned.

ROME, Sept. 9.—According to a despatch from Berlin to The Messaggero a serious controversy has arisen between the German Emperor and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Minister of Foreign Affairs von Jagow, the two Ministers being regarded as responsible for the unreadiness of German diplomacy which led to the coalition of European states against Germany. It is reported, according to the published despatch, that their resignations have been tendered.

CHANCELLOR BETHMANN-HOLLWEG.

FOUGHT HAND TO HAND

Germans Lost Huge Numbers in Three Days' Battle.

Wounded Soldiers Say Fighting in Champagne District Has Resulted in the Capture of Thirty Thousand Germans.

PARIS, Sept. 9. — Accounts of wounded soldiers who reached Paris yesterday afternoon indicate that the result of the three days' fighting in the Champagne country has been more favorable for the allies than at first supposed. They say the German losses in killed were enormous, and that a great number of prisoners were taken. One French officer estimates the prisoners at 30,000.

The Champagne district includes parts of the departments of Marne, Ardennes, Aube and Haute-Marne.

Paris went wild with joy yesterday afternoon, after Gen. Gallieni in person posted his official bulletin at 3.15 o'clock.

The general declared that the German attack had lost its weight, and that in the west, near Paris, the combined British-French line had completely crumpled up the German right, taking thousands of prisoners.

Although the newspapers left in the city were not permitted to publish extras, they posted the glad tidings on their bulletin boards.

Hundreds of wounded from the front were passing around the city yesterday. All declared that the fighting to the north and east of Paris was most desperate.

Each side in succession was reported charging desperately, with a goodly part of the general fighting of the hand-to-hand variety.

The Germans were said to have been pushed back by sheer weight of numbers, the British cavalry and infantry charging en masse along a battle front of nearly twenty miles.

The British were said to have encouraged the French to such an extent that their commanding officers had difficulty in restraining them.

Although the military officers here profess to believe that the Germans have now definitely abandoned the plan to besiege Paris, the work of preparing for possible attack continues. No one except soldiers is permitted within the chain of forts, and the narrow-gauge railroads connecting the various defences are filled with trains coming and going, transferring men and supplies.

Three hundred German prisoners, taken at Meaux, arrived here last night.

The battle which is proceeding to the east of Paris appears to be the most important and most stubbornly fought combat of the campaign. The military authorities decline to give any indication of the number of men engaged, but hundreds of thousands are participating on both sides.

According to those who are in a position to obtain authentic information, the casualties have been so great that the Germans have requested an armistice of 24 hours. The armistice was refused with the response: "We grant you that time to get out of France."

GERMAN LOSSES TERRIBLE.

War Not Going as Kaiser Expected, Says Wounded Officer.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A Post correspondent wiring from a point not given in the despatch has seen a letter from a high German officer invalided home, in which he states:

"The war is not going quite as we expected, and the resistance of the allied forces is extraordinary. We are beginning to feel nervous as to results.

"The German losses are terrible, so terrible that the Emperor has forbidden their disclosure. Our generals have been wantonly wasteful with our men, who have been mowed down in thousands.

"While it is impossible to say what our losses are I estimated them between 350,000 and 400,000. If they continue at this rate we shall be quite unable to meet Russia with any hope of success."

EVERY PENNY NEEDED

Last Millions Will Tell the Tale, Says Lloyd George

LONDON, Sept. 9. — "We want every penny we can raise to help fight the enemy," said David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying to a deputation from the municipalities, which wanted the aid of the treasury in securing loans at cheap rates.

"We must come out triumphant in this struggle," continued the Chancellor, "and as finance is going to play a very important part in it we must husband our resources. We don't want a penny spent which is not absolutely essential to relieve distress. In my judgment the last few hundred millions may win this war.

"The first hundred millions our enemies can stand as well as we can, outlast they cannot, thank God! And therefore I think cash is going to count much more than we imagine. At the present moment we are only at the beginning; we are fighting a very tough enemy, who is well prepared for the fight, and will probably fight to the very end before he will accept the only conditions upon which we can possibly make peace.

"If we are wise, that is where our resources will come in, not merely of men, but of cash. We have won with a silver bullet before. We financed Europe in the greatest war we ever fought, and that is what won. Of course, British tenacity and British courage always come in and they always will. Let us remember that the British cash tells, too."

King of Tongas Neutral!

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The news has been received here that the King of the Tonga Islands, in the Southern Pacific, has declared his neutrality. The Tonga Islands were in danger of starvation, as their food supply from New Zealand was cut off until a ship was sent to the relief of the natives. The ship gave the king his first news of the war, and the monarch proclaimed his neutrality.

SHAG HAS THE PENNANT WAY

Also Many of His Players Have Worked as Champions

Of the sixteen Senators who finished the season, several have been on other pennant-winning clubs. Manager Shaughnessy has managed four clubs that carried off a flag. In 1909 he led the Roanoke Virginia League club to a pennant; copped the Central League rag in 1912 with Fort Wayne, and won with Ottawa last year and this season.

Dusty Bullock has been with a pennant winner for four years. In 1916 he was with Salina, which won the Kansas State League; Berlin, winners of Canadian League in 1911, and Ottawa in 1913 and 1914.

George Nill has been on four flag teams as follows: 1903, Colorado Springs Western League; 1910 Wilkesbarre, New York State League; 1912, Seattle, Northwestern League, and Ottawa, 1914.

Dad Stewart was with Springfield, Ill., in the Three Eye League in 1909, when they won the pennant; 1910-1911, Kalamazoo Southern Michigan League and Ottawa this season.

Cozy Dolan claims six pennants, viz:—1905, 1907, 1909 Holyoke New England League; Ottawa 1912, 13 and 14.

Lefty Rogers was with Fort Wayne in 1912, when that team won the Central and the last two seasons with Ottawa.

Frank Kubat has been with Ottawa for three years, meaning three pennant winners. Smykal has been here two seasons. Ditto Artie Lage, Mitchell, Roberts, Shockcor and Peterson are experiencing their first flag winner. Powers has been onto two, both Ottawa; and Bramble was with Berlin in 1911 and Ottawa this season.—Ottawa Free Press.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Manager Shaughnessy sent Herb Shocker back against the Peterboro team with a view to taking the deciding clash, while Curley Blount called upon Ken Tracey to serve them up for the club from the Lift Lock City. Don't fancy for a minute that Peterboro did not try to win. They started out determined to get an even break at least. That they had absolutely no intention of "laying down" to Ottawa was evident after the second inning when Outfielders Welsh and Rooney almost came to blows on the Peterboro bench. Welsh had given the Ottawas two runs on a wild throw and an error in the first and second, so Rooney lost no time in taking him to task. "Do you mean to say I'm not trying?" hotly demanded Welsh. "No; but you can try a little harder next time," shot back Rooney. Welsh made a rush for his team-mate, but Tracey and Byrne interfered and "Biddy" Dolan finally restored peace. Peterboro fought determinedly for the game and gave the "fans" a scare by tallying two in their half of the sixth, but Ottawa came back with three and thereafter there remained little doubt as to where the championship pennant for 1914 would fly. Shocker had much the better of the argument. He held Peterboro to six hits, while the Ottawas found Tracey for fourteen, including several extra base blows. Features of the game included a sensational one hand stab by King and runnig catches by Smykal, Mitchell and Nill. All the Ottawas hit the ball hard, Rogers, Mitchell and Nill having three safeties each.

COMMENT As You Like It

(Hamilton Herald.)

Second-baseman King, of the Petes, should go to the front. He showed so much anxiety for battle on Saturday that the only regret we have is that he's not a Canadian and eligible for battle.

Outside of the fact that he argued himself out of the first game, threatened to take a punch at his boss, Curley Blount, and then flirted with the undertaker by a near-fight with First-baseman Dolan, of his own club, he had a very peaceable afternoon.

He was caught napping off first base in the fifth inning, but tried to pan Umpire Jocko Halligan for calling him out. For this was he banished. Curley Blount then reprimanded him for being so ready with his tongue, and he also threatened to show him the manly art of self-defence.

But the previous incidents were small compared to what he accomplished in the eighth inning. Dolan, using his bat, accidentally broke it, and the grouchy one grabbed one of the big first-baseman's war clubs and deliberately broke it against the side of the Peterboro bench. It looked for a few minutes as if King was in for serious injury, but cooler heads intervened, and, fortunately, Dolan did not strike him.

King was lucky that he got off so easy, for he acted like a spoiled child.

Changes are also certain to be made in the Canadian circuit. Up West some of the sport writers say that there will be no such a thing as the Canadian League next year, because the majority of the clubs were heavy losers this season. It is probable that a six-club circuit will be in operation, consisting of Ottawa, London, Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto, and one other city. Erie proved a dismal failure from every standpoint. They turned the cold shoulder on the Canadian League and Owner O'Neil, who is reported to have dropped about $6,000, will certainly not try it there again. It would have been better to have retained Guelph. It would be a great thing for theg ame if Montreal would drop out of the International and enter the Canadian, but this does not seem a probability, for next year at least. Sammy Lichtenhein is determined to remain in the International.

Hamilton, Ottawa and London are splendid ball towns and Brantford, with a winning team, would be a corker. Toronto will patronie Canadian League ball henceforth. In any event the Toronto team is a strong drawing card on the road. These clubs could afford to have one weak member, but it is useless to attempt to carry such excess baggage as St. Thomas, Peterboro and Erie.—Ottawa Citien.

Big Bill of Sports for Riverside Park

Indications are that there will be a good program at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, in aid of the Patriotic Fund. It will be as follows; At 2 o'clock Red Caps vs. De Laval, baseball. 3.45 England vs. Scotland, soccer. Mayor Buller will "kick off."

5.00 Drafting Room vs. Bankers, baseball.

Citizens would do well to turn out in full force for this patriotic afternoon, and a glance over the program ensures every attendant an enjoyable afternoon. The two ball games are the most crucial in the Mercantile League and undoubtedly many interested in the teams will be present.

OFF SEASON FOR THE PUGILISTS

Most of the Top Notchers Take it Easy During Summer

STIR NOW BEING MADE

What becomes of fighters in the summer? During the winter the realm of pugilism is alive with boxers in every class and of every description, but just as soon as the warm weather sets in little is heard of them.

This summer, above all others, has been devoid of ring bouts. Promoters appear to be willing to stage fights, but the matchmakers claim they cannot secure first-class attractions because the boxers are at their summer homes or enjoying vacations elsewhere.

Where the Fighters Summer.

Charley White, for instance, has taken part in two contests since the summer set in. These were mere workouts for him, but they helped to defray his summer's expenses at Glenwood Springs, Colo.

Mike Gibbons has fought twice this summer, once at Columbus, O., and the other time at Glenwood Park, Ill., where he met Billy Walters. The bouts took up three days of his time, but after they were over he rushed back to Lake Minetonka, Minnesota. He has a summer home up there, and spends his time fishing. Five years ago the "phantom" was tinning roofs during July and August, but that was before he "knocked 'em stiff" during the cold months.

Jos Mandot likes Wilson Beach, near the Windy City, and he has spent his off-season in Chicago. He moved within a stone's throw of the lake, and he has not missed a day in the water; in fact, he has lived in a bathing suit almost entirely since June 20.

Johnny Coulon came out of his shell long enough this summer to lose his title, but this over with he rushed back to the woods, and he intends to stay there until cooler days set in.

This only takes in the top-notchers, but even the second-class battlers are "playing" the cool spots this year. Knockout Brown has just been showing himself around Cedar Lake; Tommy Gray has a summer home on Fox River; Jack Britton thinks Wilson Beach is the ideal summering place, while Matty McCue is camping out near Racine. Joe Sherman has been calling Lake Waubesia his home for the last three months; Ad Wolgast is on an extended fishing trip through Michigan, and Willie Shafer is cooling off at Paw Paw Lake.

Preparing for the Fall.

While the battlers are keeping in the shade their managers are beginning to open up their fall campaigns. White's opening battle will probably be at Milwaukee late in September. His opponent is yet to be selected, but Tom Andrews has not given up hope of getting Freddie Welsh in Chicago. The champion owes him a date, and if the war does not keep Freddie abroad he is sure to appear in the Badger arena before Christmas. Leach Cross, Joe Rivers, Johnny Dundee and Jimmy Duffy are other lightweights who are booked for matches during the season.

Mandot's plans are not yet mapped out, but his first apearance will no doubt be at New Orleans over the 20-round route with his old-time opponent, Joe Rivers. Promoter Torterish has had this mill signed up for several weeks, but he is waiting until the baseball season dies down before announcing it. Another bout of importance billed for the Crescent City is a bantma-weight clash, featuring J. Coulon and Kid Hermann.

Besides the lightweight cards at Milwaukee, feather-weights are also going to get a big play this winter, especially since Ritchie Mitchell has shown promise of developing into a title contender. He has been coming fast of late and he has all the earmarks of a high-class artist.

AID OUR BOYS AT VALCARTIER

Proceeds of Athletic Meet for the Soldiers

HOW Y.M.C.A. HELPS

The Y.M.C.A. has decided to give all the proceeds from the city track and field championships to the fund which provides tents for writing letters home, writing material, amusements in the shape of moving picture athletics, baseball and football, games for their spare time and camp fire and song services in the evenings.

One of our boys from this city writing says that on Sunday night there were 5000 men gathered around the camp fire singing hymns.

We all realize the responsibility to the families which are left at home. But at the same time we need to remember that there are thousands of men who are away from home and home comforts. They miss the home friendships, they need games and sports for their spare time. Most of all they need the influence of Christian men to direct these activities. The National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association is carrying on this work among our boys.

And here is an opportunity for the people of Peterboro to help the boys who have gone to camp, by supporting the athletic meet on Sept. 19th.

The committee in charge of the sports are endeavoring to make this the best meet held here in years and along with the regular championship events. Some new features will be added one of which will be a road race. A handsome prize has been offered. The Howden, Peck, Eastwood and Haycke trophies along with several other prizes which will be announced within the next few days will be given.

This competition is open to any amateur athlete in good standing with the A.A.U. of C. or the Athletic League of the Y.M.C.A.

It is an all round competition so that the man who can do something in several events will win the prize rather than the specialist in one event.

Every athlete in the city and surrounding country of Peterboro should send in his entry and in this way help along the fund for our own soldier boys.

Tickets will be sold by the boys of the Y.M.C.A., also at the Y.M.C.A. office.

For further particulars see Geo. A. Carson, Physical Director, Y. M. C. A. Phone 246.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

HALL—MEYERS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, 271 Brock street, when Miss Angeline Orilla, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Meyers, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Gerald Russell, son of Mr. E. H. D. Hall. The bride was assisted by Miss Grace Reinhardt, while Mr. Holmer Meyers, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The bride was given away by her father. Only the near relatives of the contracting parties were present. After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served. On their return from a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Hall will reside on Sherbrooke street. The Rev. R. G. Peever officiated.

The Kitchener Red Cross Club, recently formed in this city with the idea of assisting the families of the volunteers held another very enthusiastic meeting last evening at the home of Mrs. Knox, Gilmour St. It was decided to hold a sale of candies and cakes on the market next Saturday. The "sweets" will be supplied by the members of the club. The organization now embraces some fifty members and any other citizens desiring to join may do so by communicating with Mrs. Knox.

Mrs. Robert Hasken, of Peterboro, is spending a week in Toronto, visiting her sister, Mrs. J. F. Bray.

Rev. C. Cunningham, formerly pastor of the Free Methodist Church, has gone to Toronto, and his place has been taken here by Rev. E. Snyder.

Mr. M. Derrick of Sutton, Quebec, and Miss Gladys and Ethel Derrick of Montreal are visiting Mr. F. Derrick, 479 King St.

Mr. Gerald McFadden has returned from Lindsay and Downeyville.

The marriage took place on Wednesday, July 29th, 1914, in Nampa, Idaho, of Mrs. Dorinda Scott, of Peterboro, to Mr. Chas. W. Seydell, of Middleton, Idaho.

Mr. Peter Thompson has returned to his home on George Street after spending some time in Toronto, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Mr. Alex. Ross has returned to the city after spending several days in Toronto.

Mr. Dick Smith, of this city, has returned after spending several days at his home in Brantford.

Mr. D. A. McDonald, Montreal, is in the city on business.

D. Fettes, Detroit, and A. Fettes, Toronto, are guests at the Snowden House.

Mr. M. D. Larose, Ottawa, is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. A. M. Wilburn, Toronto, is in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hayes, Lakefield, are guests at the White House.

Mr. W. G. Harris left this morning for Detroit where he will reside.

Mr. V. Eastwood, manager of Royal Bank, returned to the city this morning.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, of this city, was in Toronto on Tuesday on business.

Mrs. Wm. Brown and daughter, Gertrude, of Campbellford, are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. James McMartin at McMartinville.

THANKSGIVING DAY THURSDAY OCT 8

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—Thursday, Oct. 8, has been fixed by order in council as the date of Thanksgiving Day this year. During the last few years Monday has been the customary day for the festival. This year, therefore, makes a change.

COUNCIL WOULD CONTINUE PEACE PLANS CENTENARY

Secretary E. H. Scammel of the Canadian Peace Centenary Association, sent a letter to Mayor Buller, asking for the opinion of the Council of Peterboro re the advisability of going ahead with the celebration of the Hundred Years of Peace between the British Empire and United States in view of the present war. On motion of Ald. Johnston and Duffus the clerk will notify Mr. Scammell that the city endorses continuing the movement.

SETTLE ACCOUNTS FOR DAMAGE AT $30

Acting on the advice of City Solicitor G. N. Gordon the Council decided to settle the account of Mrs. M. Thompson for $35. This amount was claimed by her, through the law firm of O'Connell and Corkery, as damages for injuries received by falling on Simcoe Street some time ago. The cause of her fall was an upheaval in the cement sidewalk. While discussing the item last evening the City Fathers all voiced the idea that where such condition exists it is evidence of neglect on the part of city officials. It is the intention of the Mayor to bring the responsible parties to time.

Patriotic Concert.

Those interested and willing to assist in the proposed patriotic concert to be given shortly are requested to meet in the council chamber on Friday afternoon next at 4 p. m.

Mr. J. J. Turner has given free use of the Opera House for the occasion and it is hoped our musicians and others will respond with enthusiasm.

FIFTY YEARS IN THE PRIESTHOOD

Purse of Gold Presented to Bishop Dowling

Bishop Dowling, of Hamilton, who was Roman Catholic bishop of Peterboro diocese some years ago, celebrated on Monday his fiftieth year in the priesthood.

Bishop Dowling was presented with a purse of gold, the gift of priests and people of the diocese of Hamilton.

He went to Hamilton when a small boy, and there received his early education. On the completion of his studies he was ordained a priest at St. Mary's, now the cathedral church of his diocese, and was then sent as a missionary to the churches at Galt, Paris, Hespeler and Burford. He retained this charge for twenty-one years, during which time he was made vicar-general of the diocese. He was then made bishop of Peterboro in succession to the late Bishop Jarnet, and remained in Peterboro for two years, at the end of which time he returned to Hamilton as bishop of the local diocese in succession to the late Bishop Carberry. Two years ago he celebrated the silver jubilee of his appointment as bishop. He is still in the enjoyment of a good measure of health, and his friends in all parts of the country will devoutly wish for a long continuance of it.

MOVE ON THE PEANUT VENDORS

Should Not Remain at One Point

Ald. Duffus at last night's meeting asked if something could not be done to prohibit pedlars remaining too long in front of a place of business. It was not the physically unfit men who seek their living by peddling goods that he had reference to, but to peanut vendors, etc. The matter will be brought to the attention of the chief of police.

Mayor Buller had a "follow up" to this suggestion. It was to have a license for a transient trader reduced from $100 to a more moderate sum. His worship knew of one case where a man, not any too well fixed financially, desired to go into business, but before he could do so he would have to pay $100. The matter was left in the hands of the finance committee, who will undertake to make things suitable to both the business man and a prospective business man.

MUCH MONEY LEFT WITH THE FARMERS

Horses Were Purchased for Militia Department

Fenelon Falls, Sept. 9.—It is estimated that one day's buying of horses in Victoria County put over $10,000 in the pockets of the farmers in this district, 65 horses having been purchased in one day. In all, nine cars were bought for the Militia Department.

JAS. K. HACKETT FAVORITE ACTOR

Has Scored Many Successes in Popular and Romatic Roles

One of the most important of the year's theatrical attractions comes in the early season. At the Grand on Friday next, Sept. 11, James K. Hackett, that admirable young actor who has scored so many successes in popular and romantic roles, will be seen here for the first time as the dark-visaged Moor in Shakespeare's great drama of love and tragedy, "Othello." He will be supported by a cast specially chosen for this production and including, besides Miss Beatrice Beckly, who will play Desdemona, such admirable artists as Mr. Albert Howson, Mr. William Conklin, Mr. A. L. Barrett, Mr. Redfield Clarke, Mr. Bernard Thornton, Mr. William Wood, Mr. A. A. Stewart, Miss Ruth Blackburn, Miss Jeanette Grant, Miss Mabel Inslee, Mr. George Ellis, Mr. Frank Williams and others. A highly interesting and delightful feature will be the rendering, throughout the play, of Verdi's "Othello" music, arranged by the distinguished composer, Mr. Arthur Weld, who will bring with him several musicians from the New York Philharmonic Society.

Local Barbers Reduce Prices

On account of depressed financial conditions the following union shops have decided to charge the old price schedule:

B. Patterson, E. Wellwood, A. Campbell, S. Baker, J. Lewis, A. Haskill, A. Lewis, N. Nicholls, W. Spence, J. Smith, G. Williamson, G. Hall, E. Wright.

FALL ASSIZES NEXT TUESDAY

The Fall Assizes will commence on Tuesday, Sept. 15th, before Hon. Mr. Justice Britton. The only case as yet entered is that of J. A. Sharpe, of this city, who has issued a writ through his counsel, F. D. Kerr, of the law firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, for $5000 against the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway. The action is to recover damages for the death of the plaintiff's son, Thos. L. Sharpe, who was killed on March 19, 1913, at Hamilton by a T., H. & B. light engine while walking along the C. P. R. track. The deceased was employed by the C. P. R. as a lineman and was going to the boarding-car for supper when the engine struck him.

ONE QUARTER OF AUSTRIAN ARMY LOST IN FIGHTING

WOULD TEN TIMES RATHER BE UNDER THE BRITISH THAN UNDER GERMAN FLAG

Premier Botha

PREMIER ASQUITH ASKS FOR 500,000 MORE MEN

BRITISH DOING MORE THAN HOLDING OWN

Conclusion is Based on Reports From British and French Sources.

GERMANS SILENT

Press Bureau Confirms First Reports of Enemy Having Retreated

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 10.—The official press bureau has given out the following statement: "The battle was continued yesterday. The enemy has been driven back all along the line. Sir John French reports that our first army corps has buried 200 German dead and taken 12 maxim guns. Some prisoners also were taken.

"Our second army corps has captured 352 prisoners and a battery. The Germans suffered heavily. Their men are stated to be very exhausted.

"British troops have crossed the river Marne in a northeasterly direction."

London, Sept. 10.—That the allies are doing a little more than holding their own, is the conclusion of English observers to-day. The conclusion is based solely on reports exclusively from British and French sources, the German general staff not having revealed an inkling of their views of the battle since the advance of their forces met its check. British military writers find considerable satisfaction in the statement of French and British official reports that, "In the centre our advance is slow, but general."

It is pointed out by these writers that the allies had prepared their centre for a most formidable and dangerous attack, which, if successful, would have divided their forces. To have this evidence that the German rushing tactics have been at least temporarily countered, has given more courage to the British, who believe the Germans are feeling the pressure and have found it necessary to hurry up reinforcements from Belgium and practically denude Upper Alsace of troops that are being rushed to the central fighting zone.

ASQUITH ASKS FOR 500,000 MORE MEN.

London, Sept. 10.—Premier Asquith to-day asked parliament to add another half million men of all ranks to the regular army, bringing the total of all ranks in the army to the unprecedented total for Great Britain of 1,186,000 men.

The premier said 439,000 men, exclusive of territorials, had joined the army since the declaration of war. On one day, he said, 33,290 men had enlisted. The average enlistment in the army in an ordinary year was 35,000 men.

In moving a resolution authorizing the raising of an additional half-million men, the premier said the time had not come to relax efforts to obtain more troops. After reserves had been called out, there were 400,000 men with the colors on August 6. He proposed that the additional half-million be recruited, making a total of 900.000.

GENERAL FRENCH'S REPORT IS COMFORTING.

London, Sept. 10.—Sir John French's report, with its graphic account of the heroic fighting of the British troops, and its evidence that the spirit of the men was unaffected, is considered a matter for great comfort and satisfaction. The prevalent spirit of the men—optimism—has known only one recent check, namely, the grounding of the steamer Oceanic.

GERMANS LEAVE WEST REGION OF FRANCE.

London, Sept. 10.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in France, describing the turn of the tide in favor of the allied forces, says: "From trustworthy sources it is reported that we have already cut part of the German line of communication in the east, and it seems highly probable that we shall soon be able to drive them back upon their ammunition and supply column.

"While the great battle is raging to the eastward of Paris, the western region of France is gradually being relieved of Germans. How they have been driven to evacuate this region so rapidly is one of the mysteries of the great campaign, which is being partly revealed by official despatches."

Use German Prisoners to Sweep North Sea of Mines

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 10.—That German prisoners be pressed into the service in highly hazardous work of sweeping the North Sea of mines was the suggestion made in the Commons today. Great Britain now has many small boats engaged in this task and German prisoner crews under British officers would handle such craft if the plan outlined were adopted. Speaking on the general question of mines, Thomas J. MacNamara, Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty said: "This important question is engaging the attention of the Admiralty at present. More than that, it would not be advisable to say now."

JAPAN JOINS ALLIES' AGREEMENT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Petrograd, Sept. 10.—A despatch from Tokio states Japan has joined the agreement of Allies not to conclude peace without the consent of the allied nations. Japan has informed Russia she will not make peace with Germany until the war in Europe is ended, even if Japan occupied Kiao Chow before then.

BELIEVE AUSTRIANS WILL SOON SUE FOR PEACE.

London, Sept. 10.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Petrograde says: "In Russia and foreign diplomatic circles it is believed Austria will sue for peace within a fortnight as the only means of averting a complete breakup of the Empire, owing to the rapidly growing internal troubles."

HON. J. S. HENDRIE MAY SUCCEED SIR JOHN GIBSON

(Mail and Empire.)

In political circles here and in Ottawa rumor is again busy with the name of Col. the Hon. J. S. Hendrie as the new Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. It is now stated that the West Hamilton member has already been tacitly decided upon as the next occupant of Government House, and while members of the Government here are naturally disinclined to comment upon the subject, they frankly agree that Col. Hendrie would make a splendid Lieutenant-Governor.

Hon. J. S. Hendrie has represented West Hamilton in the Legislature for many years, and his return each election has been by steadily increasing majorities. He is personally popular, and his service for the province as a member of the Government and of the Hydro-Electric Commission has made him well known througout the province. He is a man af considerable wealth, and would be able to maintain the new Government House on the scale its magnificent construction will require.

ARE CHEERFUL AND CONFIDENT

British Troops in Greater Force Than Supposed

Canadian Press Despatch.

Paris, Sept. 10.—An automobilist attached to the headquarters of Sir John French came into Paris this morning. Speaking of the situation to the east he said the spirit of the British soldiers was cheerful and they were confident of winning. British troops are in much greater force than commonly is supposed, this man said. Figures for military reasons must be avoided.

ENGLAND'S WAR IS SOUTH AFRICA'S WAR

Premier Botha Makes Stirring Speech---Says South Africa's Future is Being Decided in Battlefields of Europe

Canadian Press Despatch.

Capetown, Sept. 10. — In a stirring speech before the Assembly, Premier Botha announced his government had undertaken to carry through military operations in German Southwest Africa.

"The Empire is at war," he said, "and consequently the Union of South Africa is at war with a common enemy. This Assembly must realize that South Africa's future is being decided on the battlefields of Europe and although there may be many here who in the past have been hostile to the British flag they would today ten times rather be under the British than under the German flag." He then told the House that German troops were already on Union territory.

PEACE NOT BEFORE DECISIVE DEFEAT TO GERMANY

Canadian Press Despatch.

Washington, Sept. 10. — Great Britain is determined not to make peace until she has decisively defeated Germany. This statement has been conveyed to President Wilson in despatches from Ambassador Page at London.

PRESCOTT PATRIOTIC FUND.

Prescott, Sept. 10.—A very enthusiastic meeting was held in Victoria hall, at the call of the mayor, at which a branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund was formed, Mayor McCrea being president and W. F. MacPherson secretary. The subscription list was opened and over $2,000 was subscribed. A ladies' branch will be formed during the week. Large additional subscriptions are reported.

BERLIN CONCERT FOR FUND.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—The Princess of Wales Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, raised several hundred dollars for their patriotic fund by holding a concert last night. The Star theatre, which was given over for this purpose by Manager Osborne, was packed to the doors. Local artists assisted with an enjoyable programme. Patriotic speeches were delivered by Mayor Euler, C. H. Mills, M.P.P., W. G. Weichel, M.P., and Secretary Geo. Warburton, of the National Patriotic Association.

AUSTRIANS LEAVE CRACOW; RUSSIANS OCCUPY NECOLAIEFF

RUSSIAN ADVANCE GUARDS MARCHING TOWARD BERLIN

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 10.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Rome says: "Despatches from Vienna state the advance guards of the Russian centre are marching towards Berlin. Russian troops have invaded Silesia and the capture of Breslau is imminent.

AUSTRIAN ATTEMPTS AT DEFENSIVE, DISASTROUS.

London, Sept. 10.—A despatch from Rome to Reuter's says: "According to Galaciau advices Austrians have made several attempts to resume the defensive against the Russians with disastrous results. There were further great Austrian losses.

WAR NEWS WILL NOT BE DELAYED

Official Press Bureau Has Been-Re-organized

London, Sept. 9.—Home Secretary McKenna has taken charge of the work of the official press bureau. In this connection he made the announcement to-day that steps had been taken, in the recent reorganization of the cable censorship work, to provide for the prompt transmission to the Dominion and to the United States of news passed by the censors.

Mr. McKenna declined to commit himself as to when war correspondents might be allowed to enter the zone of warfare. "As our army is operating in the country of our allies and in conjunction with their forces," he declared, "it is proper that in this matter we should be guided by their views."

Mr. McKenna explained that the entire system of censorship on press cablegrams had been reorganized and that he hoped there would be no further cause for complaint.

Official Announcement From Petrograd Tells of Russian Campaign

MANY CAPTURES

Follow up Hard Fighting With Attacks on New Positions

Canadian Press Despatch.

London Bulletin, Sept. 10.—A despatch to Reuter's from Petrograd says the Austrians have begun evacuating Cracow.

Petrograd, Sept. 10.—The following official announcement regarding the Russian campaign was made public to-day: "The Russian army, having occupied the fortified position of the Austrians at Nicolaieff, after incessant fighting which lasted two days, undertook immediately, after allowing the men only two hours' rest, a night march, attacking new positions occupied by the enemy.

"Hundreds of prisoners, as they fall into Russian hands, are sent to railroad stations bordering on the battlefront. These prisoners are not even enumerated.

"A Russian battery placed on the Vistula river engaged with success an Austrian steamboat armed with rapid fire guns.

"A Cossack regiment brought in from Frampol 17 officers and 445 Austrian soldiers, who had been taken prisoners, also numerous convoys of horses and cattle.

"A regimental strong box containing $29,600 belonging to the 17th Landwehr was captured.

"Twelve miles southeast of Zamos a Russian infantry regiment took prisoners 700 Austrian soldiers and their officers."

AUSTRIAN LOSS OF 120,000 MEN IS ADMITTED.

London, Sept. 10.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Rome says. "A message from Vienna states that it is officially admitted there that Archduke Frederick lost 120,000 men in the recent Galician battles, or one-fourth of his entire command.

Germans are marching south towards Poland to assist the Austrians, but before this aid can be given they must cross the Vistula river, where the Russians are preparing to check them."

DEPOSED SULTAN'S SON, PRINCE OF ALBANIA.

Rome, via Paris, Sept. 10.—Prince Mohammed Burham-Eddin Effendi, fourth and favorite son of Abdul Hamid, Turkey's deposed Sultan, is to be proclaimed Prince of Albania, under the sovereignty of Turkey, according to Giornale d'Italia. This violation of the decision of the conference of London, says this paper, may induce Italy to intervene. Ships and troops are kept in readiness, it says.

GERMAN COLLIER IS CAPTURED.

London, Sept. 10.—The admiralty announced to-day that a British warship had captured a German collier in the Atlantic with 5,000 tons of Welsh coal aboard.

BRITISH TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER IN A HEAVY SEA.

The destroyers are the scouts of the sea. Constructed first twenty years ago to destroy the torpedo boat, today they have taken the place of the torpedo boat. Driven at tremendous speed, they spy out the enemy and send word back to the admiral; they carry guns and can fight others of their kind, but their chief weapon is the long slender death-dealing torpedo. A destroyer under full speed is a mass of throbbing, palpitating steel, [illegible] nothing so much as the interior of a machine shop.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPT. 10, 1914

CRITICISM OF COL. SAM HUGHES.

A NUMBER of people have been critical of Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes regarding the mobilization of the Canadian troops at Valcartier. Their criticism has been aroused principally over the time required to mobilize and the delay in placing the troops in the field. We know considerable time has elapsed, but if people who know nothing of the details and difficulties involved in massing, equipping and transporting thirty thousand troops would withhold their criticism until they knew something of the problem, they would then keep their peace. Very few people who criticize realize the magnitude of the problem that confronts the Department of Militia and and Defence, yet they have the boldness to say what the Minister should do and how long he should take to complete the arrangements for the Canadian troops.

In the first place, delay was occasioned by securing the water supply for Valcartier Camp. When it is remembered that the water supply for 30,000 troops means a water supply at least equal to that of the city of Peterborough, some idea can be obtained of the amount of water required, and the equipment necessary for that alone. Sanitary arrangements had also to be made, and the food supplies for this large body of men bought and transported. Accommodation had to be made for a few thousand horses, and large quantities of hay and oats brought to camp. Then, the men did not arrive all at the same time, and what was even a greater difficulty was the uncertainty of the number that would arrive. Twenty thousand odd were expected, yet over thirty thousand were transported, and this necessitated a complete rearrangement, not only of plans for maintenance, but of organization. The latter problem was an exceptionally labourious and detailed one, requiring, as it did, the placing of each man in his proper place assigning officers, drilling the men, and giving instruction in rifle practice. The suddenness with which a state of war arrived necessitated most of the details being done quickly and without preparation, and, considering the magnitude of the problem, as well as the unprepared condition of the country for such an emergency, the speed with which the Canadian troops have actually been brought together is occasion for congratulation, rather than adverse criticism. The Department of Militia and Defence has been subjected to the severest test in its history. It has met the difficulty well, has drawn together a large body of splendid troops from a territory over five thousand miles in extent, and equipped them without hardship or friction, and altogether in splendid time.

WE'RE BACK.

FOR TWO WEEKS we have been "up in the wilds," and by some means or other The Review has appeared daily. We have thus proved conclusively by actual experiment that a man can take a holiday, even if engaged in newspaper work. It was the first time in six years that we vamoosed. The war did not stop, everything went on as before, and very few even knew that we had gone.

We conclude that everybody can have a holiday if they will to take it. If they do not need one they should not quit work, because it is the need of a respite or change of scene that makes it beneficial. Too many people go on holidays just because some one said it was fashionable.

Then, too, most men occupy, after all, a very small place in the world. When considering the sum total, an editor, or a doctor or lawyer or business man is not a great deal more important than his office boy.

To go away off and "rough it" for a while makes one appreciate his surroundings. To put up with all kinds of inconveniences just because some say it is fashionable, is exceptionally disagreeable. Holidays of this nature are like tight shoes. They are painful, but flatter one's vanity. In the one case corns develop, in the other rheumatism, and then possibly comes wisdom.

CHILDREN ON THE STREETS.

ON TUESDAY a little child was killed in Toronto in an automobile accident. This death is simply one more added to the already long list of children who have been killed by being allowed too much freedom on busy streets. Sometimes accidents cannot be avoided, but the number of children being killed or seriously injured on the streets of Canadian cities constitutes a serious problem. If there is not sufficient play room at the homes, some steps should be taken to provide it. On the other hand, there might be some restraint placed on parents to see that their children are properly cared for in the streets, especially those where much traffic calls for watchfulness.

WE HAVE the assurance of a distinguished promoter that the proper thing to do with a North Sea mine is to capitalize it. — Toronto News. The evidence seems to show that this is an exploded theory. At the very least, it is a dangerous subject for investigation.

TO A FINISH.

THOSE who hope for peace at an early date will find no encouragement in the new treaty between Great Britain, France and Russia, says the Erie Dispatch. Binding themselves not to conclude peace separately, the duration of the conflict is made to hang not upon the necessities of the weakest, but upon the interests and will of the strongest member of the alliance.

Unless all the conclusions of Admiral Mahan are wrong, sea power must ultimately exert a prodigious influence upon the results of this conflict. Armies may exhaust themselves in vain so long as the great navies of the belligerents remain afloat. Taken together, the fleets of Britain and France are three times as formidable as that of Germany.

War is a contest also between forces other than those that are in arms. The combined wealth of Great Britain and France, exclusive of dependencies, is three times greater than that of Germany. British and French commerce twice that of Germany, is proceeding, while that of Germany is paralyzed. No matter what the ordinary forces of war on land may be, the time must come in such a struggle as this when the issue will have to be met at sea. Even a triumphant army cannot sustain a nation shut in from its neighbors and impoverishment.

It has been estimated that at the time of Augustus, Rome ruled a population of from 80,000,000 to 120,000,000. The British Empire has a population of 435,000,000. At its best, the yearly revenue of Rome did not equal that of Holland today, $84,000,000. The revenue of the United Kingdom, exclusive of all dependents, is $1,000,000,000.

The new treaty of London can have no other meaning than that all the resources of men and money of the greatest empire ever known have been enlisted for the war and are to be thrown into the balance, declares the World. It will take time to make them available. but with a resoltue spirit behind them it is certain that eventually they will bear heavily upon their adversaries. The prospect is solemn enough to impress even those who are at peace, for it foreshadows a strain upon civilization such as was never before known. It is to be a contest not so much between peoples and empires as between systems. It is British self-government, British sea power, British commerce and British wealth, world-wide in their extent, in a life-and-death struggle with consolidated German autocracy and militarism, which for forty years have burdened mankind with armaments and menaced it with war.

It is the rule of the people or the rule of the sword, not in Britain alone, not in Germany alone, but throughotu the earth, now and for generations to come.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE RUSSIANS have changed the name of their capital, St. Petersburg, to Petrograd. A large number of people have also changed the names of places figuring in the war zone, but the pronunciation has not yet been officially adopted.

THE GERMANS thought Toronto was in the United States. This proves how necessary the war was to instruct in geography. The Germans will soon learn, via the Toronto papers, how little they know of Canada and its big city Toronto. On the other hand, Canadians have learned more about Europeans towns in the last two months than they would otherwise have learned in the rest of their natural lives.

Another Advantage of War.

Toronto News.

Two months ago nobody knew what a moratorium was. Now a lot of people want to keep a tame one in the garage.

Hague Tribunal Not Useless.

New York Sun.

Representative Mann said what many have been thinking of his remark in the House on Monday that under present conditions the Hague Tribunal is the most useless institution in the world. A majority of people now see what a few have pointed out all along, that the blind faith in arbitration which extremists have been preaching is mere folly. It is contrary to human nature as at present constituted, and, therefore, it is a snare and a peril. But it would be easy to carry Mr. Mann's dictum too far. The Hague Tribunal is not a useless body and probably never will become useless. It has ended peacefully and honourably many important disputes in its relatively short history, and will no doubt avert many wars in the future. It may well be that out of the present miscarriage of its benevolent intent it may gain new vitality for usefulness.

Not a Short War.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The view that it will be a short war is illusory. England will not quit while she holds the seas. It may more likely be a Napoleonic struggle all over again and just as long in duration. It is a mistake, too, to conclude that the German victories are decisive. It is still a long road to Paris, and after Paris it would be a long road to final peace. The world is beginning to realize what a titanic struggle is under way, a conflict in which neither side can afford to acknowledge defeat until its ultimate resources have been exhausted and there is nothing left for it but to lie at the feet of the conqueror.

The Strain of Modern War.

London Daily News.

Modern war in general, and the German form of it in particular, throws a peculiarly heavy strain upon the subordinate officers and the men. The destructive fire of modern artillery and the modern rifle has imposed itself in two ways — the formation must be loose and widely extensive; the offensive is a particularly perilous venture. Add to that the flanking attack requires heavy and swift marching, and some idea can be gained of the burden thrust upon officers and men. With a long and loosely extended front, the subordinate officers can get little help from their commanders, and at the critical stage of an advance the officers themselves are out of touch with their men.

Francis Joseph's Error.

New York Times.

"God is with you," says the aged Austrian emperor to his German ally. "He will be with us also." Therefore, according to this man, who stands on the brink of the grave, though he will be as careful as all the other autocratic rulers to keep well out of the range of the bullets his poor countrymen must face for his sake, God is on the side of massacre and rapine, of wrath and destruction. He is the God of the armored motor-car, of the howitzer, and the bomb-dropping airship. He sustains the destroyer of harvests. He rejoices in the grief of the widow and the destitution of the orphan.

THE FINE SEASON

By Walt Mason

How sweet is the Autumn, that's now at the door! The hot winds, dod rot 'em, will scorch us no more. The schools are in session, with blackboard and switch, the children are threshin' out fractions and sich; the schoolmaster's ruling, the kids work the brain; too long were they fooling at home, raising Cain. No more are they pitchin' their indoor baseball; there's peace in the kitchen, there's calm in the hall. The cornfield is yellow, it glows in the sun, the husbandman fellow is counting his mon. Dame Nature, the tinter, is staining the leaves, and soon we'll have winter, but nobody grieves; of grub we have plenty—our gods let us thank—and eighteen or twenty fat bucks in the bank. How peaceful and tender the Autumn world seems; it has all the splendor of worlds seen in dreams. The wearisome worry of summer is o'er; the hideous hurry is needed no more; there's loafing and languor where late there was work, from Boston to Bangor, from Yankton to York.

BILL TO AID BOYCOTT.

Attorney-General Introduces Measure to Suppress Trade With Enemy.

LONDON, Sept. 10. — Attorney-General Sir J. A. Simon introduced a bill in the House of Commons yesterday which would considerably enlarge the scope of the existing provisions for the suppression of trade with the enemy. It would even prohibit the making of any payment to an alien enemy though the obligation arose out of a contract made prior to the outbreak of the war.

The bill provides for the imposition of a fine of $2,500 or imprisonment for twelve months on a summary conviction and seven years' penal servitude on conviction after indictment.

HINDUS NUMBER 60,000.

Two Divisions of Infantry and Brigade of Cavalry In France.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Lord Kitchener's "unknown factor," heretofore held to be secret, which has so altered the situation at the front, is now known to be the arrival of forces from India. Two divisions of infantry and a brigade of cavalry constitute these forces. A dozen Indian potentates have been selected to accompany this expeditionary force. These include Sir Pertab Singh, Sir Gange Behadur, Maharaja of Bikaner, and Sir Bhupindra Singh, Maharaja of Patiala.

If the Indian divisions are organized on the same basis as the British home army, the Indian contingent will add about 60,000 combatants to the allied armies, together with approximately 130 pieces of artillery, comprising field pieces, both light and heavy, and howitzers.

THE ANGLO-PORTUGUESE ALLIANCE

(By R. C. Hawkin, in Westminster Gazette..)

The position of Portugal at the present moment is of special importance because it is known that Germany has already been making efforts to secure the Portuguese colonies for herself. The most valuable of these colonies are Mozambique — including Delagoa Bay — Angola, Madeira, Goa, The Azores, Timor, St. Thome, Principe, and Macao.

Their safety has till now been secured by the Anglo-Portuguese Alliance.

The first treaty establishing this alliance was signed in St. Paul's Cathedral in 1373 by Edward III. and Ferdinand of Portugal, and by the first Article it was agreed that the two countries should henceforth be reciprocally friends to friends and enemies to enemies, and should assist each other by sea and by land.

Article 3 provides that if either country is invaded the other will go to its succour.

Richard II. in 1386 introduced some modifications, and the treaty appears to have been re-drafted.

He exempted the Pope of Rome, the King of Bohemia, and some others from the scope of the treaty; he stipulated that neither country should help the enemies of the other and provided that each of the Allies should apply to the other if assistance were required, when the Ally would be strictly bound to perform his part. The cost of the assistance was to be charged to the Ally calling for help. Arrangements were also made for dividing any booty, and it was agreed that neither should make a truce or armistice without the other's consent.

In 1641 Charles I. renewed the treaty, and in 1654 Oliver Cromwell once more ratified it on behalf of the Republic of England, but introduced some further modifications. It became a treaty between peoples who were to "behave to each other with favour, assistance, mutual love, and honest affection."

The Lord Protector and the King of Portugal also declared that the treaty of peace and confederacy should remain entire and always in full force.

In 1661 Charles II. married Catherine of Portugal, and all treaties since 1641 were once more ratified; the treaties before that date were not expressly denounced, and it is not certain if the two countries hold to the wording of the other treaties. Probably they do.

England engaged to defend Lisbon and Oporto from the King of Castile, and by a secret Article Charles II. engaged, in consideration of his marriage, to protect the Portuguese colonies as well as Portuguese territory in Europe.

The present treaty was signed in Queen Anne's reign, and ratifies the former treaties except in so far as they are altered by the present one.

It is tripartite between England, Holland and Portugal, and its sole object seems to be to provide for the protection of Portugal against France or Spain by the supply of 12,000 men, to be armed and paid by England and Holland, and Portugal was to maintain ten ships of war for mutual defence.

Portugal engaged also that in time of peace she would admit six English and six Dutch men-of-war in her ports.

In 1872 the Spanish Minister inquired from the Foreign Office how England regarded these old treaties, and he was told that Great Britain was bound to defend Portugal against external aggression by virtue of her treaty engagements, and that Spain could not count on the indifference of England if she attacked Portugal.

It therefore seems that an attack by Germany on Portugal is not covered by the treaty of Queen Anne, except in so far as it ratifies the older treaty of Charles II.

It is, in fact, the secret clause of 1661 which compels us to protect Angola and Mozambique, both of which colonies have frontiers with German colonies.

The clause runs as follows:

Secret Article.

"Over and above all and singular agreed and concluded in the Treaty of Marriage between the Most Serene and Most Powerful Charles, the second of that name, King of Great Britain, and the Most Virtuous and Serene Lady Catherine, Infanta of Portugal, it is by this Secret Article concluded and accorded that His Majesty of Great Britain, in regard of the great advantages and increase of dominion he hath purchased by the above-mentioned Treaty of Marriage, shall promise and oblige himself, as by this present Article he doth, to defend and protect all conquests or colonies belonging to the Crown of Portugal against all his enemies, as well future as present: moreover, His Majesty of Great Britain doth oblige himself to mediate a good peace between the King of Portugal and the States of the United Provinces, and all Companies or Societies of merchants subject under them, upon conditions convenient and becoming the mutual interests of England and Portugal; and in case such a peace ensue not, then His Majesty of Great Britain shall be obliged to defend, with men and ships, the said dominions and conquests of the King of Portugal. In case, also, that any towns, forts, castles, or any other places, shall be taken by the Dutch, after the 1st of May, this present year 1661, then His Majesty of Great Britain doth promise and engage to oblige the Dutch to a full and perfect restitution thereof. His Majesty of Great Britain doth, moreover, oblige himself to send, the next monsoon ensuing after the ratification of the Treaty of Marriage and this Article, a convenient succour to the East Indies, proportionable to the necessity of Portugal and strength of our enemies. It being declared that His Majesty nor his successors shall not at any time require any pay or satisfaction for the same."

It will be seen that we are compelled to protect the Portuguese colonies against all enemies, but it looks as though Portugal can still remain at peace with Germany by the simple expedient of agreeing not to call on England for aid unless Germany attacks her.

Germany's complaint is that England can call on Portugal for assistance, and Portugal must respond: let us hope that England will find the call unnecessary.

There are, however, several German cruisers in the Atlantic, and much depends on what they do. Any attack on the Azores, Madeira, or Angola would of course compel Portugal to join the enemies of Germany.

COMBINATION GOWN.

Separate Blouse With Dressy Gabardine Gown.

ATTRACTIVE COSTUME.

A creamy net blouse, a blue gray girdle embroidered in dull gold and a tailored skirt of light blue gabardine are happily combined in the one piece costume illustrated here. The skirt, in spite of its suggestion of being tailored, is dressy in the extreme, having a closely gathered double frill around the hem and an abundance of draping at the back. The final touch of smartness is given this costume by the high buttoned boots.

CRETONNE COVERS.

Have Replaced Plain Linen as Slips For Upholstered Chairs.

Slip covers for upholstered furniture are made of pretty cretonnes. The slip cover of today is far removed from the striped and prim linen cover we used to see. Instead of seams stiffly bound with tape we more often find just ordinary seams or a neat French seam and, as a finishing touch, the plaited valance, usually with a deep heading, that adds such a quaint and charming touch. A few dollars spent for cretonne, printed linen or some old fashioned chintz to "make over" one or more rooms for the summer months is a wise investment. Often one or more slip covers may be used with propriety in any room the year round and solve the problem of what to do with the chairs that are "too good to give away" and too shabby to live with in peace. Cotton prints and white enamel paint have proved the salvation of many a room.

BOUDOIR GOWN.

Garment That Has Little to Suggest Its Being a Negligee.

Thoroughly feminine is this negligee of pink crepe de chine draped in graceful folds. Bodice and overskirt are of an all over design of shadow lace, frilled at the elbows and falling scarf-like over the shoulders. A draped girdle of pink satin ribbon is knotted in front, ends hanging below the knee. To effect the invisible closing of the bodice the ever useful snap fastener has been called into use.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9.—The weather conditions over the west practically are decidedly unfavorable for threshing operations and this caused a strong market for the opening. Wheat prices opened unchanged to 1⅝c higher, oats unchanged to ⅛c higher and flax 3c higher for October. In spite of quiet trading future values advanced, showing a range of 2½c to 2⅝c from the opening on October and December. At noon prices were: Oct., $1.15⅝; Dec., $1.16¾, and May $1.23¼. Closing figures were 1⅝c to 2⅛c higher.

The cash demand for all grades of wheat was good, oats and barley being also in demand. Offerings were few. Flax remains quiet, altho October futures were 3c higher at the opening. Cash grains closed: Wheat, 2c to 2¼c higher; oats, ½c to 1c higher; barley, ½c higher, and flax 2¾c higher.

In a total of thirty-two points reported twenty-six showed rain, and at two points, Minnedosa and Brandon, 1.20 and 1.50 respectively were recorded.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, consequently business was very quiet. The local trade in coarse grains was also rather quiet, but the tone of the market remains steady owing to the limited supplies available on spot and the small offerings from the interior. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour was fair again today and as the prices bid in some cases were satisfactory to millers sales of some round lots were made for October-November shipment to Glasgow. The local trade continues active and the undertone to the market is firm. There is a good enquiry from American buyers for bran, but no sales as yet have taken place. The local trade is good and prices are firm. The condition of the market for butter is unchanged, prices being firm, with a fair domestic trade doing, but the market for cheese is quiet and rather easier in tone. Demand for eggs is good.

TO KEEP THE AIR IN THE HOUSE CLEAN

Of course, the average housewife is familiar with the old saw, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. She can do quite a number of things to keep her house air from becoming as dust-laden as it surely will if she does not interest herself in these simple devices.

When a wind is knocking up great clouds of dust, let her close the windows while the agitation lasts. It will serve the double purpose of keeping out a lot of flying dust and causing what dust is in the room to settle and so be easy to remove.

Let her train the various members of her household to sneeze and cough into their handkerchiefs. Then the moisture resulting from such exertions will not be sprayed into the air, nor, in the case of illness, more or less deadly germs accompany the spray and later becoming floating bacterial dust.

Let her set her foot down on any of the family brushing his or her shoes or clothing in the house. Dust in its most disguised forms is brought into living rooms on shoes and clothing, likewise swarms of germs, and though a son runs a whisk broom over his coat in the seclusion of his own room, bacteria nevertheless will escape through the keyhole and travel from room to room, all over the house. This is another trait of dust that scientists have laboriously discovered.

Let her insist on every member of the family ridding the shoes, especially of as much dust as possible before entering the front door.

DARDENELLS OPEN TO WARSHIPS

If the war party in Turkey, which is said to be in the ascendant, decides to plunge the Ottoman Empire into the war on the side of Germany and Austria, it will probably open for all time to come the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus to the warships of all nations. What is now left of Turkey-in-Europe might or might not be left intact by the allies after the Moslem power had been driven into Asia Minor, but in any event one of the concessions Russia would press for, and which the allies could scarcely deny her, would be the lifting of the ban upon foreign warships in the Dardanelles. For sixty-three years the straits have been closed to the warships of foreign nations except upon Turkey's permission to enter. In a treaty signed in 1841, the prohibition first came into effect, and the Treaty of Paris in 1856, after the Crimean War, confirmed it. In that war British and French fleets entered the Black Sea through the straits, but as France and Britain were then engaged in fighting Russia, to thwart Czar Alexander's designs on Constantinople, Turkey naturally gave permission. The previous entry of British warships into the Dardanelles as ships of a belligerent power was in 1807, when Admiral Sir John Duckworth boldly entered the Sea of Marmora and took Constantinople.

A Busy Trade in Channel.

Of course, Russia is the only nation which has felt hampered by the exclusion of warships from the straits. Merchant vessels are permitted to pass to and from the Black Sea as freely as through the Suez Canal or the Danish Cattegat, the chief hindrances being regulations compelling them to pass certain points only in daylight. The commerce of Britain and the other nations with Black Sea ports has not, therefore, suffered. Canadian farm implements, some of which have been manufactured in Toronto, have been shipped to Odessa, and much of Russia's grain exports to Western Europe have come out of the provinces bordering on the Black Sea. Russia's desire to have access to the Mediterranean with her Black Sea fleet, which is quite powerful, is not for the purpose of developing her Mediterranean trade, but of furthering her designs upon Turkish territory in Asia. Under the present balance of naval power in the Mediterranean, France and Britain have no need of an accession of naval strength from the Russians, the allied fleet now having thorough command of the Mediterranean. Even if Turkey went into the war on behalf of the Germans and Russians, her fleet, reinforced by the German ships Goeben and Breslau, could not stand against the British and French squadrons. The reduction of the two old and other newer Turkish forts commanding the straits would be a task the British tars would delight in.

Internationalize the Canal.

Both the Suez Canal and the Panama Canal are open to the warships of all nations, even those at war. There does not seem to be any reason of fair dealing why the Dardanelles should not also be considered as a free international channel connecting two seas. In fact, the worth of the prohibitory provision was shown in the Russo-Japanese war, when two Russian cruisers made a rush through the Turkish straits and got safely into the Aegean Sea before the Turkish authorities could think of what to do under the circumstances. The cruisers got into trouble in the Red Sea, and had to lay up finally. The question of doing away with the prohibition has been brought up unofficially in Russia quite frequently in late years, and some French publicists have seconded the Russian suggestion that the straits should be open to Russian men-of-war, but closed to those of the other powers. No official representations on the subject have been made, but the success of the Slavs in the Balkans against the Turks has so changed the outlook in the Near East that the question merged in the greater one of the disposal of Turkey-in-Europe, is working to a settlement without handling.

A Prize Much Coveted.

If Turkey should consent to be Kaiser William's catspaw in the war, it will face not merely the question of forcing British and French to aid the Russians in subjugating it—embarrassing as that would be to the British — but of fighting again its well-tried enemies, Servia, Bulgaria, Montenegro, Greece, and, in addition Roumania. Bulgaria aspires to the primacy of the Balkans, but is thwarted by Roumania. Both these states want to create navies, but unless they can get across to the Sea of Marmora, and the Aegean, Sea power to them would be useless. If Turkey goes into this war the former allies of the Balkans would surely make a bolt for Turkish territory fronting on the sea, and it remains to be seen whether Russia or Italy or the British and French would try to forestall them.

APSLEY

Apsley, Sept. 9. — Mrs. (Rev.) Carr and daughter were guests at Mr. Almond Harris' last Friday.

Miss Amy Booth left last week to visit friends at Peterboro, Buckhorn and Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Abner Windsor and Miss Iva are attending the Toronto Exhibition.

Mr. Wellington Lean has returned from attending the meeting of the Grand True Blue Lodge at Orillia.

Mr. William Staples has been appointed constable for this municipality.

A cottage meeting was held at Mr. W. Staples on last Wednesday evening. About twenty-three persons were present. Addresses were delivered by Rev. W. Peer and Rev. S. Carr which were both helpful and instructive. A number of the members of the choir of the Methodist and Presbyterian Church attended and excellent singing was rendered. Miss Ella Brown presided at the organ.

Services of Intercession Were Largely Attended

The services of intercession and prayer held in the city churches, yesterday afternoon and evening, were well attended by sympathetic and earnest congregations and it was apparent that the spirit of the services was fully realized by all.

The program which had been arranged by which all the Protestant ministers took part, was carried out. The addresses had special reference to the war and the appeal to prayer was based on the fact that Great Britain had done everything in her power to prevent the outbreak and in the battles now raging, was fighting for the right.

Special music was rendered and altogether the services were such as will be long remembered.

HAS $17,000 TO INVEST IN DEBENTURES

Some Cheerful Information From Mayor Buller

TO ISSUE ON MONDAY

The short time debentures will be issued, the City Treasurer informed The Review today, on Monday. Already over $60,000 has been offered and Mayor Buller is of the opinion that over $100,000 worth of debentures will be sold. There will be a little delay caused by the banks in delivering the money but in the course of three weeks everything will be running smoothly. One citizen informed his worship last evening that he desired to secure debentures amounting to $17,000.

Cardinal Ferrata

the new papal secretary of state appointed by Pope Benedict XV., was born in 1847 at Montefiascone, Italy. His work as papal nuncio at Paris and as prefect of the congregation of bishops in Rome stamped him as a finished diplomat. He presided over the Eucharistic congress in Malta last year. In 1901 when the late Cardinal Rampolla resigned as papal secretary of state Cardinal Ferrata was mentioned as a likely candidate for the office. He was created a cardinal on June 22, 1896.

RECRUITS ATTENTION.

In view of the probable calling of a second Canadian contingent for overseas service, all young men who are desirous of volunteering should enlist now. The fall drills of the 57th Regiment offer a good opportunity for preliminary training, especially in shooting. Any recruits can apply at D. (No. 4) Company tonight between eight and nine o'clock.

WITH THE BOYS AT VALCARTIER

Pte. Roscoe Kendrey writing from Valcartier to a friend, has the following to say of camp life and activities of the soldiers:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am still in the land of the living and will try to give you some of the doings of "our camp."

To begin with one can form no idea of the size, of this camp, especially at night it looks grand when all lighted up and just resembles so many Chinese lanterns.

I am of the opinion that all the regiments are in now and there are now over 32,000 in camp.

Some days we get it harder than others, and the day before yesterday (Thursday) was the limit. We drilled all morning and marched to the rifle ranges (four miles each way) in the afternoon and then out again at night on a night attack. Gee! the boys were nearly all ready for bed when we came back at 10 p.m. Yesterday and today has not been too bad.

Some of the boys of our bunch enlisted here to go with the troops that are being sent to Hamilton, Bermuda, to go on garrison duty but not "little Willie" because I came this way to get a shot at a German and I hope (like the rest) that we may get that opportunity. Some are of the opinion that we may be sent to India or Egypt but then it is all supposition and they don't know.

Scoop, "Dutch" Mills and the rest of the boys that you know are all in good shape and seem to be enjoying themselves. Of course it is not all work and we play football, baseball, wrestling and boxing and manage to put in a pretty good time when not on parade. We also have moving pictures (open air and free) and the Y.M.C.A. gives us Quebec and Montreal papers free, too. So you see that we are not used too badly.

I made forty-two out of fifty at the range today at 200 yards, and hope that I can keep that up. We are using the Ross Rifle and the peep sight on them is excellent.

The 48th Highlanders came in last Sunday, 1,200 strong, and looked good to those who saw them. The Victoria, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Calgary and the rest of the western regiments are all here now, also the Queen's Own Rifles.

SERVICES HELD AT THE ARMY TEMPLE

The day of intercession was observed yesterday afternoon and evening with well attended services at the Army Temple. Many wives of the volunteers attended the afternoon service and the children were treated to ice cream and cake at the close. Members of the fire department were present both afternoon and evening. Adjutant McElhiney presided.

THE POWER PLANT

Mayor Buller informed The Review today that City Solicitor Gordon sent the check for $100,000 for the expropriation of the property of the Peterboro Light and Power Co. to the city's chief counsel, Mr. Cowan, of Toronto, today and the latter will pay it into the Supreme Court of Ontario immediately, that means that the city will take over the property of the above mentioned company in the course of a day or so and thereby receive the revenue for the remainder of the month.

PAVING COMPANY REPRESENTATIVE IS IN THE CITY

Work May be Commenced on Monday

WIRES FOR PLANT

It is anticipated that next Monday the Foley and Gleason Paving Co. will commence operations in this city. Superintendent Driscoll of that firm is in the city today and held a conference with Mayor Buller, City Engineer Parsons and Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Works and at the conclusion he wired immediately for the plant and gave out the information that should it arrive on Saturday, as he expects, the work will commence on Monday.

The operations will start on Charlotte Street from George to Water, up Water to Simcoe, out Simcoe to Aylmer and so on till the frost sets in or the contract be completed.

Mayor Buller reminded the representative of Foley and Gleason that the work is being gone on with for the purpose of giving the unemployed of the city work and His Worship was informed that they would bring very few of their own men with them, in all not more than fifteen.

Start on Charlotte Street.

City Engineer Parsons informed The Review this afternoon that if the Foley and Gleason Co. have the bricks for the centre of the car tracks the work on Charlotte Street west will be executed first instead of what was formerly agreed upon. The reason for this is that the P.R.R. Co. are anxious to get their work at the corner of Charlotte and Park Streets completed so as to open up the new line to the corner of Patterson and Boundary Road. In event of the Radial Railway going ahead with their work, employment will be given to a large number of men.

Reasons Why
the next time you order
"corn flakes" you should specify
Post Toasties

They are perfect flakes—thin as paper—each flake the "sweet meat" of the choicest white corn grown.

This food comes to you fresh, in sanitary packages, sealed tight, and with an Inside Container to keep contents right.

POST TOASTIES have a dainty, corn flavour—unusual to common corn flakes—this due to skillful cooking and toasting, which imprisons the oven-fresh goodness and saves it for your breakfast or lunch.

TOASTIES are good hot or cold; served with cream and sugar—also fresh fruit in season. To get a special richness of flavor, warm in open oven before serving. Heat unseals this dainty flavour for your appetite. A superb food—always appetizing.

Cressman Furniture Will Beautify the Home---and It's Built to Last a Life Time

Are you a lover of the "Home Beautiful" ? There is surely not a person who would answer in the negative to this ; we all have a natural instinct for those things which go to make our surroundings more beautiful and attractive.

That's why Cressman Furniture will appeal greatly to the average person ; there is something so different about the designs that make a good impression immediately.

Not only in design is Cressman Furniture superior to others, but also in quality and finish. We insist upon Highest Quality from our manufacturers—better quality at the same price—then we pass it on to you.

We would ask you to see our stock—compare it with others; that's where we gain. Two large floors are devoted to Home Furnishings, where we carry everything in reliable furniture that you will need. And then the price—well, it's the lowest it can possibly be made—consistent with good quality.

RESIDENTS OF McDONNEL ST. WEST ASK FOR WATER SERVICE

UTILITIES COMMISSION IN SESSION

When the Public Utilities Commission met yesterday afternoon Ald. Green appeared before the commission on behalf of the residents on McDonnell west of Park to have the commission provide a water service on that street. He pointed out in no uncertain manner, the amount of sickness in that locality was largely due, he said, to the well water that was being consumed in that district, which was unfit for consumption. The commission explained to Ald. Green that they had considered the advisability of doing this work but at present finances were somewhat tight, but they promised Ald. Green, that in a few days they would let him know what their view on the matter was.

The City Water.

Following is the report of Dr. McPherson for the month of August, re water supply.

The water shows an infection throughout the month although apparently not with typhoid as there have been no cases traceable to city water. There is some diarrhoea in the town especially among infants that may be attributed partly to the city supply. I am advising the citizens to continue boiling the water.

A communication was received from Toronto Savings and Loan Co. enclosing an account for $193, money spent on a leak in the main. This was referred to E. H. D. Hall to report on.

There was present, T. F. Matthews (chairman), W. H. Moore, R. Hicks, also Mr. House, manager, and R. Dobbin, superintendent.

FULL TIME RESUMED IN DOMINION TEXTILE MILLS

The stimulating effect of present conditions upon the Canadian cotton industry has resulted in the resumption of full working time in the ten mills of the Dominion Textile Co., Limited. During the eight months prior to the commencement of the war in Europe the 7,000 employees of this company were working on an average only 70 per cent. of full time. Since the outbreak of hostilities they have been working full time and if the present demand for Canadian cotton continues, as it is likely to be the case, overtime and double shifts in certain departments will be necessary.

The operation at full capacity of the ten mills of the Dominion Textile Co., Limited, will mean the placing in circulation annually of upwards of $10,000,000. Most of this large amount of money will be spent in Canada—in wages, in freight and cartage, in coal, oil and other factory supplies and in the many other items that enter into the cost of the finished product. As the ten mills of the company are scattered from Kingston to Halifax the benefits accruing from the circulation of this large amount of money will be spread over a wide area.

POLICE COURT

John Norris was summoned to today's police court on the complaint of N. Minicola, that Morris had stood for some time in front of his place of business selling peanuts. As Minicola also sold peanuts he did not think Morris should be allowed to stand in one place on the street for any time. The law says that Morris must keep moving. This was explained to him and his case was enlarged for two weeks.

$20 AND COSTS FOR CRUELTY TO COW

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 10. — County Magistrate Hunt yesterday fined Robert A. Jones, a farmer, living near Vienna, $20 and costs for cruelty to one of his cows. Jones put a piece of No. 9 wire through the cow's nostrils and attached it to a piece of wood three feet long. When the cow attempted to brush away the flies it caused her great pain.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

RUMOR IS ABSURD.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—A certain rumor, which I am willing to believe was started as a joke rather than with malicious intent, has gained such widespread circulation that my friends have suggested that I make some public statement. I thought of allowing the matter to drift along rather than give notice to any such absurd and unfounded rumor, but to set the rumor at rest, I have decided to ask you to publish the following for those I have not had the pleasure of an acquaintance, my friends and associates need no such explanation :

I beg to say that I am of English and Irish descent, all the living members of my father's family being still residents of Manchester, England. I am, therefore, possibly more English than some who have helped to spread this story. There is absolutely not the least foundation for the story ; it is a pure fabrication from the beginning. No argument or altercation has occurred at any place, nor at any time, to warrant the rumor. During such times as these, people are apt to grasp at such rumors and form opinions accordingly.

I trust this explanation will correct the impression which may be held by a few. Any further circulation of the story will be with malicious intent and wholly unworthy of credence.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours sincerely,

W. H. DENHAM.

Peterboro, Sept. 9, 1914.

A SUGGESTION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Your correspondent, J. H. Burnham, should get the Y.M.C.A. to go to the front and, now that the emigration trade is so dull, leave to the Salvation Army the business of looking after the sick.

Yours truly,

READER.

OBITUARY

CHARLES REX.

The death occurred last evening of Charles Rex, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rex, 624 Union St. He was 15 years of age. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence to Little Lake Cemetery.

THE LATE MRS. GUYMEA.

It was with shocking suddenness that the death of Mrs. Guymea occurred yesterday at the home of Mr. Roberts, East City. She had been troubled with heart disease for some time, but she had been feeling somewhat better the last few days. Yesterday she was at her work as usual, and about noon she dropped on the floor, dead.

She had been a faithful member of the Mark Street church. Her many friends in Peterborough and Toronto, where she formerly resided, will deeply regret her sudden death. She was 70 years of age.

Left to mourn her loss are seven children: Sidney and Emily, Toronto; Edith, Maud, William, Charles and Frank, in England ; also a brother in England and a sister, Mrs. Roberts, East City.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Roberts (Dickson Co. farm, near Downie's Corners), at 3 o'clock. Service will be held at her late residence at 2.30 p.m., conducted by Rev. L. Phelps.

WILL NOT SAY WHEN SOLDIERS LEAVE FOR FRONT

Canadian Contingent is Expected to Leave in Short Time

Valcartier Camp, Quebec, Sept. 10.—Everything possible will be done by the authorities to keep the date of the departure of the Canadian expeditionary force a secret. When the troops will leave the mobilization camp is not known officially, and when it is known nothing will be said. The Canadian force will be conveyed across the Atlantic in the same manner as was the British contingent to France.

Col. Williams, camp commandant, when asked when it was likely that the division from Canada would leave for the front, stated that he had received no word.

"It would be absolutely inadvisable to make any mention of the date," he stated. "Every precautionary measure will be taken in moving the men. We want no word to go across the Atlantic."

Every since the opening of camp rumors have spread like wildfire about the day on which the troops would sail. It has been generally understood that this would be Sept. 15, or a few days later, but Col. Williams put to rest any of these reports to-night.

Forced March to Quebec.

Valcartier is about 16 miles from Quebec, and instead of carrying the soldiers on special trains over the Canadian Northern, there is no doubt that the division will cover the distance on foot. This will be the last severe test for the men until they reach England or France.

It has also been said that the contingent would be given some training in England before joining the allies on the continent, but this is only conjecture. It will be very difficult to move such a large body of troops without the matter becoming public property, but it is altogether likely that the press of Canada will be requested by the government to act as did the newspapers of England a few weeks ago, when several British army divisions were taken to France.

Rifle Shooting Good.

The men in training here, many of them without any military knowledge a short time ago, are being rapidly whipped into shape. The review on Sunday showed that they have made vast strides in marching ; but the shooting, which is a far more important factor, has been excellent, considering conditions during the past few days. This has been especially true in rapid-firing, five rounds in 45 seconds, which is something new to most of the Canadian militiamen.

"The scores on an average have been particularly fine," said Col. Williams. "Great progress has been made."

There are 1,700 targets in use every day, and to-day, despite the rain, was no exception. The size of the ranges gives every battalion during the day time to practice.

Artillery Practice.

As the engineers have built three pontoon bridges across the Jacques Cartier river, the artillery will be able to begin actual practice in a day or two on the mountainous territory recently purchased by the government. Targets have been erected and everything is in readiness. Col. Morrison, director of artillery at Ottawa, stated that the artillery, which comprises many of the latest 12, 16 and 18 pound guns, is on a war basis and is ready to leave at any time. The batteries have just come from their annual camps at Petawawa and other points and the men are well trained. The horses, although new, are considered of excellent calibre and are being gradually broken into shape.

The Brigades Ready.

"I believe that the Canadian artillery is just as well trained as any of the continental batteries," said Col. Morrison. "I have every confidence in this section of the force."

No more than 36 nurses will be taken with the Canadian contingent. The Red Cross women may come here for training before the contingent leaves, although nothing definite has been given out. The nurses will be attached to two general hospitals, which will have accommodation up to 500 patients each. These hospitals will be located at the base of the line of communication.

Three field companies of the army medical corps will be taken, one to go with each brigade.

The following additional appointments of battalion commanders have been made: Lt. Col. D. Watson, 8th Regiment "Royal Rifles," will relieve Lt. Col. E. B. Worthington, 3rd E. T. Mounted Brigade, in command of No. 2 Infantry Battalion.

Lt. Col. R. W. Patterson, 34th Fort Garry Horse, will relieve Lt. Col. J. G. Rattray, 20th Border Horse, in the command of No. 6 Infantry Battalion.

Lt. Col. E. G. Shannon, 52nd Regiment "P. A. V.," will assume command of No. 7 Infantry Battalion.

Major S. S. Sharpe, 34th Ontario Regiment, is provisionally appointed second in command of No. 2 Infantry Battalion.

Hon. Col. Sir Chas. Ross, consulting officer, small arms, ammunition and ballistics, temporarily employed at camp headquarters.

It was stated officially to-night that all the Ross rifles had been issued. They are of the laest marks, 111 type, and, according to experts, "the finest in the world."

Great haste is being made in issuing clothes, and within a few days every battalion will be fully equipped.

Practically every man is now supplied with the regulation military tan boots.

MORE MEN PLACED WITH FARMERS

Many Callers at Office of Immigration Agent

Since Thursday, September 3, ten workmen have applied for positions at the local immigration office, and in every case these men have been placed with good positions on local farms.

Workmen should not look for charity if they are at all able to work on a farm. They are enabled to get in touch with many good positions on farms at a nominal remuneration, by applying at the local immigration office.

Any farmer who has a position open on his farm for a good man should apply immediately, as several good workmen have recently made applications.

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baltimore, Md.—"I am more than glad to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I suffered dreadful pains and was very irregular. I became alarmed and sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until I was without a cramp or pain and felt like another person, and it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health."—Mrs. AUGUST W. KONDNER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SECOND FORCE IS LIKELY

Another Canadian Contingent is Almost Certain

VALCARTIER CAMP, Que., Sept. 10.—It now seems certain that more than one Canadian contingent will go to the front. The Minister of Militia stated in an interview yesterday afternoon that chances were ten to one that there would be a second contingent. He would not state whether the next lot of troops would be mobilised at Valcartier, but the notion prevails among the officers here that the men will be assembled and trained at the various armories throughout the Dominion, and finally concentrated near Halifax, N. S.

Before leaving for Ottawa last evening the Minister of Militia had another conference with all the senior officers, in the course of which he made suggestions regarding the training work now proceeding. He strongly emphasized the necessity of straight shooting, and urged the officers to spare no effort to make the men proficient marksmen.

The Minister stated that he would return to Valcartier on Saturday, and that he would remain here most of the time until the first contingent sailed.

LINER OCEANIC IS WRECKED

All Officers and Crew Were Saved

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The Official Press Bureau issued the following announcement last night:—

"The merchant cruiser Oceanic of the White Star Line was wrecked yesterday near the north coast of Scotland and has become a total loss. All the officers and crew were saved."

The Oceanic made her last trip from New York to Southampton early last August, arriving at the British port August 3. She was then taken over by the British Government and converted into an armed cruiser. She was built in 1893 at Belfast by Harland & Wolff, Ltd. She was 685 feet long, and made her maiden voyage in 1899.

ALLIES VICTORIOUS IN FOUR-DAY BATTLE ON THE RIVER OURCQ

Kaiser Has Failed to Penetrate the French Centre, and is Now in Retreat Before the French Advance—German Lines of Communication in Danger and Retreat Into Belgium May be Cut Off.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—It was officially announced here yesterday that the French and British troops have routed the Germans in a great battle on the River Ourcq. Relating details of the struggle in which more than 2,000,000 men were engaged on both sides, the despatches say that two German regimental standards were captured by the French after a desperate hand-to-hand struggle.

It is stated that the Kaiser has signally failed after four days' fighting to penetrate the French centre, and that he is in retreat to-day before the French advance. Military observers declare that his own lines of communication are in grave danger, the enemy threatening to cut off his retreat into Belgium.

According to late advices received here, seventy thousand British East Indian troops with 30 guns, have landed in France and are fighting with the Anglo-French forces. News of the success of the allies has thrown this city into a fever of excitement. Londoners are highly elated over the change in the situation, and huge crowds stand near the bulletin boards and give expression to their jubilation.

Despatches from Paris relate that British officers and soldiers arriving from the front yesterday declare that the four-day battle, which still continues to the east of the capital, is being carried on furiously. They assert that the French captured a considerable number of field and machine guns, while the Germans often surrendered in groups. Field Marshal Sir John French, the commander-in-chief of the British expeditionary force now fighting with the French army, looked perfectly satisfied with the situation, according to the British soldiers.

To the east of France, the attack on the great circle of forts at Nancy, begun under the personal command of the Kaiser, has been abandoned for the time being at least.

A cable from Basel, Switzerland, via Rome, says the Germans have evacuated upper Alsace. The War Office says the efforts of the Germans to force the French centre has failed and that the advance of the allies was now general all along the line. It is also said the French artillery proved wonderfully effective.

The official announcement was as follows:

"First—On the left (French) wing, although the Germans have been reinforced, the situation remains satisfactory. The enemy is retreating before the British army.

"Second—At the centre our advance is slow but general. On the right (French) wing there has been no action of the enemy against the great circle of Nancy. In the Vosges and in Alsace the situation remains unchanged. On the banks of the River Ourcq two German flags have been captured in the course of a great battle. One was taken from the enemy by force by a reservist named Guilmard, who has received the military medal from Gen. Gallieni, commander of the French forces at Paris. This flag is of the Thirty-Sixth Regiment of German Infantry, which was decorated in 1870 with the order of the Iron Cross."

LIEUT. PORTE IN CHARGE OF AVIATION SCHOOL

Will Have Claude Graham-White as His First Assistant.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Advices received yesterday say that Lieut. John C. Porte, who had been scheduled to pilot the Rodman Wanamaker flying boat "America" across the Atlantic, has been placed in charge of the training school of the Aviation Corps of the Royal Navy. His first assistant is Claude Grahame-White, one of the best known of the British aviators.

LIETU J. C. PORTE.

The British Admiralty recently acquired the large aviation fleet at Hendon. At this station hundreds of young officers of the British navy will go into training at once, and seaplanes will be constructed as fast as the various factories in Britain can turn them out. Practically all will be of the biplane type, with variable speeds. It is said that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who himself is an aviator, favors this type.

Celebration Should Go On.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—The feeling of prominent men throughout the country is that the peace centenary celebration should be carried through in spite of the war. A month ago the Canadian Peace Centenary Association suspended preparations and asked the opinions of leading men all over the Dominion, at the same time forwarding the opinions of Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the arrangements should not be stopped.

Mauberge Has Fallen.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—By wireless telegraphy to the Associated Press, by way of Sayville, Long Island:

Official announcement was made yesterday at army headquarters that the French fortress of Mauberge, on the Sambre river, had fallen.

The Germans took 40,000 prisoners, including four generals. Four hundred guns also were captured.

TO INCREASE ARMY.

British Commons Votes To-day to Augment Fighting Force.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Premier Asquith announced yesterday afternoon that a vote would be taken to-day on the question of increasing the size of the British army.

There is no doubt that the vote will be practically unanimous.

In England where the saying is "Britain is only just starting," the greatest enthusiasm has been created by the King's message to his Indian dominions and colonies, in which he thanks his overseas subjects for the promptitude with which they responded to the call from the Mother Country.

In the United Kingdom recruiting continues. Men are joining the colors by the thousands all over the country and it is expected that Lord Kitchener's half million men will have been obtained by the end of the week.

The problem with which England is faced is that of caring for the thousands of refugees driven out of Belgium. A splendid organization, however, has the matter in hand and as the refugees come in they are sent quickly to different parts of the country, where hospitality awaits them.

Plans For Canadians.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—The Earl of Derby has offered his private grounds for mobilization of the Canadian expeditionary force in England.

It is understood they will be attached to one of the new armies now being raised by Lord Kitchener.

Steamship men are in conference here regarding the transport of Canada's troops, for which 25 ships will be required. Among those in attendance are: Sir William Mackenzie and D. B. Hanna, Royal Line; Andrew Allan, Allan Line; Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent, C.P.R., and Mr. Mitchell of the White Star Line.

Kaiser's Vancouver Holdings.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 10.—A writer in The London Financial Times, who alludes to the Kaiser's realty holding in Vancouver, refers to those controlled under and in the name of Baron Von Alvensleben. A careful estimate of his investments places the amount at about nine million dollars. Of that sum the Emperor is said to have furnished one-third.

Japan Will Act With Britain.

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—The Japanese Government announced yesterday that Great Britain had informed France and Russia that the recent convention signed by the powers of the triple alliance, in which it was agreed that none of the three would accept terms of peace without the previous consent of the other two, must not be regarded as modifying the British alliance with Japan, with whom Great Britain acts in common in the conduct of the war, or in the making of peace.

To Aid Belgian Homeless.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The hospitality of the British nation has been offered by the Government to those who lost their homes and have been rendered destitute by the destruction of Louvain and other Belgian towns. There are indications that the invitation would be accepted on a large scale, and the Government has arranged for the reception and entertainment of these sufferers in London.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 11, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 12-25. Memory Verses, 22, 23—Golden Text, 1 Cor. xi, 26—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The record of this last evening on which He kept the passover and instituted what we call the Lord's supper is found more or less fully in each of the four gospels. Luke says that He sent Peter and John, saying, "Go and prepare us the passover," and that they said unto Him, "Where wilt thou that we prepare?" (Luke xxii, 8, 9.) So should we ever ask Him concerning all our goings, and there is another question we should ask Him concerning all our doings, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" (Acts ix, 6), for we have no wisdom concerning anything, but Prov. iii, 5, 6; Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21, are a very great comfort. They needed no instruction to reach the city, so He said, "Behold, when ye are entered into the city there shall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water" (Luke xxii, 10).

They were to follow him into a house and say to the good man of the house, "The Master saith, where is the guest chamber where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?" (Verses 13, 14; Luke xxii, 10, 11.) It does not seem that the man bearing the water vessel knew what he was doing, but that he all unconsciously guided the men to the right house.

We are often unconsciously guiding people rightly or wrongly, for "Doth He not see my ways and count all my steps?" (Job xxxi, 4.)

The owner of the house must have been a disciple, for he understood and showed them the upper room furnished. Thus they found as He had said unto them (verse 16; see also Luke xix, 32).

So shall we always find it to be just as He has said. The words translated "guest chamber" are found in only one other place besides this incident, and that is in Luke ii, 7, "No room for them in the inn." There they made ready the passover. What a privilege and honor and pleasure to make anything ready for Him! Do you find it so? As He sat down with them in the evening He said that He had greatly desired to eat this passover with them before He suffered, but that He would not eat of it again until fulfilled in the kingdom of God (Luke xxii, 15-18). He Himself is our passover sacrificed for us, but as there was a great deliverance of Israel from Egypt at the first passover there will be a greater deliverance of Israel at His second coming to set up His kingdom (I Cor. v, 7; Jer. xxiii, 7, 8). After lesson verse 17 and this portion from Luke there should come in the incident of the feet washing, found only in John xiii, by which He taught them humbly to serve one another and the necessity of constant cleansing from earth's defilement. Then as they ate the passover He said that one of them would betray Him and it had been good for that man if he had never been born. No one seemed to suspect Judas Iscariot, for they said one by one, "Is it I?" Simon Peter asked John, who was leaning on Jesus' bosom, to ask Jesus who it was. He replied, "He it is to whom I shall give a sop when I have dipped it." He gave the sop to Judas Iscariot, and then Satan entered into him.

Then Jesus said to him, "That thou doest, do quickly."

Judas went immediately out, and it was night and has been night with him ever since. Before he went out he said, "Master, is it I?" And Jesus said unto him, "Thou hast said" (verses 18-21; Matt. xxvi, 25; John xiii, 26-30). According to our lesson, there followed the institution of the supper, by which, according to I Cor. xi, 26, we show the Lord's death till He come. The bread represents His body given for us and the wine His blood shed for us, and by believing we eat Himself as is explained in John vi, 47, 54, where in the one verse eternal life is the result of believing on Him, and in the other it is the result of eating His flesh and drinking His blood, so that eating His flesh and drinking His blood is just believing on Him or, according to John i, 12, receiving Him.

He said again in this connection that He would not drink any more of the fruit of the vine till he should drink it new in the kingdom of God (verse 25).

He also spoke of appointing to the twelve (some one taking the place of Judas Iscariot) a kingdom that they might eat and drink at His table in His kingdom and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel (Luke xxii, 28-30). Compare Matt. xix, 28.

While He had before Him, knowing all things, the sufferings of Gethsemane and Calvary, they were selfishly talking of who should be the greatest, and Simon was saying that he was ready to go with Him to prison and to death, not knowing his utter weakness nor that Satan was asking for him to sift him (Luke xxii, 24-34).

In His reference to swords He seems to me to be saying to them that if they could not trust Him when invisibly as well as when visibly with them they had better buy swords and take care of themselves. When He said that two swords were enough it is evident that He did not mean that each should have one.

Connect John xiii, 36-38, and xiv, 1, as if there were no chapter divisions and see how marvelous it is.

NATIVE PRINCES OF INDIA MAKE MAGNIFICENT OFFER

Viceroy Sends Message to British Parliament Announcing That 700 Rulers of States in the East, Including the Dalai Llama of Tibet, Have Put Immense Resources at Disposal of Empire.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon C. Roberts, one of the Under Secretaries of the Colonial Department, read a message from the Viceroy of India which said that the rulers of the Indian native states, nearly 700 in number, had with one accord rallied to the defence of the Empire with personal offers of services, as well as the resources of their states.

One Indian chief, 70 years of age, demanded the right to render military service along with his nephew, a youth of 16, who is now with the expeditionary forces. Offers of troops, horses, money and even jewelry had rolled in, the Viceroy said.

The Dalai Llama of Tibet had offered a thousand soldiers to aid the Empire, and thousands of Llamas were praying daily for the success of the British forces and for the repose of the souls of the dead.

In addition to men and money, some of the native rulers of India are equipping a hospital ship.

The House was deeply moved by this message and its reading was greeted with cheer upon cheer.

Speaking of the expeditionary force from India, Mr. Roberts said that it contained, besides units of the regular army, contingents of the imperial service troops, maintained in the larger states of India. From twelve of these states the Viceray accepted contingents of cavalry, infantry, sappers and transport, besides a camel corps from Bikanir.

The Gaekwar of Baroda, who is at the present time in London, has put his entire resources, both personal and national, at the disposal of the British Government. The Gaekwar is very wealthy and his state is capable of extensive aid if it is needed.

Maharaja Mysore had placed, he said, 50 Lakhs of rupees (about $1,-$600,000) at the disposal of the Government in connection with the expenditure of the expeditionary force.

Mr. Roberts said that in addition to the gift of the Maharaja of Mysore the Maharaja of Gwalior and Bhopal had contributed large sums of money and provided thousands of horses as remounts.

Maharaja Holkar of Indore has made a gift of all the horses in the army of his state to the Government. A similar desire to help the Government was received from committees representing religious, political and social associations of all classes and creeds.

A HERO IN THE CLOUDS

Daring Russian Aviator Sacrificed His Life

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Capt. Nesteroff, one of the most daring Russian aviators and the first of his countrymen to loop the loop, has sacrificed his life in a successful attempt to destroy an Austrian aeroplane, says a Petrograd despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co.

According to a report from the front, Capt. Nesteroff was returning from an aerial reconnaissance when he saw an Austrian aeroplane hovering over the Russian forces, presumably with the intention of dropping bombs.

The Russian aviator immediately changed the direction of his machine, and headed straight for that of the Austrian at full speed, and, although he must have known well that victory by such tactics could be gained only at the cost of his own life, he dashed into the Austrian aeroplane. The force of the impact caused the collapse of both machines, which plunged to earth, the two aviators meeting instant death.

ROBINSON GOES TO NAPANEE

Tamworth Physician Will Appear in Court on Saturday

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—Dr. C. K. Robinson, charged with the murder of Blanche Yorke of Tamworth, was taken to Napanee yesterday afternoon in the custody of Inspector Greer, where he will appear before the magistrate on Saturday for a preliminary examination. The evidence given at the inquest was accepted as ground for commitment. The Deputy Attorney-General advised Supt. Rogers to have the prisoner taken before the magistrate of the Counties of Lennox and Addington, and this action was taken.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Hamilton, Sept. 10.—It is understood on good authority that Southpaw Pat Dougherty is being picked up by one of the big league clubs, intimation having been given that the Brooklyn club had put in a draft for him. The loss of Dougherty by draft would prove a good thing for the local club financially and would help cover part of the deficit. Dougherty should make the jump into faster company, and there is hardly any doubt but that he will. It is also likely that Cunningham, the local second sacker, will be given another chance in faster company. Cunningham has played brilliant ball during the past month.

Pitcher Davis, a recruit of Stallings's Braves pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Red Doolin's Phillies yesterday. As the Dodgers took one from the Giants at the expense of Marty O'Toole, who yielded 14 hits, the Braves' lead is now a game and a half.

Crop Competitions

Ontario farmers have little to fear from war-time depression, according to the annual report of the agricultural societies. The outlook for the crops and the quality of the grain is considered especially good and conditions of agricultural progress are referred to frequently. One of the foremost features of the present year will be the standing field crop competitions in which more than 3,500 farmers are participating, and which require 100 judges to supervise. Already prize money to the extent of $1,500 has been arranged for awards at the larger provincial showings.

Superintendent J. Lockie Wilson stated the other day as an example of the improvement in quality of the grain and how it was working to the advantage of the grower, the case of a farmer who had carried off several prizes. He wrote the department to say that out of his bonus money and the increased price received for his product he was paying for a new brick house. The department considers this a vindication of their policy. The floor space asked at the larger provincial exhibitions this fall is half as large again as that of 1913.

REMNANT IN FLIGHT

Cassacks Pursuing Austrian Fugitives

PETROGRAD, Sept. 10.—That the Austrian armies of Gen. Von Auffenberg and Gen. Dankl have been completely crushed by the Russians under Gen. Ruszky, at Rawa, thirty miles north of Lemberg, is the declaration at the War Office last evening.

It is stated that among the prisoners are many Germans. Gen. Ruszky's forces attacked the Austrians on their right flank, while the Russian forces that had been sent from Warsaw attacked from the rear. The fighting, which began on Saturday, lasted until yesterday.

The remnants of the Austrian forces are retreating, hotly pursued by the Russians.

The Austrian losses at Rawa are said to be enormous, whole regiments having been cut off by Cossacks and killed or captured.

The main force of Russians in Galicia is now said to be working east to effect an entrance into Hungary through the Borge pass in the Carpathians. Several clashes have already occurred in the foot hills of the Carpathian ranges.

It is reported that the Galician fortress of Przemysl has been captured after three days' attack.

Disease Among Austrians.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The noon official statement confirmed the reports that disease has broken out in the Austrian army.

Montenegro and Servia already are engaged against Austria, and have taken the offensive. Roumania also is hungry for territory, and is said to be ready at any moment to throw her 200,000 veteran troops against Austria. Another brilliant success along the border by the troops of Emperor Nicholas is almost certain to unite the Slav States of southeastern Europe to her cause.

Russia evidently has again begun her advance along the East Prussian frontier, the Russian vanguard being reported yesterday sixty miles beyond Koenigsberg.

Koenigsberg is 338 miles from Berlin.

News from Austria indicates that the dual monarchy is in grave danger of internal troubles, while her military situation is daily becoming worse.

Even Berlin seems to have lost something of its prevailing optimism. It confesses to the turning of anxious eyes in the direction of the ally in Galicia. During the first few weeks of the war Germany and Austria virtually dictated the direction of the campaigns along the Russian border, because of the inadequacy of Russian railroad and other transport. But this situation has been radically changed by the Russian successes in Galicia.

Russia has thrown 2,000,000 men along the border in East Prussia. This action is regarded here as a menace against the heart of Germany which cannot remain unanswered. Hence the stories of the movements of German veterans from the western war area to the eastern Prussian frontier are generally considered as credible.

A Great Feat.

LONDON, Sept. 10. — The latest Russian success, the capture of the fortress of Nicolaieff, at Mikolajow, about twenty-five miles southwest of Lemberg, is almost as great a feat as the taking of Lemberg itself. The place is not only strongly fortified, but it was believed to be virtually unassailable, owing to the fact that it was surrounded by marshes extending for twenty-five miles.

One of the most significant features of the Austrian misfortunes is the fact of the growing uneasiness in Roumania and other Balkan States.

A telegram received here from Bucharest, Roumania, says that the Russian victories in Galicia over the forces of the dual monarchy have aroused the Roumanians to almost frantic excitement. Two hundred thousand Roumanians demonstrated yesterday in the streets of Bucharest in favor of Russia and France.

ASK THAT ACT BE POSTPONED

Employers Want Government to Delay Compensation Measure

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Hard pressed financially as a result of the prevailing disruption of business, manufacturers, it is understood, are making a strong effort to have the operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act delayed until matters improve. In the Legislature last session Hon. I. B. Lucas stated that the Act would be brought into force not later than January 1st, and an amendment to that effect was adopted. Since then arrangements have been rapidly pushed to have everything ready in time.

Manufacturers as a whole had become reconciled to the idea of paying assessments for compensation purposes, but the war put a new front upon things, and now the prospect worries them. Under the Act the Compensation Board has authority to make provisional assessments covering not only the payments that will have to be made in the coming year but sufficient as well to create a reserve to meet payments in future years chargeable against next year. Should the board take the present wage roll as a guide for assessments many employers would not feel so much concern, since staffs have been generally cut down. The Commissioners, however, have considerable latitude, and should they decide to strike a year's average the assessments would be much heavier. There is also the fact that in getting the system started the Board is more likely to fix an assessment sufficiently large to avoid embarrassment during the first year.

Sizing up the situation the manufacturers have already made representations to the Government without getting much satisfaction. As was pointed out some time ago, the difficulty the province had met with in securing funds makes the bringing into operation of the Compensation Act an added burden—the Government's annual contribution, amounting to $100,000. Besides this there might be a call upon the Treasury for advances to build up the reserve.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, it is stated, is still determined to have the Act in operation by January 1st and declines to consider yet the possibility of postponing it.

In this connection a serious point has been raised. When the Act went through the House last session it was with the general understanding that it carried a provision fixing January 1st as the date for commencing operation unless a proclamation had been issued before that date. The printed copies of the Act circulated by the Government do not contain this stipulation, merely providing that the Act may be brought into force by proclamation. The absence of this provision gives the manufacturers a chance to put up an argument. With it the Act would come into force automatically.

How to Win an Author.

"There's no greater fallacy," said an author at the Authors' club, "than the popular one to the effect that writers don't like you to talk to them about their work.

"Mark Twain exploded this fallacy well when he said that there were three ways of pleasing an author—first, to tell him that you have read one of his books, second, to tell him you have read all his books, and, third, to ask him to let you read the manuscript of his forthcoming book. The first way wins his respect, the second wins his friendship and the third wins his love." —New York Tribune.

Offer of Horses Accepted.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 10.—It has been announced by the Provincial Government that Saskatchewan's offer of 1,500 horses has been accepted by the Government of Great Britain.

Sixty Thousand More Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—German reinforcements estimated at 60,000 men are advancing into France in three columns, according to an Ostend despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co.

THE CURFEW

(American Boy.)

If there is a curfew in your vicinity it is probably a signal, imposed by the town authorities, which, when sounded in the evening, requires small boys to retire within doors. In its beginning the curfew served a far different purpose and applied to all classes of whatever age. In the Middle Ages, when we first hear the of the curfew, the curfew bell was commonly tolled in cities as a warning to all inhabitants to extinguish or cover up all fires and lights. This was a common practice throughout Europe and was a very necessary precaution against fire. All of the houses were of wood and the fires were kindled in a hole in the floor with no other vent than another hole in the roof above the hearth. Under such circumstances, it was all too easy for a fire to start, and wooden buildings and crude fire-fighting apparatus offered small check to a fire once it was under way.

Many histories state that the curfew was introduced into England by William the Conqueror, who in 1068 ruled that on the ringing of the curfew bell at 8 p.m. all fires and lights should be immediately extinguished. Students of history have discovered traces of a curfew in England in much earlier times and insist that it was in use in Oxford in the time of Alfred the Great.

McLaughlin Announcement

LAST year we gave Canada the McLaughlin "Six"—a record car in point of appearance, comfort and mechanical efficiency—the greatest economizer of running expense among the high class cars—the only luxurious "Six" that is at the same time economical. That offering turned old values upside down. That car was unapproached in the beauty of its pure "stream" lines. It was marvellous value—better than we had ever offered. Motorists everywhere saw this.

What followed was inevitable.

For 1915, hundreds of Canadians are demanding the McLaughlin "Six." This means building many more cars—and with the rise in output down comes the price.

The McLaughlin "Six"—1915—with the year's advances in mechanical and body refinements, will be sold for $2,250. This is an announcement without parallel in the history of this company.

Here follows a sure measure of value. Check other Canadian offerings by this new automobile standard. Between the lines, "read in" McLaughlin past performance—and McLaughlin years of stability—and remember that this car is guaranteed to go 17 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Wheel Base — 130 inches.
Oversize tires; 36 by 4½.
Dimming search-lights.
Non-skid tires on rear.
Disappearing tonneau seats.
Locked ignition and lights.
English weather-proof top material.
Power pump regular equipment.
All electric wires in metal conduits.
Horn button in center of steering wheel.
Stewart-Warner gravity gasoline feed—no more hand pumping.
Beautiful English type top, natural wood bows with nickel-plated slat-irons.
Finest Canadian-made, hand-buffed trimming leather throughout.
Improved intensified Delco starting, lighting and ignition.
Long, wide, easy-motion, cantilever springs on rear.

If you believe—as you must—that here you have found unheard-of value, think of the magnificent McLaughlin Sixes you have seen about town. Remember that this is the beautiful car with pure stream lines, with commodious seating—and that it now comes for $2,250. See it again at the McLaughlin Garage.

ART EXAMINATIONS.

At the recent art examinations in Toronto conducted by the Education Department, Miss Lenore Sanderson, B.A., daughter of Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, of 369 Brock St., was successful in completing the course.

She obtained a Supervisor's certificate and an Art Specialist certificate. These qualify her to act as supervisor of art and drawing in public schools or as teacher of art in a high school or collegiate institute.

Not many Ontario students have yet completed this course and Miss Sanderson is to be congratulated upon her success.

Mr. Thos. Wood was in Toronto on Tuesday attending the funeral of his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. Wood.

AFRICAN MAP WILL LIKELY BE CHANGED AT EXPENSE OF THE KAISER

Not only the map of Europe, but also the map of Africa, is apt to be changed considerably in the near future, for the three great powers now engaged in the titanic European struggle all hold extensive stretches of territory on the dark Continent.

The French empire in the northern part of Africa alone is very large. In acquiring this France has had many differences with the Kaiser.

Then, again, the German activities have clashed with those of Great Britain. England has control over Egypt and the country about the southern point of Africa extending northward, but this is broken in its continuity by the Germon possessions on the eastern coast (German East Africa).

Present probabilities are that whatever map-making, if any, is done in Africa, will be done in spite of Germany and at Germany's expense. The German possessions in Africa have a total area of nearly a million square miles, or, to be exact, 931,420 square miles. The African possessions are four and one-half times as large as Germany itself, which is about 209,000 square miles in extent. The African possessions have a population of 12,700,000, as against 65,000,000 in Germany. Apart from its African possessions, Germany has only a few small islands in the Pacific.

Undoubtedly the French are the better colonizers and the most loved of the three European nations in Africa. If the worst comes to the worst, it is said, France could raise a black army of 250,000 to fight for her, while the Germans would have to fight with European soldiers only. The blacks living under French government have been made French subjects and the equal of Frenchmen, and love their masters, while the black man of the German possession both fears and detests the ruler who wears the spiked helmet. The Egyptian fellah respects his British master, but he doesn't love him.

Took Part of Morocco.

Colonization methods of the three nations are widely different. Indeed it is said "when the English occupy a country the first thing they build a customs house, the Germans a barracks, and the French a railway."

Every foot of German territory in Africa has been gained at the expense of friction. One clash of the German and French resulted in the former taking a good portion of the rich Moroccan country in the northwest corner of Africa. If the war extends to Africa and the French are victorious, they would undoubtedly demand this portion of Morocco back and the Cameroons, another German possession on the west coast, would in all probability go to France, in addition to Alsace and Lorraine.

One Obstacle.

Were it not for Germany the "all red" railway from the Cape to Cairo on the east coast, would be possible for the British. A glance at the map will show this broken bit of possession. It will show the present territory held by the Germans in two sections on the west, adjacent to the Belgian Congo in the centre of the continent. Germany might in the next few years to come, if she survives this war without losing her African possessions, purchase Portuguese East Africa.

The Kaiser may possible, ere this war is over, lose his foothold in Africa, and at the same time the French and the British possessions would be enlarged. Just what this means may be gleaned from the fact that German capital expenditures in Africa have reached a total of $400,000,000.

Wonders Done.

Going into the desert country of the British you come to Timbuctoo, which twenty years ago was nothing but a name, and is now the junction of an Atlantic-Mediterranean railway part of which has been constructed and part of which is under construction.

The French empire in Africa is not all desert. Two years ago the government announced that a tract many miles square in area in the heart of the Sahara had been reclaimed and was ready for grain planting. On the basis of past work, in fifty years one-half of the desert will be reclaimed.

The affairs at home have kept Germany busy of late years and her colonial enterprises have been a flat failure. In Africa the German possessions have more soldiers than traders, and more barracks than schools. The natives have been so reduced in number that it has been found necessary to import white labour to do a good part of the heavy work in railroad building.

Possessions Scattered.

The German territory in Africa is divided into four scattered chunks. On the east coast is German East Africa, on the west is German Southwest Africa, while farther north is Cameroons. Togoland is a little strip sandwiched in between French Dahomey and the British Gold Coast.

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF FIGHTING BY BRITISH

English Troops Did Not Get Support as Expected in Earlier Fighting—Saved Themselves From Annihilation by Germans.

London, Sept. 10.—The London Gazette issued late last night contains a despatch from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British troops in France, reporting the proceedings of his force. A summary of the reports follows:

The British took position on Aug. 22, the report says, on a line from Conde on the west, through Mons and Binche on the east. General French understood that at the most two army corps were in front of the British position.

At 5 o'clock on the evening of Aug. 23 he received a most unexpected message from General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, that three German army corps were moving in a frontal direction on the British, and that another corps was engaged in a turning movement from Tournai. General Joffre also stated that the French army on the British right was retiring.

As a result of this information he determined to retire to a position which he had previously reconnoitered, extending from Maubeuge west to Jenlain, southeast to Valenciennes.

There was a certain amount of fighting along the whole line of the right. The retirement was carried out successfully throughout the 24th, amid continuous fighting.

"As the French troops were still retiring," Gen. French continues, "I had no support except from the fortress at Maubeuge, and determined attempts of the enemy to get around my left flank assured me it was his intention to press me against that place and surround me. I felt not a moment must be lost in retiring to another position.

"This operation was full of danger and difficulty, not owing to the very superior force in my front, but to the exhaustion of my troops. The retirement recommenced early in the morning of the 25th to a position near Le Cateau.

Dared Not Make Stand.

"Although the troops had been ordered to occupy Cambrai, Le Cateau and Landrecies, and that position and ground had, during the 25th, been partially prepared and entrenched, I had grave doubts, owing to information I received regarding the accumulating strength of the enemy, as to the wisdom of standing there to fight.

"Moreover, the retirement of the French troops on my right continued, and I determined to make a great effort to continue the retreat till I could put a substantial obstacle, such as the Somme river or the Oise river, between the British and the enemy, and afford the former some opportunity for rest and reorganization.

"Therefore the corps commanders were ordered to retreat as soon as possible to a general line from St. Quentin to Ribmont."

Gen. French then describes the march through all that day and until late in the evening, during which time he was incessantly harassed by the enemy, who continued the attack late at night on the exhausted British. Gen. French continues:

"Gen. Sordet, commanding three cavalry divisions, whom I had called to my assistance, though he rendered valuable aid later, was unable to afford any support on the most crucial day, the 26th, owing to the exhaustion of his horses.

To Avoid Annihilation.

"At daybreak of the 26th it became apparent that the enemy was throwing the bulk of his strength against the left of our position, and the guns of four German army corps being in position against it, General Smith Dorrien reported that he was unable to retire as ordered. In the face of such an attack it was impossible for me to support General Dorrien, as the first corps at the moment was incapable of moving. There had been no time to entrench properly, but the troops showed a magnificent front to the terrible fire.

"Finally it became apparent that if complete annihilation was to be avoided, a retirement must be attempted, and an order was given to commence it at 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon. The movement was covered with the most devoted intrepidity and determination by the artillery, which had still suffered heavily, and the fine work of the cavalry assisted materially in the completion of the most difficult and dangerous operation. Fortunately the enemy had suffered too heavily to engage in energetic pursuit.

"I cannot close this brief account of this glorious stand of the British without according deep appreciation to the valuable services of General Smith Dorrien. The saving of the left wing of the whole army would have been impossible unless a commander of rare and unusual coolness and determination had been present to personally conduct the operation.

"The retreat was continued far into the night of the 26th, and throughout the two followings days, when the troops halted on the line of Noyon, Chauny and Le Fere, having thrown off the weight of the enemy's pursuit. During these two days I was indebted to General Sordet's cavalry division for assistance in repelling the enemy. General D'Amade, also from the neighborhood of Arras, relieved the pressure on the British rear from the enemy's right flank."

In concluding, General French pays a tribute to the invaluable scouting service of the army's flying corps.

GERMANY'S FOOD A VITAL PROBLEM

When it is said that Germany's only possible chance to win is by a short war, it is meant that in a long struggle the combined resources of the allies are superior to those of Germany, and that in the end they would inevitably tell, no matter with what genius the German forces were handled. In a long war, with Germany unable to import foodstuffs, the result is no more open to argument than is the assertion that a bag of flour is heavier than half a bag. The German army might destroy nine-tenths of the soldiers sent against them, but someone has made the remark that an army fights on its stomach, and if the victorious Germans found that their army would be starved and that their people were already starving, there would be nothing to do but to surrender and accept whatever terms, short of starvation, might be imposed by the powers that, from the point of actual engagements, had been defeated.

No Problem for Allies.

As far as the allies are concerned, the food problem is solved already. It is command of the sea that solves it. From all parts of the world food is now arriving in England and in France. Russia is self-supporting. Even should she be isolated, she could continue to grow all the food her people require. Moreover, in Russia the vast majority of the population continues to till the soil and harvest the crops, and will continue to do so no matter how long the war may last. In the event of a long war, France, like Great Britain, will have to import foodstuffs; but if the seas are secure for Britain, they are secure for France. Germany, however, in normal times, grows only 85 per cent. of what she eats, and next year, on account of practically all the able-bodied men of the nation being under arms, she will grow far less. It is said that even now the pinch of hunger is beginning to be felt in Berlin by the poorer classes. In anticipation of a famine, those with a little capital laid in supplies, and those whom stern necessity compels to live from hand to mouth, are already hungry.

Must Import or Starve.

It is incredible that among the preparations for the war the Kaiser did not provide a stock of foodstuffs that he calculated would be ample for the needs of his people. In some quarters it has been said that Germany has on hand but four months' stores, while others say that there is enough food for a year. However much or little there is, there is not an indefinite supply, and sooner or later Germany must import foodstuffs or starve. Where is she to get her food? In the past she has purchased most of her grain from Russia, as a writer in the London Mail points out. She will not purchase another bushel from Russia as long as the war lasts. She cannot import from the United States, from Canada or from the Argentine, for the British navy will not let the food pass to the ports on her northern coast. There remains only the frontiers that part her from Italy and Austro-Hungary. If she is to get food at all, it must be from this source.

Only One Source.

From Hungary she can count upon receiving a certain supply of cattle, and from Hungary also she will continue to get barley for brewing purposes. Neither Austria nor Hungary, however, has any great quantity of surplus wheat at the present time, and there is always the extreme probability of the advance of the Russian army damming this channel before many months have elapsed. There remains Italy. Should Italy continue neutral, it will be possible for Germany to secure a certain amount of foodstuffs, but it will be only the food that Italy grows herself for export purposes. It would be impossible to ship food from abroad to Italy and forward it to Germany, for the powers in command of the seas would probably hold up such grain-carriers. Moreover, Italy's neutrality to Germany, should it be maintained throughout the war, is not likely to be a friendly neutrality, and the Italian government is not likely to encourage Italians to help out Germany with food supplies.

Where is the Gold to Pay?

But supposing that even if Germany had access to the food markets of the world, she could be supplied only with what she could pay for, and where is she going to get the money to pay for anything in a year's time? She is now spending at the rate of $20,000,000 a day, and, huge though her war chest is, it cannot survive a year's steady drain. Everything is going out and nothing is coming into Germany. Her foreign trade has collapsed absolutely. Not a dollar's worth of articles of German manufacture is being exported. She is not being paid by any foreigners who owe her money. She cannot borrow. Her home industries are at a standstill. Not a wheel is turning except for military purposes. Nobody is drawing wages except from the government. Where is she to get the £162,000,000 a year that she has spent with foreign nations for food and drink? And without this food for a year, what is to become of her?

THEATRICAL

The theatrical season opened at the Grand last night, with Mr. George Arliss in "Disraeli," with his English company. This was Mr. Arliss' first engagement here as a star under the Liebler company, and seldom has an audience witnessed a performance since the days of Sir Henry Irving and Richard Mansfield that could approach that of Mr. Arliss in "Disraeli."

One of England's greatest statesmen, the original Disraeli has been dead some thirty years, but he is perpetuated in the person of Mr. George Arliss.

Perhaps a short rehearsal of the famous play is welcome to our minds: "Disraeli" is laid in the period of the 70's, preceding the time of Beaconsfield's great history-making efforts in connection with the Suez canal. This comedy is turned on a trick whereby Disraeli, as prime minister, but unsupported even by his own colleagues, pledges the honor of Great Britain in order to privately raise a sum of money for the purchase of the Suez canal from Egypt, at a time when parliament is not in session. Russia is anxious to get the canal, but only in case Great Britain wishes to obtain it. In other words, Russia is waiting to take its cue as to the strategic value of the canal from Disraeli's own attitude toward it. Thus the Czar's spies obtain entrance to Beaconsfield's household, both as his employes and as friends of Lady Beaconsfield. In the device whereby Disraeli is successful in obtaining the canal, he incidentally is successful in turning to ambitious manhood a young nobleman whose thoughts are rather vague concerning the best way to serve his fellowman.

The play is immense in its sublimity throughout and lends itself well to the sagacity of Mr. Arliss.

Mr. Arliss is supported by a strong company, among which is Ernita Lascelles, Margaret Dale, Florence Arliss, Leita Repton, Lilia Campbell, Charles Harbury, Arthur Eldred and Vincent Sternroyd.

Miss Margaret Dale, in the role of Mrs. Noel Travers, was Mr. Arliss' chief competitor for the honors of the evening. Miss Dale was charming in her deportment and in the intrigue which she was a party to.

Two Cases For Friday's Court

Two prominent cases will figure tomorrow morning's police court. The charge against Bert Howden of unlawfully inducing Minnie Herron to accompany him to Toronto will be aired, also the charge against Bar and Rose the two men who tried the flim-flam game once too often and were arrested by the local authorities will also be heard. Communications from other cities have been received and several charges laid.

Distinguished Actor Plays the Role of the Moor

IN "OTHELLO"

At the Grand Opera House tomorrow night, the distinguished young actor, Mr. James K. Hackett, will appear, for the first time in his career, in Shakespeare's great love tragedy, "Othello," playing the role of the Moor. It is promised that his interpretation of this great part, while following traditions to some extent, will be largely along new lines and embodying his individual study of the play. The event promises to be one of the most notable of the dramatic year, and patrons are assured of a most perfect performance.

"Eminent Coiffure Specialist is Coming"

Prof. Dorenwend of the Dorenwend Co'y, Toronto, will be at the Oriental Hotel, Peterboro, on Friday and Saturday, September 18th and 19th, when he will be in consultation with their many patrons in this vicinity. The Dorenwend Co'y is well known throughout the Dominion and their visits here are always signalized by activity in their line. During the visit there will be shown a sample stock of the most fashionable hair-goods and the latest models in everything pertaining to the hair. A specialty will be the Dorenwend Sanitary Patent Toupee, an invention which should be examined by every man who is bald. A cordial invitation is extended to the people to call and inspect these goods.

ONE THIRD OF PARIS POPULATION AWAY

Paris, Sept. 10.—The first results of the census now being taken in Paris to provide the military authorities with necesary information in case of siege, shows the number of households to be 887,267, representing 2,006,786 people, as compared with 1,122,634 households and 2,833,351 people in 1911, showing that the exodus represents 30 per cent. of the population. It is expected that fuller figures later will show the diminution to be greater than this.

General Retirement of Enemy is Continued

Paris, Sept. 11, C.P. Despatch.---News from the fighting line to the east of Paris is to the effect that at some points the Germans have retired from thirty-seven to forty-six miles.

And Pursuit is Being Vigorously Pressed

BODIES OF GERMAN INFANTRY IN HIDING SURRENDER AT SIGHT

British Troops Make Numerous Captures as Rapidly Retreating Invaders Are Pursued

EVIDENCES OF DEMORALIZATION

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 11.—The official press bureau to-day gave out the following announcement: "The general retirement of the enemy continues.

"British forces yesterday captured 1,500 prisoners, including the wounded, and several guns, including maxims, and large quantities of transports.

"The enemy is retreating rapidly east of Soissons in some disorder."

In a later telegram it is declared that, from further information, the captures of yesterday are higher than first reported. Considerable bodies of infantry are being found, hiding in the woods, having been left behind owing to the rapid retirement of their forces. These surrender at sight. This, together with the rifling of villages and evidences of drunkenness, point to the demoralization of the enemy.

The pursuit of the enemy is being vigorously pressed.

REPORTED MISSING, MAY TURN UP AGAIN.

London, Sept. 11.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Rouen has great hopes that many of the British numbered in Sir John French's list of casualties will turn up again. He has every ground for expecting to see 4,000 or more of these men soon back in the firing line.

TEN COACHES OF TROOP TRAIN GO DOWN EMBANKMENT.

London, Sept. 11.—A Capetown despatch to Reuter's Telegraph Co. says a troop train loaded with 600 soldiers, on their way to the coast for shipment to Europe, was derailed on a sharp curve overlooking the Hex River valley in Cape Colony.

The locomotive and 10 coaches plunged over a 20-foot embankment. Six men were killed and 20 seriously injured. The accident was probably due to the undermining of the tracks by the heavy rains. The train was proceeding slowly, owing to a steep grade, otherwise the mortality would have been enormous. The railroad company is making strenuous efforts to clear away the wreckage, as ten other trainloads of troops are being held up by the wreck.

GERMAN STEAMER IS TAKEN.

London, Sept. 11.—A despatch from Kingston, Jamaica, says the North German Lloyd steamer Bethania, of 5,000 tons, has been captured at sea and brought into that port.

FRENCH RECAPTURE MUELHAUSEN.

London, Sept. 11.—A despatch from Basel says the French have recaptured Muelhausen.

KAISER AND STAFF AT LUXEMBURG.

Paris, Sept. 11.—A Havas despatch says the story is published in Rome that, following a violent discussion at Constantinople between the Crown Prince of Trukey and Enver Pasha, minister of war, shots were exchanged, the Crown Prince being slightly wounded, while Enver Pasha has since died of his wounds.

A despatch from Amsterdam says Emperor William and the German general staff are now at Luxemburg, quartered in the house of the German legation.

SATISFACTION FELT IN PARIS.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The tone of comment in the morning papers on the result of the four days' fighting in the great battle of Champagne, is one of lively satisfaction. Successes, it is admitted, do not mean that the battle has been won, but a gain of 40 miles on the German left increases the jeopardy on their line of communication and must cause the demoralization of the enemy's tired forces.

As yet there is no indication that the German army on the Lorraine frontier will be able to get through to help the main force, as last accounts reported Maubeuge was still holding out.

Stories Repeated by Celtic's Passengers.

New York, Sept. 11.—Passengers by steamer Celtic, one of five liners which docked to-day, repeated stories of Russian soldiers passing through England. All passenger traffic on the railroads to Southampton, they say, has been suspended for some time, to speed the Czar's troops to their transports, and they travelled in coaches with darkened windows. AID TO THE DEPENDENTS OF THE SOLDIERS

Mr. J. H. Burnham sent the following wire to the department of militia at Ottawa:

"Is government paying anything to soldiers' dependents? If so, when? Please answer immediately."

The reply was as follows:

"J. H. Burnham, M.P.,

"Yes; twenty dollars per month for soldiers, in addition to the pay assigned by the soldier himself, will be paid monthly as soon as lists are ready.

DEPUTATION FROM BERLIN AT INCINERATOR

Mayor Euler, of Berlin, Ont., backed up by five of his aldermen, Messrs. George Schlee, D. Gross, Jr., George Bucher, J. Schwartz, and C. C. Hahn, took Peterboro by storm this morning. They paid Peterboro a visit today to look at the incinerator plant as Berlin intends buying one. They were looked after while here by Mayor Buller and Mr. T. D. MacGreggor of the firm of Reid and MacGreggor who installed the plant. They paid quite a lengthy visit and inspected the plant thoroughly and expressed themselves as highly pleased with it. They were treated to an automobile ride around the city, and they visited the main points of interest here. They were pretty much taken up with the electric city, and said that outside of their own city, they thought Peterboro came next.

FOUL DEEDS PERPETRATED ON BELGIANS

Men Driven Into Ditch and Their Brains Beaten Out

WOUNDED COLONEL SHOT

Truth of Emperor's Explanation is Denied by Secretary of Commission

New York, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A partial list of alleged German atrocities in Belgium, against which the Belgian King has sent a protest to President Wilson, was made public to-day by Count Louis de Lichtervelde, secretary of the Belgian commission bearing the protest. The commission reached this city to-day on the way to Washington.

"At Linsmeau, when the Germans entered the village, two uniformed gendarmes attacked the Germans," Count de Lichtervelde said, "and in revenge the village was invaded on the night of August 10. Two farms were destroyed, crops destroyed or carried away, six houses burned and all men were compelled to hand over their arms.

"It was found none had been discharged recently, and finally the men were separated into three detachments. Two of the detachments disappeared, while a third, consisting of 11 men, were driven at the point of the bayonet into a ditch, and when they were piled in, German soldiers set upon them and beat their brains out with the butt ends of their rifles.

Battered Bodies Found.

Eleven Battered bodies were found later by Belgian troops..

On Aug. 12, after the battle of Haelen, Col. Van Damme, commander of a Belgian regiment, was lying wounded on the batlefield. He was unable to move. Several German soldiers found him and, placing revolvers against his mouth, blew his head off.

At Boucelles, German troops went into battle carrying a Belgian flag. On Aug. 10 German cavalry raided the town of Velen while the inhabitants slept. One instance of what they did may be cited, in the case of a man named Deglimme, whose house was fired and looted. He and his wife were taken from the house, half naked. He was dragged away in one direction, she in another. She was released when two miles away and told to run.

Fired on Woman.

When she ran, German soldiers fired at her, but she escaped the bullets and staggered back to the site of her ruined home, in a pitiable condition.

Her husband also was released and fired upon when he ran. He was found mortally wounded the next day on the roadside outside town.

Count de Licterveide said he had read a statement attributed to the German Emperor, in which it was said harsh treatment of the Belgians was made necessary in some cases because Belgian civilians fired on German soldiers. "I do not see how it is possible for a man to lie so," said the count.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT BUYS BIG ICE-BREAKER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Fort William, Sept. 11.—The Russian Government have bought from the Great Lakes Towing and Wrecking Co. of Port Arthur, Ont., the big ice-breaking tug J. T. Horne, which will leave immediately for Montreal to cross the Atlantic.

It is surmised that the ice-breaker is required to assist the Ermak in keeping open the Russian White Sea port of Archangel which is just now of inestimable value because the Germans from Kiel dominate the naval situation in the Baltic. It is understood the purchase was put through by M. Medsi Khovisky of the Russian Embassy at Washington who recently called on Sir Robert Borden at Ottawa.

LOCAL LABOR WHERE IT IS PRACTICABLE

Two Clauses Contained in Agreement With Paving Contractors

There has been more or less comment, in regard to the employment of outsiders on paving operations and in today's Review appears a letter from Worker, who puts forth the claim that local labor should be employed and particularly so in the contract about to be commenced, as it is local money that makes the work possible.

The City Engineer has the following clauses inserted in the agreement between the city and the paving contractors:

> Clause No. 29 of the contract between this city and Foley & Gleeson Co., is as follows:
>
> The contractor shall employ local labor so far as it may be practicable, and in all cases local labor, either skilled or common, shall have the preference, other things being equal.
> In clause 4 of agreement it is written:
>
> The contractors will, in doing said work, as far as possible employ as workmen thereon, ratepayers of the city of Peterborough.

SYNDICATE TAKES OVER FUEL AND CARTAGE COMPANY

An important business deal of interest to many citizens has been completed today when the assets of the Peterboro Fuel and Cartage Company were purchased by a local syndicate. The business will be taken over on Monday next and the cartage department will be under the supervision of Mr. Archie Barbeau while the managerial reins of the fuel department will be in the hands of Mr. A. T. Wedlock. Both these gentlemen have been identified with the respective departments under the present company.

It is understood that the members of the syndicate are applying for incorporation.

Copenhagen Report Says Left Flank of Czar's Army in East Prussia Has Been Defeated, Opening the Way For Rear Attack

Canadian Press Despatch.

RUSSIANS HOLD SUCZAWA AND HATNA.

Petrograd, Sept. 11.—It is announced here that the Russian troops hold the Austrian towns of Suczawa and Hatna, situated 50 miles south of Czernowitz, the capital of the Austrian province of Bukowina.

London, Sept. 11.—A despatch from Copenhagen to the Reuter Telegram Co. says General Von Beneckendorff has defeated the left flank of the Russian army in East Prussia with his eastern army, and has thereby opened the way for an attack on the enemy's rear. The Russians are said to have abandoned their resistance and to be in full retreat, with the German eastern army pursuing them in an easterly direction toward Memel.

AUSTRIANS ARE HOPELESSLY BEATEN.

London, Sept. 11.—A despatch to the Times from Petrograd says: "Although some of the Austrian army corps in the province of Lublin will probably make good their retreat, official despatches say that the enemy is hopelessly beaten."

SERVIANS IN POSSESSION OF SEMLIN.

Nish, Servia, Sept. 11.—Servians occupied Semlin, across the river from Belgrade, Thursday, after a bloody battle.

AUSTRIAN OFFICERS DESERTED THE MEN.

Rome, Sept. 11.—According to Tribuna, an Austrian torpedo boat has been blown up near Fasana, 52 miles south of Trieste, after striking a mine. A number of wounded Austrians who have arrived in Trieste state that during the battle of Lemberg all the Austrian officers of three battalions fled, leaving the battalions in the woods, where they were annihilated. Only 50 men escaped.

INTERIM JUDGMENT DIRECTS THAT OTTAWA SCHOOLS BE OPENED

SEPARATE SCHOOLS MUST REMAIN OPEN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Sept. 11. — Mr. Justice Lennox today gave interim judgment in the English-French school case of Ottawa so far as the argument has proceeded. He finds the action of the board in delegating to Chairman Genest, the discharge of teachers was ultra vires and has issued an order directing the trustees to open the schools not later than Wednesday and to keep them open and properly equipped with properly qualified teachers and in all other ways until the argument and judgment in this action are concluded.

His lordship will hear at the Toronto city hall at 10 a.m. Monday the argument as to whether the board may, pending judgment in this action, give notice terminating the employment of teachers. The action is brought to compel the separate school board to conduct its schools according to departmental regulations, to employ a teaching staff composed exclusively of qualified persons.

PREVENT TURKEY HELPING GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 11.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Rome declares he has learned from diplomatic sources that Roumania, Greece and Bulgaria have signed an agreement, under the terms of which they engage to interfere whenever necessary in order to prevent Turkey aiding Germany and Austria in the present war. If Turkey remains neutral, these three states will do the same.

It is reported in Rome, the correspondent continues, that Berlin has become resigned to the idea of Italian neutrality, but she is determined that Italy at least shall remain neutral until the end.

A PROBLEM WELL MET.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT in Canada has not been famous for its wisdom or efficiency, but, in spite of many defects and blunders, the men directing municipal affairs possess that happy British characteristic of muddling through a difficulty. In the present state of war, members of municipal bodies found themselves in an exceptionally difficult position. In company with perhaps every municipal organization in Canada, members of the City Council of Peterborough found themselves caught where the hair was short, so to speak, yet the manner in which the situation has been faced is something better than muddling through, and calls for congratulation from the citizens.

Municipal corporations in Canada have, since their inception a little over sixty years ago, been straining every effort to build up a progressive community. Particularly in urban centres, large debts have been incurred to construct public buildings and to make local improvements. City Halls, Public and High Schools, market and other buildings have been constructed. Sidewalks, roadways, pavements, lighting plants, fire protection, have been items calling for large expenditures. Waterworks alone have in almost all Canadian cities meant the spending of huge sums of public money, and, while municipal bodies have received assistance from provincial and dominion governments, the bulk of the large sums necessary had to be raised by the municipality. Not having the money and not being able to raise such large amounts in cash, the money was raised by creating a debt. This process involved debentures or bonds, and really constituted mortgages on the municipality. By this process municipal corporations have been steadily discounting their future, steadily placing mortgages on their tax-producing capacity, steadily paying off old debts and creating new ones, while proceeding with their local development. So long as no extraordinary circumstance upset business this policy worked smoothly and well. At the declaration of war, such was the policy of most urban governments, but the coming of so widely an extended state of war profoundly affected business and finance all over the world, so that obligations undertaken not only by councils, but by railways and private corporations and individuals could not be met. Operations had to be suspended for the time being in order to readjust affairs to the conditions of a state of war.

Peterborough was little different from other cities. Obligations had been undertaken, when suddenly the war made it impossible to carry these out in the usual way. The depression in trade made it very necessary that all public works should go on in order to provide as much work as possible and prevent distress. To do so new ways of raising funds. Council has devised meant that money had to be found, as well as a very satisfactory method, and is to be commended for solving a difficult problem and finding a way to proceed with the public works contemplated. Had war been imminent for months, or even weeks, instead of days and hours, measures would have been taken to provide against the emergency that has arisen, but, coming unexpectedly and very quickly, a good deal of disorganization could not be avoided. This was one of the problems facing the people of the Empire, and it has been met well. It now remains for the City Council to expedite matters as quickly as possible, and thereby keep up the work so well begun.

The selling of debentures in small denominations by the municipal councils to the people of their own municipality, should solve the financial problem for them. The savings banks have large sums of money made up of small deposits that could easily be drawn upon by reason of the safety of the investment and the higher interest paid. In this way no city or town council should cease proceeding with contemplated public works because of the difficulty of selling their bonds. What Peterborough has done, others can do too.

THE EVIDENCE OF BRITAIN'S EFFORTS FOR PEACE.

THE REVIEW has received a blue book from the Dominion Government entitled "Documents Relative to the European War." This book is very important, and gives the diplomatic correspondence between Great Britain and the other European powers preceding the outbreak of hostilities. This correspondence involves many messages that passed between other countries, notably between Germany, and Russia and Austria. The documents show conclusively what strenuous efforts were made by Sir Edward Grey on behalf of the British Government to prevent a general European war, even up to the very last moment. It shows also that the evil genius of the whole lamentable affair was Germany.

Servia practically submitted to Austria's demands, on the advice of Russia, but when the clouds of war began to gather over other nations, Austria would have submitted to the mediation of Great Britain had it not been for Germany. Thus, on August 1st, Sir Edward Grey telegraphed to the British ambassador in Russia that he was informed that Austria would submit to mediation by Great Britain if Russia would agree to stop mobilization. Germany prevented this last effort for peace, refused to respect the neutrality of Belgium, and involved the whole world in war. These documents show that Britain made every effort to avoid war, and that Germany made every effort to cause war. Society can easily place the blame for this tremendous struggle where it belongs.

THE REPORT FOR THE INSANE.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Inspector of Asylums for the Insane for this Province has just been issued. It shows that there was a net increase in the number of patients during the year of 186, the total population being 5,912, made up of 2,881 males and 3,031 females. There were 1,337 admissions during the year. The single people predominate, there being 3,409, compared with 2,253 married people, 225 widowed, 3 divorced, 1 separated, and 21 unascertained. In the matter of religious denominations the Methodists lead with 1,361, the Church of England having 1,168, the Presbyterians 1,049. The following table shows the occupations of those admitted during the year. It will be noted that nurses, governesses, students and housekeepers head the list, and this fact is regarded as remarkable in view of the oft-repeated statement that liquor is responsible for a very large percentage of the admissions to the provincial asylums:

Professional: clergy, engineers, lawyers, etc.	18
Commercial: bankers, merchants, etc.	98
Agricultural and pastoral	173
Outdoor mechanics	69
Indoor Mechanics	99
Domestic servants	102
Governesses, teachers, students, housekeepers and nurses	397
Miners, railroad employees, and sailors	13
Labourers	242
No occupation	122
Unascertained	4

Inspector Rogers, in submitting the report, states that owing to the increased number of insane, it was impossible to furnish accommodation for all the applicants.

PROVINCIAL POLICE INCOMPETENT.

IT IS to be hoped that the Attorney-General's Department will give a good deal of much-needed attention to the Provincial Police. The manner in which the Tamworth case was handled illustrates an incompetency so glaring that it is almost laughable. The suggestion has been made that by no other method than surrendering himself could Dr. Robinson ever have been taken. The Provincial Police Department has long been an example of inefficiency. It is an heirloom of the defunct Ross Government, and has always been a basis for adverse criticism of the Government. The people of Ontario have tolerated those who are designated provincial police about as long as their patience can stand. The Provincial Police Department needs to be completely reorganized. If that is not done at once better "fire" the whole outfit and save the expense of paying numbskulls for a job they can't fill. Unless something is done, the Ontario Government will be the object of some severe criticism, which in reality belongs to the Ross regime.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SINCE the City Council has at last appointed a plumbing inspector, it is now their duty to appoint an assistant plumbing inspector, who will do the work necessary, according to some recognized standard of efficiency. That is about the only way they can satisfy a good many people.

The Balance of Power.

(San Francisco Wasp.)

"Every time I see grandfather's sword, I want to go to war."

"Well?"

"But every time I notice grandfather's wooden leg I cool down."

There Should Be a Heavy Penalty.

Belleville Ontario.

If any one is trying to make money by filching the pennies from the pockets of the poor under pretence of war stress, the conviction of that man is of infinitely more importance than the prosecution of the burglar or the hold up man.

Thought and War.

New York Globe.

One gleam of hope piercing the thick cloud of battle that obscures the face of Europe is the possibility that on the scene of countless wars war is now dying a horrible death. If war is in its death throe, the cost in human suffering, fearful though it is to contemplate, cannot be deemed in vain. And meantime the war is performing the great service: it is forcing the world to do what it has seldom done before—think. One of the wits of late Victorian England said: "Thought is in the essence destructive. Nothing can endure being thought about." That to which the world is now applying the destructive test of thought is precisely war.

Why Not Go After This Trade?

Toronto World.

Here is the list issued of the commodities in which an expansion of trade over former German routes is possible: Bottles, drugs, chemicals and dye stuffs, photographic supplies, wine, arms and ammunition, artists' supplies, china, crockery, fancy groceries, glass and glassware, toys, embroideries and laces, hair and hair goods carpets, rugs, silks, dressmakers' supplies, fancy goods, ladies' clothing, millinery, face powder, flavoring extracts, macaroni, needles and pins, perfumes, acids, starch, advertising novelties, dolls, agate and enamel wares, cooking utensils, veiling, cutlery, tools, buttons, sheet iron, steel and metal, jewelry, cloths, knit gods, furs, leather gloves, wearing apparel.

A great deal of this material is needed at once. The man on the spot gets the order. Manufacturers who see the opportunity and would be willing to go ahead in the effort to take and keep their share of this valuable prize of war — one of the few legitimate prizes that war offers —should not be handicapped by the banking conditions of the country. If the occasion is allowed to slip through their fingers, after the war is over we shall have lost an advantage we might have gained, and we shall have lost it to a more powerful competitor than Germany.

It is bad enough to go to war, but if, through our own folly or the folly of our financial men, we go to war and let the benefits of our efforts go to others, our victory will be as bad as the Germans' defeat.

THE BOOK REVIEWER

By Walt Mason

He views the pile of printed junk, in covers made of cloth or leather, that he must read to earn the plunk that keeps his frame and soul together; and, as he views, his spirits sink, his mind grows bluer yet and bluer. "The idiots who wade in ink!" exclaims the heartsick book reviewer. The same old junk, in gorgeous lids, the same hack authors and their brothers! The writers new, who make their bids for fame by imitating others; the melodrama raw and red, the maiden and her vile pursuer. "Won't someone cure my aching head?" exclaims the wearied book reviewer. The book of verse that breaks the heart, with halting lines and doleful pitches; the novel, resolutely smart, that treats of idle rich and riches; the Kauffman type of ripe romance, that takes us through the slum and sewer, and makes white slaves of palsied aunts—"God save us!" cries the book reviewer. And there is always Oppenheim, whose diplomats and dukes are dismal, and Austin Freeman, who in crime, is sounding depths that are abysmal; the tired reviewer scans the heap for something better, stronger, newer, and scans in vain, then goes to sleep—his job has killed the book reviewer.

GROW MORE GRAIN

The Conservation Commission Urges Using of Every Acre.

In connection with the European war and its effect on the food supply of the world, the following bulletin, issued by the Commission of Conservation at Ottawa is of interest:

"Many farmers, when urged to try growing fall wheat, have excused themselves on the plea that it did not pay; but it is likely that for the next year or two, there will be ready sale at good prices for every bushel of wheat grown in Canada. Every farmer should endeavor to increase his production of grain next year by putting into use every acre capable of producing it. There are hundreds of acres in Central and Eastern Canada that would successfully grow fall wheat. By preparing the land immediately, a great number of farmers could sow at least a few acres each. No risk is being taken in so doing, as the extra cultivation for the fall wheat would increase the yield of a spring sown crop in the even of the wheat being winter-killed. The land would need only to be disked or cultivated to prepare it for spring grain.

"The grain production can also be increased by ploughing up the old unproductive meadows at once and sowing to grain in the spring. They should be ploughed shallow NOW and be packed and disked and kept worked until autumn, when they should be thoroughly ploughed again, ready to be worked early next spring. The importance of ploughing the land for next spring's crop early this summer, and keeping it worked during the autumn cannot be too strongly emphasized. Those who are now practising a systematic rotation might profitably increase the grain crop area next year, and to those who are following the old meadow plan of farming, a better opportunity was never offered to change to a systematic rotation by breaking up the old sod and putting in grain. It will pay to make use of every acre possible in producing grain, as it is sure to be needed."

NO SIGN OF PEACE.

Allies Will Fight Till Germany Is Crushed, Says Grey.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—There is at present no prospect of peace in Europe through the efforts of diplomacy. President Wilson himself set at rest yesterday rumors that peace measures were in the making by revealing that no intimation had been conveyed to him officially from any quarter of a readiness on the part of one or more of the belligerents to talk peace.

The day's developments emphasized that Great Britain, France and Russia were grimly determined to make no peace until they had decisively beaten Germany and Austria. Great Britain's position was explained in detail at London by Sir Edward Grey to Ambassador Page, who made a long report to President Wilson. The British Foreign Secretary declared Britain had not sought war, but since it was forced on her, she was irrevocably bent on crushing forever the dangers of German militarism to the world.

Running Ashore Caused Wreck.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A notice posted yesterday at the offices of the White Star Line declares that the steamer Oceanic, the loss of which was announced by the press bureau Wednesday night, was caused by running ashore.

This is the first definite news as to what caused the loss of the Oceanic. Wednesday night it was said she had been wrecked on the north coast of Scotland, but no further details had been given. The Oceanic had been taken over for Government sources. All her officers and crew were saved.

British Capture Merchantmen.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The German ships Orlando and Goldbeck, the latter from Tacoma for London have been captured by British vessels in the Atlantic.

The Orlando left Mejillones, Chile, on May 27 for the English Channel. The Goldbeck, a German bark, sailed from Tacoma on April 23 for London, and was reported as having passed the Lizard Wednesday.

A merry sinner is at least more entertaining than a melancholy saint.

Some Delicious Dishes Are Made From Grapes

The lover of grapes feels that their delicacy of flavour, their sweetness and aroma are enough excuse for their eating. But be it known that the grape comes next to the apple as a health-giving food. And as there are few ailments which the grape augments and many which it lessens, no one need be afraid of eating it.

If you like fresh grapes better than any other kind, you can keep a few choice bunches fresh for many days by following this advice:

Cap the stem of the grape with a bit of sealing wax, thus cutting off all air from the open end of the stem. Now tie a sheet of tissue paper loosely about the bunch, bringing the four corners and the edges up about the stem and tying them more securely. Hang the bunch up in a cool dark place until wanted. If you have an especially choice grapevine and desire to keep the grapes from it for some special occasion not more than a week or two distant, try this method of keeping them.

Grape Pie.

Grape pie is a delicacy little appreciated. It is really equal to any other fruit pie. To make it, press grapes throug a fie sieve, to remove seeds. Sweeten the pulp and use to fill a two-crust pie. The pie can be made with one crust, with a meringue, if desired.

Grape Dessert.

Put grape pulp, prepared as for grape pie, into sherbet glasses. It should be chilled through. Pile whipped cream, likewise chilled through, on top, and serve.

Grape Parfait.

Boil one cupful of granulated sugar with a third of a cupful of water until it threads. Beat the whites of two eggs and pour the syrup on them slowly, beating all the time until cold. In the meantime, have ready a cupful of cream, whipped, and whipped with half a cupful of grape pulp, well sweetened, and the juice of a lemon. Fold the two mixtures together and freeze.

Grape Tapioca.

This is sometimes called grape soup, and can be served cold or hot in place of soup. It also makes a very dainty dessert and one that can be safely given to an invalid. To make it, press ripe grapes through a sieve until you have a quart. Simmer two cupfuls of water and a cupful of sugar until clear and then add the juice of a lemon and the grape pulp and juice. Add a tablespoonful of tapioca, of the instantaneous variety or else tapioca that has been softened in cold water. Simmer all together until clear. Serve either hot or cold. If cold, add shaved ice to it.

Grape Butter.

For grape butter, wash, steam and stew seven pounds of grapes and press them through a sieve. Add 3½ pounds — seven cupfuls — of granulated sugar. Mix 1½ tablespoonfuls of small bits of stick cinnamon, the same amount of whole allspice, and a tablespoonful of cloves. Tie the spice in two small cheesecloths bags. Add to the sugar and grapes and stew over a quick fire for twenty-five minutes after it begins to boil.

Grape Conserve.

Cook five pounds of grapes until tender and press them through a sieve, removing the skins and seeds. Mash the grapes before cooking them and cook in a double boiler. Boil the outer yellow skin of three oranges in water, drain, and chop fine. Add to the grape pulp and add five pounds of granulated sugar, a pound each of shelled walnuts and raisins and the juice of the three oranges, strained. Boil until thick, and pack into glasses.

Grape Juice.

Grape juice, which retains so much of the flavour of the grape, and can be made into so many delicious beverages and desserts for winter, is well made by the following recipe:

Heat very ripe grapes in a crock in the oven or in a double boiler or fireless cooker. When the skins are tender drain in a jelly bag. Heat the resulting juice, add sugar, bring to the boiling point, and pour into sterilized jars or bottles. If you use bottles, sterilize the corks and after they are in the bottles cover them with sealing wax.

Use either half as much or a quarter as much sugar as grape juice. The amount added must depend on your taste, but remember that it is an easy matter to add more sugar to the grape juice, but it is impossible to take any from it later on. If you desire a clear grape juice, let the bag drip without squeezing. A more economical method is to squeeze the bag. The resulting grape juice will be a little cloudy, but its flavour will be quite as good.

NOTES OF THE DAY

CANADA'S DUTY.

If needs be, we must send our sons to the front, endure war taxes imposed by our own parliament, abjust luxuries, practice severe economies, and make such farther sacrifices as the occasion shall demand. Our reward will be the consciousness that we have not been traitors to the ideals and traditions of our race, and that we have played out part with Drake, Cromwell, Nelson, Wellington and Chinese Gordon in establishing freedom and good government more firmly upon the face of the earth.—Toronto News.

SOLIDARITY OF BRITISH EMPIRE

The war has brought out impressive testimony to the solidarity of the British empire. It has healed gaping wounds in Ireland. It has stilled mutterings in India, from the native population of which are coming expressions of deep-seated loyalty coupled with convincing offers of service. It has elicited tenders of troops from all the colonies. In times of peace the world often wonders how long the heterogeneous nations that make up the empire upon which the sun never sets will hold together; always when England is facing an enemy in arms. — New York Globe.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

Merchants and manufacturers should keep constantly in mind the fact that war imposes on them a duty not less patriotic, not less important than that devolving on the younger men who must form the bulk of those in the fighting line. A cheerful optimism is one of the most sacred obligations of the moment. The present is not the time to shut down factories, to close up enterprises and cut off the incomes of the bread-winners.—St. John Globe.

Canadians Offer Homes

Canadians in England are no less backward in their offers of help than those at home. Among the many "stately homes of England" that are at the disposal of the government for service as hospitals, convalescent homes or depots, is a beautiful house in Sussex owned by Mr. W. G. Trethewey of Toronto. It will make an ideal convalescent home, for it is situated in a healthy spot on the high Sussex downs, and is surrounded by a park and large grounds that fit it splendidly for the purpose. It was not to be supposed that Lady Strathcona would be behindhand with her assistance, since her father, if alive, now, would certainly have been among the first to do so. She has placed her Scottish home at the disposal of the authorities. Lady Strathcona gave $25,000 to the Prince of Wales' fund, and $5,000 to the Red Cross Society

WOMEN DOCTORS

For women who would study medicine in Canada opportunities are limited as matters are at present, Toronto being the only Canadian medical college admitting women students. In Montreal there is no facility for their study, though of late the question has been raised as to what would result should women wish to enter the medical classes of McGill University.

In her attitude toward women, in this respect, Canada has not profited by the example of England, where ample opportunities present themselves to the would-be student, especially in London, where women may not only qualify as medical practitioners, but may fill institutional appointments later. The appointment of a Canadian lady, Dr. Agatha Doherty, a former resident of Toronto, to the position of senior house surgeon to the new London Hospital for Women was made only a few weeks ago, this being the first time a Canadian woman has received such an appointment.

Woman's World

Tacoma, Wash., Has the First Woman Police Judge.

JUDGE NELDA JAEGER.

While women have presided in children's courts, a woman on the bench of a general police court is a novelty. Washington, one of the states where women vote, has one. She is Miss Nelda Jaeger, an able member of the Washington bar, who was recently appointed as police judge in Tacoma, Wash. When Miss Jaeger first took her position on the bench the court attendants were temporarily embarrassed, for they did not know exactly how to address her. The dignity and lack of self consciousness on the part of the new official carried off the situation gracefully, and in a short time they were addressing her as "Judge Jaeger" and "your honor" as though women magistrates were quite an ordinary and everyday matter. Miss Jaeger's knowledge of the law and her womanly tact combine to make her a successful and popular official.

THE SEASHORE WARDROBE.

For the Little Folks It Should Be Dainty and Appropriate.

Children at the seaside resorts must be provided with an entirely different kind of a wardrobe from that needed for the country. One that ascends at a bound from the bathing suit or sand frock to the glories of an elaborate creation is required. For the former the little ones wear their rompers or jumper suits, overalls or bathing suits both in the water and on the sands, the rompers being made of strong wash material and the bathing suits of flannel, serge or mohair.

Evening finds them dressed in the daintiest of frocks, slippers, stockings and ribbons, though even here economy may be practiced without detection. Instead of purchasing a great number of frocks it will be better to get a few and have numerous little accessories, such as dainty aprons, correct footwear, ribbons and bows, all of which help so much toward making a child's outfit attractive.

Shoes, whether high or low, should be substantial for day wear, slippers to be donned in the evening only. Sunbonnets of white lawn or dimity in delicate shades are dainty and picturesque and more practical than hats.

Gay Waistcoats.

Roman striped and plaided waistcoats are exceedingly smart with tailleurs of dark serge or mohair, but with a suit of lighter colored fabric the flowered silk waistcoat is prettiest. Pussy willow taffeta in moire effect makes a charming waistcoat for a golden brown tailleur. Another suit with a short cutaway Eton jacket has a waistcoat of Egyptian crape in post-impressionist design.

Jet Buttons.

Small jet buttons are much used on vests and neckwear. Large crocheted buttons in round and square designs of one or two colors are used on coats of heavy corded cottons and on linen and ratine dresses and suits. There are many fancy stitches introduced in these buttons.

WASHING LACES.

To launder a linen, cluny or any other lace centerpiece successfully wash carefully, boil, rinse and blue, but do not starch.

Spread a sheet on rug, lay the centerpiece right side down and begin to pin, being sure to stretch while pinning and catch every scallop.

When finished there should not be a wrinkle in it.

While still damp press with an iron not too hot and leave on floor until perfectly dry.

It will come out beautifully, much nicer than if you had sent it to a dry cleaner.

To wash white silk gloves put gloves on hands, use white soap, turn on the faucet and wash the same as if you were washing your hands. If finger tips are very much soiled use soft brush.

Rinse thoroughly; then with a clean towel rub gently toward elbow until most of the moisture is absorbed; then slip off and hang out to dry. They will not need pressing.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Wheat suffered a decided setback in price today, mainly because of a movement in congress to suspend the import duty on that cereal. The market closed heavy, 2c to 2⅝c lower than Tuesday night. Other leading staples, too, all underwent a severe net decline, corn 1⅞c to 2⅛c, oats 2⅛c to 2⅝c, and provisions 30c to $1.25.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 10.—Wheat prices opened ¼c to ⅜c higher, oats 1c down for October and flax unchanged to ½c lower for October and November. Following the opening there was a sharp decline, the gain of Wednesday, owing to wet weather conditions, being partially lost. Weather conditions today were greatly improved, altho rains were reported at numerous points in Manitoba and Alberta. At Portage la Prairie 2.20 was recorded. Receipts continue climbing. The number of cars inspected yesterday was 1180, and in sight were 1380. The cash demand was somewhat poor and much quieter than some days previously, and offerings were more plentiful than usual. Exporters were doing nothing; practically all bids are said to be about six cents out of line. At noon October wheat was $1.14½; Dec. $1.15 and May $1.21⅝. This showed a gain of ⅜c to ⅝c from the low points of the forenoon. Wheat options closed 1⅝c to 2⅛c lower and oats 1⅞c to 2¼c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat was better today and sales of a few loads were made for October-November shipment. The local market for old crop Canadian western oats is firm on account of small offerings, but an easier feeling has developed in the market for new crop Ontario oats, and prices for such have declined 1c to 2c per bushel owing to the increased offerings and the falling off in the demand for the same. There continues to be a steady demand for spring wheat flour for export account, and further sales of some round lots were made for October shipment to Norway. The local trade continues fairly active. Demand for mill-feed is good. Butter is firm under a fair demand. Cheese is quiet and easier, prices in the country today being ⅛c to ⅜c per pound lower than this day last week.

Treaties of Peace With the U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—In the midst of the European war, Great Britain, France, Spain and China have agreed to sign peace commission treaties with the United States. One effect of the new convention would be to prevent the United States from being drawn suddenly into the conflict. Germany, Russia and Japan have signified their acceptance of the principle of these treaties, though negotiations have not advanced to the point of drafting conventions. Similar agreements with Turkey and Greece are almost ready for signature.

Thanksgiving Day Changed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The Government has altered the date of Thanksgiving Day this year to Monday, Oct. 12. It had been fixed for Oct. 8, but the fact that the latter date falls on Thursday is understood to be the reason for the change, Monday being much more convenient.

WAR AND BUSINESS

Prosperity Stifled Because Fuel Feeds War Machines.

Writing in the Monetary Times, Mr. R. D. Bell of Montreal says:

Why should a war in Europe affect business in Canada? The money that is used in warfare is not destroyed it is spent; it remains in circulation. What has that to do with our business? From such a viewpoint it is generally considered that the bank are responsible for hard times, and that the bankers are deliberately withholding funds for their own profit. This attitude is so common that, at the risk of covering well known ground, we will discuss a moment the facts:

Money, which means gold and credit built thereon, is the moving force, the fuel which drives the machinery of production. One can conceive of money as oil which is burned to generate power. This is stored in a reservoir system which includes all the money centres of the world and has a central reservoir in London. Paris, Berlin, New York, Montreal and other cities maintain their reservoirs connected, just as by a pipe, with the London reservoir. Turn the tap loose in Vienna and the Paris reservoir is drained. This drains, in turn, the London reservoir, and as the supply diminishes there, the fluid runs automatically from all the other reservoirs, just as water seeks its level.

Now there is just enough of this fuel available in the world to supply the machinery of production. If all the fuel and all the population are used to keep the machines going at capacity turning out food, clothes and the necessary amount of luxuries, there will be just enough produced to supply all hands and maintain what we are pleased to call prosperity.

If the supply of fuel is diverted to supply the enormous demands of the war machines, the productive machines at once suffer. And the juggernauts, manned by thousands of men are driven by millions of dollars, all diverted from the production of wealth, proceed to the work of the destruction of wealth.

It may be objected that money is not analogous to oil, because oil burns up and is gone while money remains in circulation. There are two answers to that: one is that credit, the greater part of money, is actually burnt up and destroyed just in proportion to the amount of wealth that is destroyed. As for the actual gold, as it cannot be in two places at once, it is just as effectively lost to the productive machines, in any given period, as if it were burned.

A Real Empire

Lord Lansdowne's phrase, "not a paper Empire," which he used when alluding to the magnificent offers of troops made by Australia and Canada, is likely to become historic.

Paper Supply Affected

Europe generally is experiencing a paper famine. On the Continent many papers have suspended publication while those which are still publishing have cut down their size to a mere postal card.

Although there is no reason to fear an immediate paper famine here, some of the Canadian mills may be forced to close on account of the failure of the supply of sulphite, which is necessary for the manufacture of their product. Each year Canada imports 20,000 tons of sulphite from Norway. Since the outbreak of the war this has been shut off.

Peace Advocate's Mistake

Political economists have lost much ammunition, many of their guns will have to be recast before again they can fire this charge which is taken from a popular work of a British authority:

"It is commerce which is rapidly rendering war obsolete, by strengthening and multiplying interests which are in natural opposition to it. And it may be said without exaggeration, that the great extent and rapid increase of international trade, in being the principal guarantee of the peace of the world, is the great permanent security for the uninterrupted progress of the ideas, the institutions, and the character of the human race." —Monetary Times.

MERCHANTS AT ORILLIA BOOST PATRIOTIC FUND

Will Give Ten Per Cent of Cash Receipts on Certain Day

Orillia, Sept. 11.—As their contribution towards the Orillia Patriotic Fund, nearly 40 of Orillia's merchants have agreed to give ten per cent. of their cash receipts on Saturday, Sept. 19. This loyal and generous offer was agreed upon at a meeting of the merchants. It is expected that it will bring a substantial sum into the fund. Not only have the merchants agreed to give ten per cent. of their cash receipts on the 19th, but they will do everything possible to stimulate trade on that day by advertising special inducements.

The merchants will bear the whole expense of this campaign, in addition to contributing the ten per cent.

It is proposed to have a patriotic parade on the afternoon of Patriotic Day, in which the band, the militia, the automobiles and the manufacturers are being invited to take part.

REV. FR. GALVIN TELLS OF HIS TRIP

A Great Change Was Noticeable at Paris

(Norwood Register.)

Rev. Fr. Galvin, pastor of St. Paul's church in this village, and who left on July 3 on a trip to Europe, shortly after his appointment to this parish, returned home on Monday, having arrived in Quebec on the previous Friday.

As one would suppose, Father Galvin's sojourn in Europe was of a more varied nature than the usual tour, owing to the great conflagration which burst out on that continent this past month.

Father Galvin visited England, France, Italy and Switzerland. He left France just as war was declared and mobilization begun, going out on the last train available. He was in Rome from August 3rd to the 10th. He and other members of his party were favored with an audience with His Holiness Pope Pius X, just two weeks before the latter's death. His holiness then looked worn, on account of the conflict which had broken out, and which he had done all in his power to stay, having among other things written the emperor of Austria a letter, urging him to withhold from strife.

Father Galvin also visited Florence and Venice. His party did not experience any very great inconvenience, except a delay in securing money, which handicapped nearly all tourists. Father Galvin remarked that outside of gold, the American Express company's money orders were the only currency accepted. Switzerland, he said, had mobilized an army of 500,000, having called out all men from 18 to 48 able to bear arms. It was costing that country $300,000 a day for the upkeep of its army alone. On their return to France they were subject to a very severe examination, and all newspapers they possessed were confiscated. Father Galvin was in Paris two days and noticed a great change had come over the city, mentioning particularly the dearth of young men. Many of the stores were closed.

On reaching London, however, all appeared as usual. There was no break in the business activity.

At one time during his trip on the continent Father Galvin passed within 30 miles of where an engagement was taking place.

His voyage home from Liverpool occupied six days and was without unusual occurrence, except for the observing of the greatest precaution in keeping windows and doors closed to prevent lights showing.

FOOD FACTS

What An M. D. Learned.

A physician went through a food experience which he makes public.

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients gain very rapidly, just as I did in strength and weight.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains, but two months there did not improve me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts, when regular food does not seem to sustain the body, works wonders. "There's a Reason."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

It's about time to start a fire in the furnace. Seems a long time till next spring.

COMPLETE PROGRAM FOR THE FAIR NEXT WEEK

This day next week the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition will be in full swing. The gates open Thursday and the program of entertainment will start in the afternoon. The special features on the elevated stand, include Rosdale and Listelle, comedy acrobats; Fox and Wule, in a sharp-shooting novelty; Wm. Leroy, comedy juggler and the Royal Trio, equilibrists. These are reported as high-class performances. The program for the three days is as follows:—

Program for First Day.

The grounds and buildings open for receiving exhibits. All exhibits, except live stock and poultry, must be on the grounds by noon of the first day.

2 p.m.—Judging of dairy products, bread, grain, roots, fruits, flowers, vegetables, fine art, ladies' work and domestic manufacturers.

Entries in all classes close Thursday at noon. Poultry exhibitors especially should note this rule, as books must be closed and handed to judges for use at 10 a.m. Friday.

7 p.m.—Grand illumination; all buildings open.

Band concert by 57th Regimental Band, full strength, under the direction of Lieut. R. Gliddon.

Also a continuous programme of Free Open Air Attractions.

consisting of fun-making comedians in side-splitting acts, following each other in quick succession.

Clever acrobats in hair-raising feats of agility present an entirely new list of remarkable performances.

All on the open-air platform in front of the grand stand.

The evening ends with grand display of new, novel and gorgeous fireworks including illuminated balloons with fireworks accompaniment, splendid pieces, entirely new, will make the Thursday evening's entertainment altogether novel and delightful.

SECOND DAY.

8 a.m. — Grounds and buildings open to the public.

10 a.m.—Poultry will be judged in the poultry tent. All poultry must be on the grounds and properly arranged in coops in time for judging promptly at 10 o'clock.

A first-class meal can be procured on the grounds in the big dining tent. Lunches given at many lunch counters. Come early and stay all day. There is ample provision made to feed a large crowd.

1 p.m.—Judging of halter horses in Classes Nos. 1 to 6, in small ring.

In Front of Grand Stand.

2.00 p.m.—The first heat of the 2.30 trot or pace (purse, $250.00) will be run off. The judging of the harness horses will take place between the heats of this race in front of the grand stand, throughout the afternoon.

The harness classes that will be judged on Friday afternoon will be Ses. 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 of Class 5, and Sec. 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 of Class 7. Also Sec. 12 in Class 1: Silver cup presented by Roland Denne for best heavy draught mare.

Novelty Race.

Horse to be unharnessed, harness hitched to buggy, walk once around track, trot once around, unhitched and unharnessed. No snaps allowed. First prize, $10.00. $5.00 donated by E. O. Duffus, Esq., and $5.00 by society. First, $10.00; second, $5.00.

During the afternoon between race heats and judging sections, the splendid free open-air platform performances will be put on.

No expense has been spared to provide a really high-class entertainment for the free attractions, and the artists engaged will band out plenty of surprises all afternoon and evening.

4 p.m.—Dog race (dog to be driven by a boy) for a prize of $5.00, offered by Wm. Yelland, Esq.

The full band of the 57th Regiment, under the direction of Lieut. R. Gliddon, will be in attendance, and furnish a continuous programme of music during the afternoon.

No waits. Something doing all the time. Not a dull moment all the afternoon.

No need to go home for supper. Splendid, well-served meals and lunches at many eating booths rght on the grounds.

7 p.m.—Everything in full swing. A big and attractive midway, including merry-go-round and numerous high-class attractions.

Grounds brilliantly illumnated.

The free performances in front of the grand stand will be varied from the afternoon programme, as the artists come with a full repertoire to provide a change of acts. They are splendid entertainers.

The second day's attractions will be brought to a close by a magnificent display of fireworks.

There will be a regular bombardment of the skies with all the brilliant effects that modern experiment has perfected — beautiful colour schemes and combinations—marvellous set pieces, all new in design, some being of patriotic suggestion in accord with the disturbed times. The climax feature will be a triumph of Pyrotechnics.

The evening's programme will be enlivened by a splendid concert by the 57th Regimental Band, under the direction of R. Gliddon, as follows:

Patriotic March.
Overture—Bohemian Girl.
Song—Bandsman Minnicola.
Two sacred numbers, with chimes.
Lullaby—Sweet and Low.
Medley of popular songs.
Mexican Serenade—La Paloma.
Comic opera selections—The Time, the Place and the Girl.
Bits of Remick's Hits, No. 14.

THIRD DAY.

8 a.m. — Grounds and buildings open to the public for general inspection of all live stock, poultry, special exhibits and inside exhibits.

Dinners and lunches quickly served at many eating booths in charge of groups of ladies from different churches.

1 p.m.—The judging of the harness horses in classes 1, 2, 3, and 4; also Nos. 1 and 2 in Class 8 and 9; special class for farmers, and the Bank of Commerce special.

2 p.m.—The first heat of the 2.15 trot or pace (purse, $250.00).

2.30 p.m.—The first heat of the 2.50 trot or pace half-mile heats (purse, $100.00).

Between the heats of the races the judging of harness horse classes will continue throughout the afternoon. The classes to be judged will be 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 of Class 6, and No. 2 of Class 7, and 3 of Class 8 and 9; the special prizes for the best pony turnouts; Sec. 10, Class 5, silver cup, donated by The Cressman Co., Limited, for best carriage horse in harness; Sec. 10, Class 6, special silver cup donated by S. F. Redmond for the best roadster trotter in harness; special for the best trained foal, donated by C. E. Moore, and special cup donated by W. G. Morrow for the best pair of carriage horses exhibited.

The open-air performers will give their final acts at intervals all afternoon. From six to eight separate and distinct acts will be staged free.

Handsome rosettes will be gven instead of prize tickets in all the horse classes.

3 p.m.—An Association Football match for the R. R. Hall Championship Challenge Cup, which represents the championship of the County of Peterborough.

3.30 p.m. — Grand parade of all prize-winning animals in front of the grand stand.

Full 57th Regimental Band giving a continuous programme all afternoon.

HERE AND THERE

The boys at Valcartier have suffered from the heavy rains at Valcartier recently, and all have been praying that their transportation orders would soon arrive.

* * *

We should worry about cold weather—think of those brave soldier boys sleeping in a tent. It is very often the chief hardships of war in sleeping in improvished places with scant food.

* * *

The question is asked: "Is the Kaser wrong in his mind?" Perhaps he is, but others think he is reverting to the days of his childhood when with a company of wooden soldiers he vanquished the British and French armies, and did other impossibilities with his toy wooden solders. He is, to a certain extent, treating his soldiers of today as if they were wooden men.

* * *

One of the worst foes to mankind at present is the man who makes a large contribution to the Patriotic Fund and then closes down his place of business, laying off his employes.

* * *

When you buy apples this fall take care that there aren't any spies among them.

* * *

Among the horrors of war may be some scare-head "extras."

* * *

There will be many heroes of this war before the end—but the Kaser will not be among them.

* * *

The boys of today will be the boys of tomorrow who will relate the trials and tribulations of the war of 1914 to their sons and daughters.

* * *

Cheer up, the Germans are on the march towards Berlin, but it is not known whether they will change their minds or not.

* * *

Haven't heard of any cases of frozen ears yet, have you? But they say it's a fact that the water is next thing to freezing at Valcartier—we mean in pails.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM CLIFFORD GRAY.

William Clifford Gray, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gray, passed away this morning at Nicholls' Hospital. This makes the second death in this family in the last two weeks, another son, two years of age, having passed away about a week ago, and Mr. Jos. Gray is at present sick in the Nicholls Hospital. The sympathy of their many friends will be extended to the family in this sad bereavement.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence, 500 Gilchrist St., to Little Lake Cemetery, at 3 p.m. Rev. Jas. Rollins will conduct the services at the house at 2.30.

ALFRED PENNICARD.

The death of Alfred Pennicard took place yesterday afternoon at Nicholls' hospital. He was 14 years of age and had been living with Mr. Tees, of Ida, for three or four years. The funeral took place from Belleghem's undertaking rooms at 1 o'clock to-day to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. R. G. Peever had charge of the service.

A UNITED EMPIRE

The British empire to-day is united as never before. It has been drawn together because a common danger has compelled realization of all that British ideals and principles of government mean for one and all of its states and dependencies. Natives of India and Egypt, or some of them may want a larger share in their administration; the Boers may still have bitter memories of the war; Irish Nationalists may cherish the hope of an Ireland united under home rule. But they all know that the freedom and the rights of self-government they desire can only be obtained under the British flag. Britain alone has found the way to combine national and imperial loyalty.—The Toronto World.

SOLDIERS SPEECHES ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Stirring Words That Have Come Down Through History—Duty Done in Face of Death.

In the grim hour of battle there is small time for words; it is the time for the strong arm and the stout heart; and such words as are spoken must be few and to the point.

No general knew better than that gallant Highlander, Sir Colin Campbell, how to say the words that fire courage or reward brave deeds. On that "day of heroes" at Balaclava, when his Highlanders were awaiting the shock of the Russian cavalry, he rode down the line, and in two calmly-spoken sentences nerved every man for the death that seemed inevitable. "Remember, men," he said, "there is no retreat from here. You must die where you stand." And with one voice the kilted heroes gave beck the answer, "Aye, aye, Sir Colin, we'll do that!"

When Collingwood's ship was about to open the great drama of Trafalgar, the admiral, calmly munching an apple on the break of his poop, summoned his officers, and said to them, "Now, gentlemen, let us do something to-day of which the world may talk hereafter." Within a few moments five line of battleships were emptying their guns into the Royal Sovereign, and every man on board was "fighting like an angel."

Famous Nelson Episode

"Leave off action!" exclaimed Nelson to his lieutenant, the stump of his lost arm jerking angrily to and fro, when the admiral had given the signal to discontinue the fight in the Battle of the Baltic. "Leave off action. I'm hanged if I do! You know, Foley," he said, turning to his captain, "I've only one eye; I've a right to be blind sometimes." And then, putting the glass to his blind eye, he exclaimed, "I really do not see the signal. Keep mine for closer action flying."

Napoleon had called Wellington "a Sepoy general," and this taunt was not forgotten when the crowning battle opened on the plain of Waterloo. "I will show him to-day," Wellington said, gleefully, "how a Sepoy general can defend himself." A few hours later, as he sat with a few of his surviving officers at supper, his face black with the smoke of battle "he repeatedly leaned back in his chair, rubbing his hands convulsively, and exclaiming aloud, 'Thank God, I have met him! Thank God, I have met him!'"

Throughout the long day of battle, when the fate of his country was in the balance, Wellington's mood was that which befitted one of the greatest soldiers the world has produced. "If you should be struck," one of his generals asked him, "tell us what is your plan." "My plan," said the Duke, "consists in dying here to the last man."

When, at Balaclava, Lucan told Lord Cardigan to lead the Light Brigade on that mad charge down the "valley of death," Cardigan answered, 'Certainly, sir; but the Russians have a battery in our front, and riflemen and batteries on both flanks." Lucan, with a shrug of his shoulders, said, "We have no choice but to obey"; whereupon Cardigan turned quickly to his men. "The brigade will advance," he said, as he rode off at its head, saying to himself, "Here goes the last of the Brudenells."

An All-conquering Hand

"Clunes, take your Grenadiers and open the ball," were the words of Sir John Moore which started the fighting at Corunna. When, towards the close of the battle, Moore was dying, his chest shattered by a cannon-ball, one of his staff tried to unbuckle his sword, but the dying soldier stopped him. "I had rather," he said, "it should go out of the field with me."

Turning to Colonel Anderson, he said, "Anderson, you know I have always wished to die in this way. I hope my country will do me justice." Then, in a tone of apology, "I feel myself so strong, I fear I shall be long dying."

"Do you see those fellows on the hill, Pakenham?" Wellington said, just before striking his decisive blow at Salamanca. "Move on with your division and drive them to the devil!" "Yes," was the answer, "if you will give me a grasp of that all-conquering hand"; and in a few minutes Pakenham's columns, advancing in the face of a tornado of bullets, had swept away the enemy as with the blast of a whirlwind.

"Men of the Gordon Highlanders," said Colonel Mathias at Dargai, "the General says that position must be taken at all costs. The Gordon Highlanders will take it." Almost before the words had left his lips the brave Scotsmen were racing up the rugged steeps in the face of a deluge of death, to drive the enemy from his lair like so many terror-stricken sheep.

TENNYSON'S POEM

London, Sept. 10.—Lord Tennyson son of the famous poet laureate, at a patriotic meeting held at Portchester last night quoted the following lines by his father, which were never published, but were preserved in the present Peer's memory. The poem, he said, seemed to have been written for the present crisis:—

Oh, who is he, the simple fool,
Who says that wars are over!
What bloody portent flashes there
Across the Straits of Dover?
Are you ready, Britons all, to answer foes with thunder?
Arm! Arm! Arm!

Nine hundred thousand slaves in arms
They seek to bring us under,
But England lives and still we'll live,
For we'll crush the despot yonder.
Are you ready, Britons all, to answer foes with thunder?
Arm! Arm! Arm!

An Enjoyable Excursion

The very delightful weather of yesterday swelled the attendance of the excursion of the Ennismore branch of the C. M. B. A. to Stoney Lake via the steamer Stoney Lake. The large number present fully enjoyed the rugged scenery of the northern waters, and the warm, bright sun added materially to enjoying the ideal two-hour sail around the lake of many islands.

Captain Scollard and Patrick Young, Jr., of the steamer Stoney Lake, were indefatigable in their efforts to make the affair a grand success, and their assistance was greatly appreciated by the committee in charge.

VICTIM OF "SHORT CHANGE" GAME EXPLAINS HOW HE WAS FLEECED ON TRAIN

Detectives Recite Story of Arrest of Charles Rose and Wm. Barr.

Bernard Smith, the victim of the short change artists, Charles Rose and Wm. Barr, on a C.P.R. train on Thursday night, August 27th, about 9 o'clock, was the first witness in today's police court regarding the case. He got on the 8.05 train at the C.P.R. station alone he said. Charles Rose sat down in an opposite seat to him, and asked Smith for a match, immediately Wm. Barr came into the coach and sat down in same seat as Smith. Barr then asked Smith if he had five or ten dollars on his person. Smith said he had ten dollars, so Barr said he had a number of small bills and would like to have them in large bills. Smith then pulled out a roll of bills and Barr noticing that he had two ten dollar bills in the roll, asked Smith to let him have the two tens for the small bills. Barr handed Smith three five dollar bills and four one dollar bills, making nineteen dollars in all. Smith counted the roll and told Barr he had only given him nineteen dollars. Barr took the roll and counted it finding only $19, he made up the twenty dollars by giving Smith four quarters. Barr, after counting the roll handed it back to Smith and immediately left the coach. When Smith counted his roll the second time there was only four one dollar bills. Barr had extracted the three fives from the roll, and Smith only had four one dollar bills and four quarters to show for his two ten dollar bills.

Barr Disappeared.

He went after Barr immediately but could not find him, and then the train pulled out. Smith told the conductor about losing the money and at Indian River the conductor wired to Chief of Police of Peterboro. Detectives Newhall and Meagher went on the trail of Rose and Barr immediately.

Smith did not have any reason to believe that Rose was an accomplice of Barr until he returned to the coach and then he saw that Rose had decamped also.

Detectives' Evidence.

Detectives Newall and Meagher first saw the men at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets. They watched them for some time and finally lost sight of them, but later run onto them at the C.P.R. station about midnight. The midnight train was just arriving and Rose and Barr went on the dark side of the train and were apparently going to leave on it. Detective Newhall passed over the coach platform and took hold of Rose and walked him to where Barr was and grabbed him, asking them what they were doing there. Both men said they had tickets and were leaving on the midnight train. The officers took them to the station operator's office and found that they had not purchased any tickets from the local station, nor had they any good tickets on them. Just at this period Rose put up a fight to escape but was successfully handcuffed.

Tried to Escape.

The two men were then taken to police station and on entering the door Barr slipped off one of the handcuffs and struck several telling blows on his custodian's face, but did not get away. Nine one and eight five dollar bills and one dollar and twenty-five cents in silver was found on Barr, and an old ticket for Smith's Falls was found, while nine five and four one dollar bills and sixty cents in silver was found on Rose, and in another pocket a lone five dollar bill was found.

At the police station Rose said that he was not an accomplice of Barr and had never seen him before until that evening.

Game Tried Before.

Edward Robinson, of Toronto, claimed that he knew Rose, having seen him in North Toronto on Monday, July 6, but did not know Barr. Robinson boarded a C. P. R. train in North Toronto for Peterborough on the night of July 6, when Rose came along and asked him if he had any big bills. Robinson said he would see, and brought out two ten dollar bills. Rose then said he would give him twenty ones for them. Rose handed him the bills, and there were only nineteen dollars when Robinson counted them. He told Rose then that there was one dollar short of the twenty. Rose says, "Let me see them," and counted them, saying, "That's right; there's only nineteen," and to make it right gave Robinson a dollar in silver, and at the same time handed Robinson back the supposed nineteen dollars. Robinson attempted to count the roll again, but before he could do so a fellow behind him asked him for a match. On being able to count the roll, he found only four one dollar bills, so he made after Rose, but was unable to find him, and on his return to the coach the fellow sitting behind him had departed. However, the witness did not know whether it was Barr or not who had been sitting behind him.

Edward Robinson was clearly a victim and was duped in the same manner as Smith was on boarding the train for Peterborough. All he had to show for his two ten dollar bills were four one dollar bills and a dollar in silver.

The case is proceeding.

BRISK BUSINESS FOLLOWS IN THE WAKE OF WAR

J. J. Turner and Sons Receive Another Order for Supplies

J. J. Turner and Sons received an order yesterday for the Canadian army for 5000 kit bags, ~~50 hospital~~ tents, 100 wagon covers and 1000 valises, and are rushing the order to completion as fast as possible, working day and night. Perhaps no other form of industry is benefited so much by war as the tent manufacturers. The manufacturers of the soldiers' uniforms are equally as busy, and there is a big demand on the shoe manufacturers, and many large makers of harness are real busy making bridles, halters, and saddle equipment for the Canadian contingent. B. F. Ackerman, Son and Co. are very busy. Then, the large quantity of canned goods and other eatables being consumed in Canada is reviving the food industry to quite an extent.

And these manufacturers can readily say that war conditions are benefiting them, and enabling their staffs to be regularly employed. As the war continues other manufacturers will gradually notice an increased demand for their goods, in lieu of the European commodities which have formerly been occupying a favorite position on the market.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WORK FOR THE RESIDENTS.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—I notice that the Corporation is going to pursue municipal work on the streets, and that the street paving contracts are to be gone on with. I also understand that this work, which will be done by out-of-town contractors who bring nearly all the help with them, is to be paid for with the money which is being raised by the issue of new debentures. I take it that the intention was to provide work for men who are and have been residents of the city, and not to provide work for foreigners and residents of other places. What is wanted is work for the men who are here, and that such should be the work gone on with. I don't think the men now looking for employment will get very much from the contractors who have the street paving in hand. I hope the Council will endeavor to have this work done by local men, so that those of us with families to support will have a chance to make a living. I understand there is a clause in the contract providing for local help being employed, and I want to see the Council compel the contractors to carry out this part of the contract. We will watch the action of our representatives in this matter.

Yours,
WORKER.

SOME QUERIES.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly publish answers to the following questions:—

(1) Will $20.00 per month promised by the Dominion Government to wives and families of volunteers be paid also to dependents such as parents or others hitherto supported or assisted by unmarried volunteers?

(2) What is the sum of the monies already subscribed or paid as "patriotic fund" or otherwise for the relief of dependents above mentioned?

(3) Is there anything to prevent contribution by a volunteer of part of his $1.00 per day pay to his dependents? And if so what?

It would seem that $20.00 per month, plus $15.00 (half the daily pay of the volunteer), plus a share in the municipal and private contributions will for most families so relieved be a better income than they had before the war—a better income than is now available to many a family expected to contribute to this "patriotic fund." We wish to know what the provision already made amounts to before the canvassers call upon us for further contribution.

COURT REFUSED TO ALLOW BAIL

Case of Bert Howden Laid Over for One Week

The case of Bert Howden, who is charged with unlawfully inducing Minnie Herron to accompany him to Toronto was remanded one week in today's police court on the advice of the defendant's counsel, who claimed that Miss Herron was not able to appear at the court today.

G. N. Gordon, counsel for defence again made a plea for bail, but was refused. He will appeal to the Attorney General.

Charge Withdrawn.

The case of Condon vs. Condon wherein Joseph Condon threatened to murder his sister, Josephine, was asked to be withdrawn by the complainant, Josephine Condon. The case was dismissed, on payment of court costs, which were $7.31.

Charged With Theft.

Henry Richard was up on a charge of stealing a gold watch. When asked if he would prefer being tried by a jury or by the court he said: "What would you advise me to do?" His case was remanded and he will be given a chance to get some advice on the matter.

INTERNAL TROUBLES AND MILITARY DISASTERS GO HARD WITH AUSTRIA

Petrograd Diplomats Believe She Will Soon Sue For Peace.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Further jubilation was caused here last night by the receipt by a news agency of a despatch from Petrograd, saying the Austrians have begun to evacuate Cracow.

"The Austrians," the message adds, "are trying to induce the members of the local rifle club to remain and assist in the defence of Cracow. Many, however, have resigned their memberships because of sympathy with Russia."

Cracow has a population of 100,000, and is the capital of the kingdom of Poland. It is situated on the left bank of the Vistula river, 30 miles from the frontier of Silesia. It is 100 miles west of Lemberg, 300 miles from Berlin, and 220 miles from Vienna. It is also reported that the Russians are also moving on Breslau on their march to Berlin.

A message from Rome says:

"A despatch from Vienna says it is officially admitted there that Archduke Frederick lost 120,000 men i nthe Galician battle, or one-fourth of his command. The Germans are marching south toward Poland to assist the Austrians, but before this aid can be given they must cross the Vistula river, where the Russians are preparing to check them."

A despatch to The Chronicle from Petrograd, says:

"In Russian and foreign diplomatic circles it is believed that Austria will sue for peace within a fortnight, as the only means of avoding a complete break up of the empire, owing to rapidly growing internal troubles."

A despatch from Petrograd, dated Wednesday, says:—

"A regiment of Cossacks took at Frampol 17 Austrian officers, and 445 men, a great number of convoys, horses, cattle and the money chest of the 17th Landwehr, containing 143,000 crowns. Near Zamost 700 Austrians were captured, with a great quantity of supplies. An Austrian steamer upon the Vistula was sunk by Russian guns."

The Cossacks did grand work, groups of twenty and thirty compelling Austrian detachments of a hundred and a hundred and fifty men to surrender. The enemy apparently is increasing in reluctance to meet these intrepid horsemen, especially those armed with lances. The wounded Austrians were seen hungrily eating turnips torn from the field. They informed their captors they had been short of food for some time, and were almost famished.

The news from the western theatre of war yesterday was most scant. The German and Austrian reports minimise the importance of the occupation of Lemberg. A Vienna despatch says it was part of a strategic campaign to draw the Russians into Galicia. Petrograd reports claim that Archduke Frederick's army lost 120,000 men, that the evacuation of Gracow had commenced and that the fall of both Gracow and Przemysl was imminent.

According to a Petrograd despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., it is believed there that the German crown Prince has been appointed commander-in- chief of the forces against Russia.

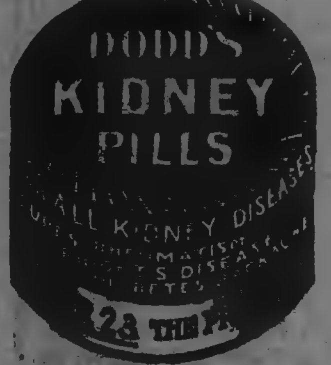
GERMANS ARE WEARING OUT

Infantry Insufficient for Attack With Necessary Energy

BORDEAUX, Sept. 11.—The military correspondent of The Temps considers the situation from the standpoint of the allies more than reassuring. The German offensive has not only been stopped, he says, but they are being driven back all along the front. Their troops are wearing out.

"The too numerous German artillery remains," he continues, "but their infantry is insufficient for an attack with the necessary energy.

"Their long line of communication through Belgium makes the movement of supplies difficult and they are probably marching eastward with the object of establishing another base to the southeast of the Meuse, which would connect also with their forces in Lorraine and on the Rhine. In that direction, however, they have no railroad at their disposal, all the lines being either covered by the forts of Charlemont and Montmedy or destroyed."



LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

Turkey Suspends Civil Rights Formerly Granted to Foreigners.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. — Turkey formally notified the United States and the nations of the world yesterday that she had abrogated the series of conventions treaties and privileges, originating as early as the 11th century, whereby foreigners in the Ottoman Empire have been exempt from local jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases. Foreign subjects no longer will enjoy what is known as extra territorial rights, through which they have been tried by their own judges, diplomatic representatives or consuls.

Upon the rights revoked has rested the legal status of foreign missionaries in Turkey, permitting them to maintain churches, hospitals and schools in religious freedom.

No intimation was given by the ambassador as to whether the action foreshadowed war on Great Britain, without whose consent in the past no such radial action would have been attempted.

Among diplomats of the alleged powers, however, the belief prevailed last night that Turkey was appealing to the nationalist sentiment of her people, and was ready to seize upon any difficulties that may arise with Great Britain a a pretext to declare war.

AERSCHOT IS RECAPTURED

Germans Evacuate Town After Vigorous Attack

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 11. — (Via London.)—A despatch to The Courant, dated Breda, Holland, reports that a heavy engagement took place Wednesday at Aerschot, Belgium, nine miles northeast of Louvain, when the Belgians attacked the garrison there.

As a result of the fighting the Germans evacuated the town, and the Belgians hoisted their colors and liberated 26 priests, found in a church.

Advance From Antwerp.

LONDON, Sept. 11. — An Ostend despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says:

"According to information from a reliable source, the Belgian army at Antwerp has assumed a triumphant offensive movement, driving the Germans back to the environs of Louvain."

FIGHTING IN NYASSALAND

Troops in Central Africa Rout German Invaders

ENEMY'S LOSS HEAVY

LONDON, Sept. 11. — The official press bureau has announced that the Colonial Secretary yesterday received two messages from the Governor of Nyassaland, Sept. 9, and that the first states that on Sept. 8 the main force of the British army advanced with the intention of driving the enemy back across the frontier, but the enemy, apparently about 4,000 strong, escaped by wading the river. At sunrise on Sept. 9 they attacked Karanga, which was defended by a single officer and 50 Africans, armed with rifles, as well as the police and eight civilians.

After three hours' resistance, one of the columns of the main British force advanced and drove off the enemy. The full British force was engaging the enemy when the governor's first message was despatched. The second message stated that the British field force had been severely engaged throughout the day; that the enemy had fought with great determination and had to be dislodged by repeated bayonet charges. They were ultimately driven across Songwe.

The British force was too much exhausted to pursue the enemy, who lost seven officers killed, and two wounded. A number of medical officers were captured.

The enemy's loss in the rank and file has not as yet been ascertained, but they are known to be heavy. Two field and two machine guns were captured from the enemy.

The British loss was four officers killed and seven wounded. The loss among the rank and file has not yet been given.

KAISER'S YOUNGEST SON IS WOUNDED

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 11.—An official statement from Berlin says that Prince Joachim of Prussia, the youngest son of the Kaiser, has been wounded in action. The prince, who was acting as an ordnance officer, was struck in the thigh with a shrapnel. The bullet fortunately did not touch the bone. The prince was removed to the nearest garrison hospital. The scene of the action is not indicated.

Beef is to go still higher, and the reason given is there isn't any. So why worry?

ENEMY FORCED BACK THIRTY-SEVEN MILES

GERMANS ADMIT THEIR DEFEAT

British and French Troops Have Crossed the Marne River at Charly and Britons Have Taken Prisoners and Guns---Enemy Makes Slight Advance Near Nancy.

PARIS, Sept. 11. — The following official communication was issued last night:

"On the left wing the British and French troops have crossed the Marne between La Ferte-sous-Jouarre, Charly and Chateau Thierry, pursuing the enemy, who is in retreat. During the course of this advance the British forces took a number of prisoners and captured mitrailleuses.

"During the four days' battle the allied armies have in that section of the theatre of operations gained more than sixty kilometres (approximately 37 miles).

"Between Chateau Thierry and Vitry-le-Francois the Prussian Guard has been thrown back.

"The action continues with great severity in the region between Camp de Mailly and Vitry-le-Francois.

"In the centre and on the right wing there is no change in the situation.

"On the Ornain and in the Argonne district the two opposing forces are maintaining their positions.

"In the region of Nancy the enemy has made slight progress on the Chateau Salins road.

"On the other hand, we have gained ground in the forest of Champenoux.

"The losses have been considerable on both sides, but the morale and health of our troops remain excellent.

"There is no confirmation of the news published in the German newspapers of the fall of Maubeuge."

British Take German Guns.

LONDON, Sept. 11. — The Official Press Bureau has given out the following statement:

"The battle continued yesterday. The enemy has been driven back all along the line. Sir John French reports that our first corps has buried 200 German dead and taken 12 Maxim guns. Some prisoners also were taken.

"Our second army corps has captured 352 prisoners and a battery of six guns. The Germans suffered heavily. Their men are stated to be very exhasuted.

"British troops have crossed the River Marne in a northerly direction."

The crucial battle of the war in France has not yet reached any decisive result:

Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British forces, reported yesterday that the Germans had been driven back all along the line, that the British had crossed the River Marne, that the Germans had suffered severely, and that their men were supposed to be in a very exhausted condition.

Notwithstanding this report, the military experts do not rush to sweeping conclusions. The military writers in the London papers repeat that from the conservative terms of the French official statement yesterday it is too early to anticipate the result of a battle extending over a front of nearly 100 miles. Three million men is the number estimated to be engaged actively and as reserves, and three great battles at least are in progress.

Probably the fiercest one is against the French centre, between Rheims and Verdun, while the British army is contesting the second hard fought engagement against the German right. The Germans are believed to be still attacking the French right, from Verdun to Nancy.

Lesser fighting is in progress in Alsace, from which province the Germans appear to have drawn away part of their army and the French are taking advantage of this opening.

The great battle may continue for days, when it is remembered that smaller operations in Manchuria in which hundreds of thousands only were concerned, lasted a fortnight.

The German western armies have been fighting almost continuously for 25 days, and, until the last phase of the campaign, on the offensive. Field Marshal French's view that they are becoming exhausted finds ready credence.

Germans Admit Defeat.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 11.—An official statement from Berlin, received here, says Gen. Von Stein announces that the Germany army which had advanced across the River Marne to the eastward of Paris was heavily attacked in the region from Paris to Meaux and Montrail. The fighting lasted two days, and in that time the Germans had checked the enemy and advanced, but stronger hostile columns reinforced the allies. The Kaiser's troops were defeated and were obliged to retire.

Gen. Von Stein admits the Germans retreated and lost 50 guns in addition to 1,000 prisoners. The fighting continues to the west of Verdun, but the situation in the Vosges Mountains in Lorraine remains unchanged, the statement adds.

It was also announced that fighting has been resumed in East Prussia.

Berlin Troops Hard Hit.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—According to a Munich report received here, the contingent from the Berlin garrison alone has lost 42,000 men killed or wounded in the war thus far.

GERMANS ARE WELL HIDDEN

British Fleet Sweeps North Sea to Heligoland and Sees Nothing

Mine Layers Separate Under Neutral Flags it is Said

LONDON, Sept. 11. — The official information bureau issued the following last night:

"Yesterday and to-day strong and numerous squadrons and flotillas have made a complete sweep of the North Sea up to and into Heligoland Bight. The German fleet made no attempt to interfere with our movements, and no German ship of any kind was seen at sea."

There is a general discussion in London of the possibility that England may close the North Sea, blockading it completely, if the trouble with floating mines continues.

The Government's position is that the shipping of neutral nations is in great danger because of German mines. England has repeatedly stated that she will not resort to the use of mines. When the mine sweepers free the North Sea of the obstructions, however, naval strategists advise the exclusion of vessels which might plant more mines. Such action would limit the commerce of Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, cutting off Germany's source of food supply.

The British officials say there is abundant evidence that mine layers have operated under neutral flags, and that it is the intention to keep the strictest watch over all craft in the North Sea.

BERLIN DESPATCHES FLOODING SPAIN

PARIS, Sept. 11.—A despatch to The Temps from San Sebastian says:

"The paucity of war news from French sources is causing the Spanish press to be inundated with so-called German official communications, with the result that France little by little is losing what small influence she possessed. The Foreign Ministry gives out to the newspaper men accounts of German successes in France, although the Minister is careful to say that they are of German origin, but the fact that they are communicated to the Foreign Office stamps them with a certain authenticity.

To Chase German Cruisers.

MONTEVIDEO, Sept. 11. — The British cruiser Goodhope arrived here yesterday. It is asserted in Montevideo that this cruiser, in company with the cruisers Monmouth and Glasgow, which came into port on Wednesday, are preparing to leave in search of the German cruisers now in Atlantic waters.

ANXIOUS WAITING IN COAST VILLAGES

Quiet Days Along North Sea—Women Pray, Watch For Postman and Nurse Hatred of Kaiser.

How is life passing in the North Sea villages, whose people live facing the battle waters? I should say that you would find nowhere in England a stouter courage and greater confidence than in these remote places and their smiling hinterland, says Mr. P. W. D. Izzard, writing in The London Chronicle.

Except that life is almost normally placid in these villages, it would be wrong to say that it passes as usual. In some senses it has been revolutionised. Right amid the labors of the day clangs the church bell calling to intercessory prayer. The congregation is of women only—the womenfolk on whom so much may fall requiring strength and courage to withstand.

There was turmoil enough in the first shock of the mobilization. The order came in the dead of night, and the scented lanes were filled suddenly with flying motor cars and horsemen. By the following noon most of the men were at their headquarters, so rapidly was the thing done. In North Walsham it was market day—surely the strangest market day ever seen there. The business and paraphernalia of war jostled that of husbandry and altogether overbore it. The place became a camp, and there was a grim sight at the blacksmith's shop, where the lads in khaki awaited their turn to put an edge on their bayonets at the grindstone.

And now the men are gone—fathers, husbands, brothers, we know not where—and it was not for nothing that on the day their strong ranks marched to the railway station a large Union Jack was flown beside the entrance to Sir William Paston's Grammar School, for Nelson was a boy there. They were a splendid body of men sent out from Norfolk, and a superb lot of horses, too. In the task of gathering one of the most abundant harvests vouchsafed even to this wonderful farming county for years past it was the horses rather than the men which were missed the more.

The departure of their menfolk left the women very bitter. That naturally is the deepest cause of their hostility to the Kaiser and his wanton war. But there are other causes, in which every one of these pleasant seaside villages is concerned, for the general bitterness of spirit. These little places are holiday resorts with a season of barely two months' duration, in which hundreds of humble folk earn their year's rent. And in the first few days of bewilderment there was a homeward rush of visitors and a stream of telegrams cancelling engagements.

The visitors who remain spend the greater part of their days on the cliffs with their glasses. But they hear strange things sometimes. Unused to the phases of the sea, some of them hear gunfire at every incoming tide. More substantial, however, are the full bodied expressions of opinion they overhear as they pass in the lanes. There came to me out of the dark the other night just this snatch of conversation: "Well, bor, what ud you do if you saw a mad dog? Tak a gun to un, wouldn't yer?" "I'd hang him first."

Of course, I knew who the mad dog was. Even gentle women and little children are the Kaiser's mortal enemies.

One complete change from our normal mode of life is that we do not go to bed at nine o'clock in the evening It is not until then that the day's news filters through to those of us who live in the remotest hamlets, and we must needs hold council over it. We get no evening newspapers, and our morning papers become fewer rather than more. We have been promised bulletins at the little post office on Sunday mornings; but we yearn for them every day of the seven. When the postman comes cycling from the town in the late afternoon there is no man more welcome. And people run to meet him, even across the fields, along the whole course of his journey. Usually he brings us immeasurably less than we expect. I have never known so keen a hunger for news. But we have some satisfaction in the hope that we people facing the North Sea may be some day the first to hear the greatest news of all. That is why many of us scarcely ever take our eyes off the sea.

I met a man who did not even know there was a war. He was a gipsy on the road five miles inland. I told him all about it as we walked, and presently, quite unperturbed, he turned to a path across a common and said, "I must be going in there." He never asked a single question when we parted, nor, obviously, did he want to. It was no business of his. An odor of stewing rabbit floated to my nostrils. Looking over the common I saw the roofs and chimneys of three caravans, and a column of smoke from a fire, rising above the rim of a cosy hollow beside a belt of dark trees. I rather think he pitied the ways of Gorgios.

The Slav Terror

It is natural that German sympathizers should seek to raise terrible spectres of Slavs bestriding the whole civilised world. The war is colossal, and it is easy to translate it into terms of a vast historic movement and the death-grapple of two civilizations. But even in the heat of conflict we should endeavor to keep our heads. And we think that a little calm examination will show that it is impossible to represent this war as a clean-cut combat between Slav and Teuton, or to maintain that the Slavic terror is now, or will be when the war is over, anything so closely resembling a Dies iræ as some of our deeply moved German friends would make it out. —N.Y. MRS. CARMAN IS INDICTED

Trial Will Likely be Held in December

MINEOLA, N.Y., Sept. 11.—A superseding indictment, charging murder in the first degree was found yesterday afternoon against Mrs Florence Carman by the judge investigating the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, shot down by an unseen assailant in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman at Freeport on June 30 last.

Mrs. Carman had previously been indicted for manslaughter, and had been at liberty under $15,000 bail. She was arraigned immediately yesterday afternoon and committed to the Nassau County Jail without bail for trial, which probably will be in December.

THE SPORTING WORLD

THE CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS WILL DO BATTLE SATURDAY

"Pete" Campbell, Son of Mr. P. Campbell, of This City, Has Arranged For a Rugby Match—Good Material on Hand.

Valcartier, Sept. 11.—Ross Binkley, last year's captain of the Argos, who is at Valcartier with the soldiers, tackled Peter Campbell, the ex-Varsity captain and quarter back, who is a lieutenant in the 48th Highlanders, the other day, and the result of the argument was that Binkley challenged the Highlanders on behalf of the rest of the camp to play a rugby game, which will take place on Saturday. Campbell was not slow to accept, and they both hustled out to look for material. Leaving all the Highlanders to Campbell, Binkley soon dug up a pretty fair bunch of players as follows:

Smith, the good half back of the Hamilton Tigers, and Draper, the star performer of McGill, champions last year, which with Binkley is a better half back line than most of the senior teams can show. "Bill" Jarvis, of Argo fame, will play quarter, while for the line Young and Wilson, of the Hamilton Tigers, were found at the camp, together with Ressome and Storm, of Varsity, and Black and Fleming, of the Ottawa Rough Riders. Binkley is still looking for a couple of husky scrimmage men, and figures he has some football team.

Campbell will play quarter for the Highlanders, who had secured Max Reid, who played with Varsity in 1911, for flying wing. For the half line the Scotchmen will have Lawson, of R.M.C., and Barwis, the sensational player of the Cadets last year, together with Price, of the Capitals, and Elliott Green, of Varsity, who was captain of the M.A.A.A. in 1912. "Bob" Cory, of Varsity, is the only scrimmage man secured up to date, but he is out looking for a couple of huskies, while the wing line is a "cracker-jack." At outside Ross and Sheenberger the two cracks from R.M.C., will perform, while Alex. Sinclair, Bill Grant, Botterill and Art Muir of Argo fame, will also be on the line.

The game has become the sole topic of conversation at Valcartier, and the whole camp will be on hand when when the two teams line up. Both teams are holding signal practices every moment they can get away from drill.

HORSE RACES ON TWO DAYS OF THE PETERBORO FAIR

Included in the bill-of-fare of sporting attractions for the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition next week are the speeding in the ring events. R. J. Munro has charge of the entries, and it is expected that the races this year will provide more than the usual amount of interest and excitement.

There will be racing on Friday and Saturday. The Friday bill will see the trotters and pacers in the 2:30 class in action for a purse of $250.00.

On Saturday the 2:15 and 2:50 horses will be sent away from the wire, for purses of $250.00 and $100.00 respectively.

Two Ball Games and Soccer Match

Big Bill of Sports at Riverside, Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon citizens of Peterboro will be afforded a grand opportunity to demonstrate their patriotism. An excellent bill of baseball and soccer has been arranged with the view of drawing a big gate, the receipts of which will be donated to the Patriotic Fund.

The program will be as follows:

3 o'clock—De Laval and Red Caps, Mercantile League baseball.

3.45—England and Scotland, exhibition soccer.

5 o'clock—Bankers and Drafting Room, Mercantile League baseball.

CITY CHAMPIONSHIPS ARE POSTPONED

The committee in charge of the city championship athletic meet met last night and decided to postpone the sports, on account of their conflicting with the Peterborough fair.

They will be held about three weeks hence. The date will be announced later. In the meantime the committee is working on the feature events, and the people of Peterborough will be treated to the best athletic meet held here in some years.

All men interested in road racing should get out and get into shape. They will be given a chance to show what they can do. Watch the papers for further announcements.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Pitcher Shocker, of the Senators, will join Detroit. He was Jennings' property, out on a string.

The Giants are slipping. Boston looks to be the best bet for the National league cheesecloth and may possibly bring the world's series honors to old Bean Town. The following is the dope on the men of their roster:

Manager.

George Stallings will be 46 on November 17. He was born in Augusta, Ga.

Secretary.

Herman Nickerson was 44 on May 15. He was born in Boston, Mass.

Pitchers.

Otto Hess will be 34 on October 10. He was born in Berne, Switzerland.

Richard Rudolph will be 26 on August 25. He was born in New York City.

Ensign Cottrell will be 26 on August 29. He was born in Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

Eugene Cocreham will be 26 on November 14. He was born in Luling, Texas.

George Davis was 24 on March 29. He was born in Lancaster, N. Y.

George Tyler will be 25 on December 14. He was born in Derry, N. H.

William James was 32 on December 14. He was born in Iowa, Cal.

Paul Strand will be 20 on December 19. He was born in Carbonado, Wash.

Catchers.

Fred. Mitchell will be 34 on August 24. He was born in Cambridge, Mass.

Bert Whaling was 25 on June 25. He was born in Los Angeles, Cal.

Harry Gowdy was 24 on August 25. He was born in Columbus, Ohio.

Infielders.

John J. Evers was 31 on July 31. He was born in Troy, N. Y.

Charles J. Schmidt was 27 on July 19. He was born in Baltimore, Md.

George Whitted was 24 on February 4. He was born in Durham, N. C.

J. Carlisle Smith was 24 on April 6. He was born near Greenville, S. C.

Charles Deal will be 23 on October 30. He was born in Wilkinsburg, Pa.

Walter Maranville will be 23 on November 11. He was born in Springfield, Mass.

Outfielders.

Joseph Connolly was 27 on February 12. Born in Woonsocket, R. I.

Joshua Devore will be 27 on November 13. He was born in Murray City, Ohio.

Wilson Collins was 25 on May 7. He was born in Pulaski, Tenn.

Ted Cather was 25 on May 20. He was born in Chester, Pa.

Oscar Dugey will be 24 on October 25. He was born in Palestine, Texas.

Lawrence Gilbert will be 23 on December 3. He was born in New Orleans.

Leslie Mann will be 22 on November 18. He was born in Lincoln, Mass.

The most striking fact about the above is the ages. Stallings is a firm believer in youth and vigor.

Bert Perry, the dopester of the London Advertiser, has pipe dreams of Heck, Lamy, Whitcraft and Hammond climbing a little on the baseball ladder. Heck looks capable, but the rest haven't demonstrated any talent which would warrant them playing in faster company.

You can hardly blame Cy Reidy for desiring to land an umpirical berth. His face would look much better behind a mask.

It won't be long till the name of Frank Heffernan will be found on the sporting pages.

With Heff and Fred Denison chasing a puck on Toronto arena this winter, Peterboro will be well represented.

War or no war, good baseball draws a good crowd. The daily reports from Boston state "Thirty-one thousand saw the game."

Undoubtedly we'll see "Casey at the Bat" in some of the papers on the Canadian League circuit ere long. That poem was composed for the sole purpose of filling space on a bad day.

The announcement made a few weeks ago that Charlie Pick was sold to Chicago White Sox was erroneous. Clarke Griffith of the Washington crew has bought the speedy third-sacker.

Gloomy thought for today—Peterboro Rugby teams of the past few years.

Oh to be in Hamilton now that King Rugby's there. The Jungle Kings are working out every night and will make a big bid for the Big Four honors. Ross Craig, the local boy, will wear the yellow and black this year.

Gone but not forgotten—our peppery and esteemed manager, Mr. Curley Blount left today for his home at Youngstown.

Following exploration by American geologists experts from the United States are investigating the petroleum deposits of orthern China, which may become one of the world's great oil fields.

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

"They are all too lifelike."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Political Situation.

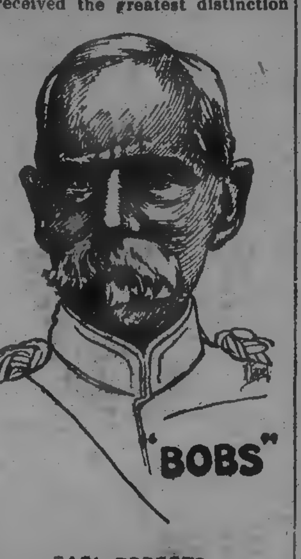
A REAL FIGHTER IS EARL ROBERTS

Even the Kaiser Called Him the Greatest General of His Time—Won the V.C.

As all the world [illegible], Earl Robert, colonel-in-chief of the Overseas forces of the Empire, is an Irishman. He was born in Cawnpore, the son of General Sir Abraham Roberts and Isabella, the daughter of Major Dunbury, of the Sixty-second Foot. He was educated at Eton, and later on went to the military school at Sandhurst. Afterwards he was gazetted to the Bengal Artillery as second lieutenant. As a mere stripling he saw service throughout the Indian Mutiny, taking his part at the siege of Delhi and at the relief of both Lucknow and Cawnpore. On one occasion he had a horse shot under him, an experience that was twice repeated in later years, and on several occasions he was mentioned in despatches. At the close of the war, though still a youngster, he was made a major. In the Abyssinian campaign, which closely followed, he won the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and in the Lushasi Expedition he won his coloneley. In 1878 he was promoted to Major-general.

Before these honors came to him, however, Roberts, then a lieutenant, had received the greatest distinction that can fall to a British soldier. While he was on his wedding tour he was commanded to attend the Queen at Balmoral Castle, and there was given the V.C. The exploit in which this coveted decoration was won occurred in the Indian Mutiny, in the course of a pursuit of a number of rebels, who faced suddenly round, and firing on their pursuers, stood at bay. In his book, "Forty-One Years in India," Lord Roberts has given a matter-of-fact acount of the deed.



EARL ROBERTS

"I saw Younghusband fall," he records, "but I could not go to his assistance as, at that moment, one of his sowars was in dire peril from a Sepoy, who was attacking him with his fixed bayonet, and had I not helped the fellow and disposed of his opponent he must have been killed. An instant later I descried in the distance two Sepoys making off with a standard, which I determined must be recaptured; so I rode after the rebels and overtook them, and while wrenching the staff out of the hands of one, whom I cut down, the other put his musket close to my body and fired. Fortunately for me the piece missed fire. I carried off the standard."

His Famous March

In 1879 Roberts made the march from Kabul to Kandahar that will be forever associated with his name, not merely as a military feat, but because of the lasting peace with Afghanistan that has followed. In the course of the Afghan campaign Roberts was mentioned in despatches not fewer than twenty-three times, an honor almost without parallel in modern British military history. The Burma campaign and the South African War further served to add to his laurels as a soldier. This "little red-faced man," as Kipling calls him, has been publicly proclaimed by the Kaiser, himself no mean judge, as the "ablest soldier of his time." From William II. he received the decoration of the Red Eagle, being the first non-German to be thus honored, and in explaining his action the Kaiser compared him with the ablest military geniuses of the past, and declared him to be the greatest of to-day's generals."

DICKSON—BUCK.

An interesting and pretty nuptial event took place on Wednesday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Buck, Hastings road, Asphodel, when his daughter, Marjorie J., was united in marriage to Rev. Douglas Dickson, pastor of the Methodist church, Coe Hill, Ont.

The ceremony was solemnized under an imposing arch of decorated evergreens, at 11 o'clock in the morning, the Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, of Hastings, assisted by Rev. Mr. Highe, of Lindsay, being the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming, attired in a dress of cream satin and the customary bridal veil, adorned with lilies of the valley. The wedding march was played by Miss Vida Faux, of Westwood, while little Miss Gertrude Buck, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl and ring-bearer.

After the customary congratulations were extended, the company adjourned to a delightful wedding breakfast, following which toasts were proposed by the Revs. Anderson and Highe, and responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome pendant, set with amethysts and pearls; to the pianist, a pearl brooch; and to the flower girl a pin, set with pearls.

The presents bestowed upon the happy young couple were numerous and valuable, among them being a cheque for $50 from the bride's parents, and one for $25 from the bride's brother, Mr. William Buck.

Guests present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Smith, of Stirling, Mrs. Oliver Buck and daughter, Miss Laura, of Peterborough, besides friends and relatives from Norwood, Hastings and vicinity.

The bride's travelling dress was of navy blue cloth, with hat to match.

Rev. and Mrs. Dickson left on the 2.30 G. T. R. express from Hastings and will visit Belleville and other points. They will reside at Coe Hill.—Norwood Register.

In a recent issue of The Review it was stated that the members of the Kitchener Red Cross Club were working in the interest of the families of the volunteers. This has been found to be incorrect, as their aim is to supply the volunteers with necessities, such as wearing apparel. All ladies are invited to join the club, especially those accomplished in the art of knitting. Prospective members should apply to Miss Garrow, Downie street, or Mrs. Knox, Gilmour street.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dormer and young daughter, of Peterborough, are spending a few weeks with Mrs. Dormer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stevenson. — Campbellford News.

Mr. G. R. Evans, of Gunn's, Ltd., Toronto, is in the city on business.

Mr. Duncan McGregor, Toronto, is in the city.

Messrs. G. W. Prescott and G. H. Rankin, Toronto, are among the guests at the White House.

Mr. A. Humpage, who left this city to accept a position at Campbellford, is gaining popularity as a soloist in that town.

The Manila (Philippine Islands) Daily Bulletin of July 16, to hand, says:

The engagement is announced of Dr. J. A. McKinnon, veterinary inspector for the army in the Philippines, and an old Victoria county, Ontario, boy, and Leila A. Stark, of the army clerical service at the land transport depot. The date for the wedding has not been fixed as yet.

Dr. McKinnon is one of the most popular of the early arrivals in the islands, having come here in 1902. He is in charge of the veterinary hospital at the land transport depot, in addition to his other duties. He is also president of the veterinary examining board of the islands, and a prominent Elk.

Miss Stark, the charming young bride-to-be, is a recent arrival in the islands, having come here in April, 1913. Her home city is Portland, Oregon. She resides with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil on calle A. Mabini.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS.

Millbrook, Sept. 11. — Miss Tilly Dolby is visiting Toronto friends and the Exhibition.

The Misses Margaret and Rebecca Fair visited their brother, Mr. Wm. Fair and the Exhibition in Toronto.

Messrs. R. Deyell, J. N. McGill, W. J. E. Gillott and Fred Pendry were in Peterboro on Monday.

Miss E. Moore, of Fergus, spent Labor Day with Miss Hawken.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam were visitors to Toronto and the Exhibition this week.

Miss Ilein McKim, stenographer for the Cressman Co., Peterboro, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. C. Richards, on Monday.

Mrs. J. F. Henry will not receive until further notice.

Congratulations to Miss M. Mitchell upon successfully passing her examination in art. Her success is all the more creditable for only having taken the course at the Summer School in Toronto during the holidays, but Miss Mitchell was always a bright student, and the Millbrook Continuation School is most fortunate in having her for one of its teachers.

The Misses Mary Deyell, Margaret Hunter, Margaret Swain, Helen Berry, Miss Staples and Miss Earl are attending the Millbrook School during the present term. We wish them all success.

Mr. Porteous, of Blackstock, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. G. Pendry and Miss E. Krieger are home from their six weeks' camp at Deyell's Landng.

Mr. H. R. Nettleton spent the holiday with friends at London and Toronto.

Mr. Will McKim, son of Mr. G. W. McKim, Peterboro, formerly of Millbrook, who has been in New Ontario the past few months has volunteered for active service, and is awaiting a call to go to Valcartier. Will's experience in roughing it for some time past will make him fit for the hardships that may come to hm if he goes to war. He received a message at Cochrane from headquarters to not go to Valcartier until further notice, which he is expecting at any time.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church held an open session on Tuesday afternoon. A large number were present, and a splendid program was presented. Mrs. George Jackson, of Port Perry, was the principal speaker, and her address was very interesting and instructive. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan also gave splendid addresses. Rev. Mr. Brown was chairman. It is not necessary to add that he did his duty well. An excellent tea was served by the ladies. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously given to Mrs. Jackson. The lecture room was very prettily decorated by Miss Hampton. The collection amounted to $5.81. All present enjoyed the happy and successful social event.

MRS. HYSLOP GAVE ADDRESS TO THE W.C.T.U.

A special meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance union of Peterborough was held in the Y.W.C.A. parlor to hear Mrs. Hyslop, of Toronto, Dominion organizer, talk in the interests of this work. She told of the real, true patriotism of the society, not only in time of war, but in peace, for this society wages a constant warfare against the forces of evil, in every way possible.

The address was intensely interesting and full of inspiration to the workers. Mrs. Hyslop has spent eleven years in this fair Canada, travelling from coast to coast, and understands the needs better than some who are native born.

"We invite the women of Peterborough to take an interest in this work and attend the meetings, whether you are a member or no. We are a part of the oldest and greatest organization of women in the world, who stand for all that is best for God, and Home, and Native Land."

Is the Kaiser Mad?

A Survey of Recent Incidents

From the Scotsman (Edinburgh)

A few days ago such a question would be ruled out of court; it is an admittedly extreme hypothesis; but were we to judge only by recent events, it is a perfectly consistent and logical one. The German Emperor has done many extraordinary things in the past, and it is when we marshal these occurrences with his amazing actions during this never-to-be-forgotten August of 1914 that we find it possible to place his sanity under review.

Emperor Wilhelm is a clever man; viewed from certain standpoints he is a genius, which admission assists rather than detracts from the insanity proposition, for genius and madness ever did have a bond of sympathy between them. A genius without a "bee in his bonnet" would be commonplace stuff.

When the Emperor Came to Britain.

Not so many years ago the Emperor was in this country and took part in the ceremonials connected with the coronation of the late King Edward. Riding in the procession, superbly mounted on a white charger, an outstanding figure for all his lack of height, he was exceedingly well received by the populace. The welcome was perhaps not precisely in the spirit of an entente cordiale, but it was cordial nevertheless, and the Emperor was decidedly pleased at his reception and took the trouble to say so.

A very short time passed over our heads and we Britons found ourselves in the thick of a struggle which seemed to tax all our great resources. We did not expect anything from Germany, either in the form of active assistance, advice, or even an expression of good wishes, and we were not disappointed in our expectations; but we did receive something — something utterly unexpected, something which, in the light of the German Emperor's former cordiality — and nothing had passed in the interim to disturb it — came as a great shock to us all. We refer to the never-to-be-forgotten telegram of congratulation from Potsdam to Pretoria. It was not merely an open message of discourtesy and ill-will to this country, it was the act of an ill-balanced mind acting on a sudden impulse, the mind of a man that is abnormal and not as other minds. A more undiplomatic action by one virtually charged with the peace of Europe was never committed in recent times, but we passed it over with the disdain it deserved, as we also brushed aside the intense anglophobia outbreak more recently exhibited in public by the Crown Prince of Germany, who was suitably punished by his august father by being drafted to a frontier regiment and almost immediately re-consigned to a larger command.

A Mistaken Estimate.

It is now clear that our estimate of the fervently patriotic addresses of the German Emperor to his ministers, army and people was wide of the mark. We good-naturedly reckoned it to be so much outspoken eccentricity with no real sting in it. But it was something more than windy rhetoric; it was the expression of the mad side of genius, of deadly significance when the speaker was heart and soul in his utterances and possessed a power little short of an autocrat. It is this power, added to a really amazing hold on the susceptibilities and sympathies of the people of the Fatherland, that we, of common consent, lay the blame of the war not with the German people, not even at the door of their administrators, but at the portals of Potsdam, the home of the wonderful little man with the fiercely aggressive military physiognomy; this dreamer of wonderful dreams; this man who would wade through blood and over the corpses of tens of thousands of his own devoted henchmen, not to enrich himself, but to the fulfilment of the obsession — a Greater Germany, with himself at the god-head. His, undoubtedly, was the mastermind which in its uncurbed power suborned the Council of War and set a-grinding the great mills of war, whose life devastating revolutions he could not stop if he wished.

We are left with no reflection that is tenable but that the Emperor Wilhelm was the man at the wheel of the ship of state when the deadly fiat of war went forth, and his was the pilot's hand when there was crowded inside one week the most amazing sequence of ultimatums and declarations the world has ever staggered under. A second Napoleon seemed to have risen amongst us! But the great Napoleon in all the glory of his predominance was guilty of no such colossal folly and would have shrunk from such excesses.

Malignant Madness.

The mind is perplexed and bewildered by the increasing awfulness of the vista before us—and before Germany! All wars are a malignant growth — a form of madness in the abstract sense, but this war is nothing short of malignant madness, and that madness is the madness of the German Emperor. Even dispassionately viewed it would seem to be the product of hallucination worked in the brain of only a madman able, unfortunately, to see materialized the phantasy of his insane ambition.

But let us look back again over the whirl of events of these past few memorable days and ask ourselves where sanity enters and madness leaves off. We eschew all suppositions, and stick to the main, irrefutable facts. We pass over the borderland of mystery and leave Servia severely alone. Germany makes war on Russia, whose naval men are numerically more than half her own, and whose armies, on paper, are three times more powerful. She then whips round like a flash on Belgium, but she does not crack the whip. She has the soft fleecy gloves of diplomacy on. She would prefer a picnic journey through Belgium, but her attitude is "any way will do." She has the swagger of the pirate on the merchantman's deck. Like a flash her sheep's clothing drops off when her advances are repelled. Almost in the same breath that she blights little Belgium and incidentally adds a quarter of a million to her fighting foes, she hurls defiance at France, and complacently accepts on the debit side of her ledger a nation reckoned by many good judges to be a fit adversary for her single-handed.

In the same devil-may-care spirit she snarls at Britain and shows her fangs, and in one fell moment she is up against a navy which, despite all the recent increase in her own, can put three ships against her every two and still have a respectable fleet left.

And on the credit side of the German ledger there is Italy, a bad debt —mayhap in the end something worse than a bad debt — and there is Austria — Austria, who, like herself, has been on the shelf for over fifty years, and who, in her last great military essay, was crushed by Germany inside six weeks, and who six years before was completely routed by France in a campaign consisting of only two big battles.

The world in its many windings through the valley of time has seen strange things, but nothing so horribly and pitifully mad as this. May she never see the like of it again.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

The Montreal Star reports progress for the Canadian Patriotic Fund, of which His Majesty King George is patron, the Duke of Connaught, President; and Hon. W. T. White, finance minister, is treasurer. The Star says:

CANADIAN JAM FACTORIES BUSY

The embargo on the exportation of jam from the United Kingdom will increase the demand for Canadian made jams. During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, over $500,000 worth of jams, jellies, and preserves were imported from the United Kingdom into Canada. The deficiency created by the shutting off of these imports under the embargo instituted by the British Government must be made up by the Canadian jam factories.

As a result of these conditions there is greatly increased activity in the jam factories throughout Canada. Dominion Canners Limited, is operating its jam factory at Hamilton at maximum capacity, night as well as day shifts being employed. E. D. Smith and Sons, Limited, has increased the staff in its jam factory at Winona, Ont., and will have a record output this season. In the plant at Lindners, Limited, at Toronto, for example, where, under ordinary conditions, about forty-five hands are employed it is expected that night as well as day shifts will be employed for the next six or seven months. These conditions are typical of those that obtain throughout the entire industry.

KITCHENER THE GRIM

Stories of Kitchener's bluntness are legion.

"Sorry to report the loss of five men through explosion of dynamite," was the gist of a telegram he received one day during the Boer War from a captain at the front.

"Do you want any more dynamite?" was the immediate answer.

His grim, laconic humor was well illustrated by his reply on one occasion to the War Office authorities who were pressing a certain weapon upon him.

"Keep the gun," he wired. "I can throw stones myself."

Allies Are Following up Successes With Dogged Pursuit, Which Plays Havoc With the Germans

WHOLE REGIMENT SHARPSHOOTERS WAS WIPED OUT

Severe Punishment Meted Out to Enemy by the British and Only Superb Handling of Forces Saved Large Part of German Forces

ALLIED CAVALRY DID WONDERS

Paris and Brussels May be Re-occupied as Capitals --- Germans Are Leaving Latter Section of Country

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 12.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Express learns from the front that in an attack on the Germans Wednesday afternoon, the British punished the Prussian Guards in the severest possible manner.

An entire Jaeger regiment of sharpshooters, numbering nearly 3,000, was completely wiped out. "There is not the slightest doubt," says the correspondent, "that but for the superb handling of the German right by Gen. Von Kluck, a large part of Emperor William's forces would have been captured.

"The allied cavalry did wonders, and three or four additional divisions of cavalry would have contributed toward the complete rout of the Germans."

Three Tremendous Struggles On

London, Sept. 12.—Three tremendous struggles are waging along as many battle lines, and from none of them comes the report of decisive result. The mystery of the western operations is complicated by news from Berlin which ignores Gen. Von Kluck's efforts on the German right, while indicating that the German attack on Verdun is proceeding successfully.

The situation along the Russian borders is becoming as obscure as are the western operations. Berlin reports that the victory of Von Hindenburg will clear East Prussia of Russians, but military experts at Petrograd declare that it is incredible that the Russians should give up the investment of Konigsberg unless for greater disaster than any reported.

Both Belgium and France, it appears in London, are optimistic enough to begin to consider reoccupying their capitals. Brussels is still in the hands of the Germans, but there are many signs that show the forces of Emperor William are moving out of that section of the country.

Socialist Organ is Pessimistic

Copenhagen, Sept. 12.—The Berlin Vorwaerts, a Socialist organ, takes a pessimistic view of the German situation so far as the economic position is concerned.

"The greatest danger," it says, "is not that Germany may be defeated, but that war the will last a long time. Germany's economic danger is that the English fleet will prevent the importation of cotton, silk, copper, oil, lead, leather, rubber and other raw materials, which are necessary for a continuance of Germany's industrial life, and that, therefore, she will be compelled to close her factories. Already the number of unemployed is immense. If it is not possible to help this army of starving people, it will become a greater danger than the danger of the military army's defeat."

Paris, Sept. 12.—Forty German prisoners, all wounded by bayonet thrusts, have arrived here, and they give the hint of how the Germans suffered in their retreat across the rivers Ourcq and Marne. It appears the German force sent to that region to face the Paris army, protecting the flank of the allies, was an important one and had been strongly entrenched. When General Joffre ordered an attack, a fierce engagement of artillery opened and lasted two days, without interruption.

Aviator Captain George Bellenger finally gave the exact location of the German batteries, and soon thereafter they were annihilated by the French three-inch guns. Then came the rout, and, according to participants, the Germans, pursued at the point of the bayonet, crossed the Ourcq in disorder, leaving cases of ammunition, cloaks, knapsacks and cartridges.

The losses of the Germans were terrible and this point of the valley of the Ourcq is still covered with their unburied dead. The French also suffered serious casualties, but mostly in wounded.

Earthquake --- People in Panic

Lima, Peru, Sept. 12.—News has reached here of a tremendous earthquake which destroyed the city of Caraveli, in the department of Arequipa. The report says the people are in a panic, but no mention is made of the loss of lives.

BRITISH TROOPS CROSS THE RIVER OURCQ ON HEELS OF THE ENEMY

Official Press Bureau's Latest Report

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 12.—"Our troops have crossed the river Ourcq and are moving this (Saturday) morning in rapid pursuit of the enemy," is the announcement given out to-day by the official press bureau.

"Two hundred prisoners were captured. The cavalry of the allies were between Soissons and Eismes last night. The enemy are retreating north of Vitry-Le-Francois. The third French army has captured all the artillery of one German army corps.

"Our aeroplanes report that the enemy's retreat is very rapid."

The artillery of a German army corps consists of 18 batteries of field guns and six batteries of field howitzers, a total of 72 pieces; one or two batteries of heavy field artillery and a machine gun group.

Paris, Sept. 12.—It is officially announced here this afternoon that the German forces to the east of Paris are generally retreating and are offering only feeble resistance to the French and British troops.

The official communication says: "On our left wing the Germans have begun a general retreating movement between the Oise and the Marne. Yesterday their front lay between Soissons, Brain and Fismes, and the mountain of Reims. Their cavalry seems to be exhausted. Anglo-French forces which pursued them encountered on September 11 only a feeble resistance.

"On our right wing the Germans have evacuated Vitry-Le-Francois, where they had fortified themselves, and they have also evacuated the valley of the Saulx river.

"At Sermaize and at Revigny they abandoned large quantities of war material. The German forces which have been occupying the Argonne region have begun to give way. They are retreating to the north through the forest of Bellenone.

"In Lorraine we have made slight progress. We occupy the eastern boundary of the forest of Champenoux, Rehainvillers and Gerbenvillers. The Germans have evacuated Saint Die. In Belgium the Belgian army is acting vigorously against the German troops before Antwerp."

British Are in Possession of Herbertshoehe

London, Sept. 12.—The admiralty announced this afternoon that the British Pacific fleet has occupied Herbertshoehe, on the Blanche Bay, the seat of government of the German Bismarck Archipelago, and Soloman Islands.

The official press bureau gave out the following statement this afternoon: "A telegram has been received from Rear Admiral Patey, commanding the Australian navy, announcing the occupation at 7 a.m., Sept. 11, of the town of Herbertshoehe, in the island of New Pommern (late New Britain).

The British flag was hoisted without opposition. A naval landing party under Commander J. A. Beresford, of the Australian navy, established themselves on the shore at dawn, without the knowledge of the enemy, but stout resistance was offered.

"While a force was dstroying the wireless telegraphy apparatus, the landing party had to force its way for a distance of four miles through bush, the road in several places being mined.

"The German officer in command of the parties in the trench, 500 yards from the station, surrendered unconditionally. Guns have been landed and steps have been taken to capture the station. The casualties are: Killed, Lieut. Commander Chas. Belwell and two seamen of the Australian naval reserve; wounded, 10 seamen. The German casualties are not known, but two German officers, five non-commissioned officers and 13 native policemen were taken prisoners."

Melbourne, Sept. 11.—The British expeditionary force which occupied Herbertshohe, plans to attack Simpson's Haven to-morrow.

YOUNG MEN SHOULD RESPOND TO THE CALL FOR RECRUITS

Efforts Are Being Made for Sports at the Armouries — Indoor Baseball Schedule Starts Next Week

While the patriotic spirit is sweeping over the country and leaving a new impression on all, the officers of the various battalions are making an extra effort to swell the numbers of their respective units. The officers in charge of the 57th regiment are naturally doing their share, and they have reached the conclusion that the greatest aid in this work is to introduce and encourage sports. In accordance with this, the recreation room at the armouries is to be open every evening, commencing Monday. This room is to be at the disposal of the men of the regiments.

Indoor baseball and bowling is also to be started; in fact, the first game in the baseball is scheduled for Monday evening. Members of the 57th regiment are assured of a very pleasant winter, and it is anticipated that many men of the city will fall in line. Prospective recruits should apply immediately at the armouries. Here is a duty to which young men should not fail to respond.

GERMANS RETIRE WHEN FIGHTING IS ON EQUAL FOOTING

General Pau Scores Tremendous Advantage by Capturing Ammunition Column of Enemy

WAS OVER FOUR MILES LONG

Reinforced French Troops Show Splendid Marching Qualities and Offer Resolute Front

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Sept. 12.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Nanteuil, in a despatch dealing with the turn of the tide in favor of the allies, gives the impression that the German army, meeting for the first time troops almost equal in number, has been rolled up and sorely troubled, and the right of the army, composed of some of the finest German forces, has retired so far that the centre must give way or risk communications.

General Pau scored a tremendous advantage by capturing an enormous ammunition column 4¼ miles long. This he destroyed, leaving the Germans very short of ammunition. The effect of the long, barren marches must have an enormous influence on the German conscript army. "It was all very well while the Germans were marching forward, but the retrograde movement is trying on the nerves. On the other hand, the French army, stiffened by great reinforcements of men, who are now fighting for all they hold most dear, have offered a resolute and magnificent front to the enemy, for the French are twice as dangerous in attack as in defence."

The correspondent thus describes the capture of the German ammunition column, while the Germans were feeling their way toward Paris: "The long column was winding its way along through Crepy-en-Valois when General Pau sent cavalry and artillery to intercept it. The column was too weakly guarded to cope with the attack and so was captured and destroyed. This capture had an important bearing on subsequent fighting. A noticeable feature of the operations has been the splendid marching qualities of the French troops. This was displayed especially when two divisions which were sent last week to intercept an expected attempt of the Germans to invest Paris, covered 49¼ miles in two stages."

Paris, Sept. 12.—The following official communique was issued Friday night:

First: On our left wing our success continues. Our advance has continued north of the Marne and in the direction of Soissons and Compeigne. The Germans left behind for us, a considerable quantity of supplies, wounded and prisoners. "We captured another flag.

The British army took 11 cannon, an important lot of supplies and from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred prisoners.

"Second: At the centre, the enemy retreated along the whole front between Sezanne and Revigny. In Argonne, the Germans have not as yet retreated. Despite our troops' splendid effort during the last five days' battle, they still have enough energy left to pursue the enemy. On our right wing in Lorraine and the Vosges there is nothing new.

TOOK SIX THOUSAND PRISONERS.

"The first and second divisions, with French cavalry and artillery cut off and defeated a large force of the enemy 60 miles north of Paris, taking 6,000 prisoners and 15 guns. The Germans are reported as demoralized.

"Half starved prisoners ravenously devoured beef and biscuits supplied by British troops.

"During the fight 50 British cyclists from the cover of a small wood wiped out 150 of the enemy's cavalry.

"The allies' losses were severe, but they are as nothing in comparison to those of the enemy, who is now retreating north of the Marne and west of the Ourcq."

KAISER IN THE FIELD

LONDON, Sept. 12—The Bordeaux correspondent of The Chronicle reports that Emperor William was present during part of the fighting around Nancy. He says that the Kaiser travels in a palace car all parts of which are detachable and that when they are put together they form a luxurious house.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, SEPT. 12, 1914

AMERICAN OPINION ABOUT GERMANY.

WHILE THERE ARE some newspapers in the United States that have espoused the cause of Germany, it is noteworthy that nearly all the most influential papers have placed the responsibility for the war on Germany. In some sections where the people are of German or Austrian nationality opinion is naturally against Britain and her Allies. This was to be expected, but the following editorial from the New York Times is indicative of the opinion of the large majority of the American people and ably expresses the dominant opinion of Canada as well:

Some of the chief men of the empire have put forth a book that is professedly written as the appeal of Germany for the sympathy and support of the people of the United States. Among the authors of the volume are a former Chancellor, a Field Marshal, a President of the Reichstag, several university professors, prominent men of business and finance, and some are of princely title. A case that enlists pleaders of this high distinction must in truth need buttressing, and it is an occasion for regret that they have not been able to make a better defence. The blame does not rest with them. No voice or pen, however eloquent or gifted, can convince an imperial world of the justice of Germany's cause or change the rooted belief of right-thinking men that she is battling for ends that, attained, would retard the advance of civilisation and make the peace, the prosperity and happiness of the nations less secure.

These men of Germany ask us to give no heed to the lies of their enemies. In this land of enlightenment public opinion does not take form on anybody's lies. We keep no mind of perversions sent out from London or Paris. We have sought truth in its undefiled sources, in the British White Paper and in the Memorandum of the German Foreign Office, in the observed and acknowledged policies of the combatant nations, and in the utterances of their men of authority. The princes and professors who pay us the compliment of this appeal to our candid judgment will not impeach the testimony of their Foreign Office, we suppose, yet if their was suspension of judgment in the first weeks of the war, doubt vanished and full conviction came when the Times published the official documents and records. The American people there read of the untiring efforts of Sir Edward Grey to reach a peaceful adjustment through a conference of the Powers, of his appeals to which France, Russia and Italy gave immediate assenting response, which Germany alone met with evasion, excuse, disfavour and refusal. From Germany's memorandum they learn that the Kaiser's government had from the first sustained and encouraged Austria in a policy of war and had denied the rights of any other Power to stand between her and the Servian objects of her wrath. It is wholly futile, it is an affront to our intelligence, for these German suppliants for our favour to tell us now that Russia and England brought on the war, that Germany did not choose the path of blood, that the sword was forced into the hands of the German Emperor.

Nor can our favour or sympathy be won by misrepresenting the motives of England, France and Russia. In the face of Sir Edward Grey's labours for peace, why tell us that England "encouraged this war" because she was determined to check the commercial growth of Germany? Why tell us that the war was "provoked by Russia because of an outrageous desire for revenge?" We have knowledge of the fact, the proofs are before us, yet those German advocates talk to us as though we had just arrived from the moon. We are unmoved by their picture of the Slav peril. Why is it that Germany fears the Slav? England is not afraid, France has no fear. Italy, Belgium, Holland are all undisturbed. We should like to see a satisfactory answer to the question, why, when all the rest of Europe is calm, Germany stands in terror of the Slav. The authors of this book make a wretched defence of Germany's crime against international morality and her invasion of neutral Belgium. "In our place the government of the United States would not have acted differently." Speak for yourselves, gentlemen. Our recent repeal of a statute that was by a great part of our people deemed to be in conflict with one of our treaties speaks for us.

But it is not upon these present things that our minds chiefly dwell. We are taking thought of the fututre. We are a great nation. We do not become less great through overslaughtering or diminishment at the hands of a European military power that for years has menaced the peace of the nations by her schemes of aggrandizement. We have possessions in many quarters of the globe and commercial interests in all. This appeal for our sympathy and moral support comes with ill-grace from the subjects of an imperial ruler whose ambition is to lift Germany to the position of world supremacy. We cannot look with complacent approval upon the effort of this great military chieftain to crush the peaceably inclined nations that refuse to bow to his will. The German ambition becomes a matter of serious concern to us, it is alarming, for it is certain as fate that with Russia beaten back, England and France crushed, and Belgium and Holland seized, the coming of some cause of conflict with ourselves would not be long delayed. We cannot be expected to welcome the compulsion to spend our substance in a race with Germany for military supremacy. We are not agreeably impressed by blasphemous imperial invocations of divine favour upon bloody enterprises.

These gentlemen of Germany plead in vain. We can give them no help. To quote their own words in a truer sense than their own, "the country of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln places itself upon the side of a just cause and one worthy of humanity's blessing."

TRADE WORTH OBTAINING.

THE EFFORTS of the Hon. Sir George Foster to promote Canada's trade with South America and the West Indies have been productive of much good, and now that war has menaced Germany's position there, that field has added importance. The foreign trade of South America is an exceedingly rich prize and worth every effort which may be put forth in obtaining it. That part of South America's export alone which comes from Germany and Great Britain amounts to many millions of dollars. Argentine imports to the value of $114,515,800 from Great Britain each year, and she annually expends $61,708,550 with Germany. Her yearly imports from the United States amount to $57,057,505. Brazil also has a heavy import. She takes from Great Britain $77,519,726, from Germany $52,962,625, and from the United States $48,049,922. Chili takes from Great Britain commodities to the value of $38,599,283, from Germany $33,180,070, and from the United States $16,806,341. Of course, Germany's South American export, which comprises a very large item, temporarily at least falls away completely, while the quantities of produce which Great Britain may find herself in position to send will likely prove a severe reduction compared with her former South American demand.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IF that 208-pound 'lunge, reported as having been caught in the bay at Barrie isn't a sturgeon it is certainly the greatest 'lunge on record and ought to have been sent straight to the Canadian National Exhibition. — Toronto Star. Wrong entirely. It ought to have been sent to the Peterborough Exhibition. The Star can't slight the big show here and get away with it.

OVER $28,000,000 a year is paid by Americans to waiters as tips. We print this item merely to induce our Druggist Critic in London to suggest that the word "is" should be "are." How do you like our strategy?—Toronto News. We like it fine — and we may add that we reprint this lucid exposition of pure English prose to point out a mistake that is all too common.

WE had occasion recently to spend an hour in Orillia. Like many Ontario towns, it presents its worst side where the visitor first sets eyes on it. Peterborough is, fortunately, better off, but could stand improvement in this regard.

ORILLIA has reduced her tax rate by one mill, it being now 31 mills. If this excellent policy is continued for a period of ten years, that town ought to have then a reasonable tax rate.

A study of the orders given by Napoleon indicates the care he exercised to have a sufficient supply of shoes provided. On one occasion he wrote: "You know that shoes are always needed in war," and at another time he said to Baron Lejeune: "Shoes help on marches, and marches win battles." To Sir John Burkoyne's question, addressed to Wellington: "What was the first requirement of a soldier?" "A good pair of shoes," he replied. "And the second requirement?" "A good pair of shoes for a change." "And the third?" "A pair of soles for repairs."

Austria's Awful Awakening.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

There are different ways of keeping up courage in the face of adversity. Lying to one's self is one way. A refugee from Vienna says the people there are consoling themselves with stories to the effect that the Allies are hopelessly beaten, that the German fleet is blockading the British coasts, and that the British people are starving. The Vienna people, of course, have need of some such consolation, but what an awakening there will be when the time comes!

Belgian National Anthem.

Fled the years of servile shame!
Belgium, 'tis thine hour at last.
Wear again thy glorious name,
Spread thy banner on the blast.
Sovereign people in thy might,
Steadfast yet and valiant be,
On thine ancient standard write
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Strive, nor seek discharge at length,
Hold thy courage as thy crown,
God, Who keeps thee in His strength;
On thy labours smileth down.
Over all thy fruitful land
Labour's prize is full and free,
On thine arts enthroned stand,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Foes, that our friends of old,
Are returned to love at last.
All the free we prize as gold,
Praying that our strife be past.
Belgians and Batavians, friends,
Knit in brotherhood shall be;
With one voice the shout ascends:
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Belgium, Mother, thus we vow,
Never shall our love abate.
Thou our hope, our safety thou,
Hearts and blood are consecrate.
Grave, we play, upon thy shield
This device eternally,
Weal or woe, at home, afield,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

SEPTEMBER

By Walt Mason

September, the smiling, the month of delight, entrancing, beguiling, is with us tonight. September the pleasant, of generous fame, is answering "Present!" when called is her name. September's the guerdon for all we have borne, the heat and the burden that made our hearts mourn. She pays for the grilling we got in July; she says, "I am willing your teardrops to dry; come rest on my bosom, and if you have fears, I'll see that you lose 'em, my own stricken dears!" She pays for the glaring of midsummer skies, the sweating, the swearing, the beetles and flies; the pains and the rigors of long August days, the fleas and the chiggers — ah, nobly she pays! Her breezes caressing already have cheered; no hot winds distressing are scorching my beard; her nights come a-creeping from some cooler clime, and man, in his sleeping, makes up for lost time. The meadows are golden, the heavens are blue, the year is unfoldin' its blessings to you. You cease to remember the troubles you've known, since gentle September comes into her own.

About Work and "Made-in-Canada"

Economic Situation of Grave Concern to Canadians—Co-operation from All Sides

The war has had a sudden and pronounced effect on the "Made-in-Canada" movement which has been carried on in Canada during the past few years. Hitherto the educational campaign, to promote the sale of "Made-in-Canada" goods, has been viewed pretty much as the concern of Canadian manufacturers, and has, for this reason, been denied the sympathy and support of a section of the people. The war has changed all this, and to-day the "Made-in-Canada" policy is no longer looked upon as a matter of sentiment and patriotism, but is regarded as an economic necessity. The manufacturers and other large employers of labor are being appealed to by press, pulpit and public men generally to provide the maximum of employment with a view to relieving the distress caused by the closing of many factories as a result of the war. Obviously Canadian factories cannot be operated unless there is a demand for their products. Hence the appeal on every hand to Canadians to patronize the goods made by their fellow-citizens in Canadian factories. It is admitted on all sides that there will be considerable unemployment, and consequent suffering during the next few months in Canada, but if every Canadian would, as far as possible, patronize home industries, orders would come in to many Canadian factories that have hitherto been placed abroad, and instead of a slackening in factory activity the wheels of industry might be operated with accelerated speed during this period of trial.

Manufacturers and other large employers of labor have agreed among themselves to maintain their working staffs as fully as possible even if they operate at cost or in some cases below cost. In so doing they are not actuated by any desire for profits, welcome as these would be, but solely with a view of relieving the distress which unemployment always brings. They feel that it is far better to furnish a livelihood for Canadians through honest work and honest wages than to dole out a pittance through charitable institutions. "Made-in-Canada" is, therefore, more than ever a practical business policy today. Every Canadian housewife, in fact every purchaser of goods in Canada should practice it and encourage others to do likewise. About fifty cents of every dollar spent on the product of a factory goes to the workingman. All interests are, therefore, combining in Canada during the next few months to increase employment by distributing as much as possible in the form of wages to the Canadian workmen in the Canadian factory. The campaign of the Canadian Press Association in this direction is most commendable, and will do much to restore confidence in the business and industrial community.

A WATER RESCUE

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

George MacElroy spent his summers on the Atlantic coast and always owned some sort of boat. The first he owned was a skiff with a leg-o'-mutton sail; the second was a dory, rigged in the same way; the third a twenty foot single sticker, and when he reached the age of twenty his father gave him a yacht, capable of sleeping half a dozen persons comfortably.

George found it all he could do to run his yacht on his limited income. Indeed, he could not have done so at all had he not been his own captain, quartermaster, cabin boy and cook for the greater part of the time. Once while laying up near New York he was attacked and robbed by river pirates. He at once provided himself with arms, including a couple of small cannon for'ard and a single gun of greater caliber astern, which he called Long Tom. After getting aboard this armament he felt easier. Unless surprised he felt that he could stand off any ordinary gang. But to avoid loneliness he took into his service Cyrus Barker, a boy of fifteen, who was at home on the water and ill at ease on land.

One hot July day, when there was no wind, George was moving under the power of his motor engine, making toward Portland, Me., from the south. He had the lighthouses on his port quarter standing out white in the sun, but he was rather interested in a yacht to the westward of him. She was some seventy tons burden and very trim. No one but a rich person could have afforded to run her. While MacElroy was looking at her the flag flying from her stern was lowered and raised again, union down, which is a signal of distress. It remained flying for about a minute, when it was hauled down and replaced as it had been before.

George was puzzled. The yacht was moving along at a steady rate of about eight knots and did not seem in any way crippled. There was no likelihood of illness aboard or want of supplies, for Portland was within an hour's sail. The signal seemed to be for the Hope—George's yacht—for he was much nearer than any other vessel to the boat that had signaled. Something must be wrong aboard of her.

George pointed the Hope to incline toward the signaling yacht. When the flag was righted it had been done in a hurry, as though some one was offended that it had been put up union down. Perhaps persons were aboard who needed assistance. If so it behooved the skipper of the Hope to keep a sharp lookout and be on his guard at the same time.

In the course of an hour the Hope was sailing directly astern of the yacht and about a mile distant. Cy Barker was on the forecastle and sang out that there was a woman's sunshade floating on the water ahead. George put the Hope on a line with it, and on reaching it Cy picked it up. It had been used to buoy a bottle containing a note written in a woman's hand:

> Help! I am kidnaped by my guardian, who is taking me to an insane asylum.
> EMMA BORLAND.

"Here's an adventure and no mistake," said George to Cy. "I've counted three men on the yacht, and we don't know how many more there are, but we've got guns and ammunition enough to sink her, and we must effect a rescue. She's evidently not going into Portland; she'll probably lose herself among the islands to the eastward—that is, if she's trying to throw any one off the track. We must catch her before dark or lose her. Get up the ammunition for the two foreward barkers and load them."

George put on all his power and gained rapidly on the yacht, whose name—the Swallow—now appeared on her stern. She did not seem to fear the Hope till George sent a shot after her, which he aimed to go a cable's length to the starboard, and then so great was the surprise of her crew that they didn't seem to know what to do. But presently another shot, still nearer, caused them to shut off their power. George when he came within hailing distance did the same.

"What do you want?" was called from the Swallow.

"The person of Emma Borland."

"On what authority?"

"On the authority of myself. Send her to me in a boat or I'll rake you fore and aft. I've three big guns aboard."

There was evidently a prolonged consultation on the Swallow. What was said, whatever their reasons for assenting to his demand, George did not know, but presently a boat put out and was pulled for the Hope. George and Cy kept it covered with rifles. When it came alongside there sat a very pretty girl and her maid. George helped them aboard, the boat pulled back to the Swallow, and she sailed away.

Miss Borland had got one of the crew, who was at the wheel, on her side, and he permitted her to hoist a distress signal.

George took the women to Portland and engaged a lawyer for Miss Borland, who had no difficulty in establishing her sanity. Her guardian left for parts unknown and has not been since heard from.

George now runs a much finer yacht than the Hope, but it required the fortune of Emma Borland to buy and run it. She gave it to him with herself for the inestimable service he had done her.

A Satisfied Eulogy.

The Hon. Frank Oliver is not the man to hand out undiluted compliments. Therefore, when he met a Toronto journalist on the Ottawa train and began to praise his work it was time for that journalist to be modest.

"Your article criticizing Laurier was a brilliant piece of writing," said the Hon. Frank. "I can go further and say that it was an amazing production."

"Yes," said the journalist, puffing out his chest and waiting for more.

"Perfectly amazing!" said Mr. Oliver. "There isn't another man in Canada who could have done it."

"How's that?" asked the journalist, now swollen with pride.

"Well," said the member for Edmonton, "there isn't another man in Canada mean enough." — Saturday Night.

CLEANING HATS.

Oxalic Acid In Solution Gives Good Results For Fine Straws.

A panama hat is a delightful accessory to one's summer wardrobe. It may be cleaned or bleached repeatedly. A teaspoonful of oxalic acid to a pint of lukewarm water will safely clean a panama, leghorn, milan and other light straw hats. Oxalic acid is poisonous and must be kept away from children.

Apply to the hat with a soft brush or sponge. Clean only a small portion at a time and then rub off as much moisture as possible with a clean white cloth, as in this way there will be less tendency of the hat losing its shape.

Go over the entire hat carefully and when partly dry press with a moderately hot iron over a muslin cloth. Lemon juice may be used instead of the oxalic acid with good results.

PURE BLOOD MEANS HEALTH

Pure Blood Can Best be Obtained Through Dr. Williams Pink Pills

If people would realize the importance of keeping the blood rich and pure there would be less sickness. The blood is the means through which the nourishment gained from food reaches the different parts of the body. If the blood is impure the nourishment that reaches the nerves, bone and muscles is tainted with poison and disease follows. The blood is also the medium by which the body fights off disease. If the blood is thin and watery the power of resistance to disease is weakened. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up the blood. They increase the ability of the body to resist disease. They strengthen the nerves, increase the appetite, cure headache, backache, and any disease caused by thin or impure blood.

If you are suffering and your blood is thin or impure, there is a large probability that your condition is caused by the condition of your blood. You should study your own case. If you lack ambition, are short of breath after slight exercise, are pale or sallow, have no appetite, are not refreshed by sleep, if you have backache or headache, rheumatic pains or stomach trouble, the treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is worth investigating. You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Wheat prices today failed to maintain a rally which started after the market had fallen to a level 12c a bushel under the high point of Saturday last. The close was nervous at the same as last night to 3-4c down. Corn finished a shade to 1-4c off, oats with a gain of 1-4c to 5-8c and provisions varying from 40c decline to an advance of $1.10.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—Trading in futures was light and prices were weak. Wheat opened 1c to 1½c lower, oats ½c to ¼c and flax unchanged to 1c down. Weather conditions were more satisfactory and the demand easing off generally with heavy receipts and lower prices at Liverpool and Paris all being factors. The decline continued until near noon, when a rally occurred of around 1c, closing figures being 1c to 1½c lower.

Cash demand was quiet for all grades of wheat, except No. 3 northern, and offerings were plentiful, farmers being disposed to sell in greater volume. Demand for cash oats was fair, with offerings light; barley was also in demand, while flax was quiet. Exporters were buying moderately.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—There was some enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, but as the prices bid were far out of line no business resulted. The top price made for No. 1 northern so far has been 47s per quarter from Leith, while the bids today from Manchester were only 43s 6d. The local grain market was quiet, with no further change in prices to note. The local trade in flour continues fairly active, but the export demand was quiet today on account of the weaker wheat markets of late. Millfeed is fairly active and firm. Demand for butter for local account is fair and sales of some round lots were made at firm prices. Cheese is dull and the tone of the market is much easier at lower prices.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Sheep—Receipts, 13,000; market, higher; native, $5.25 to $6.10; yearlings, $5.90 to $6.65; lambs, native, $6.75 to $8.40.

Germans Using Dum-dums.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—President Poincare of France has cabled to President Wilson that Emperor William is attempting to shift the responsibility for the use by Germany of dum-dum bullets, practically since the outbreak of the war.

Belgians Pursue Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Ghent says that Belgian troops are pursuing a German army corps, which is marching towards France. An engagement has taken place on the right bank of the Scheldt in the triangle formed by Audenard, Courtrai and Renaix.

The Germans are said to have completely evacuated the region of the Scheldt between Antwerp and Ghent. Many German soldiers detached from their units are being made prisoners in the environs of Termonde.

THE PRESS ON THE WAR

TWO OPENINGS.

The North and South Americas are separated today by a constructive work which brings them together. Europe is joined today in a destructive work which tears it apart.

We open the Panama Canal.

Europe opens its greatest battle.

For ten years we have worked with the dredge. For ten years Europe has worked with the cannon. The workers are now in the harvest.—Chicago Tribune.

LOOKING AHEAD.

After this war, we hope that not only the terror but the tyranny will vanish; that Europe will be not only safe, but free, or at least that freedom will receive a new and mighty impetus. "Rule Britannia" and the Marseillaise hymn will become not only national anthems, but anthems of all the free and the lovers of freedom in every country in the world.—Toronto Star.

HOW THE WAR STARTED.

History will hold the German emperor responsible for the war in Europe. Austria wanted Servia and proposed to take it; and Germany undertook to prevent other European powers from interfering. While the burglar enters the house and takes possession, his confederate keeps watch outside and warns the neighbors not to interfere.—The Outlook, New York.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Napoleon the Great could say, "What is the death of a million men to me?"—and yet the closing years at St. Helena were given over chiefly to the attempt to prove that he had not been the aggressor in the great wars. He was afraid of public opinion, and well he might be; public opinion had pulled him down. When Europe realized what Napoleon's ambition meant to it, the overwhelming coalition were formed against him.—Kansas City Times.

UP-TO-DATE BARBARISM.

A government which could make such an offer as that made to Britain last week and launch such an aggression as that launched at Belgium this week, does not represent any civilization, German or other. It represents a survival of immoral and barbarous forces, which in the long run Europe must inevitably have had to subdue or to go under.—London Chronicle.

POWERS WARN TURKEY.

Abrogation of Treaty Rights of Foreigners Is Condemned.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Rome correspondent of the Havas Agency says that despatches from Constantinople announce that the foreign Ambassadors, including the German representative, yesterday informed the Turkish Government that the powers could not accept abolition of the treaty rights accorded foreigners.

Mine Destroyed Torpedo Boat.

ROME, Sept. 12.—(Via London.)—According to The Tribuna, an Austrian torpedo boat has been blown up near Fasana, 52 miles north of Trieste, in Austria, after striking a mine.

A number of wounded Austrians, who have arrived in Trieste, state that during the battle of Lemberg all the Austrian officers of three battalions fled, leaving the battalions in the woods, where they were annihilated. Only fifty men escaped.

ALLIANCE AGAINST TURKEY.

Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece Will Fight If Ottoman Empire Does.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — Telegraphing from Rome a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph declares he has learned from diplomatic sources that Roumania, Greece and Bulgaria have signed an agreement which may be regarded as a real alliance, under the terms of which these three nations engage to interfere whenever necessary in order to prevent Turkey aiding Germany and Austria in the present war. If Turkey remains neutral, however, these three states will do the same.

It is reported in Rome, the correspondent continues, that Berlin has become resigned to the idea of Italian neutrality, but she is determined that Italy as least shall remain neutral until the end.

Kaiser's Son Not Wounded.

PARIS, Sept. 12. — A Fournier Agency despatch says that Prince Joachim, the sixth son of Emperor William, was wounded on Sept. 9th by a fragment of shrapnel, which passed through his thigh without breaking a bone. He is 24 years old.

A Reuter despatch to London from Amsterdam last night reported that the Prince Joachim who had been wounded in the thigh, was the son of the late Prince Frederick Albert, regent of Brunswick.

French In Muhlhausen.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — Despatches from Basle, Switzerland, state that the French have recaptured Muhlhausen, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Rome.

Despatches from French sources recently have stated that the pressure on the Alsace frontier from the Germans had been lessening. A report was received Thursday that fighting had occurred at Altkirch, Alsace, which is on the road to Muhlhausen.

Belgian Hero's Feat.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A despatch to The Daily Mail received yesterday from Antwerp says that a Belgian, single-handed, captured a German train loaded with food, arms and ammunition, together with six hundred German soldiers.

Noticing that the engineer of the train which had halted was temporarily absent, the Belgian jumped into the cab and drove the train to Lierre, where he turned it over to the Belgian troops.

MEN ON THE LINE OF BATTLE FIGHT ON FULL STOMACH; BILL 'O' FARE IS VARIED

London, Sept. 12. — "Every man on the battle line will fight on a full stomach," said Lord Kitchener at the outbreak of hostilities with the Germans, and the publication of Tommy's menu shows plainly that England's war minister has made good his word. Every soldier is allowed a pound and a half of bacon and beef per day; a pound and a half of bread with cheese or jam; two ounces of tobacco; and, much to the surprise of the more radical section of the people, a generous allowance of rum. Lord Kitchener, when commanding operations in South Africa, learned that when hard fighting or marches have to be undertaken, or when troops have to remain for long hours without protection in wet weather, that the rum stimulates Tommy to his best effort. It also minimizes the risk of chills.

Paris, Sept. 12.—Here is the daily bill-of-fare of the French private soldier in the field:

Vegetable soup made from an ounce and a half of mashed vegetables; army biscuits, 20 ounces; rice (or beans), 20 ounces; fresh meat, 12 ounces; coffee, three-fourths of an ounce; sugar, one ounce; or a total food allowance of nearly three pounds a day.

Extras, including fresh vegetables and occasionally wine, are allowed when the commissary department can purchase such supplies on the march.

Every soldier in the field carries in his knapsack one day's rations for emergency use. These rations consist of ten ounces of army biscuit, ten ounces canned meat, one ounce condensed soup, two ounces coffee, and three ounces sugar.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SONS ENLIST

LONDON, Sept. 12—Richard Lloyd George, the eldest son of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, enlisted yesterday in the Portmadoc battalion of the Carnarvonshire Territorials, for active service. His younger brother Gwelyn Lloyd George, has been commissioned as a lieutenant in the same battalion.

Many a timid man gives another credit for his own ideas because he isn't sure of their merits.

WAR AND NEWSPAPER PROFITS

There is a widespread notion among the public that the present war will prove immensely profitable to the newspapers, says the Journal of Commerce. The public see the enormous demand for extras and erroneously conclude that this great demand is profitable to the papers. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The cost of obtaining news at a time like this is greater than at ordinary times, while the revenue of a paper shrinks to a marked degree. Cable and telegraphic tolls mount up at a rapid rate, and as no paper could hope for patronage unless it gave war news, it means that the papers must undergo an extra heavy outlay to provide this news. On the other hand, advertising is a controllable expense. At a time like this, when business men are curtailing and cutting down to the last cent, advertising is one of the first items to be cut off, and this means that the revenue of a paper is seriously interfered with.

In 1913 the Associated Press of the United States and Canada expended $2,800,000 to supply their papers with the world's news. Of that amount, about $250,000 was spent in the maintenance of foreign bureaus, correspondent and cable tolls. During the war these items will cost many times the amount expended in 1913. In addition to the amount expended for the Associated Press, which supplies 895 newspapers in North America, there are many other news gathering agencies, which brings the total omount expended for the world's news to a very large figure.

Glancing back over the events of the year, we find a large number of important developments, which, taking place, all of them requiring heavy expenditure on the part of the newspapers. The Mexican situation, which led to a threatened rupture with the United States, for months occupied the front page of the newspapers. Then came the Empress disaster, and now the crowning event of the year in the shape of a great European war. The cable despatches, the expenses of keeping correspondents and offices in Europe, and other heavy drains are so enormous as to seriously cut down the profits of the newspapers.

The press cable rate from Paris to New York is 25c a word, from London 7c. The cable rate from Japan and China are from 42c to 45c a word. When the public are demanding whole pages of cabled news, it is not a difficult task to find out where the newspaper publishers' profit goes. Any enterprising reader who cares to take the time, can figure out for himself the cost of a column of cabled war news.

NEW GOVERNMENT DAM AT FENELON FALLS COMPLETED

Fenelon Falls, Ont., Sept. 12. — The new Government dam just above the falls is now almost completed, and is a most decided improvement on the old wooden structure that served in its place for so many years. The length of the new dam is 325 feet between the abutments. It consists of twelve large piers, with grooves in either side for holding thes top-logs. A platform runs from end to end above the sluices, connecting the piers. The platform and piers are built entirely of reinforced concrete. On the platform a track is laid for the purpose of conveying the machinery necessary for adjusting the stop-logs.

In the construction of the dam about two thousand barrels of cement and twenty-five hundred cubic yards of gravel were used. Altogether $47,000 has been granted for the work by the Government, but with the improvements on the original plans and other necessary expenditures above the estimates that are almost inevitable in connection with works of this kind, it is safe to say the total cost will be $50,000.

The completed work reflects great credit on Mr. Alex. Spence, of Peterboro, who has had charge of the work for the Government, and also on the contractors, Messrs. McPhee & Kehoe of Brechin.

BABE FELL INTO PAIL OF BOILING WATER WHILE MOTHER WAS ABSENT

Lindsay, Sept. 12.—Very sad and heart-rending are the facts concerning the death of Gladys Thompson, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Thompson, of Cameron, which occurred Thursday, after a few hours' illness. The young babe was unfortunate enough to fall into a pail of boiling water the day previous, the severe burns causing her untimely death.

It appears that it was wash day, and it was while the babe's mother was absent for a few minutes that the young tot fell backwards into the boiling water.

Dr. Ray was summoned and discovered that the child was badly burned about the back. Everything possible was done to relieve the sufferings of the baby, but to no avail, and little Gladys, the pet of the family, died the following day about noon hour. The funeral took place to-day.

A high temperature cement, which is said to work as well as fire brick in temperatures between 1,500 and 3,100, has been invented.

ROYAL CANADIAN ENGINEERS HAVE ESTABLISHED NEW WORLD'S RECORD IN BRIDGE BUILDING

The history of the establishment of Valcartier military camp is a record of remarkable engineering achievements. Within a few days the Canadian Northern Railway transformed an insignificant flag station, serving a small Irish Colony, into an important terminal point with twenty miles of railway sidings, giving a splendid impetus to the establishment of the camp and expediting the movement of the men and materials which went to make this city of thirty thousand souls.

And now comes news of a bridge-building record made by the men of the Royal Canadian Engineers under the direction of Major W. Bethune Lindsay of Winnipeg. The Jacques Cartier River separates the main camp from the artillery practice grounds at the base of Mounts Ileene and Irene. Across this 350 feet of waterway the Royal Canadian Engineers built, within four hours, a barrel-pier pontoon bridge, capable of carrying heavy batteries. The Major and his three hundred men worked with that well ordered efficiency which characterizes the efforts of the British bred. The race for the record started with the Canadian Northern Railway. The materials—barrels, planking, etc., were freighted on to the ground with remarkable despatch. The casks were made watertight, the timber was made ready, the twenty foot bank cut down to provide an easy grade for traffic and the actual test was on.

There was never a hitch. One party of men lashed the barrels to the heavy planks, and, as soon as that operation was complete, another party lifted the pier and carried it down the bank. Another squad of men conveyed it on to the water, where it was taken in charge by still another party and floated out to the front line. The pier was drawn quickly into position, and as many men as could work with freedom soon had the flooring spiked. The actual bridging commenced at eight o'clock; the span was complete at ten minutes after twelve. The extra ten minutes were accounted for by the fact that on one or two occasions passing bodies of other troops necessitated a temporary cessation of carrying operations.

Col. Burstall, Director of Artillery at the camp visited the work during the morning and expressed his astonishment at the progress effected. Ordinarily it is a good day's work to throw a bridge of this class across a three hundred foot stream. Col. G. G. Marshall, Director General of Engineering Service in Canada, who is attached to headquarters at Ottawa, also paid close attention to the task and was vastly pleased with the result. Col. Morrison, Ottawa, of the Artillery Service hurried a gun across the bridge when completed, establishing its efficiency at once. Without doubt the brother officers of Major Lindsay, in all branches of the service were extremely gratified at the efficiency and despatch of the men making up the Royal Canadian Engineers at the big camp.

UNEMPLOYED SEE CITY ENGINEER

Has Over Fifty Names in the Waiting List

WORK STARTS MONDAY

Foley and Gleeson Co. will make a start on Monday morning by preparing the roadbed for the paving. It will be but a matter of a few days till their plant will be on hand.

City Engineer Parsons is a very busy man these days, receiving a steady string of unemployed. Already he has over 50 names on his list, and of these 10 have been given employment.

As yet no word has been received from the Foley and Gleeson Co. as to whether or not they have the blocks for the street car tracks, which would permit the work on Charlotte street from Bethune to Park being immediately executed.

By subsidizing companies that will bore for them the Italian government is fostering a search for the petroleum deposits that are believed to exist in that country.

BOTH MEN COMMITTED

Barr and Rose Will be Tried at Fall Assizes

As a result of the preliminary enquiry yesterday and which was concluded to-day, on the evidence given in the case of Bernard Smith, who was the victim of the "short change" artists, Charles Rose and William Barr, Magistrate Dumble committed Barr for trial at the fall assizes, and discharged Rose.

In the case of Edward Robinson, of Toronto, who was the loser for another fifteen dollars, Rose was committed for trial and Barr discharged.

In the case of John C. Kyle, who was the loser of twenty dollars, Barr was committed and Rose discharged.

In the case of Fred McKeown, who lost eighty dollars as a result of the short changing, Barr was committed and Rose discharged.

These men will come up at the fall assizes on September 15 before Mr. Justice Britton.

Evidence other than that reported yesterday was given as follows:

Fred McKeown was the next witness, who testified to knowing Barr, but he did not recognize Rose. He boarded the train at Toronto for Rochester recently, and soon afterwards went to sleep, and did not awake until the train stopped at Peterboro. On awaking he found Barr in the seat beside him, and he worked the short change game on him, only for a larger amount than heretofore. McKeown gave Barr $100, and on the old trick being worked he only received twenty dollars in change, and thus he was out eighty dollars.

John C. Kyle, of Toronto, on August 8th, was on the 12:30 C. P. R. train at Hamilton, and Barr was sitting opposite him. Soon, Barr moved across the aisle and sat down beside him and requested Kyle to change some money for him. Kyle gave him thirty dollars, and, on counting his change, found he only had twenty-nine dollars. Barr then counted the money and then agreed that there was only twenty-nine dollars, so he made up the deficit with four quarters, and handed back the roll, but in the meantime he had worked his old sleight-of-hand trick and when Kyle again counted his roll he had only ten dollars. In the meantime, of course, Barr had disappeared. Kyle had in the transaction been short-changed twenty dollars.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LABOR AGAINST LIBERALISM.

Editor Review;

Sir,—Australia now furnishes another instance of the overthrow of Liberalism by Labor. The government of Australia has been for years Liberal, but the Laborites have been gaining upon them. The returns of the last election are: Labor, 41; Liberal, 33; Independent, 1. Apparently the Conservative and Labor party are identical, as no return is made for Conservatives. In the Senate Labor has 32 and the Liberals only 4. The Labor party owes its triumph to the fact that it stands for control in its broadest sense, just as all civilization, all government and all business is controlled. Labor would also infuse a little heart into the situation. Liberalism has for its motto "Freedom of Trade," or "Freedom from Control"—no matter what conscience and common sense may suggest. It is a determination to let those who can, get possession of the business of the people and of its resources. The last battle to be fought in this world will be between those two theories. With all its faults, Conservatism believes in accommodating itself to the needs of the country, regardless of theories. Its motto is "To prove all things and to hold fast that which is good." The Liberal party in Canada, as elsewhere, does not believe in this principle, and states that all apparent benefits of any theory of control are temporary and in the end not benefits but injuries. It maintains that the freedom of the individual, as against the state, is necessarily paramount. In a word, that freedom of trade is the only possible method of trade. Strange to say, the whole theory of government is founded upon what is directly the opposite of this. If people of a community or a nation were allowed perfect freedom, the strong would naturally oppress the weak. It is said that the strong should not oppress the weak. That is true, but it is also true that the government of a people by itself should not be left to the whims or to the good or bad quality of any portion of the people. A just and good system, by which a fair balance of trade and employment and opportunity is maintained, is a goal to which both Labor and Conservatism tend, and so long as Liberlism sticks to the madness of uncontrolled or free trade, so long will it put a premium upon the strong nations of the world, as against the weak. We see that the United States has now cornered the Argentine meat trade. The Globe of Wednesday shows that this has been done. Unless the governing powers smash this corner, the people will be at the mercy of the meat men. Yet Liberals hold that free trade permits of world-wide importation and is the death of corners. This nonsense we see now to be not only nonsense, but much worse. Corners or monopolies are only so much the worse for being world-wide. The Standard Oil Co. has a monopoly the world over. The United States meat men are establishing a monopoly the world over, and so it goes. The only remedy is not freedom of trade, but state control, and we have at the present moment a plain instance in the midst of war at the most critical time in the nation's history, when government control is not only necessary but the only possible way. We have the only effective remedy which we could adopt. Any man who would preach freedom of trade as applied to a nation's business at such a time as this, might well be laughed at. Why is such a creed any worse now than at any other time? The truth is that it is not. We are tending, as the common sense of the world increases and the power of money is restrained, towards a great principle of national and international adjustment, by which the strong will not be allowed freedom or license to combine to enslave the weak, and we will see repeated elsewhere what has lately occurred in Australia. We will see the Labor party, which has risen in Germany from 12,000 15 years ago to nearly 5,000,000 in the number of votes in 1913. We see a solid block of over 400 Labor men violently opposed to Liberalism in the British House. We will see the same elsewhere in the course of time, and the upshot will be, not freedom, which means opportunity for the wicked or the strong, but control, which means freedom and fair-dealing for all.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

STOP THE WAR.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Several of our most prominent citizens have for years been stinting themselves the necessaries of life and inducing their friends to do so, and with the money saved been laying up arms and ammunition, with the definite purpose of taking offensive and defensive action one upon the other.

Yesterday, one of the strongest, thinging the time opportune, begun the fight, and first destroyed an inoffensive neighbor who asked only to be left alone.

Today half the city is in mortal combat and the loss of life and property is irreparable. Business is disorganized and all are suffering.

"Ah!" you say, "such a thing could not be in a civilized city."

In international affairs that is just the situation today.

Man has swept such conditions out of the life of city and nation. We settle our disputes and control the unruly through a municipal and a higher court with police support.

Internationally we have another step to go.

The spirit of the age is progress.

If the nations had no armies and no ships of war there could be no war.

Then abolish national armaments the world over, establish an international court of arbitration and support it with an international force on land and sea.

Every civilized nation has accepted in theory the principle of arbitration but impractically as the carnage in Europe now is showing.

Let this great fight be to complete the work. Now is the psycological moment.

Since last May this platform has been fully endorsed, in personal interview, by clergy representing every Christian communion in this city, and also by business and professional men.

It has also been accepted by one church congress representing Toronto and including this city.

It can be endorsed by the whole people and as you endorse it so will governments act upon it.

This is an open letter particularly addressed to the clergy, the Board of Trade, the Trades and Labor Council, and the women's organizations, to confer on ways and means of a campaign to extend to the widest bounds of our influence.

The end of an epoch of might against right would be a happy augury for the era to come.

Yours sincerely,
JOSEPH S. BELL.

JUST PLAIN W. A. BAILEY.

Editor Review,

Sir,—In order to correct a misapprehension, permit me the courtesy of your columns to say that I am not the Kaiser. I was never even on friendly terms with any alien enemy of this or any other country. Humbly, I deny also that I belong to the British Empire. Just an English exile, at the mercy of blackmailers, confidence men and daylight robbers.

Yours,
W. A. BAILEY.

CONTEST FOR BETTER BABIES

Editor Review:

Dear Sir, — The Woman's Local council are holding a "better baby contest" next October. These contests have been held in many of the cities of England, Canada and the United States, and are a scientific movement towards the bettering of babies. They have the endorsation of governments and boards of health and aim to lessen the mortality among infants. The better baby contest is the scientific examination of babies through a series of mental and physical tests. There is no favoritism, because each baby is tested by the aid of a score card. Covering the entire mental and physical development, from the sturdiness and straightness of the limbs to the ability to grasp objects in his chubby hands, a fine, healthy, well developed baby may score 1000 points. These points are divided as follows: 200 for mental test, which proves whether the baby takes proper notice of what goes on around him, walks, sits up and speaks properly, and shows a mental growth to correspond with his age; 100 points for weight and measurements, which prove whether baby is well porportioned for his age; 500 for physical development, sturdy bones, smooth skin, good digestion, circulation and respiration; 115 for mouth and teeth; 85 for eye, ear, nose and throat tests. All these tests are made by a doctor, and it takes a pretty fine baby to score over 90 per cent. in this new kind of a baby contest. A small baby is just as likely to take a prize as a large one, if well proportioned and healthy. Parents should be alive to the opportunities which the contest offers for the scientific examination of their children, and the conferences with physicians and nurses on child life and development.

As a rule, parents think more of what can be learned at the better baby contest for the good of their children, than of the prizes, but just to make it more interesting, prizes are offered as follows:

A prize for the best boy or girl baby from 6 months to 12 months.

A prize for the best boy or girl baby from 12 months to 24 months.

A prize for the best boy or girl baby from 24 months to 36 months.

The Woman's Home Companion also gives a bronze medal to the highest scoring boy or girl, beautifully engraved, diploma to prizewinners, and a certificate of examination to every baby examined.

In addition the examiner has offered a special prize to the highest scoring twins. Enrolment of babies will begin at the public library on Sept 21 from 3 to 5 p.m. Enrolment closes Sept. 26.

Female Child is Found in Jungle

In the jungle near Naina Tal a wild-looking creature, apparently a human female child, has been discovered. That she is human is proved by the fact that there are vaccination marks on both arms, but exposure to the elements has caused a thick growth of hair down each side of the face and spine, which makes her appearance more like that of a monkey than a human being.

There is evidence to show that she has always walked upright, but her sitting posture is that of a monkey, as are all her actions. She was very frightened when first caught, and cried and whimpered. She would eat only grass and raw potatoes, but later was induced to take bread and milk.

She is, of course, unable to talk, but there is no doubt that she can hear. Every indication points to the conclusion that she was abandoned in infancy, and that monkeys were her foster parents.

The natives in the bazaar, however, declare that the child was reared by bears. The discovery has caused great interest to scientists in India.

At present the child is in the Naina Tal hospital.

LOCAL CAMPAIGN FOR THE PATRIOTIC RELIEF FUND

The several committees are at work perfecting their organizations for an energetic campaign for the next two weeks.

No. one polling sub-division start work by a personal appeal addressed to each household in that portion of the town, these are to be delivered this afternoon. Their letter is as follows:—

Patriotic Relief Fund.

Peterboro, Sept. 11th, 1914.

Dear Sir,—The objects of this fund are:—

1st. To assist the families of men who have volunteered to go to the front to fight our battles, and to represent we who, from necessity stay at home.

2nd. To assist those who may be in want or distress through the war, such as the present large number of unemployed.

The families of our soldiers are allowed $20.00 per month by the Government and they also will, no doubt, assign a portion of their pay to their wives and families, so that it will be up to the people of this city to add to this amount whatever is necessary to have all their families live in a comfortable manner. This is not charity but our plain duty.

The families of our unemployed must be supported and kept from actual want or distress, this is our duty, and we assure you this fund will be so administered that only those who are worthy will be assisted.

The committee recognize that owing to the prevailing hard times it will not be possible for people to give as their hearts would dictate. There are those who wish to pledge a weekly amount for the winter also those who may not be able to give at the moment but will promise to make a donation sometime during the fall or winter. We on behalf of the relief committee and those who are to be assisted, will be as thankful for the poor man's dollar as for the rich man's hundreds.

Remember the widow's mite, its cheerful giver and the blessing that followed it. In Toronto last week a poor man gave a street car ticket. this was auctioned off for $1,000, surely God's blessing rests with those who deny themselves to help others.

The committee will call upon you some time during the next two weeks. Contributions may also be handed to any member of the committee.

Yours faithfully,
R. E. Layfield.

"THE SPENDTHRIFT"

With Miss Louise Price Here Next Week — A Capable Cast and Production

At the Grand Opera House Thursday, Sept. 17th, theatregoers will have the opportunity of seeing the latest New York dramatic sensation "The Spendthrift." It is from the pen of Porter Emerson Browne, whose "A Fool There Was" first brought him into prominence as a playwright.

Mr. Browne's play deals with a silly, vain and extravagant woman who is, of course, pretty, kittenish and lovable. Her sole enjoyment in life is culled from society and she believes that her social position should be kept intact at all hazards.

She loves her husband in her indolent, light and playful fashion. Is he not the brain power of the machine that grinds out her money? To attempt to argue or reason with such a woman is useless. She is not, however, a bad woman, but thoughtless and selfish. Her extravagances have landed her husband in bankruptcy. The home, the motors, the servants—all must go. To save herself, and as she believes, her husband, Richard, she borrows the necessary sum and lies to him about it. The lie arouses the suspicions of her husband. He forces a scene with the man and the wife, frightened at the upheaval she has brought about, escapes from the house. For five months she learns a hard bitter lesson. She discovers that there are other ambitions than social honors. In fact, it is a new woman whom the husband finds in an attic room, thoroughly repentant, and willing to lead the new and better life which he offers.

Throughout the play, there is a pretty little love story between the wife's sister and the husband's brother, to prove the assertion that the home built on the cornerstone of true love and sacrifice, will become the home of happiness. Louise Price will appear as the frivolous wife and Murray Barnard as the indulgent husband. Mable Monroe will be the little sister who, early in her career, discovers where true happiness lies. Alice Johnson will be the aunt Gretchen (Hetty Green dramatized), an old woman "with one foot in the grave and the other in Wall Street." The other characters are in the hands of capable actors.

BICYCLISTS ARE CARELESS AT THE BUSY CORNERS

Bicyclists should all have bells on their bicycles and give ample warning when approaching a corner where people are crossing over. Yesterday a little school girl was crossing the street, when a rapidly moving bicycle just grazed her clothing, and to-day a young man was nearly run down in the same manner. In both cases the bicycles were going at a good pace and did not have any means of giving a warning.

Very often a person being knocked down by a bicycle will be subject to just as much injury as if it were an automobile or some other means of conveyance. And too much care cannot be exercised by pedestrians when crossing the street at any time, but when a warning is not given by a silently moving bicycle it is not fair to the pedestrian.

FORMAL OPENING OF TURNBULL CO.

The Turnbull Co. will have the formal opening of their new store on next Thursday evening, the first night of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition. The hours will be from 7.30 till 10 o'clock, and it is expected that the citizens and the visitors will readily accept the first opportunity to inspect the handsome headquarters of the above firm.

The top floor is not quite completed, but the basement will be in readiness. In the latter department it is the intention to sell china, granitewear, tinware, etc. Extensive preparations are now under way, so as to make the formal opening a very large event.

HERE AND THERE

Perhaps the high price of wheat will ensure a large growth next season, even if patriotic motives do not.

* * *

That scheme of putting the ban on German patents is working in Germany quite as well as in England and Canada. Many English patents have been usurped by that country. Still it's not to be wondered at.

* * *

Austria started out, but doesn't know whether to finish or not.

* * *

The German reports always says: "Germans retired in good order."

* * *

Working for the German navy is like being out of a job.

* * *

Count Von Bernstoff has said that the war is practically over. He means all over Europe.

* * *

England and France have a pretty good percentage in the hit column, with few errors, but some how or other Germany is making the runs even if she is making some raw errors.

* * *

The Kaiser has changed his mind about dining in Paris. Guess he thought they might serve him paris green for a dessert.

* * *

President Wilson has called the attention of Chairman Turnbull of the necessity of giving the railroads every possible help.

* * *

Investigate! Perhaps the commodity you are manufacturing is going to be a scarcity on the market in the near future. If so now's the time to get it made up.

* * *

Financial circles are regaining much of their old time confidence.

* * *

Prince Albert is doing fine, and will soon be able to be up and doing.

* * *

He came, saw and conquered. Who did? Not the Kaiser.

* * *

Christy Mathewson is still writing baseball dope after that beating Rudolph handed him. Still Christy doesn't mind a little thing like that.

* * *

Perhaps "Matty" can sing this refrain with some feeling:

"Darling I am growing old,
Silver threads among the gold."

* * *

That old saying that "no news is good news" has fallen flat. We don't know whether the censors are cutting it down or not. Must hear good and bad.

* * *

Is the Kaiser getting "cold feet?" The boys at Valcartier are complaining in this direction. We mean in a literal sense.

* * *

Still they are arriving from Europe, and some of the U. S. millionaires are being "held up" for their passage as never before.

* * *

The opinion is that there are more funds and talk about them in Canada than in any other country on the planet. It's all right, those funds are doing good work now, and are going to continue to do so. More power to the giver and worker!

OBITUARY

MRS. HANNAH LARONDE.

The death took place this morning of Mrs. Hannah Laronde, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hupie, 743 Water St. The deceased had lived here nearly all her life. Her death will be a great shock to her many friends who held her in high esteem. She was 72 years of age.

Left to mourn her loss are two daughters, Mrs. Hupie and Miss Josie, both of Peterboro, and three sons, Joseph, Toronto, and Michael and Frank of this city.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at nine o'clock, to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

DEATH OF MRS. L. S EDNEY AT HAMILTON

Many friends and acquaintances in Peterboro, will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. L. S. Edney, who passed away at Hamilton yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Edney left Peterboro this summer, Mr. Edney having resigned his position as manager of the carpet department at the Cressman Co., Ltd., to accept a position in Hamilton. Mrs. Edney underwent an operation for throat trouble on Monday in the general hospital.

Women's Pains

"I received your sample of Zutoo Tablets, and took them for severe pain (monthly) and headache. At the end of 30 minutes I was entirely free from pain and experienced no more throughout the period. I suffer a great deal at these times and feel grateful that I now have a remedy which affords quick relief. Every woman in the land should know about Zutoo Tablets and what they will do."

WENT TO LINDSAY TO GET LIQUOR

So Runs the Story of Black-lister

In to-day's police court Herbert Lundy, a blacklister, was charged with being drunk in Peterboro yesterday. Lundy admitted being drunk, but said he got the booze in Lindsay, leaving Peterborough around noon yesterday on a passenger train for Lindsay, and arriving in Peterborough again about 9 o'clock, by way of a freight train. An officer of the law testified to having seen Lundy in this city about 5 o'clock, and, later on, about 7.45, he was drunk and was promptly arrested.

There are apparently two sides to the case, and the police are anxious to know whether he was supplied with liquor in this city, consequently the case was remanded for one week, in which time matters will be investigated.

Speedy Growth of Britain's Army

Premier Asquith Pays a Warm Tribute to the War Office

1,200,000 MEN IN FIELD

London, Sept. 12. — The House of Commons unanimously agreed to increasing the army by 500,000 men. In requesting it, Premier Asquith paid a warm tribute to the War Office organisation and dealt also with the various difficulties connected with the rush of recruits. Measures had been taken, he said, to meet the congestion. These included an allowance of 75 cents a day to those for whom no accommodation could be found in the barracks. If the grant were passed he was sure that the response would be no less keen and ample than was that to the first levy. He should then be in a position to put something like 1,200,000 men in the field.

Worthy of Sacrifice.

That was the provision of the Mother Country herself, exclusive of territorials, the national reserve and the magnificent contributions promised from India and the dominions. It was an effort worthy of a great sacrifice.

When the Government's plans are completed the British army for the continent and home service will consist roughly of the following: Regular army, 1,200,000; territorials, 300,000; reserves, 214,000; Indian contingent, 70,000; Canadian first and second contingents, 40,000; Australians, 20,000, and New Zealand 10,000, making a total of 1,854,000 men.

Mustn't Trade With Enemy.

The British Parliament is about to pass the "Trading with the Enemy Bill." Punishment for such trading is provided by a fine of £500 and 12 months' imprisonment on summary conviction, or penal servitude of from three to seven years on conviction or indictment. The bill deals a hard blow at companies financed by German capital but registered in England, many of which have been supplying Germany with foodstuffs and other commodities via Holland.

The airship America, with which Lieut. Porte was to have sailed to Europe, has been sold to England for a war plane for $25,000.

German Cruelty.

The Berlin newspaper Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, prints an article protesting against the cruel treatment of prisoners of war, and gives Herr Traub, a member of the Reichstag, as authority for the statement that a male nurse who wrote the last will of a dying French count was subjected to corporal punishment for so doing. It also quotes a report received from Liebenstein, Saxe-Meiningen, describing how a party of Belgian prisoners, being transported through the town, was attacked by a furious mob, which seized and lynched a priest who was among the prisoners, because he was accused of having incited the Belgian populace to commit atrocities on German soldiers.

According to a Munich report, the contingent from the Berlin garrison alone has lost 42,000 men killed or wounded.

What Germany Fares.

"Without reckoning on Belgium, Servia, and Japan," says M. Hanotaux, the French Academician, "a block of five hundred million men have decided to crush the German regency. If this number is insufficient, we shall see others join the compact, for the universe cannot be so blind as to allow a nation like Germany to threaten its independence."

According to the Paris Figaro, a great neutral power has requested the belligerents to guarantee the three capitals.

The German ships, Orlando, from Chili, and Goldbeck, from Tacoma, have been captured by British vessels in the Atlantic.

It Was Blackmail.

An Amsterdam report says that the Germans set fire to Termonde because they would not collect a levy of $200,000.

A large German aeroplane was shot at and brought down by Belgians at St. Ypen, East Flanders. The three officers in the machine proved to be well known experts from Krupp's.

Austrians have resumed a fierce bombardment of Belgrade.

Boy Scout Decorated By Belgian King

Paris, Sept. 11. — The hero of Belgium today is the Boy Scout Leysen, who has been decorated by King Albert for his valour and devotion to his country.

This young man, who was born at Liege, is described by The Figaro as of almost uncanny sharpness, with senses and perception as keen as a savage. He was able to find his way through the woods and pass the sentinels of the enemy with unerring accuracy.

Leysen made his way through the German lines from Antwerp for the tenth time last Sunday, carrying despatches to secret representatives of the Belgian Government in Brussels. He has discovered and denounced eleven German spies in Belgium and performed a variety of other services, and all without impairing his boyish simplicity.

WHAT KIAO CHAU IS

Kiao-Chau is a large inlet on the south side of the promontory of Shantung in China. In 1897 it was seized by the German fleet, and in the negotiations which followed it was arranged that the bay and the land on both sides of the entrance within certain defined lines should be leased to Germany for 99 years. This area was to be developed into a German settlement.

In April of 1898 the district was declared a protectorate of the German Empire.

During the continuance of the lease Germany exercises all the rights of territorial sovereignty, including the right to erect fortifications.

The bay is about 15 miles long, and the area leased is nearly 117 square miles in extent. The native population in the ceded area is about 60,000. The German Government in 1899 declared Kiau-chau a free port.

The territory, in which there are extensive coal fields, is about one-third the size of Mid-Lothian. Trade centres in Tsingtao, a town within the bay. The country in the neighborhood is mountainous and bare, but the lowlands are well cultivated. The value of the trade of the port during 1904 was £2,712,145 (£1,808,113 imports, and £904,032 exports.)

CAVALRY HEEDED NOT MURDEROUS FIRE FROM GUNS

Nineteenth Lancers Went Into Action Singing Like Schoolboys

London, Sept. 12.—The Rouen correspondent of the Mail sends a picturesque story of a great cavalry charge at Thuin, a town in Belgium near Charleroi, and the subsequent retreat to Compiegne. The story follows:

"On Monday morning, Aug. 24th, after chafing at the long delay, the second British cavalry brigade let loose at the enemy's guns. The 9th Lancers went into action singing and shouting like schoolboys. For a time all seemed well, few saddles were emptied, and the leaders had charged almost within reach of the enemy's guns, when suddenly the Germans opened a murderous fire from at least twenty concealed machine guns at a range of one hundred and fifty yards.

Rode Into Barbed Wire.

"The result was shattering, and the lancers caught the full force of the storm. Vicounte Vauvineux, a French cavalry officer, who rode with the brigade as interpreter, was killed. Capt. Letourey, who was the French master of a school in Devon, was riding by the side of Vauvineux and had a narrow escape, as his horse was shot from under him. Other officers also fell.

"While the bulk of the brigade swerved to the right the others held on and rode full tilt into wire entanglements buried in the grass thirty yards in front of the machine guns, and were made prisoners. Three regiments of the best cavalry in the British army went into the charge and suffered severely. The 18th Hussars and the 4th Dragoons also suffered but not to the same extent as the others.

Capt. Grenfell's Heroism.

"A happy feature of the charge was the gallant conduct of Captain Grenfell who, though twice wounded, called for volunteers and saved the guns. It is said that he has been recommended for the Victoria Cross.

"After this terrible ordeal, the British brigade was harassed for 14 days of retreat, the enemy giving them rest neither day nor night. At two o'clock each morning they were roused by artillery fire and every day they fought a retiring action, pursued relentlessly by the guns.

Wonderful Retreat.

"It was a wonderful retreat. Daily the cavalry begged to be allowed to go for the enemy in force to recover lost ground but only once were they permitted to taste that joy at the village of Lassigny, which they passed and repassed three times.

"The Germans made repeated efforts, which were always foiled, to capture the retreating transport. It had, however, many narrow escapes. At one point it escaped by a furious gallop which enabled the waggons to cross a bridge less than an hour ahead of the enemy. The engineers had mined the bridge and were waiting to blow it up.

Fortunate.

"They sent a hurry up call to the transport and the latter responded with alacrity. The bridge was blown up just in time to separate the two forces.

"At Compiegne the brigade for the first time saw and welcomed their French brothers in arms."

$100,000 in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 12. — A fund of $100,000 to aid widows and orphans of British soldiers killed in the present European war will be raised by the British Empire Association of Chicago. Several thousand dollars were subscribed at a meeting last night.

DR. ROBINSON GOES TO TRIAL

Preliminary Hearing Takes Place At Napanee

NAPANEE, Ont., Sept. 12. — The Town Hall here was packed before one o'clock, the hour set for the preliminary examination of Dr. C. K. Robinson of Tamworth, charged with the murder of Blanche Yorke.

The evidence was the findings of the coroner's jury at Tamworth, and these were put in and filed, as also was the report of Dr. Wilson, of Tamworth, and Dr. W. L. Connell, of Kingston, who performed the post-mortem examination.

After this, Miss Welsh, of Tamworth, the friend of the dead girl, was called and her evidence at the inquest was read to her and subscribed by her. She was not questioned, but was allowed to amend her evidence if she so desired.

David Yorke, of Tamworth, was also called and examined. Dr. Wilson, of Tamworth, gave evidence as to the discovery and conditions of the remains.

The prisoner was then committed to stand his trial at the next assize court and taken back to the jail.

THROUGH LINE OPEN TO PRINCE RUPERT

A through passenger and freight service between Fort William and Prince Rupert on the Grand Trunk Pacific has been put into operation this week. The announcement comes from the headquarters of the railway in Montreal.

The inauguration of this service is an important event in the history of Canada's railroads, for it marks the completion of the main line of the Grand Trunk's great western system and gives the Dominion a new transcontinental highway. The line from the head of the Great Lakes at Fort William to Winnipeg and Edmonton has been in operation for a considerable time and has proved very popular with the travelling public. Trains have also been operated from Edmonton westward to Prince George, a distance of 486 miles, and form Prince Rupert eastward to Priestley, a distance of 335 miles. A gap of 131 miles between Priestley and Prince George remained unfinished. The laying of the steel was actually completed in April last, but following its policy of placing the roadbed and bridges in absolutely first-class condition before running passenger trains, the railway delayed until the present time the inauguration of this through service.

The opening to traffic of this link in the Grand Trunk Pacific's transcontinental system will place Prince Rupert in direct touch with Eastern Canada and the United States and provide a new avenue of commerce to Canadian agriculture and industry. The thriving townships in Central British Columbia which have grown up along the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, but which have hitherto been reached only by stage or river steamers, will in particular feel the beneficial effect of the service, and a new impetus is likely to be given to business throughout the whole of Western Canada by the opening of the line. This gives the Grand Trunk Pacific 2,105 miles of line in operation, while there are also a number of branch lines.

The new through passenger service between Edmonton and Prince Rupert will be arranged as follows: Trains will leave Edmonton at 9:15 p.m. on Sunday and Tuesday, arriving at Prince Rupert 6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. In the oposite direction, trains will leave Prince Rupert 10 a.m. Wednesday and Saturday, arriving Edmonton 8 a.m. Friday and Monday.

FEELING AGAINST GERMANY BITTER

Austrian People Would Gladly See Peace Again

Vienna, Sept. 12. — There is increasingly bitter feeling here against Germany and an almost universal demand in popular circles that the government sue for peace. The acknowledgment that the Austrian armies were compelled to meet the Russian assaults alone and unsupported, while Germany invaded France, with the result that the Austrian army was crushed by overwhelming numbers, has resulted in a storm of bitter criticism of the government.

The known losses are enormous, and it is believed that they have been greater than the government will admit. So strong and bitter is the feeling that it is not believed the government can hold out much longer against it. Unless Austria sues for peace in the near future, it will be very hard for the government to prevent stormy scenes, not alone in Vienna, but in every big city in Austria-Hungary.

The admission is made that the railroads are unable to transport the wounded. The Austrian Red Cross last night issued a demand that all automobiles within the country be turned over to it for transportation of the wounded to places where they can be properly cared for. Every hospital in Vienna is filled with desperately injured soldiers. All public halls have been requisitioned and are also full. Private houses are not being utilized, and still the long trains of men, torn by shot and shrapnel, continue to arrive here.

A New Jersey inventor has obtained a patent for a packing-case made of waterproof canvas over a steel frame which can be folded compactly for shipping when empty.

UPOLU IS OCCUPIED

New Zealanders Masters Without Firing a Shot

HONOLULU, Sept. 12. — The Oceanic Steamship Co.'s liner Ventura, which arrived here yesterday gave new particulars of the occupation of the South Sea Island of Upolu, on Aug. 29, by 1,500 New Zealand troops. The capture was effected without the firing of a shot.

Apia, the capital of German Samoa, is situated on Upolu.

Governor Schultz and 100 other Government officials were made prisoners of war, and taken to the Fiji Islands.

All Government and private funds previously had been carried in safety to Pago-Pago, American Samoa. Fred. Beintz, operator of the newly-installed wireless station, refused an offer of $10,000 to tell where he had hidden the apparatus. The station was dismantled upon declaration of war.

FRENCH HERO DECORATED

Corporal is Rewarded With Legion of Honor

LIMOGES, France, Sept. 12.—On a train loaded with wounded, which passed here yesterday, was a young French officer, Albert Palapsy, whose unusual bravery on the field of battle won for him the cross of the Legion of Honor.

As a simple corporal of the 10th Dragoons at the beginning of the war, Palapsy took part in the recent violent combat with the Germans. In the thick of the battle, Palapsy, finding his colonel wounded and helpless, rushed to his aid. Palapsy heisted the injured man upon his shoulders and under a rain of machine gun bullets carried the colonel safely to the French lines. That same day Palapsy was promoted to be a sergeant.

Afterward, although wounded, he distinguished himself in another affair, leading a charge of his squad against the Baden Guard, whose standard he himself captured. Wounded by a ball which had plowed through the lower part of his stomach, and covered with lance thrusts, he was removed from the battlefield during the night and learned that he had been promoted to be a sub-lieutenant and nominated Chevalier in the Legion of Honor.

This incident of decorating a soldier on the battlefield recalls Napoleonic times.

FAR TOO MANY PRISONERS IN LINDSAY JAIL

(Lindsay Warder.)

Governor Balfour, of the Lindsay jail, reports seven prisoners taking treatment for various offences, at his mansion on the hill. The longest sentence imposed on any of the inmates is one year. All are males, one of whom is crazy. The prisoner who is serving a year's sentence should have been taken to the Central prison where he was assigned by the presiding magistrate, who imposed the sentence to serve this term, but for some unknown cause he is left in the county jail.

There is no reason why the County of Victoria should be compelled to house and feed tramps and weary walkers from other districts for the benefit of the province. This negligence in taking away prisoners by putting up some lame excuse and saying the prison is full, has been going on so long it has become unbearable. It is an imposition on any county and should not be permitted. If an offender has committed a crime grevious enough to send him to the Central prison he should not be allowed to serve his term in Lindsay jail, as there is no work of any account to be done in our local institution whereby a prisoner could earn his board, while on the Guelph farm his labor would more than repay for his keep during the time of his incarceration.

The county council should take this matter in hand and insist on each prisoner being taken away in a reasonable time after receiving sentence, or else treat the Central prison term as a farce and a huge joke.

A FINE SPIRIT UNDER MOST TRYING CIRCUMSTANCES

British newspapers contain a description of the trying experiences of a Canadian lady who showed a noble and patriotic spirit in most trying circumstances. She and two other ladies were travelling together. After having succeeded with difficulty in getting from Innsbruck to Munich they got passports from the British consul there. "We then started out for Switzerland," she said, "but at Lindau, on the Lake of Constance, close to the Swiss frontier, we were ordered to get out, and were detained in the railway station refreshment room. We were detained in the refreshment room for eight hours. Seven other British subjects were with us. There was plenty to eat for those who had the money to pay for it, and, on the whole, we were kindly treated, although we were much alarmed when a Bavarian colonel came in in a state of great excitement and informed us that the French and Russians were behaving to his countrymen like wild beasts. After we had been detained for eight hours we were told that the women could go, but that the men of military age would have to remain in Lindau. I and my companions got away, but two English ladies who were with their husbands declined to leave them. The party were not imprisoned; they were simply told to go to a hotel and remain there. What will become of them when their money is all gone I do not know. Our journey through Switzerland and France was a most unpleasant experience. We were six days on the journey, and all the time we had to stand in the gangways of the trains or sit on the luggage that was piled up in them. I have left all my luggage, but am thankful to have got back alive. I am only sorry now for those we had to leave behind. While I was in suspense at Munich, I was strongly advised by friends to represent that I was a citizen of the United States, but I would die rather than deny my flag."

A Great Record

The achievements of the Independent Order of Forresters in the field of fraternal insurance societies after years of experience stand out as evidence of what may be accomplished by an organization builded by men having the highest interests of the organization at heart.

At the head of Society Row the deputies who have had charge of this great Order's tent, which stands in that proud position, are very loud in their expressions of the successful two weeks they have had. They are somewhat tired after shaking hands with the many thousand members from all parts of the Forestric world, yet they are most enthusiastic as to the future, and the good this tent has been, not only in advertising their Order, but in providing a place of rest which has been very much appreciated. Many names have been left as prospective candidates, whom the deputies will immediately seek, and no doubt enroll as members of this great body of fraternalists.

A visiting member at the tent was heard to say that he wondered why it was necessary to have salaried deputies go out and canvass people for this great Order; that he thought the people should so appreciate the great work that this Order was doing and the great benefits to be obtained by being a member of same, that they would be asking for these benefits and not make it necessary, to have organisers seeking them. And how true this is! It is an organization that is organized for the pure purpose of co-operating men and women together to advance the welfare of each other, and to give them an insurance policy at cost. This man was noted to say that he was proud of any Order that was able to distribute over forty-two millions of dollars to widows and orphans, which is the amount distributed by this Order in the last forty years. This in itself should awaken men and women to truly realize and thoroughly appreciate the great good this organization is doing. It should inspire every man and woman to take a more determined stand to assist in promoting such an institution, which is doing so much good for its fellowman.

Another great feature of this Order's policy is its desirability benefit, which practically means that when a member is permanently and totally disabled he is not burdened down with further assessments, but receives 70 per cent. of his policy, in three payments.

Another great feature of this policy is the relief it is to the member when he reaches the age of seventy, as he can cease his payments, if he so desires, and can draw seventy per cent. of his policy in a lump sum. This in itself is a benefit which should awaken the young man to the importance of making application in a society that will guarantee him full protection against death or disability, and when he reaches the age of seventy and finds he is unable to fight the battles of life as he has done in the past, he receives all the money paid into the Order, with a small interest added.

Another grand feature of this Order's work is the benefit it is to the young man who, owing to the demands of life, feels he is unable to open a bank account. The Order takes him by the hand and gives him an opportunity of paying a certain amount of money every month, whivh gives him the protection of a $1,000 policy with all the above benefits added.

Another feature the Order is proud of is the fact that it is privileged to write a policy as high as $5,000. These benefits are open to both men and women, combined with their splendid sick and funeral benefits, by which they have brought comfort to many thousands at the hour of sickness by the visitation of its members and the tender care of a nurse, who many times has been provided for by the Order. During their spell of illness they are privileged to enjoy the benefit of from $3 to $5 a week for the first two weeks, $5 to $10 per week for the next ten weeks, and $3 to $6 per week for the next six months. Many have been cheered and made happy during their moments of sickness, and had it not been for the enthusiastic members they would have had to endure that suffering alone.

The record of this great fraternal body is well worthy of investigation, and should appeal to every right-thinking man and woman, and those in charge of the tent are loud in their expressions in claiming that they expect to have one of the greatest campaigns that has ever been known in the history of fraternal insurance societies, conducted during the fall and winter months.

Gone, But Not Forgotten.

William had not been in the other world long when George wooed and won the promise of his widow.

"Do you love me, sweetheart?" asked George.

"Yes, dear," cooed the widow.

"Better than anybody on earth?" persisted he, after the foolish manner of lovers.

"Yes," she answered, "better than anyone on earth; but, George, don't ask me about heaven." — Judge.

THE SPORTING WORLD

St. Thomas not Through With the Canuck League

St. Thomas, Sept. 12.—Contrary to the dope handed out by many of the papers on the Canadian league circuit that St. Thomas will not have a team next year, Secretary Chantler stated that the franchise would be held here for next season, unless something greatly out of the ordinary happened. While the team this season has proved a losing venture for the owners, it is thought that by getting several of the business men in the city interested in the team, that it can be made a paying proposition.

Nearly all of last year's players are being held for next season's team. Already letters asking for a position as manager of the team have been received, Secretary Chantler having got one Thursday morning from a player named Newton, who has references from ten or fifteen clubs in the different circuits in the States. Nothing is being done in regards to securing another manager, and Midge Craven, who piloted this year's crew, may again lead them next season.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Boston used four pitchers and two pinch hitters yesterday to take the final game from Philadelphia. The score was 6 to 5.

On the Polo Ground Matty was holding Brooklyn to seven scattered hits and won 3-0.

The standing of the clubs is as follows :—

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	73	54	.575
New York	70	56	.556

today while the Braves entertain the New York jumps to Philadelphia Dodgers.

Walter Johnson has lost 18 games this season but despite the fact Griffith has his team fighting in the first division.

Bob Fisher of the Leafs has been drafted by Hank O'Day's club.

The fight in the International League has became acute. The first three teams are credited as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Rochester	83	55	.601
Providence	82	55	.599
Buffalo	80	55	.593

Rochester entertains Montreal today, the Grays are at Jersey City while the Bisons and Toronto play a double header.

A few days ago it was stated that Mordecai Brown had retired. He hurled for the Brookfeds yesterday against St. Louis and although he allowed but seven hits he lost 6-5. His team mates had 6 errors.

Met Some Hard Words.

"How did he come out in the civil service examination?"

"He had a bad spell."

Daybreak.

The silvery gleam
Of the rippling stream
The listless eye caresses,
And the golden ray
Of the waking day
The joy of life confesses.

But the morning bright
Brings no delight,
Though the joys of morn are thronging,
For they find me far
From the place you are,
And the day grows pale with longing.

Possibilities.

"Got a recommendation from your last place?"

"Sorry to say I have not."

"Why not?"

"I don't know. When I left the boss was running after me, perhaps to give me one, but I did not wait to see."

Depended.

"Doctor, what shall I do to remove this superfluous flesh?"

"Exercise."

"What form—hoeing in the garden or golf?"

"How much money have you got?"

Sounded Good.

"You are all run down."

"What shall I do?"

"Try nature's remedies."

"Would going to the ball game do?"

SERVIANS OCCUPY SEMLIN.

They Have Captured the City Across From Belgrade.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 12. — (Via London.)—The Servians occupied Semlin, across the river from Belgrade yesterday morning, after a bloody battle.

Semlin is an important town of Austria-Hungary in Slavonia. It is located on the tongue of land formed by the junction of the Danube and the Save, opposite Belgrade, Servia, with which is was connected by a railway bridge across the Save.

It was from Semlin that the Austrian infantry and artillery, in connection with the monitors on the river, began their fighting on July 29, against the Servians. The Servians, early that morning, blew up the bridge connecting Simlin with Belgrade. An intermittent bombardment, according to reports, has since been kept up by the Austrians in Semlin on Belgrade.

Plans Well Laid.

ROME, Sept. 12.—(Via Paris.)—The capture of Semlin by the Servians had long been prepared for, and the operations were conducted with great ability, according to advices received here yesterday by the Servian Minister.

"Several Servian divisions," the despatch said, "camped in the hills extending from Topchider to Resnick, occupying all the heights about Mount Avala. The Austrian garrison in Semlin did not suspect the presence of the Servians and continued the bombardment of Belgrade daily, without causing great damage, until the Servians surprised them.

"The audacity of the Servian movement was extraordinary, and in order to reach Semlin the Servians were compelled to cross the Save and Danube rivers on pontoons built during the night. They also took heavy artillery with them."

Germans In Poland.

ROME, Sept. 12. — The Tribuna's Petrograd correspondent wires that reports which may be issued by the German press regarding the reported success of German operations in Russian Poland should not be taken seriously. The fact is, he says the Russians had received orders not to make any great efforts to drive back the Kaiser's troops from the Polish districts because the rainy season will, in a short time, be transformed into a vast marsh and the Germans will find it impossible to move the Rusisans.

The Czar's soldiers, the despatch says, have completely destroyed the Austrian army and are not worrying about the Germans in Poland.

PITY THE POOR LIONS.

Hunters in Africa Actually Kick the Brutes Out of Their Way.

A globe trotter and a hunter, by name Percy Stanhope, is an Englishman who may or may not have a sense of humor. Here is what he said in New York recently about lion hunting in Africa:

"You hear them talk of lion hunting in Africa as though it were the king of sports. It's a beastly shame the way they treat the poor beasts. Why, when I was out in British East Africa two years ago there was a movement on foot to punish lion hunters for cruelty to animals. In fact, they were seriously taking up the question with the home government.

"The lives of the poor lions are being made a burden to them. I can remember when the lions would come in out of the jungle and sit on the platform of the railway stations, and some of those cruel Englishmen actually booted the beasts out of the way. Think of it, the cruelty of it all!

"There being no foxes available, the sportsmen out in those parts have a habit of stirring up a lion and pursuing the poor beast with whoops and yells until it drops dead of exhaustion and actual fright. The poor beasts have been so terrorised that when they see a white man they whimper from fright. This fear shortens the life of the lions, and unless drastic steps are taken to put a stop to the cruelty there won't be any of the animals left in Africa."—

RUSSIANS GET CHECK

Germans in East Prussia and Galicia Resisting Advance.

Gen. Ruzsky's Enveloping Movement Has Been Delayed by Offensive Which Has Been Resumed—Austrian Left Wing in Galicia Is Utterly Routed Declare Petrograd Statements—Positions Taken.

LONDON, Sept. 12. — Despatches received here say that in Galicia, the Austrians, who are being supported by Germans, are still putting up a fight against the Russians, although it had been predicted for days that their surrender or annihilation was imminent. The Russians claim to have had another success over the Austrians near Krasnik on Wednesday, and add that sanguinary fighting is proceeding on the Tomaszow-Rawa front as far as the Dniester river.

It is apparent that Gen. Ruzsky's enveloping movement is not developing as rapidly as was expected, and it may have been delayed by the offensive movement, which, according to Berlin advices, the Austrians have resumed in the Lemberg district.

Matters are getting a little more interesting in East Prussia, where for a while Russia is said to have had things virtually her own way. The Germans are reported now to have moved some of their best troops into this section of the theatre of war, and the Russians are said to have been compelled to withdraw. Petrograd says its only retirements have been its advance guards, who are keeping in touch with the German advance, but the Germans claim to have scored another victory over the Russians, who are said to have received a severe shock between Aug. 25 and 27.

It is possible the Austrians have kept the Russians busy in Galicia to enable Germany to get her troops into East Prussia before the Russians were able to dispose of the Austrians and sweep down up Silesia, Posen and Prussia.

Retreat a Complete Rout.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12.—In an official statement made here yesterday by the War Office the recent retreat of the Austrian army in Galicia is described as a "complete rout." The outcome is described thus:

"After recent action in Galicia when the Austrians, were overwhelmingly defeated, the Austrian left wing fled in utter panic. The enemy cut the horses loose from the cannon, transport wagons and other vehicles and used the animals to flee, leaving the roads completely blocked with abandoned transport.

"When the main body started to retreat it found it ways blocked, and at many points it was unable to move until the roads had been cleared. All efforts on the part of the Austrian officers to rally their men failed. The retreat was a complete rout in which the troops abandoned even their rifles and haversacks to facilitate their escape."

(It is assumed from the foregoing despatch that the fighting evidently took place east of Rawa Ruska, where the Austrians are reported to have fought side by side with the German first line troops.)

A Reuter despatch from Berlin says: "The general staff announces that the 22nd Russian Army Corps of Finland, has tried to force an entrance into East Prussia by way of Lyck. The Rusisans were defeated at Lyck." Lyck is in East Prussia, on Lake Lyck, 55 miles south of Gumbinnen.

The following official German statement was received here last night by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"In the eastern theatre of the war the battle has been recommenced and the Austrians have assumed the offensive in the region of Lemberg.

"During the nine days' fighting it is estimated that the Russians have had engaged 550,000 infantry, 40,000 cavalry, 1,500 machine guns and 2,000 field guns."

The German troops near Myszinec and Chorzele, Russian Poland, have been repulsed with heavy loss.

The Russian troops have taken by assault the fortified positions of Opole and Tourbine, Russian Poland, and pursued the enemy for a distance of 25 miles. Russian cavalry is still driving the rear guard of the enemy.

Everything has its drawbacks. Even the bachelor hasn't any wife to blame things on.

RETREAT OF GERMAN RIGHT WING WITHOUT DIMINUTION

General Von Kluk, Who Made Brilliant Dash to Paris, is Going Back as Quickly as He Came—Centre Remains Unchanged, and Left is Fighting Furiously With Alternate Advances and Retreats.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The battle of the Marne, as the French have christened the great struggle which now has been in progress for a week in the territory between Paris and Verdun, with the allied armies of France and Great Britain on one side and the Germans on the other, has not yet reached a decisive result. The German right, however, in the face of superior forces and threatened with an outflanking movement, continues to retire to the north along the route over which Gen. Von Kluk made his famous lightning advance on Paris from the Belgian border after having defeated the allies at Mons and again at Cambrai and St. Quentin. Von Kluk has fallen back about 45 miles in all.

With Gen. Von Kluk also, according to French official reports, the right wing of Gen. Von Buelow's army, which supported his left, is falling back toward the rivers Aisne and Oise. On Von Buelow's left the army of the Prince of Wurtemberg, which had been trying for weeks to break through the French line, also has stopped fighting and retired north. The German left wing, however, composed of other sections of the Prince of Wurtemberg's army and the army commanded by the German crown prince is still fighting with varying success. These armies appear, however, to have passed Verdun, as Berlin reports say they have been bombarding fortified positions south of that fortress.

A very comprehensive official French report issued last night shows that Gen. Von Kluk got farther east and south of Paris than had heretofore been disclosed, so that his advance was even faster than he was given credit for. It seems that had the German armies on his left moved anywhere nearly as quickly as he did the battle of the Marne might never have been fought.

However, faced by a strong British-French force, and with another French force advancing from Paris threatening his flank and his communications, Capt. Von Kluk was compelled to withdraw northward, and then fight the French on the River Ourcq. In this fighting, according to the British-French reports, a number of German guns, hundreds of prisoners and part of the German transports were taken.

In their retirement, Generals Von Kluk and Von Buelow had at their heels the French army, which they went south to fight, and which, when the Germans started to fall back, quickly advanced and took the offensive. While this fighting must have been severe, the real hard blows of the battle appear to have been struck between Vitry-le-Francois and Sezanne.

Here the French were drawn up on a road over which they could move rapidly. They were repeatedly attacked by Von Buelow's right Saxon army and the Prince of Wuertemberg's right. These attacks, which continued until Thursday night, were of a most violent character, according to the French report, and were stopped only when Gen. Pau got in possession of the hills north of Sezanne, from which his artillery could command the valley down which the Germans would necessarily advance on their way from Chalons.

It was for the possession of these hills that the French fought hard early in the battle, and it was here that daily a fight occurred which first went in favor of one side and then the other. It is believed here that this retirement into the hills west of Vitry-le-Francois was made to enable Gen. Von Moltke and the German general staff to plan some other means or way of breaking through the French line.

Although the Germans have had to send some of their best troops back to Prussia to meet the Russian advance, it is not for a moment thought here that there will be any long pause in their efforts to beat the French. Crown Prince Frederick William, who has with him a portion of the Prince of Wuertemberg's army is still fighting, and all that the [illegible] report says of this battle is that there is no great change in the situation, there being alternate advances and retreats.

The Germans have brought up some siege guns against Nancy, and here, as in the Gosges, it is reported there is no change in the situation. The British public seems well satisfied with the result of the battle so far as it has gone, but the military experts warn them that it is not over yet. It is suggested by some of the military men as being possible that the French are only holding the line of the Marne on sufferance, while the Germans are making some changes in their line of communications. Among these experts it is considered that there is no reason to suppose that the German army has yet been fought to a standstill.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES IN MILLINERY

Newest Creations Are Displayed in Artistically Decorated Windows and in the Show Rooms.

After spending a few hours in taking in the millinery openings in this city a Review scribe has reached the conclusion that black and white, white predominating and white and black in equal proportions have crowded eccentric colors into the background. Apparently fashionists have gone in mourning to compensate for their past eccentricities in colors and fashions.

History repeats itself in abrupt changes so far as fashion is concerned and this also applies to other things. It is said that at one time the riot of color reached such a level of exaggeration in Venice that gondolas were decorated in much the same way that the forerunners of this continent donned the war paint. Noting this and being desirous of an artistic change the Doge of Venice ordered all gondolas to be painted black. Metaphorically speaking fashion has issued a similar edict, that black shall have first place, instead of the atrocities that came up like a mushroom and died over night.

Referring again to the introductory paragraph wherein black and white are mentioned as having first place in the fashion movement, it is only necessary to state that combinations are formed in many ways and enter into everything that has to do with dress. For example, black hats are worn with white suits. Black and white in many graduations of apportionment appear in hats, and this fashionable combination is also worked out in many forms, in dresses, suits and costumes.

RICHARD HALL AND SON.

One need but idly glance at the display windows of this ever popular store to be reminded that the millinery opening is to hand. Some of the prettiest designs and shapes have have been artistically arranged in the window approximately south of the main entrance, relieved by a background that reflects great credit upon Mr. J. McNabb, the window dresser. On entering the store, one is struck with the handsome decorations, with art noveau scrolls set off with autumn foliage and natural tones. A large and new stock of silks presents itself in a manner that causes one to be at once absorbed with the kaleidoscopic atmosphere.

The millinery department under the supervision of Miss A. Dawson brings forth the impression that the keynote is distinctiveness, individuality and exclusive designs. Small black velvet shapes predominate with a variety of mounts, including feathers and foliage. New Roman stripes are also very fashionable in trimmings.

The Napoleon is a typical close-fitting turban, which goes hand in hand this season with the sailor model, equal claimants to popularity. The crown is white velvet, brim of white satin, and the trimmings white velvet foliage encircling the crown, with quill effect to give necessary height. Another of marked distinction is a toque of faille and velvet, in handsome shades of corbeau blue, with nacre feather trimmings, while an entirely different type is a very clever shepherdess shape of the 1880 period bound in silver tinsel braid, with white Mouille ostrich trimming.

AT T. C. ELLIOT'S.

As usual, with Elliot's store, they are showing a wide choice of the new Parisian, British and Russian styles. The military touch is much in evidence, the shapes are smaller and closer fitting, and the shades are more sombre in hue. Among the many styles the writer noticed the Scotch Glengarry, the new Russian toque, and a number of the latest Chic and attractive French styles. Once again, black and black and white are brought prominently to the front, as are sombre hues of Autumn including the silver and metallic trimmings. Appropriate flowers and mounts have also a favorable place this season.

MRS. WILSON'S PARLORS.

When The Review man called at this establishment to obtain a "glimpse" of some of the latest styles and fashions, it was with great difficulty that he could move from one section to another without jolting someone who stood before a mirror looking at an "ideal" from every angle. The small floor space was far too inadequate to accommodate the many admirers of the work of Mrs. Wilson and her staff. One lady was so interested in one of the many pretty designs that she turned to the scribe and told him how well she liked it. While the newspaper man claimed to have no instinct whatever for selecting a lady's hat, he noticed on closer observance that the choice of the prospective buyer was a novel and interesting hat in plum colored moire, faced with velvet in the same shade. The shape was cut short across the front. On the upper brim quills were laid closely together, covering it; the quills were exactly the same color as the velvet. Another one that drew the reporter's attention was a Lewis Model in black velvet, the only trimming being a handsome jet ornament.

CRESSMAN CO., LIMITED.

It is always a pleasure to make a tour of inspection of Cressman's spacious store at the time of a millinery opening. This season the work of repairing a large section of the building has perhaps had an effect in not permitting the store to be so handsomely decorated as on other occasions, but despite this handicap there is all that could be desired in the Millinery Department. The artistic manner in which the latest designs and colors are placed before the many visitors presents an impression at first glance of Cressman's having the most extensive stock in the city.

As in other stores, the prominence of black and white is at once noticed. Many new forms with the millinery touch predominating call attention, and on closer observation the popular trimmings appear to be hackle, neumidi, monkey fir, and in fact all the stringy trimmings. Stunning is the correct expression for a particularly fetching model of Joseph. It is of dark green velvet with gold lace on brim covered with monkey fir. Other trimmings on similar hats are metallic roses and gold leaves, adding a very piquant touch.

A black velvet sailor by Karsman claimed attention because of its simplicity. It is an all-black shape with faille ribbon edging the brim, a bow of black velvet is posed with discrimination on the edge of the rim directly at the front, leaving lines of the shape clear cut and free. Another, known as the virot, a turban or cap-like shape, is also of velvet, this time in a bewitching shade of blue known as Corbeau; the trimmings are metallic ornaments and feathers, posed very artictically.

MISS McGIVERIN'S PARLORS.

These well-known millinery quarters, situated on the second floor of Reid's store, present some exceedingly handsome styles and shapes. Once again does black and white win prominence, while the trimmings are mostly monkey fir, silver rose and silver facing. The shapes are generally military, with a few large picture hats. One in particular was a large hat with slightly rolled rim trimmed with gold lace and ostrich. Another was a modish sailor with under brim and crown of tete de negre velvet, while the upper brim is covered smoothly with gold tissue. An ostrich novelty in the shape of a bow on the brim is the trimming.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BARNES—JOHNSTON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. James' parsonage yesterday by the Rev. J. N. Clarry, when Miss Bessie May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Johnston, of Mille Roche, Ont., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Alfred Barnes. They were unattended. On their return they will reside on St. James street, city.

Friends of the Port Hope ladies who are prisoners of war in Germany are much distracted over their unfortunate plight. It is feared that as the war progresses and the Germans are being vanquished, much bitterness will be engendered.

The ladies who are being held in Germany are:—Mrs. C. H. Brent, widow of Dr. Brent, of Toronto; and Miss Marion Bletcher, sister of W. H. Bletcher, Esq., H. M. Customs; Misses Mamie and Jessie Tuer, sisters of Miss Margaret Tuer, commercial specialist and teacher in art at Port Hope High School, and of the late Thomas Tuer, formerly manager of Port Hope Electric Light & Power Co., and Miss Edith Holdsworth, sister of Mr. R. L. Holdsworth, of near Bethel Grove, Hamilton Township.

Miss Mamie Tuer was a successful music teacher in Port Hope, while her sister, Miss Jessie, conducted a private school.—Port Hope Times.

Miss Jean Brethour, second daughter of Mrs. Roxala Brethour, 2143 Retallack street, was united in marriage to Donald Shook, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shook, of Peterboro, Ont., at 6.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, Rev. Mr. Spencely, pastor of the Fourteenth avenue Methodist Church, officiating. Over 30 close friends and relatives were present.

The bride was gowned in white satin and carried a bouquet of roses. She was attended by her younger sister, Miss Edna, while another sister, Mrs. Scott, played the wedding march. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room, which was attractively decorated. Miss Ramsay, of Lumsden, sang "Because" after the ceremony.

The groom is well known in Regina, having resided here for several years until he recently returned to Peterboro, and is now associated in business with his father. The happy couple left last night on the Imperial Limited for Winnipeg, and intend visiting several southern cities before returning to Peterboro, where they will make their future home.—Regina Province.

Mr. W. E. Best, Winnipeg, and Mr. O. H. Lawrence, Canonto, are registered at the Snowden House.

Mr. G. E. Thompson, London, is in the city on business.

Mr. R. A. Stillman, Vancouver, is visiting friends here.

Messrs. P. Keichner and H. Martin New York, are registered at the White House.

Mr. B. Barry, Toronto, is in the city, the guest of friends.

Miss Mary Lynch, of Peterboro, has returned to resume her studies in St. Joseph's Academy. — Lindsay Post.

Mr. W. J. Wallace, who left Peterborough 28 years ago and now resides at Riverside, Cal., is in the city. This is his first visit to Peterborough since leaving, and, needless to say, he sees many improvements.

Directions for Knitting Helmets for Soldiers

Here are directions for making knitted helmets for the soldiers:

Knit with double wool.

Cast on 27 stitches.

Knit 27 ridges (two rows make a ridge).

Take up stitches on each side of the 27 ridges (using two more needles, making 27 stitches on these needles.

Knit 38 ridges.

Cast on one needle 24 additional stitches and join to other side. (This leaves opening for face.)

Knit two plain, two purl to the depth of a finger and a half for neck. Bind very loosely.

Then take up stitches all around the opening for face, and knit two plain two purl to the depth of two inches.

Be careful to make ribs under each other at chin and neck.

Owing to the difficulty in getting coarse needles, knit loosely or not finer than 13 (Cressman's) or 9 (Woolworth's). Coarser needles would be better if they can be obtained. A supply of wool has been obtained and may be secured, through the courtesy of the management of the Oriental hotel, at the office, a 25c. skein making, as nearly as can be estimated, two helmets.

THEY RALLY TO THE FLAG

Exhibit by Local Firm at Toronto Exhibition

The eastern half of this building is utilized by the department for more of their instructive exhibits. J. & J. Turner, Peterborough, are responsible for another forceful and striking painting, entitled, "They Rally to the Flag," which graces the eastern wall. Exactly opposite is the section devoted to the "Travelling Libraries." Boxes of books, graded from fictional to technical, are sent to various study clubs, reading rooms and small libraries throughout Ontario, and exchanged for others as required.

NOTICE TO THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE PATRONS

We are very sorry for the disappointment caused to many last night on account of James K. Hackett not putting on his production, "Othello." The fault lay entirely with Mr. Hackett, as the company arrived late and Mr. Hackett claimed that we could not put the scenery up in time without his men to help. We claimed that we could, and informed Mr. Hackett and his manager that if he did not fill his contract with us and give the show, we would claim damages, and as Mr. Hackett did not give the performance, we put in our claim for damages and expenses that we had been put to in this case. The manager paid our claim last night and has learned a lesson that he cannot break a contract when he pleases. Hoping this explanation will be satisfactory, we remain,

Yours respectfully,
J. J. TURNER & SONS.

PATRIOTIC CONCERT AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

At the meeting of the persons interested in the City Patriotic concert, held yesterday afternoon in the council chamber and presided over by Mr. John Crane, it was decided to hold the concert on Monday evening, Sept. 21, at the Grand opera house, which has been offered free.

The majority of the city church choirs were represented, also the Conservatory of Music and Peterborough Choral society. Mr. B. Read was appointed secretary and will assist Mr. J. Crane in arranging for a program. Letters were received from many local artists offering their services gratis. It is the intention of the gentlemen in charge to have the vocalists of the churches, the 57th Regimental band and the opera house orchestra supply the program. More details will be announced later.

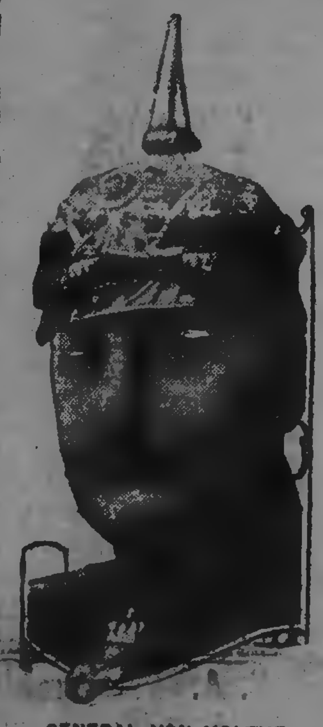
GENERAL VON MOLTKE MODEST AND SILENT

He is Chief of Staff and Commander of German Forces Under the Kaiser.

General Count Helmuth von Moltke, now 66 years old, namesake and favorite nephew of the great Field Marshal who led the Germans to victory in the Franco-Prussian war, has been chief of the German general staff since 1904 and as such is in supreme command of the united forces of Germany—under the Kaiser.

The reservation concerning the Kaiser is important, because von Moltke, modest and silent as the famous uncle whom Germans nicknamed the Great Taciturn, has never believed that he is the man for the place he occupies. In fact, he refused the job twice, and accepted it when the Kaiser offered it to him for the third time, only because his imperial master declared with brutal frankness: "In time of peace any man can do the work. In time of war I shall be my own chief of staff."



GENERAL VON MOLTKE

As a 22-year-old lieutenant Von Moltke served through the Franco-Prussian war. For conspicuous gallantry in the fighting before Paris he was decorated with the order of the Iron Cross. He was among the victors who marched under the Arch of the Star. His uncle, the Field Marshal, was very proud of him and wrote home to Helmuth's father, Adolf von Moltke: "Yesterday Helmuth marched in with his regiment—the tallest man in it. The king asked me his name. He looked splendid with his Iron Cross."

In the last years of the greater Moltke's life Helmuth and his wife kept house for the old soldier. Of the four sons of Adolf von Moltke, who were known as the "four giants," Helmuth resembled his uncle most and was regarded by him as his son. He stands 6 feet 4 inches, has blue eyes and, like all the Moltkes, is very blond.

When Helmuth fell in love with Eliza, a daughter of Count von Moltke-Hvitfeldt of Denmark—she was a distant cousin—his future father-in-law refused his consent to the match till the field marshal had given his. Count von Moltke-Hvitfeldt once gave an amusing account of what followed.

"Eliza had received a telegram from Helmuth's uncle, saying to expect him on a certain train. You can imagine that we were excited. I went to the station to meet the train indicated, and, as no one descended from the first-class carriages, I thought the field marshal had not arrived. But suddenly I saw an old man in a snuffy brown suit get out of a second-class carriage and come towards me carrying a small hand bag. It was Field Marshal von Moltke.

"I asked him about his trunks and he explained that he had everything he required in the little bag. I asked if we should expect his man on a later train and he explained that he had no valet, that he could always look after himself!"

The present Helmuth von Moltke is a good writer, draws admirably and is a very fine performer on the violincello. He is also a composer of music, and twelve years ago the Kaiser himself led the band which played one of von Moltke's compositions for the first time. William likes him very much.

MEREST TRIFLES HAVE CAUSED WAR

A King's Clean Shave Started One and an Old Bucket, Still in Existence, Another.

Opinions may differ as to whether the dispute which led to the present war should have been considered sufficient to justify the loss of blood and treasure, but it is certain that many great wars in history have resulted from much more trivial causes. A visit to the royal barber by Louis VII. of France plunged two nations—France and England—into intermittent warfare which lasted 300 years.

According to the story, the Archbishop of Rouen persuaded the King to remove his beard, in common with his subjects. The act led to so much friction with the Queen that at last Louis divorced her, to become a few months later the wife of Henry II. of England. From this marriage centuries of bloodshed may be said to have followed.

In an iron case in the tower of the cathedral in Modena, Italy, there is to this day a bucket which 900 years ago was the cause of a terrible war. Soldiers of Modena in a mischievous mood stole the bucket from a public well in Bologna and refused to return it. The states were rivals and were jealous of each other, and fights between soldiers of the two followed. This spark kindled a fire of war which devastated a large part of Europe, and led to the imprisonment for life of the King of Sardinia, son of the German Emperor.

Broken Teapot Started War

A broken teapot started a war in China 250 years ago which cost half a million lives. The teapot was the cherished possession of a dignitary high in favor with the Emperor. When traveling through a lawless province in the northwest of China some of his retinue who had fallen behind the main body were intercepted by a band of robbers, and among the spoils the teapot was found and contemptuously thrown on the ground and broken. The mandarin reported his loss to the Emperor, a force of soldiers was sent out, and a long and terrible war ensued.

The manipulation by Count Bismarck, then Prussia's Foreign Minister, of a telegram set Prussia and France flying at each other's throat in 1870. The French ambassador went to Ems, where Emperor William I. then was, to ask him not to approve the ambition of Prince Leopold to become the King of Spain. The King refused to give definite answer, but Prince Anthony of Hohenzollern withdrew his son's candidacy. A report of the conference was submitted by telegram to Count Bismarck with authorization to publish it. Bismarck altered the text, and in the changed form gave it to the newspapers and through them to France. As Bismarck wrote it the report was unfavorable to France, and the international war with all its horrors followed. Years later Bismarck confessed the forgery.

Over a Glass of Water

The war of the Spanish succession, in which the great Duke of Marlborough played a brilliant part, was said to be the outcome of a glass of water at a ball at the Tuileries in Paris. One of the court ladies had expressed a wish for a drink of water in the hearing of the British and Spanish Ambassadors, who hastened to get it for her. Returning each with a tumbler they found the fair bird had flown and was dancing with a French statesman. The English diplomat accidentally, it is presumed, brushed against the Spaniard and upset the glass he was carrying. This ridiculous incident inflamed the jealousies of the nations and turned the balance in favor of war.

The Seven Years War was largely due, according to his own confession, to the vanity of Frederick the Great in wanting to see his name figure largely in the gazettes.

The Sepoys believed that cartridges served out to them were greased with the fat of animals unclean alike to Hindu and Mohammedan, and the Indian Mutiny was precipitated.

The Turko-Russian War was said to have been started by the hammer with which a Herzegovian blacksmith killed a tax collector who had insulted his daughter.

The stealing of a Castile lady's lace petticoat by a Moor led to many years of fierce warfare between the Spaniards and the Moors.

Borrowing a tobacco pipe and failing to return it kindled a civil war which lasted for years among the rival races in Pamirs and Afghanistan. A dispute as to the relative attractions of snails and vipers as food started fifty years of fighting between Milan and Pisa.

Queen Amelie a Nurse

Queen Alexandra, accompanied by Ex-Queen Amelie of Portugal, called at Devonshire House, the headquarters of the British Red Cross Society. The Queen Mother made careful inquiries as to what was being done by the various sections, and expressed herself as delighted with the arrangements. Before leaving she shook hands with all present, including a boy scout. Queen Amelie of Portugal offered personal service in the nursing department.

The German population in London is ordinarily about 65 000.

Pope Benedictus XV, in a characteristic pose, showing the hand that will bless millions.

Rome, Sept. 12. — The Pope's Encyclical, which is addressed to the universal Catholic world, deals chiefly with the European war.

"Looking out upon the flock entrusted to our care," Pope Benedict says, "the immense spectacle of a general war has struck us with unutterable horror and sadness.

"When we see such a considerable portion of Europe devastated by fire and sword and drenched with the blood of Christians, it is incumbent upon us to embrace all without distinction, lambs and sheep, in the arms of paternal charity."

The Pope implores intercession for peace to the Virgin, whose nativity has just been celebrated, and then continues:

"We exhort most earnestly those who govern the destiny of the nations that they should bring themselves to a frame of mind whereby they may put aside all dissensions contrary to the welfare of humanity.

"Let them realize that there already is too much suffering and sorrow attached to this mortal life and that it should not be rendered more wretched or more sorrowful; let them realize how much ruin and disaster already has been wrought and how much human blood already has been shed."

Addressing the heads of the nations, the Pope says:

"Hasten, therefore, to enter into a council of peace. Grasp the right hand of friendship and receive a special reward from God for yourselves and your nations, and earn the greatest praise from the brotherhood of man."

The Encyclical ends by the Pope expressing the hope that the beginning of his pontificate will see the end of wars.

The 6,400 employees of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited, will not suffer as a result of industrial conditions created by the war. On the contrary the war has brought to some of them a larger pay envelope, full time having been resumed in the Montreal factory of the company, the employees of which had been working only 80 per cent. of the full time for a considerable period prior to the breaking out of hostilities. The employees in all of the nine other factories operated by the company are working full time and some increases in the staff may be necessary towards the close of the year.

As about $1,500,000 worth of rubber clothing has been imported annually from Europe war conditions will stimulate the demand for Canadian made rain coats. It is partly in anticipation of the increased demand for this product that full time has been resumed in the Montreal factory of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited. There may be an increased demand for Canadian made automobile tires also as the war will likely result in a temporary reduction of the imports of automobile tires from France and the United Kingdom. The demand for Canadian made rubbers will not be affected appreciably as the imports of rubber footwear into Canada are practically nil.

The output of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited, during the past year was valued at approximately $10,000,000, and the officials of the company anticipate an increase in output during the ensuing year. The production of that output will mean the expenditure of many millions of dollars in Canada—in wages, in factory supplies, in raw materials that are produced in this country, etc. The benefits accruing from such an expenditure at this time will be all the greater because of the fact that the expenditure will be distributed over the ten factories operated by the company which are located at various points throughout Eastern Canada.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF LAST GERMAN RAID

The rapidity with which Germany accomplished its purpose in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71 is shown in the following table:

War declared July 19, 1870.

July 28—Half a million Germans enter France.

August 2—Minor French success at Saarbrucck.

August 4—French defeat at Weissenberg.

August 6—French defeat at Worth.

August 16—German triumph in three days' battle at Gravelotte.

September 1—French disaster at Sedan, followed by surrender and flight of the Emperor.

September 15—Germans appear before Paris.

October 27—Metz falls.

January 28, 1871—Paris capitulates.

May 10, 1871—Peace of Frankfort-on-Main.

MODERN ARTILLERY PLAYS AN IMPORTANT PART IN WAR

A very small proportion of British wounded who have returned from the war are suffering from rifle wounds. Almost all the injuries are the result of artillery fire. Probably this proportion will be maintained to the end, and victory will be found on the side that makes the best use of the field artillery, which, by the way, is comparatively a modern invention. It is said that Napoleon was the greatest of the world's authorities upon the use of artillery, and that Frederick the Great was the first leader to recognize its importance, but the field artillery that either of them used, compared with the artillery now in use, would be like the bow compared with the magazine rifle. What Frederick did with his cannon, and he was the first to do it, was to remove the guns from the train where they had always been placed on the march and make them more mobile. Napoleon used to say "Fire effect is everything, the rest is nothing." At Waterloo he had 240 guns, but their combined effectiveness would not be equal to a single battery of modern guns, which would, indeed, destroy the Waterloo guns long before the latter could reach them with a shot.

In the Russo-Japanese War.

In the American Civil War artillery played a large part, as far as noise and intimidation are concerned, but did little actual damage, and indeed until the Russo-Japanese artillery was not to be relied upon. Before that time, while the range was considerable, the guns were too easily put out of action, and too slow in operation. Frequently the shells did not burst, and when they did their destructive power was not a fraction of what it is today. However, both the Japs and the Russians showed new tactics as regards field artillery. They used it in positions never before attempted, and with a speed and a deadliness that fairly staggered military critics. It was in 1894 that an ordinance authority wrote:

"If by any means a manufacturer can produce a wheeled carriage which will form a secure platform for the gun when it is fired, which can be brought into action and limbered up again and which yet will not recoil between the rounds discharged from it, he will benefit horse artillery batteries enormously, and a squadron will be received with the same storm of shells which pelts a torpedo boat rushing to assail a man-o'-war. The production of such a carriage has not yet, however, been accomplished, and we may, therefore, leave the question of re-armament of horse artillery at rest until a most difficult problem is solved."

To Abolish the Recoil.

The reason that the navy was in advance of the army as regards artillery is that on a ship a gun can be solidly fixed to the deck, and the recoil will have no effect. The gun was as solidly based as though in a fortress. With field artillery, however, mobility was demanded. It was plain that the gun had to be mounted on wheels in order that it could be moved about. To take off the wheels every time a gun was fired and then attach them when it became necessary to move the gun was out of the question. The trouble with the best of the modern field artillery twenty years ago was that the piece had to be resighted after every shot. The recoil spoiled every position.

Invention Triumphs.

The invention that finally did away with the recoil and that at once quadrupled the deadly effect of modern artillery is rather a complicated piece of mechanism, but in general somewhat resembles the shock-absorber of the automobile. The modern field piece dragged into position by horses holds its position, once sighted, as long as the gunner desires. If he gets the mark the first shot he can be certain that he will have it on the twentieth shot. The modern gun can discharge at the rate of 24 shots a minute, or as much faster as the ammunition can be handled. The range is about four miles, and the weight of the shell is 18 pounds. In 1877, when the Russians astonished the world with the deadly effects of their shrapnel fire upon the Turks, each shell scattered 37 bullets. A modern shrapnel shell scatters 340. Moreover, the shell itself instead of breaking into 42 pieces breaks into 1,200 fragments and carries death for 200 yards in every direction from the point it strikes.

France's Great Guns.

The first modern field artillery used by the Germans was the Ehrhardt gun, and it is an improved Ehrhardt that the Kaiser's armies are using today. The British field piece is the Armstrong gun. The French gun is the Puteaux, and this last is supposed to be the best of all. It was invented about fifteen years ago, and the secret of its design and manufacture has been carefully guarded by the French military authorities ever since. It has a range of more than five miles, and hurls a three-inch projectile. The Russian and Austrian armies are using Krupp guns, and these are thought not to be quite so effective as the artillery of the British, the French and the Germans.

MANY TRAGEDIES EVERY YEAR DUE TO ANIMALS

Almost every winter wolf tragedies of some sort or another take place in various parts of Canada, though the details concerning them do not generally become known far beyond the locality where they occur, says H. Mortimer Batten in The Montreal Standard. The report that the unfortunate party "perished in the woods" is sufficient for the reader of the daily newspapers in Toronto or Montreal or Winnipeg, and woodsmen are usually somewhat reticent in filling in lurid details concerning the fate of a brother pioneer.

Probably ninety per cent. of the wolf tragedies that occur in outlying settlements, however, are only indirectly due to wolves. The belated woodsman hears the howl of a single wolf on the trail behind him, and the sound, enhanced by the echoes, resembles the full chorus of a hunting-pack. Possibly no wolves have been heard in the district for some years, and the woodsman becomes frightened by the unaccustomed and eerie sound and climbs a tree. Here the cold takes possession of him before he is aware of this far more potent peril. Finally he becomes dazed and falls. The wolves find his remains, and the marks left behind in the snow furnish the condemning proof.

Now, in a country where wolves are heard regularly, a woodsman would not do this sort of a thing, and most of the tragedies occur in vicinities in which wolves have suddenly returned after an absence of some years. When civilization first intrudes the deer promptly vanish, and with them the wolves. As the the country becomes more settled the deer gradually return, and following closely on their heels come the grey prowlers of the northern solitudes."

Woodsmen in Quebec and New Brunswick seem to be far more afraid of wolves than their comrades in Central and Western Canada. Probably this is due to nervous superstition on the part of the French Canadians, and, consequently, more wolf tragedies have occurred in Quebec than in any other province. The following narrative goes to prove how easily panic in the face of imagined danger may be followed by disaster.

Five years ago a party of foreigners were traveling along the old Moose Factory trail in broad daylight, when they suddenly heard a pack of wolves bearing down the lake margin straight towards them. The whole party, with the exception of the forest ranger who was piloting them, at once gave way to panic, four or five men attempting to climb one tree, and trampling each other under foot in their frantic attempts. The ranger, greatly amused, stood looking on, with his rifle ready, and when the wolves appeared he fired into the middle of the bunch and scattered them. It was some time, however, before he could induce the foreigners to return to terra firma, though the cold was so intense that they could not have lived for long in the timber by the wind-swept margin of the lake. Imagine what might have followed had not these ignorant aliens been accompanied by a competent woodsman!

The following year a party of Scandinavians were walking in a single file along the same trail, when the front man, on looking round, was horrified to see a single dog wolf, wagging its tail and leering like a dog, creeping up behind the rear man. The leader at once raised the alarm and hurled his axe, at which the wolf turned sullenly and loped away, apparently not greatly alarmed. One of the men mistook it for a dog which had followed them from camp.

A Labrador missionary told me a curious story which occurred on the Labrador coast some years ago. One night the little daughter of a certain brave was missing, and, on discovering the child's tracks in the snow, a party of squaws set out to look for her. What was their alarm, when, a little way from the camp, they found that the footprints of a great grey wolf accompanied those of the child. The brute did not appear to have harmed her, but had apparently frisked along ahead, enticing the child farther and farther from camp. In all probability the child mistook it for a dog and followed readily, though the superstitious Indians, of course, believed that the brute had exercised some devilish influence over her. Darkness was creeping on, and, though much afraid, the squaws continued to follow the tracks of the wolf and the child. Night found them far from home, when what was their horror to find that they themselves had been deceived, and were now surrounded by wolves! Only one squaw survived the night of horror that ensued, to return next morning to bear tidings of the calamity to camp.

An Indian of the Fishing Lake Reserve, Saskatchewan, told me that in his boyhood a trader named Cobet was surrounded by wolves within a mile of the Indian encampment, and that the wolves devoured his dogs and dragged the load of caribou meat from his sled. The trader himself barely escaped with his life, arriving at the Indian tents in a wretched and badly-torn condition.

KITCHENER OF KHARTOUM

Some Sidelights on the Character of a Famous Warrior.

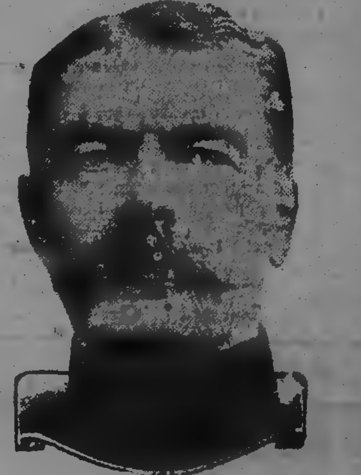
Everything that Kitchener is he has made himself. A bachelor at 64, public opinion has called him a woman hater. As Sirdar of Egypt—really ruler of Egypt, for he has always ignored the Khedive—he would have only bachelors about him. In the thirteen years' war he waged in the Soudan, where he made his own military fame, he chose unmarried men for leadership whenever he could.

"I don't want men around me who are always thinking of their wives and children," he said.

Black haired, with dark gray eyes that suggest lowering war clouds, six feet tall, and still straight as an Egyptian obelisk, he does not look like a man 64 years old.

When the British forces under General Buller had suffered three heart-sickening reverses in the Boer War "K. of K.," was summoned to retrieve the military fortunes of his country. With Earl Roberts he took charge of the situation, and from that hour dated the British victories which resulted in the downfall of the Dutch republics.

Stern and relentless in war, Kitchener is generous to a defeated foe. When the Boers were forced to surrender he offered them terms of a magnanimity more overpowering than his victories had been.



EARL KITCHENER

When Kitchener was in South Africa he was astonished and dismayed by the arrival at the British camp of a young English girl who had volunteered as a trained nurse in order to be near her hero. She found Kitchener in the hospital with camp fever and joyfully prepared to nurse him. But the sick man turned his cold gray eye upon her and remarked sternly: "Please go away; I am far too ill to be nursed."

Next day she returned. This time the hero's face was to the wall. But a sign, written in large black letters, hung above his averted shoulders. "Too ill to be nursed," it read.

The poor girl never came back.

It was his thirteen years' campaign in the African Soudan which won Kitchener his elevation to the peerage, and his supreme place in the affections of the British public and the British soldiers. The enemy he conquered was no easy foe.

Tommy Atkins' respect for the Soudanese fighter was expressed in Kipling's poem, "Fuzzy Wuzzy:"

"You're a poor benighted heathen, but a first-class fightin' man!"

Grimly, resolutely, Kitchener pursued the khalifa and his fanatic hordes, laying a railroad through the desert as he advanced until at last he met and defeated him in the great battle of Omdurman, killing 17,000 in one day. He finished his job by blowing up the sacred tomb of the mahdi, scattering the prophet's bones over the desert sands. In England he was criticized for this action, which Kitchener explained by saying:

"My instructions were to destroy the enemy. I destroyed also the resting place of the false prophet, for the war in the Soudan was a war of religious fanaticism, and so long as that tomb remained it would have been a rallying point for rebellion."

Though Kitchener's god is the god of battles, he seeks tranquility of gardens. Flowers are his delight. When in Egypt he bought an island in the Nile and made of it an oasis of bloom. Even in war he has been known to dismount from his horse to pick a wayside blossom.

Australia Steadfast

The Federal Prime Minister issued the following statement to the people of Australia:

"We must sit tight now and see this thing through at whatever difficulty and whatever cost. We must be steadfast in our determination. Our resources are great and British spirits are not dead. We owe it to those who have gone before to preserve the great fabric of British freedom and hand it on to our children. Our duty is quite clear. Remember, we are Britons."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE KIND THAT WEARS.

THERE'S a heap of satisfaction
In the meeting of a fellow
Who on close investigation
Hasn't any streak of yellow,
Frank and candid in his dealings,
Skulking not behind the bushes,
Never giving to a brother
Any sly, unfriendly pushes—

One who greets you in the open
With a straight and manly bearing
If it's in a friendly contest,
With the laws unwritten squaring,
Or if strife is strong and bitter
Being just as true and candid,
Though it aids him in the winning,
Doing nothing underhanded.

There is very little pleasure
Dealing with the kind of creatures
Who are neither milk nor water,
But are double in their features,
Those who greet you in the morning
With a manner quite attractive,
But when you are at a distance
With their hammer arm get active.

Oh, the true blue man and brother,
Not the fawner or the flunky,
But the one to face the music,
Is the fellow who is hunky!
And it's good to get your peepers
On the man who's right all over,
For in life's large field of action
They are not as thick as clover.

Far as It Would Carry.

"Put me out when I have ridden a quarter's worth," said the passenger to the driver of the taxicab as he climbed in and sat down to make himself at home.

"All right," said the driver. "We will just back three feet and then you can tumble out."

Sure to Do It.

Or whether right or whether wrong,
It doesn't matter much,
For as we gayly go along
We get in trouble's clutch.

TORTURED NO LONGER WITH ASTHMA

Sometimes, He Had To Sit Up All Night For Weeks At A Time—Suffered For 15 Years Until He Cured Himself With "Fruit-a-tives".

D. A. WHITE, ESQ.

21 Wallace Ave., Toronto, Dec. 22nd. 1913

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years (sometimes having to sit up nights for weeks at a time) I began the use of "Fruit-a-tives" These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion".

D. A. WHITE

Asthma is a disease of the Nerves. It usually attacks those of a highly strung nervous system—those whose nerves are easily affected by any disturbance of digestion. This is why 98% of those who suffer with Asthma, also suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia or Constipation. In Mr. White's case, his Asthma was cured at the same time that his Indigestion was cured.

Why? Because "Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on stomach, bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" cleans the whole system of the poisons that are irritating the nerves. "Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, insures sound digestion and healthy appetite. "Fruit-a-tives" is a positive cure for Asthma and Hay Fever.

DEADLY POWER OF MODERN TORPEDO

"T.N.T." Strongest of Explosives, is Now Employed—How the Torpedo is Constructed, Projected and Controlled.

Trinitrotoluene, which, for the benefit of the uninitiated, may be printed tri-nitro-tolu-ene, and is curtly spoken of by navy men as T. N. T., is the compound on which Germany is relying to reduce Britain's battleship strength before her main fleet puts forth to give battle.

It is the explosive in the warhead of the modern torpedo. Until quite recent years guncotton (whose other name is trinitrocellulose) was used, but the discovery of means whereby T.N.T. could be detonated made the use of that much more deadly explosive possible in the torpedo. It is a rival to picric acid (of which lyddite is a form), and is derived from nitric acid and toluene, which is one of the benzine series.

It is remarkably insensitive to shock or friction and can be sawn through or fired on at short range by rifle bullets and will not detonate. Even fulminate of mercury, for many years the only detonator used, is not powerful enough to explode T.N.T. effectively, and consequently next to the fulminate in the cap of the detonator a quantity of tetryl is placed, though it has been stated that in the most modern torpedoes this has been replaced by lead azide, which is absolutely insensitive to damp, and has other advantages.

Machine With Ears.

The latest pattern of German torpedo is of 21⅛ inch diameter, carries a bursting charge of 290 pounds of explosive and has a range of about 7,500 yards.

Most people know that a torpedo is a cigar-shaped projectile, but only a few realize that it is about 17 feet long. Nor probably are many people aware of the uncanny devices which have been added to the torpedo one by one to insure that it shall do its work.

How It Is Aimed.

The torpedo is fired nearly always from a tube beneath the water line, and travelling, as it does, through the water and not through the air, is always liable to be deflected from its course. Moreover, now that it is destined to be used against ships of high speed on the move, instead of merely at anchored vessels, as was originally the case, the torpedo lieutenant, in arranging the firing of the torpedo, has to allow both for the speed of the projectile towards the enemy's ship and the speed at which that ship is travelling across the path of the torpedo.

To correct the tendency to leave the straight course a gyroscopic attachment was invented, and to make additionally certain that the torpedo shall find its mark, a device which may be likened to the ears has been patented. This is a microphone, which catches the sound of the ship's propellers and steers the torpedo towards that sound.

Jealously-Guarded Secrets.

In sections a torpedo may be described thus:

(1) The pistol and detonator.
(2) The explosive charge.
(3) Air chamber containing the compressed air motive power.
(4) Balance chamber in which are the controls of the rudders.
(5) Engines.
(6) Buoyancy chamber.
(7) Rudders.
(8) Propellers.

This is of course only the barest outline of what is one of the most ingenious and complicated death-dealing machines in the world. Improvements in the design of the torpedo are the most jealously guarded secrets of any admiralty. Germany long ago abandoned the practice of buying torpedoes from any armament firm and made them in her own government works, close to a suitable expanse of water where they could be tested in absolute secrecy. And even with all the improvements, no torpedo lieutenant trusts his "tin fish." It is a treacherous and ungrateful animal, that may play its master false at any moment, though it will hardly turn and rend the hand that fired it. Even the temperature of the water may not be to its liking, and will make all the difference in the world to its speed.

Four-Mile Range.

The torpedo is of course the primary weapon of the submarine and the torpedo-boat destroyer. But every Dreadnought is designed with torpedo tubes, too, and in a fleet action, if it is fought within the range of the torpedo, it may well be the 17-foot under-water projectiles that will do more damage than the shells of the 13.5 inch gun. For one torpedo with a warhead of 296 pounds of T.N.T. that gets well home on the hull of a 27,000-ton battleship will do enough damage to put her right out of control and hopelessly crippled as a fighting ship. The chance of such a success for the enemy is greater still if he fires two torpedoes simultaneously on a parallel course, the distance between them being approximately the length of the ship aimed at. Salvoes of torpedoes have been fired with a result of one hit out of three projectiles, both in the German and British navies, at squadrons of ships at a range of three and three-quarter miles, and one German technical writer claimed last year that similar results can be obtained even up to six and a quarter miles. This, however, has been questioned by torpedo experts.

It is against the peril of this weapon that the fleet in the North Sea has to guard at the moment. Germany would consider herself well repaid if she sacrificed eight torpedo-boat destroyers and sent two battleships to the bottom. The loss of the U 15 would have been a small thing if at the same time her consorts had been able to torpedo a ship like the Conqueror, which is a finer fighting machine than any that flies the German flag.

The Man of the Merchant

He Proved His Courage and Daring

By PETER VAUX

I.

No sooner did the senior engineer hear the peremptory summons than he scurried from the crowded wardroom.

"Poor devil! Did you notice his face, Bellamy?" said the second engineer, addressing the florid paymaster. "He went as pale as death. When the deuce does Torshell eat and sleep, Naylen? He never seems to be off duty."

The surgeon twitched his spruce eyebrows.

"Oh, Mebbe, our senior engineer—our man of the merchant marine!" said he in his usual flippant, exasperating tone. "He'll go the same as Chisleburst if worries don't cease. No human being, much less Torshell, can stand for any length of time the state of affairs in this boat's engine room and stokeholds. It's enough to drive any man mad!"

"Chisle is really not well, then? We all know the complaint of Pattenie of the Farin' Furnace, as the fo'castle terms her."

Naylen shrugged his shoulders. "Our staff engineer went into sick bay to let this R. N. R. fellow shine, did he?" was his tart rejoinder. "Too much strain and unrest have knocked him off his legs. And so Mebbe is the man we must depend on now."

Said the paymaster in his big, raucous voice: "That is what happens with these understaffed engine rooms and insufficient repairs. Here we are, the lamest of the lame ducks in the division and tailin' off the column, with a reserve chap out of an easy, oozy, ten knot merchantman handlin' our engines, and rickety old machines they are. God alone knows what'll happen with him and his untried nerve when we pick the enemy up again!"

"A jolly good thing for us the enemy are just as much worried with breakdowns," was the consoling remark from the other end of the table. "The Rurik, the Freya, the Jena and"—

"I wouldn't indict the dockyard on the insufficient repairs point, Bellamy," interrupted the second. "My lords were responsible. They wouldn't enlarge the yards, make new ones or lease out repairs, so as to have all the necessary work for mobilization coped with adequately. But it is odd how she was passed out with the starboard cylinder cover not remedied. Of course nobody 'll be held responsible, as usual!"

Bellamy nodded, turning from scolding the harassed steward. He replied slowly. "But yet when an R. N. R. fellow can pop up and take seniority over the regular service, as in this boat, you can't expect"—

"Oh, here we are again!" the second broke in with. "Jealousies as usual. Torshell is as fit as any engineer. By George," he cried, listening intently, "the engines are slowin' down!"

II.

Torshell had approached Captain Widdrington and the "first," who lingered in the chart house discussing recent instructions. The senior engineer had coughed slightly to intimate his presence. The captain looked up, a frown sweeping his hard face on marking him.

"Sir," cried the engineer, "the port"—

"One moment, sir!" was the short answer. "This isn't a steam bus." And Torshell, again saluting, had stepped back, his pallid face blood red and his teeth hard clinched and gritting. The wary, diplomatic first just then cheerily nodded aside to him.

He let himself rock to the vessel's figgling among the cumbrous masses of sea. Since he had joined, off the way-laid liner, his had been hard luck. He felt acutely the general sentiment against him; but, notwithstanding all, his mettle was yet strong. It was the snobbish crowd in the wardroom and the unpleasant bearing of his subordinates that caused his discomfort of mind.

Suddenly he had held in his breath and unwittingly stepped toward the bridge ladder. The first drew himself back from the chart, darting a look of surprise at Torshell. But the captain's steel blue eyes flamed with sudden anger.

"Good heavens, sir! Your engines aren't slowing down?"

Torshell saluted. "Port air pump, sir."

"This drives a man mad!" cried Widdrington, crashing his big fist upon the table. "Nothing but defects, defects! Can ye drive engines at all, you miserable merchantman? What d'ye want to slacken down to? What's wrong this time? You"—

That second came a tremendous jarring and crunching beneath their feet. The great ship was shaken like a thing of straw. An appalling hammering followed, chaotic and deafening. Gray steam surged through hatchways, ventilators and companions.

The senior engineer had rushed from the bridge. As he raced amidships he snatched the sacking off the backs of some of the "black squad" dumping ashes overboard, grabbed at a quartermaster's oilskins and shoved them all upon him.

"Garret an' Epburn an' Mr. Jerroll in port alleyway!" was the answer to his shout from the artificers now in safety. It reached his ear as he stepped down into the uproar of smashing, clashing metal.

With heightened anxiety and fear, Widdrington stared at the steam still outpouring. The thunderous clanking of ponderous machinery galloping loose beat frightfully into his ear. With much more of it bilge plates would be started.

It was then that a blear eyed, cinder burnt signalman came hurrying along. "Flagship flingin' out 'Chase' signals, sir!" was his report.

III.

When Torshell again dragged himself on the bridge he was a mere unshapely mass, held together by swaths of lint. Widdrington stepped hastily to him and helped him up the last rungs of the ladder. The captain looked into the seamed and scalded face, nearly hidden beneath bandages. Said he heartily: "By heavens, ye've pluck! These men owe their lives to you. Ye've pluck." And with this certificate forthcoming at last for service done he dismissed the case for heroism.

"But about this breakdown—what can you do? Our east wing scouts are in touch with the enemy, and here am I not doing five knots. Never a shot to be fired, and ahead they've got all the work. Can you do nothing with these starboard engines?"

"They are in a pretty bad fix, but I'll do my best to work them for a time at least."

The senior engineer staggered to a deep wallow of the stricken vessel as a tumultuous swell tilted her casemated broadside. He would have fallen headlong if the officers had not sprung forward and caught him under the arms. He moaned. "My knee! My knee! It's smashed."

Half an hour later he was superintending his officers and men, who, stripped to their trousers, were clearing away the wreck. Every order that issued peremptorily from his blanched lips went full and fair to the mark and afforded succinct knowledge and confidence to the grimy, sweating workers. Theirs were unbegrudged obedience and execution, for each now understood his man. Hunched shouldered, he was through physical agonies; yet, knowing that he held the lives of 700 men and that great, glorious ship in his hand, he maintained his will indomitable. Not a detail escaped his eye or slipped his brain.

IV.

Night had long since dropped. The immense boat lay lurching from side to side, plunging wildly under the tons of green seas that thudded like battering rams against her bows and forecastle what time the high walled swell broke roaring.

"Make for northwest trade patrol. Regain nearest port. Much regret breakdown," had been the sorely harassed vice admiral's latest message.

Captain Widdrington, a barrel swathed in shawls and many waterproofs, was with the first and third lieutenants on the afterbridge. Wearily he turned from straining his eyes over the indistinct summits of yeasty seas and cleared the brine off his face and bushy eyebrows with the flat of his left hand. He was cautiously making his way up the bridge when suddenly he stopped short. A quartermaster shouted, "D'ye hear that, sir?"

A faint boom had rung through the stormy wind, ominous, like to a dying world's last echo.

The first dodged a scattered spout of sea. "If the enemy drive down on us will you fight, sir?"

"Yes, by heavens! As well go down fightin' as not. If we can work ship it's the very weather for us. See Torshell. I must risk the port engines."

And as Wingate carefully made his way on deck "Firin' east sou'east!" was the lookout's hail.

He climbed down the thirty odd feet of slippery ladder into the maze of motionless machinery. As he touched the senior engineer on the elbow he noted his inbent and quivering lips.

"Can't say," was the answer. "Mebbe we will. But every man is workin' his best. If it is in my power the starboard mills 'll run."

"If we can't steam God help us!" ejaculated the first.

V.

As the luckless warship flung herself about the iron flooring beneath the wornout men seesawed hither and thither, throwing them off their feet. She evened herself in a broad valley of the mountainous sea wastes.

Torshell yelled: "Let her go! Let her go!"

A breaking hill of wild water was hurling itself on the weather quarter just as the chains rattled through the blocks. Torshell lurched forward and then, to the boat's violent heeling, toppled helplessly between the hinder column of the intermediate engine and the banging mass of cylinder gear.

"Lower! Lower! Never mind me!" came in an intense shriek. Their racked and knotted arms pulled desperately, and the disconnected workings were lowered clear down to the floor plates.

The maimed and bleeding mass of flesh that had been Torshell, R. N. R., was slipping into the crank pit, but Jerroll and some others held it fast. And it came that as the waning voice moaned "Give her steam! Give her steam! Mind the links!" the mad pealing of the telegraph made his assistant leap to the starting engine. The two cut off scouts of the enemy were opening a heavy cannonading.

The dull grunting of guns and the quickening thud of his engines the senior engineer did not hear. Cried Naylen, on his knees beside him, "The best man among us, and we never knew it!"

The fighting ship went bravely into action, but the man of the merchant marine would never again give ear.

Work by any other name wouldn't make a bigger hit.

CELERY BLANCHING

Our markets demand a clean, white-stalked celery. This is obtained by a process called blanching or growing the leaf stalks in darkness. This destroys the color in the stalk and prevents any more forming. It also makes the stalk crisp and tender. If earth is used, a characteristic sweetness and nutty flavor is obtained.

Early celery is usually blanched with boards, paper, or something of that kind. If earth is used before the cool weather of Fall, it is likely to cause rust or decay on the stalks, which, of course, destroys their value. Early celery should be ready to blanch any time after the middle of July. Sound boards 10 or 12 inches wide, one inch thick, and 12 to 16 feet long are laid on each side of the row. They may be cleated at the ends and centre to prevent splitting or warping away from the plants. Hooks are also used to keep the upper edges close to the celery stalk. Treated in this way, celery will bleach in from one to three weeks, depending on weather conditions. Warm, moist weather will hasten blanching, while cool weather will retard it. As fast as the bleached celery is used the boards may be put on other plants. Building paper, or even newspapers, may be used if the season is not too wet.

Late celery may be blanched with boards or with earth as mentioned above. Earth-blanched celery has a better flavor than board-blanched. Where earth is used, draw it up half or two-thirds of the way to the top of the plant, when both plant and soil are dry. After a few days, more earth may be put around the plant, leaving from four to six inches of the top above the soil. This may be accomplished by a celery hiller, or, on a small scale, with the hoe. It is sometimes an advantage to "handle" celery before hilling, that is, draw the stalks closely about the heart of the plant, holding them in place either by tying or with soil. From ten to eighteen days are required to bleach celery for use by this method. Celery well protected with soil will not be injured by quite severe frosts. Where celery is to be stored for Winter use, it should be bleached but very little, if at all, in the field.

Candid Criticism.

Mr. G. A. Storey, the well known artist, once told an amusing story of a family group he painted one year for the Academy. The picture was accepted and was hung "on the line," and he arranged to escort the family to the Academy to see how it looked. They were all grouped round the picture, each silently admiring his or her own portrait, when two other people drifted up to have a look.

Suddenly Mr. Storey was appalled to hear one of the newcomers say to his companion, "What an exceedingly ugly looking lot of people!"

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women —ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

BOWSER'S VISITOR

It's His Mother-in-law, Whom He Welcomes Warmly

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was smiling and good natured when he reached home and Mrs. Bowser was so pleased over the fact that they were hardly seated at the table when she said:

"I have news for you. Who do you think is coming on the 8 o'clock train?"

"Not your mother?" he queried.

"Yes, got a telegram from her an hour ago. I—I hope you won't be mad."

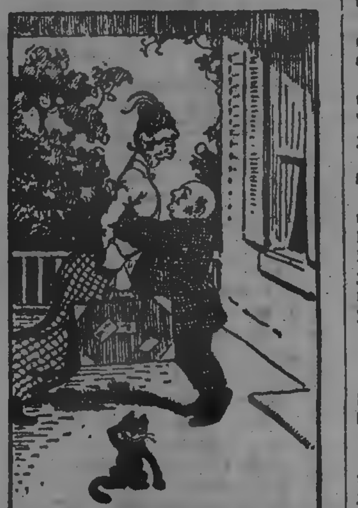
"Mad? Why should I be mad? She's a nice old lady, and we always got along all right. I shall be glad to see her."

"I'm so glad! Mother is a plain spoken woman, you know. She always says just what she thinks. You won't care if she speaks her mind?"

"Not the slightest. She can talk her head off for all I care. I believe I differed with her the last time she was here, but that's all past and gone. She's in her second childhood, and if she's blunt we can overlook it. You just make yourself easy about me."

"That is nice and sweet of you. I was so afraid you might not be glad to see her."

"You just think I'm a queer man," said Mr. Bowser as he looked across at her. "Is she not your mother? Isn't she as dear to me as my own? Do you imagine I would hurt your feelings by having unpleasant words with an old lady, who is not responsible for half she says? She's got a way of saying mean things, but if she happens to hit me I'll simply laugh at her. I hope she'll stay at least four weeks, and I'll lay myself out to give her a pleasant visit."



HER WELCOME WAS WARM.

Mrs. Bowser had several dim and undefined remembrances connected with a former visit, but she choked them back and made herself believe that Mr. Bowser would do all he said.

When the hour and the mother-in-law arrived her welcome was warm, and for an hour or so all was harmony and good will. The conversation, which had been made up of home happenings, finally fell flat, and the mother-in-law started up afresh by saying:

"Out our way we have been much interested in a divorce case, and I am glad to say it came out all right. That is, the wife got her divorce."

"What was the trouble?" carelessly queried Mr. Bowser.

"Why, he was a man who was always bossing and bulldozing his wife. He thought he knew it all and she nothing. He was always kicking and fault finding, and her life was made miserable. She was a sweet, patient woman, or she would never have stood it a month. I expect there are plenty of other women suffering just as she suffered."

Trouble Brewing.

Mrs. Bowser saw a flush creep over Mr. Bowser's face and attempted to turn the conversation. He smiled, but followed the smile with an observation:

"And there are no doubt plenty of husbands who are made miserable by wives who have no system of management."

"They are a poor lot, take 'em as they run," continued the old lady with a good deal of acid in her tones. "I am glad you are behaving yourself better than you used to."

Mr. Bowser's neck began to grow red and his ears to twitch, and Mrs. Bowser made a heroic effort to get her mother upstairs to unpack her trunk. Mr. Bowser remembered his promise, but at the same time he felt that he had been hit and must hit back, and he therefore said:

"Why do you say better than I used to be? Did you ever have any fault to find in me?"

"You started out to nag and boss, I believe, and were always threatening divorce if anything went wrong. I'm glad you've got over it. While you may be the man of the house and all that, you've got no more rights than the woman. Do you still keep up your fads, or have you become sensible?"

This was piling it on to Mr. Bowser. He could have turned it off with a laugh and taken a walk, but his dignity would have suffered by so doing. He didn't ache for a row, but he wanted his mother-in-law to understand that he was at the head of that family.

Mrs. Bowser Feels a Storm Coming.

"What fads to you refer to?" he quietly asked, while Mrs. Bowser dodged out of the room to escape the coming storm.

"Oh, you used to have 'em by the thousand. When I was here last you paid $15 for a fire escape or some such folderol. I believe you were also going to raise your own pork and eggs, and you had an electric battery, a homemade burglar alarm and a machine for making your own porous plasters. It's a wonder you haven't tried something to make your hair grow. I never get a letter without wondering what tomfoolery you've been up to."

"You—you are talking to me!" gasped Mr. Bowser as his eyes hung out and his chin bobbled up and down.

"I'm not in the habit of talking to the walls," replied the mother-in-law. "I hope you haven't got the idea that you are too big to be talked to."

"But I never had a fad in my life!" he protested.

"Nonsense! You have kept the house upset with 'em for the last ten years. However, you may get over it in time. Do you still cross your hands under your coat tails and teeter back and forth on your heels and try to make your wife believe that you are a big injun?"

Mr. Bowser Can Stand It No Longer.

"Woman," exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he jumped to his feet, "I allow no living person to talk to me that way! Did you come out here to—to"—

"I came out here on a short visit," she interrupted, "and if you behave yourself we shall get along all right. No need of your getting red all over and bristling up in hopes to scare me. You've got a voice on you like a bullfrog, but I've heard that kind before. Have you got through making a nuisance of yourself in the kitchen and thinking you know all about bossing a hired girl?"

"I never interfered with the domestic arrangements of the house!" he shouted as he looked around for the cat to give her a lift with his foot.

"Why, you drove two away when I was here last! I told Annie then that you were the biggest henhussy I ever met with, and if she'd taken my advice she'd have sat down on you like a brick house. I'm glad to hear you are minding your own business. Have you expended any sympathy on tramps lately?"

"Woman, have you come a hundred miles to insult me?" demanded Mr. Bowser as his heels got red hot under him.

"Don't get a stroke of apoplexy over it!" replied the mother-in-law as she coaxed the cat on her lap. "What you need is a wife who will trim you down occasionally. All husbands need trimming. They are apt to think they own the earth. What are you breathing so hard about? Got another hog in the pen?"

"I never had a hog!"

"Perhaps it was a calf, then; I know you had a poor animal of some sort penned"—

"Never!"

Adding Insult to Injury.

"Don't about so loud, and for mercy sake sit down in that chair before your knees collapse under you! Seems to me you are getting bow legged. With about ten pounds more of fat on your ribs you'll lead the procession. How many cures for rheumatism have you got on hand just now?"

"And I've got to stand this!" groaned Mr. Bowser as he looked around in a helpless way.

"Oh, you'll survive and be the better for it. I'm going upstairs now, but tomorrow I shall want to talk to you a little. That is, you need a lot of trimming and you'll get it. Don't swallow your collar button now, and don't go banging around and threatening to get a divorce from Annie. I'll bid you good night now and see you in the morning."

Two hours later he came creeping up to bed. Mrs. Bowser looked at him from her half closed eyes and noted that he was palefaced and his eyes had a hunted look, and as he got into bed he uttered a groan and whispered to himself:

"And she is to have a further talk to me tomorrow, and there is no chance to murder her in cold blood!"

Little Man Who Would Be a Brave Boy Scout.

The gallant young soldier in the picture hopes some day to be big enough to join the Boy Scouts of America. At his home in Hoboken, N. J., he has two brothers who are members of that famous organization, now known in almost every civilized nation on the globe. He was among the visitors at city hall, New York city, last Fourth of July when the boy scouts acted as guards and ushers at the "safe and sane" celebration conducted by Mayor Mitchel and other city officials. While there he had his picture taken by the camera man. You see that he has soldierly ideas, and his uniform is more military even than that of the real boy scouts. He is only five, and therefore he has a few years to wait before he can qualify as a tenderfoot. But he is optimistic and bravely waits for that glorious time.

A Porch Party Game.

Jennie was invited to a porch party where they played quiet games, the kind you use pencil and paper for. One was called "A Geographical Game," and after the pencils and paper had been given out the hostess said that she would dictate some sentences, each one of which could be answered by the name of a place on the map. Here are the questions with the answers. Try them when you have a porch party:

A piece of carpet? Brussels.

A sprig of elm? Elmwood.

A bit of red pepper? Cayenne.

A piece of liver and a pan of water? Liverpool.

A cigar? Havana.

A dish of salt water? Salt lake.

A new boat? Newark.

A small stone? Little Rock.

A cord tied to a bell? Belfast.

A number of newspapers? Reading.

A large champagne bottle cork? Cork.

A can marked 2240 pounds? Canton.

A fine straw hat? Leghorn.

A roll of wrapping paper? Manila.

A piece of cardboard? Bristol.

A peanut shell? Hull.

A key and the setting sun? Key West.

A sofa bed? Davenport.

A horn tied to a seaman's cape? Cape Horn.

A tree with a long branch? Long Branch.

A wagon marked 2,240 pounds on a bridge? Bridgeton.

A child peeking in at a door? Peking.

Riddles.

When are two apples alike? When pared.

What instrument of war does the earth resemble? A revolver.

When does a man impose upon himself? When he taxes his memory.

What would contain all the snuff in the world? No one nose (knows).

Who were the first astronomers? The stars, because they have studded (studied) the heavens ever since the creation.

If all the women went to China, where would all the men go? To Pekin (peek in).

When is a blow from a pretty girl welcome? When she strikes you agreeably.

Johnny's Jokes.

Mother told Johnny to go to the shop and get her a water cracker.

Johnny came back with an ice pick, and his mother failed to see the joke.

Johnny was taken to the postoffice by his father. They were talking about all sorts of things when the father remarked, "What an unpleasant odor!"

"I guess," answered Johnny, "it comes from the dead letters here."

"What is that noise in the library?" asked papa of Johnny.

"Must be history repeating itself," answered the incorrigible.

The Joy of It.

You bet I'd hate to like to work
Like some folks seem to do
Who rush at every job and feel
Put out when they are through!
Work in its place, I do not doubt,
Is possibly all right,
But I can get along, I find,
Without an awful sight.

If they can have a lot to do
Is all some people ask.
They couldn't pass away the time
Without a steady task.
I'm glad I am not built upon
Dimensions of that sort,
For I can thoroughly enjoy
A task that's sweet and short.

I love to sit around the house
And let the moments flee
And think what loads of work there are
That do not fall to me.
Some for the asking I might have,
But no such beastly luck
I'll guarantee will come if I
Have but a chance to duck.

Let others do the strenuous,
Let others strain their backs
In hunting work. Away from it
I'll leave a line of tracks.
Each in his chosen way may lead
The life that suits him best.
If I can only have my way
I'll take a line of rest.

SECRET OF THE LOVE BIRD.

It May Be Discovered in the Milk of Human Kindness.

Everything else dwindles into insignificance when the love bird appears. Affection, devotion, tenderness and love burst gladly forth at her magic touch. * * *

The road to happiness is attained through the generous distribution of the milk of human kindness.

Success, achievement, wealth, prominence, are only worth while when shared by your friends. No matter how large you can spell "success," it gives you little satisfaction if your accomplishment is not sincerely enjoyed by many. When surrounded by friends and loved ones, if you are fortunate in the acquisition of a generous disposition and charming personality, what a joy it is to be able to give them cheer, comfort, pleasure and satisfaction!

Who does not feel better for the "God bless you" from an old lady to whom you have shown some trifling kindly attention? Who is not thrilled by the joyous barking of his dog upon returning home?

Fortunate are those who feel the arms of children around their necks, hear the baby's laugh and see the wonderful mites toddling toward them, happy and unafraid.

All these joys sink into insignificance when the one and only one looks into your eyes, tender, true, steadfast. Words need not be spoken; nothing else matters. Then, and not until then, will you know the excess of happiness, the full realization of love, and then is the time to unite yourself steadfastly to fidelity, magnanimous generosity and open heartedness to all.

SURGICAL SHOCK.

Only In a Vague Way Does Science Know What Causes It.

Shock is still one of the great mysteries of surgery. Many theories have been put forward to explain just what it is. Each of these has seemed attractive until its inherent defects were discovered by experience.

In a lecture before the British Royal College of Surgery Dr. A. Rendle Short reviewed these successive theories and described the experiments of himself and others by which they were disproved. But researches by Dr. Crile of Cleveland, Professor Sherrington of England and Dr. F. H. Pike of Columbia university, New York, seemed to him to offer at least a clew to the real nature of shock.

Professor Short did not formulate a definite theory, but suggested that surgical shock was due to an inhibiting or paralyzing of the important nuclei in the region of the fourth ventricle of the brain and perhaps in the cerebellum. These are "continually sending impulses down the spinal cord, maintaining its functional activity and increasing muscular tone." The effect of this paralysis is to cut off these impulses, whereupon the functions of the spinal cord are greatly reduced, muscular tone is abolished, and as a secondary result the blood pressure may fall. The respiratory center and perhaps also the vasomotor center share in this inhibition or paralysis.

Fear Is Useless.

Phobism is an addition to fear (another name for worry). If smugness be unlovely from a social point of view phobism is fatal to its victim. Did it ever occur to you that fear can become a habit and a luxury, just as smoking is? But phobism is the more hazardous. We fear poverty, we fear disease, we fear death, we fear that we shall be snubbed socially. And each separate fear impairs our capacity for work in a definite, measurable way. I know many people addicted to the use of fear. Some of them use it to excess. To the psychologist fear is the most expensive of all habits that people indulge. Ninety-nine and forty-four one-hundredths per cent of fear is as useless as a deckhand on a submarine.—Elliott Park Frost in Atlantic.

Between Bugles

A Salt Water Romance

By MATTHEW WHITE, JR.

The dressing bugle had sounded some time since, but Dorothy still stood looking out over the sea. She was thinking how unfortunate it was that dinner on shipboard always robbed her of a view of the sunset. She was a good sailor and consequently had no excuse for taking her meals on deck.

"Still, if this were the only thing I had to worry over," she reflected, "I might indeed be a happy woman."

And this was why Dorothy Shaw was a mystery to all her friends. She refused to be happy, though rich.

"Try it yourselves," she would reply to their expressions of incredulity. "Have so much money left you that your every movement is followed by reporters. If you happen to order a different paper on Friday from the one you bought on Thursday you are certain that you will read in all of them on Saturday that you have decided to give a million to the campaign fund."

She felt that she could trust no one. By sorry experience she had learned that wealth was a bait few could resist, and "How much does he or she want now?" was her first thought on the advances of every new friend she made.

Finally in desperation she had taken passage in a slow ship under an assumed name, but even so was beset by the constant fear that some one on board would have seen her picture in the papers when her uncle left her the fortune which was her nightmare. That was an additional reason why she liked to linger on deck after most of her fellow passengers had gone down to array themselves for dinner.

"Oh!"

The exclamation was forced from her by a sudden gust of wind that took her tam on its wings and blew it straight across the gap of lower afterdeck that intervened on the Alicia between the first and second cabins.

The next instant she smiled and barely refrained from applauding. A man standing well forward on the deck had stretched out his hand and caught the truant bit of red worsted as it went whizzing by him.

A half minute later and the two were standing on the neutral territory of the deck below, for Dorothy had descended in order to meet him halfway in restoring her property.

"I'm very much obliged," said she.

"Not at all," said the man.

He was tall and straight and had the clear blue eyes that Dorothy preferred above all others.

She was about to turn back when the other exclaimed:

"Look: there's a whale! He's just spouted. He'll come up again in a minute, if you care to watch. See, where my finger points."

Dorothy certainly did care to watch. In all her crossings she had never seen a whale. Now she was rewarded with a fine view of a large specimen.

As it happened, this one kept on in the direction of the steamer for awhile, and after each spout she felt she must wait and see the next one. And then her companion seemed to know a good deal about the creatures, which he imparted in a voice which possessed for Dorothy an indefinable charm.

Voices were a sort of hobby with her. She often declared that this was the one point on which she was not thoroughly patriotic—she could not bring herself to admire the average American accent.

But this stranger's voice puzzled her. He looked and dressed like one of her countrymen, but he spoke with neither the western burr, the southern twang, the Boston affectation nor the New York flatness.

She did not know until some weeks later that he was English born, but had come to the States as a young fellow hoping for better opportunities to make a living than his mother country afforded him. He was returning to England to claim a sum of money left him by an uncle.

The dinner bugle sounded, and the man, as if reminded by its notes that he belonged in a different atmosphere (the second cabin is called to meals by a plebeian bell), lifted his cap and walked away.

For the remainder of the voyage Sherwood Roberts hung over the back rail to gaze into the swirl of waters surging out from the twin screws and curse the fate that had led to his meeting this pretty woman on the present trip instead of on the one he expected to take a few weeks later.

"I might as well be a thousand miles away from her as in second cabin," he muttered between clinched teeth. "Idiot that I was for coming this way. And to think that within ten days I could lay a fortune at her feet. And the conventions won't even permit that I send her a note to say that this is positively my last appearance in poverty. But perhaps I'll meet her in London."

He never did, however, although he haunted Hyde park and the fashionable hotels after his claim to his uncle's property had been established and he had come into the possession of that which enabled him to dress three times a day.

"I wonder now," he would sometimes ask himself, "if I had put my pride in my pocket and borrowed enough on my expectations to come over first instead of second, would things have turned out differently? She looked as if she didn't mind so very much my having detained her to talk about whales. I wonder if'—'

But what was the use of wondering anything about a woman he would probably never see again?

So this Englishman who had lived so long in the States that he could not keep away from them re-embarked for his adopted country in a first cabin deck room and tried to be happy in spite of a handicap that he couldn't forget.

During the first night out it came on to blow great guns. Roberts lay in his berth late, debating whether to get up or not, when suddenly something shot through his open port and hit him squarely in the face.

It was soft and red, with gold threads running through it, and—

"Great Scott!" ejaculated Roberts, starting up in his berth. "Her tam!"

Surely there could not be two of them—at least, he hoped there couldn't. But how had it come into his cabin?

It could not be possible that she knew he was there and had taken this means of apprising him of her presence? Why, she had scarcely spoken half a dozen words to him in her life.

But the cap was hers unmistakably.

He fondled it foolishly for a minute or two and then got up and proceeded to dress with all speed, or at least with as much speed as was consistent with the rolling of the vessel.

All day he haunted the ladies' room and the decks, almost deserted on account of the storm, and had begun to read the cards affixed beside each stateroom door when he suddenly remembered the foolishness of this plan to find a woman whose name he did not know.

"This is simply maddening," he told himself after a day of fine weather and still no sight of the tam's owner. "At this rate she will escape me again."

Then he bethought him of a brilliant expedient.

He took a pen and wrote the following notice:

Found.—A lady's red tam, shot with gold. Owner may have same by applying at cabin 23 between bugles any evening.

This he affixed to the bulletin board in the companionway and that night dressed a half hour before the first bugle sounded so as to be in readiness to receive company during the period named.

But nobody appeared that evening nor the next, and now there were only two days left on the voyage.

He had passed a half hour of impatient waiting in the stuffy stateroom on the third day of the notice, and, quite discouraged, threw open his door to go to dinner, when he stepped squarely into the person who had emerged from her room just opposite in the narrow entryway.

"I beg your pardon," said Roberts, and then he fairly gasped as he realized that the other person was the lady of the tam.

"I have something of yours," he blurted out—"that red tam you lost once before."

The girl's cheeks suddenly took on the hue of the cap that hung over Roberts' berth.

"Oh," she said, "was it your port I flung it into? I didn't know. It started to blow away again that first morning, and I thought I was tossing it into my own cabin."

"And you've been just across that five foot space," Roberts rejoined, "while I've been ransacking the ship for you—to restore the tam," he hastened to add. "Didn't you see the notice on the bulletin board?"

"No. This is the first I've been out since the storm. It left me with a nasty reminder of the shaking we all received. I'm so glad to be on deck again! Did you have a pleasant trip on the other side?"

"Jolly fine," answered Roberts.

But he wasn't thinking of the other side at all when he said it, but of the woman he had lost and found again.

Unconsciously they had walked to that part of the deck where Dorothy had been standing when the tam blew off on the voyage over.

"I suppose I must pin the cap in tightly this time," she remarked. "You won't be there to catch it if it flies off again." And she glanced over at the second cabin.

He looked up at the one she was wearing.

"That's a very pretty tam," he observed irrelevantly. "I trust it is skewered in tightly."

Whether she read his inner meaning, she gave no token then, but suggested that it was nigh time they both went down to dinner. The next night was the dance, and after the final two-step she reminded him that in the morning there would be the bustle of landing.

"And I haven't relieved you of that tam yet," she added.

"I shall miss it very much," he replied. "And you won't need it now the voyage is over."

"Yes," she said softly, her eyes fixed on Nantucket light, toward which they were swiftly cutting their way. "I suppose it has served its purpose, but I don't want to lose it again."

Roberts knew she wasn't thinking of all the words implied, but he was quick enough to seize at the opening, and—well, before they faced the customs officers on the pier he knew where to take the tam.

But he always forgets to carry it with him when he calls, and when Dorothy one evening said "Yes" to a certain question he asked her she added, "This is a desperate step to take to regain possession of a little old red tam-o'-shanter."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

UNIVERSAL FAVORITE.

Although you are a very old
And stable institution
And was on deck some years before
Our worthy constitution,
Still you are ever young, sweet spring,
And if it does not tire you
We'd like to let you know again
How truly we admire you.

You come before our eager gaze
As fresh as any daisy.
And by the perfumes that you shed
You set the poet crazy.
He dashes off a frenzied line
Alive and full of meaning,
And then his wife appears and says
The basement steps need cleaning.

You coax the grass to come along,
You teach the birds to twitter
And even get a lazy man
To rake and burn the litter.
You help the little onion seeds
To swell and do some shooting,
And on the fresh and placid air
You set the fog horn tooting.

You make the old feel young again.
The years roll from their shoulders
As in some clime they tell about
In advertising folders.
You make the earth a pleasant place,
A land of milk and honey.
All this you do and more besides
Without a cent of money.

Late Reminder.

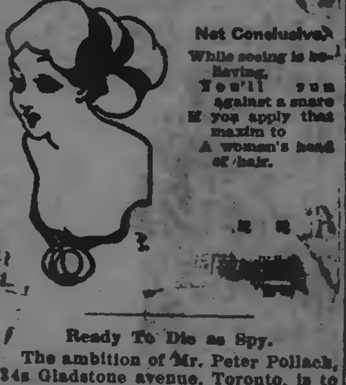
"Paw, did you use to crawl under the circus tent when you were a boy?"

"Sure! I never paid a cent."

"How many times did you do it?"

"Twenty times at least."

"There was a man here this afternoon who said that he was the proprietor of an old time show and that he had heard of you and was around trying to collect, with interest."



Not Conclusive.

While seeing is believing,
You'll run against a snare
If you apply that maxim to
A woman's head of hair.

Ready To Die as Spy.

The ambition of Mr. Peter Pollach, 34a Gladstone avenue, Toronto, is to become a British spy. He has written the British army offering his services. He is quite prepared, he says, to die without trial. If his offer were refused he said he would seek to become a detective in the Canadian Militia Department. Failing this, he would enlist.

Had to Stop.

"Why have you stopped drinking coffee?" "It disagrees with my wife."

THE RIVAL ARTILLERY

A Comparison of the Guns of the Opposing Armies.

The British army is using a gun of 3.3 inches calibre. It throws a shrapnel weighing 18.48 pounds which is filled with 364 bullets. This shrapnel has a bursting charge to explode it at any given point and the bullets continue on in the same general direction. About twenty rounds a minute can be fired, so that in a minute one of the guns can scatter 7,28 steel bullets. The muzzle velocity of this gun is 1,590 feet a second. The limber carries twenty-four rounds, the wagon limber twenty-eight rounds, the wagon fifty-eight rounds. There are six guns and twelve wagons in a battery.

The French artillery is using a 75 millimeter gun, or, in plain English, one of 2.95 inches calibre. The shrapnel weighs 15.96 pounds, which contains 300 bullets. The muzzle velocity is 1,739 feet a second. There are four guns in a battery and twelve wagons, and the number of rounds carried for each gun is 312, against 176 for a British gun.

Germany is using a gun of 3.03 inches calibre. Its shrapnel weighs 15 pounds and contains 300 bullets, the same as the French, but sixty-four less than the British. The muzzle velocity of this gun is 1,325 feet a second, which is much less than that of the French. The gun itself weighs 728 pounds, against 1,000 pounds for the British and French guns. The gun and wagon of the German gun carries 126 rounds. Six guns and six wagons form a battery.

The Russian field artillery consists of a gun of 3 inches calibre and the weight of the shrapnel is reported to be 14.41 pounds, but these figures are thought to be somewhat under the weight. Each shrapnel holds 260 bullets and the muzzle velocity is 1,930 feet a second, which is higher than that of any of the European field artillery. The gun itself is only a few pounds heavier than that of Germany. In each battery there are eight guns and sixteen wagons and there are 212 rounds carried for each gun.

The Belgians are using guns made by Krupp and by Cockerill, and the calibre is 2.95 inches. The shrapnel weighs 14.3 pounds and holds 360 bullets. The muzzle velocity is 1,641 feet per second. A battle battery is 4 guns and 8 wagons, and the number of rounds carried for each gun is 242.

The Austrian gun is 3.01 inches calibre and its shrapnel weighs 14.72 pounds, holding 316 bullets. Its muzzle velocity is 1,640 feet per second. Six guns and 9 wagons form a battery, and there are 168 rounds carried for each gun.

It can be seen that with these field guns firing so quickly it is impossible to carry ammunition that will last long. The batteries dash into the fight, get into operation quickly and then, unless an ammunition train arrives to keep them going, limber up and dash out of the fighting zone after they have ended their firing.

German Fleet Sighted.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Copenhagen announces that a German squadron of 231 ships, including battleships, cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers, has been observed at various points along the Gulf of Bothnia, steaming east.

WHAT UHLANS REALLY ARE

Daring Cavalrymen Made Reputation During Franco-Prussian War.

The word "Uhlan" denotes a certain type of cavalryman in the German army. There are 26 regiments of them in the German army—19 from Prussia, three from Saxony, two from Bavaria and two from Wurtemburg—with a total strength on a peace footing of approximately 25,000.

The Uhlan is armed with lance, sabre, carbine and pistol. He is well mounted and his equipment is especially designed for the purpose for which he is employed—ready to fight or run, ride down outposts or scouting parties of the enemy, harass his flanks and screen the movements of his own main body.

The word "Uhlan" itself is of Polish origin and denotes a lancer. During the Franco-Prussian war these cavalrymen made a name for themselves for their quick dashes and raiding expeditions and the ruthless manner in which they ravaged the country through which they went.

The German army is equipped with between 700 and 800 aeroplanes. France has probably as many.

No Training Needed.

Farming and writing poetry are two things that every one thinks he can do.

Indeed, if there is anything easier than falling off a log it is writing poetry, and if there is anything easier than poetizing it is making a farm pay where men who have been at it all their lives have failed.

Of the two delusions the poetical one is the least harmful. The editor can send back the rhymes, and nothing is lost but a two cent stamp and a subscriber.

In farming, the experimenter will sometimes exchange the savings of a lifetime for a couple of years' experience that he can do nothing with after he has acquired it.

Germans Abandoned Positions Erected to Cover Retreat

The Russian Army Now Before Koenigsberg---200,000 Austrians as Prisoners

DOING HOMEWARD TRIP IN RECORD TIME

German Rout Deepening Into Complete Disaster — Allies are Keeping in Contact With Enemy, Who Have Not Yet Made Stand

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 14.—The official press bureau this afternoon issued the following statement: "All day yesterday the enemy stubbornly disputed the passage of the Aisne by our troops, but in spite of the difficulty of fording the river in the face of strong opposition, nearly all the crossings were secured by sunset. On our right and left the French troops were confronted with a similar task, in which, like ourselves, they were successful. Many more prisoners were taken. It is reported from the French headquarters that the German Crown Prince's army has been driven back and he has moved his headquarters from St. Menehoutd to Montfaucon."

London, Sept. 14.—The correspondent of the Times at Bordeaux suggests that the German rout is deepening into a complete disaster, that the invaders are turning homeward by way of St. Quentin and Mezeries, and that the German forces in Argonne and south of Verdun are likely to be cut off from the remainder, in which event they can escape only at a heavy price. He adds that the German rout is so complete that it is more than doubtful whether the enemy will be able to find a breathing place on the only likely position which runs through Peronne and St. Quentin.

The enemy is making for a line of retreat through Charleville and Mezieres and is doing the homeward journey in record time.

London, Sept. 14.—The Times correspondent wires from Provins that the great German advance met little resistance, and he thinks little was intended. When its head reached Provins, the plan of the allies was accomplished, and it got no further. Fighting on Sunday, Sept. 6, was of a terrible character and began at dawn. The allies' troops, who were drawn up to receive the Germans, understood it would be their duty to hold on their very best, in order that the attacking force at Meaux might achieve its task in security.

The battle lasted all night and until late Monday. The German artillery fire was very severe, but not accurate. The French and English fought sternly on and slowly beat the enemy back. The whole country was strewn with dead and dying. When at last the Germans retired, they greatly slackened their rifle fire, and in one place retired 12 miles without firing a single shot. One prisoner declared they were short of ammunition and had been told to spare it as much as possible.

Monday saw a tremendous encounter on the Ourcq. There was a great deal of hand to hand fighting and bayonet work, which resulted in the terrible Madgeburg regiment beating a retreat. On Monday night Gen. Von Kluck's army had been thrown back from the Marne and from the Morin and to the region of Sezanne, and his position was serious. Immediate steps were necessary to save his line of communications and retreat. To this end reinforcements were hurried north to the Meaux district and to the Ourcq, and tremendous efforts were made to break up the French resistance in that quarter. A second attempt on the Ourcq shared the fate of the first. Through all Monday night and well on into Tuesday the great German guns boomed along this river. The resistance of the allies could not be broken. "Hold!" was the command, and every man braced himself to obey. While the Ourcq was being held, the struggle at Sezanne was bearing splendid fruit. The German resistance was broken. On every French lip there were the exclamations, "They are in full retreat," and "They are rushing back home," and in the same breath came generous recognition of the great help given by the British army.

"I am convinced," says the correspondent, "that the full extent of this rout is not yet appreciated in England. It was of truly terrific character, and such a blow will not fail to have a lasting effect.

"On Wednesday the English army continued pursuit towards the north, taking guns and prisoners. On that day I found myself in a new France. The good news had spread; girls threw flowers at passing soldiers, and joy was manifested everywhere. The incidents of Wednesday will astound the world when made known in full. I know that two German detachments of 10,000 men each, which were surrounded and cornered, but which refused to surrender, were wiped out almost to the last man. The keynote of these operations was the tremendous attack of the allies along the Ourcq on Tuesday, which showed the German commander that his lines of communication were threatened. Then came the crowning stroke. The army of the Ourcq and of the Meaux, and the army of Sezanne drew together like the blades of a pair of shears, the pivot of which was in the region of the Grand Morin. The German retreat was thus forced toward the east, and it speedily became a rout. I repeat, England scarcely realizes yet what has been achieved alike in breaking up the enemy and in heartening our troops. The tactics of Mons and Charleroi are completely justified."

YOUNG GIRL TOOK POISON

Toronto, Sept. 14. — Catherine Long, an Owen Sound girl, 25 years of age and rooming with her sister at 320 George street, drank a vial of carbolic acid in her room at 8 o'clock Saturday evening and died an hour later in St. Michael's hospital.

Catherine told her sister she felt very ill and believed she had drank a bottle of carbolic acid. Almost immediately she collapsed and sank into unconsciousness. She left a letter to her sister, the contents of which are as yet unknown to the police. Her body lies at the morgue, where an inquest will be held.

TRINITY CHURCH

After the services in the Charlotte St. Church yesterday morning a meeting of the Trustee and Official Boards together with the members of the Building Committee and the officers of the Ladies' Aid Society, was held at which the question of selecting a name for the new church was discussed. After several names had been suggested it was unanimously decided to call the new church "Trinity."

It is well known that the Methodist boards throughout the country are selecting more appropriate names for their churches than those designating them in the past, and the day of calling a church after a street or a square is fast passing. The Charlotte St. congregation is to be congratulated on the name selected for their new church.

The corner stone for the new edifice will be laid on Monday afternoon, September 21st, by Mr. H. C. Cox, of Toronto. In the evening, the Ladies' Aid will hold a New England supper.

FULL TIME AT MILLS.

The stimulating effect of present conditions upon the Canadian cotton industry has resulted in the resumption of full time in the ten mills of the Dominion Textile Co., with mills scattered from Kingston to Halifax.

The operation at full capacity of the ten mills of the Dominion Textile Co. will mean the placing in circulation annually of $10,000,000, and most of this will be spent in Canada, in wages.

This renewed activity with the Textile Company is caused by the war.

NO OFFICIAL NOTICE OF ABUSES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 14.—Premier Asquith told the Commons today that no official information had reached the Ministry of War concerning repeated stories that German soldiers had abused the red cross flag, killed and maimed wounded and killed women and children as had been alleged so often in stories of the battlefields.

He added that this subject was under consideration and that an inquiry was being made.

HOLD OVER HOME RULE BILL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 14.—Both the Home Rule Bill and the Welsh disestablishment bill are to be placed on the statute books this week. Announcing this fact in the Commons this afternoon, Premier Asquith said tomorrow he would introduce a bill providing that no steps be taken to put either measure into operation for a year in either event.

PETERBORO PATRIOTIC FUND

The committees in each polling sub-division have begun the canvass for subscriptions for the Patriotic Fund. This fund, as decided by a resolution of the general committee, is to care for the families of those who have gone on active service in the war, and those needing relief in consequence of the war.

Considerable relief has already been given to families of the soldiers. Large sums will be required for this relief before they receive anything from the government, and for families of reservists who have joined the British regiments, and also for those who will need relief in consequence of the war. The committee will carefully administer all contributions.

It is the intention that everyone will have an opportunity to contribute. Liberal and prompt contributions are urged. With the work of relief that will be necessary to prevent suffering this winter, large sums will be required. The people are urged to meet the canvassers in a liberal spirit, or to send their contributions direct to the treasurer of the fund, Mr. F. Adams, city treasurer.

W. G. MORROW, Chairman Canvassing Committee.

WESTWOOD MAN HELD UP BY TWO ROUGH CUSTOMERS

A report was received from Hastings last night that a Mr. Cook of Westwood was stopped near the church yard at Westwood by two men who asked him for twenty-five cents. He told the men that he did not have any money. On receiving this answer one of the men drew a club and struck Mr. Cook on the head several times, inflicting serious injury and rendering him insensible. Apparently it is not known whether the men obtained any money from him or not. Last reports are that the two men are heading towards Peterboro, but no decided description of them could be given other than that one was tall and stout and the other short and stout.

FULL EXTENT OF ROUT IS NOT YET REALIZED

Fighting Was of Terrific Character and Such a Blow Will not Fail to Have Lasting Effect Says Correspondent

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 14.—It is officially announced this morning that the Germans are still retiring everywhere. They are abandoning all positions which they erected to cover a possible retreat.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Havas Agency says it has been announced in the Russian capital that the Russian army is now before Koenigsberg, East Prussia.

Rome, Sept. 14.—News from Petrograd is to the effect that Austrian prisoners now in the hands of the Russians aggregate 200,000.

London, Sept. 14.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Ghent says that after two days' investigating he has confirmed the statement that Russian troops are in Belgium. Afternoon papers of Ghent published last Saturday a statement as follows: "The German army has been cut at Countenberg, between Brussels and Louvain, by the Belgian army, reinforced by Russian troops."

His investigations confirmed this, "but where these Russians are and what their number may be, it would be indiscreet to tell," he says. The correspondent mentions the "possibility that the Russian is not the only army reinforcing the Belgians."

London, Sept. 14.—As showing how Northwestern France has been cleared of invaders, President Chambels, of Rouen, to-day telegraphed to Lloyds as follows: "The port of Rouen is now able to take coal-laden steamers for Rouen or Paris, river navigation now being free."

PARIS JOYFUL AND THANKFUL.

London, Sept. 14.—Despatches from Paris and Bordeaux to London newspapers describe scenes of enthusiasm mingled with thankfulness on the part of the populace at the news of the German retreat. The streets are full of people, all too overjoyed to express their emotion by noise or singing, but the men are seen embracing each other with fervor, while women give vent to their feelings by crying quietly.

It is understood that the factor which brought about the change in the fortunes of war, was the new army which General Pau formed quickly and quietly at Versailles, composed of some of the best troops from the eastern frontier, and a fine body of cavalry. This army marched through Paris, northward, and then turned northeast. Its effect was felt at once.

VIENNA PANIC STRICKEN AT CAPTURE OF SEMLIN.

London, Sept. 14.—A despatch to the Central News from Bucharest says a panic occurred in Vienna on the receipt of the news of the capture of Semlin by Servians, and that thousands of unemployed are parading the streets of the capital. Military stores and even the stock of uniforms proved to be insufficient, and as a result a third levy of reservists are going to the frontier in civilian attire.

Russians to the number of 2,500, liberated from captivity in Germany, have arrived in Petrograd, via Finland. It is stated the reason for this liberation is that the German exchequer is too depleted to admit of their being kept.

Paris, Sept. 14.—The retreat of the armies of Generals Von Kluck and Von Buelow continued, at last accounts, with considerable rapidity. The only official comment last night was that the allies were keeping in contact with the enemy and had crossed the river Aisne. It is evident that the Germans do not intend to make a stand on a line from Rheims to Soissons, and it is hardly likely they will halt their retreat before reaching Belgium.

They have already made two-thirds of the distance from Provins, in the department of Seine-et-Marne, to the frontier. The heavy rains of Saturdav and Sunday are not likely to facilitate the movement of the famous 420 milimetre guns that were to reduce Paris and which require 40 horses to draw them.

German armies of the centre seem to be headed toward Rethel and Mezieres, though part of this force is reported as still resisting at the south end of the forest of Argonne.

It was reported last night that the armies of the Crown Prince, Prince of Bavaria and General Von Heeringen had been forced across the frontier, and that the entire territory of French Lorraine had been liberated.

This disposition of the German armies, if confirmed, makes another concentration in France impossible. Taken altogether, the situation here is viewed with equanimity.

HOW MANY PELTS ARE TAKEN ?

WE were informed recently that beaver, deer and other wild animals were being shot in Algonquin National Park, presumably by men in the service of the Ontario Government, and that no accounting of the pelts was being made. The charge, if true, would be a serious one, but the report of the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, just received, dispels the charge that no accounting is rendered.

The report of the superintendent of the Algonquin National Park appears on page 92, and shows that the Park has experienced a very successful year. It states that game of all kinds has greatly increased, and that "a number of beaver, otter, mink, marten, fisher, muskrat, raccoon and ermine were taken, and the skins disposed of, realizing $5,424.10: Live beaver and some live mink were also sold to the value of $605.25."

This statement is too indefinite. In view of the fact that capital could be made out of it for campaign purposes, and that other departments report in detail for equally small amounts, a detailed statement should be furnished by the Minister. The exact number of pelts of each animal should be given, and the respective amounts received for each class of pelts stated. Were this done, there could be scarcely any ground for adverse criticism. As the report stands, it admits that pelts are being taken out, but states the amount in bulk that has been received. It does not say how many skins have been taken or how much has been received for each. We do not know whether many or few animals have been shot, but the statement that game of all kinds has much increased would be a basis for thinking that the number was not small. We do not know whether the amount received was adequate to the number of pelts, although there is no reason for supposing that such was not the case.

Then, other items are treated in the same slip-shod manner ; $1,782 were received for fishing licenses, but the number of licenses is not stated. We do not know whether all licenses are of the same value and convey equal privileges. The sum of $787.50 was received for rents, but what is meant by rents is next to a mystery. Fines brought in $50, but we do not know whether there was one or a hundred of them. Logs were sold to the value of $405.60. How many logs we cannot say, nor do we know whether they were old or new, pine or poplar.

Fires are stated to have been bad, but there is not a word to say whether any liability has been placed on the Grand Trunk Railway, whose locomotives are the named cause for the vast damage incurred. It is true that the report says that the Grand Trunk officials have rendered every assistance to check or put out fires, but a far more important question is the aid given or measures taken to prevent forest fires.

The expenses are also bulked together, being placd at $21,554.09, while the staff consists of 26 men.

The report regarding the National Park can only be described as very unsatisfactory. We trust that another year will bring forth a more detailed statement of its affairs.

We might add that the report concerning the National Park affords a strong contrast with that regarding roads in Northern Ontario, in the same volume. Full details are given, the total number of miles built of each class, the cost of same, the number of miles built in each district and township. We can find out what one mile cost, and we know what work was done when the number of feet of old road grubbed and graded is stated as on page 181. There is really no use in printing government reports unless they give proper details of each department, and, while we cannot expect to have perfect reports, weaknesses should be pointed out and not neglected.

SANDBAGGING BELGIUM.

THE APOLOGISTS for Germany's war policy, says Collier's Weekly, including even such scholars as Professor Kuno Francke and Hugo Munsterberg, of Harvard University, find it curiously convenient to omit all mention of Belgium from their dissertations. They prefer long diatribes on race hatred and commercial jealousy, endless hair-splittings as to the intricate diplomatic chess-playing that preceded the explosion. But Belgium is the key to the whole miserable tragedy. It is over 80 years now since Germany solemnly guaranteed the neutrality of that little country. Bismarck, for all his policy of "blood and iron," his harsh readiness to break eggs to make an omelette, respected that promise during the Franco-Prussian war. Not only did the Germans not invade France by the Belgian road in 1870, but they gave up the project of bringing back their wounded by the shorter route through the neutral territory. The present outbreak finds Germany doing her first hard fighting against Belgium, not England or France or Russia. The promises and precedents of over 80 years are thrown to the winds, and the neutral territory feels the harshest rigors of war. The Germans go even further and demand a $40,000,000 ransom from Brussels, which is the same thing as assaulting a peaceful citizen and then robbing him to pay your expenses. The terrible thing is that these measures are taken at the very start of the struggle, and are, therefore, not the result of dire necessity, but of the coolly and carefully laid plans of the German general staff. These plans must have been known to the Kaiser and must have been approved by him. Germany, therefore, stands before the world as the embodiment of brutal military force, a power to which no promise is sacred. This insane autocracy no more represents German culture than Croker or Murphy represents American political life. These power-crazed militarists at Berlin have bet everything on winning, and the future must show whether the modern world can tolerate any such at the head of a great government and a great people. This is why public opinion everywhere is against the Germans and why it is justified. A teacher who sees no moral wrong in what Germany has done to Belgium, is not our idea of a good guide for youth. The men we have in mind are Professor Francke and Professor Munsterberg, of Harvard.

DRYDOCK IS ABANDONED.

IT WOULD APPEAR that high prices demanded for property have killed the drydock and boat-building scheme which would have made Peterborough the centre of Trent canal industry. The original prices asked by many of the owners of the land wanted, were reasonably consistent with valuations made, but some of the owners asked prices so high, although property round about was not nearly as high that the government has refused to be held up or even to go to court about it, and so the scheme has been killed. Every effort has been made for more than a year to get this matter satisfactorily settled, and elaborate surveys and plans had been made by the government for the drydock, basins, repair shops, etc., but, as usual. Peterborough is held up when it only remained with the citizens themselves to say the word and close the deal.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO BE SEIZED.

BRITISH manufacturers are wasting no time in grasping the significance of Germany's helplessness in the foreign markets. The following paragraph from the Orillia Packet is timely and shows how Englishmen are making use of their opportunities:

> "Twenty-one days after the war began six Sheffield manufacturers announced that they had formed a common sales fund and had sent a large number of commercial travellers into all the leading Russian markets which hitherto had been dominated by German goods. The travellers were empowered if necessary to give three years' credit, as German firms had been doing. Already they said, a large amount of business had been obtained."

Canadian manufacturers should also take action as soon as possible, particularly for the production of German goods that sold largely in Canada and South America. During the last fiscal year Germany exported to the United States over two million dollars' worth of toys alone. Whether any of these came to Canada is immaterial, since large quantities of German toys have been sold in Canada. The point to be emphasized is that the oportunity exists and should be utilized.

Germany's Position.

St. Catharines Standard.

Germany's economic handicap in a long war as compared with Great Britain or Russia must be regarded as overwhelming. Russia is practically self-sustaining Germany is second only to England among the great nations in dependence on foreign trade.

A Fallen Austrian City.

Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, which has fallen before the attack of the Russians, is a city whose population at the end of 1910 was 206,113. It is the great railway centre of the eastern part of Austria-Hungary and has always had a large commerce with Russia and Turkey.

Spanish-American War Recalled.

Barrie Advance.

It is interesting just now to note that in the Spanish-American war, which "bulked large" to our neighbours across the line, the entire American loss was 336 men killed, 125 mortally wounded, and 5,277 died of disease. The reported loss of the Spanish was 80,000, a vast majority of these dying from disease. In the naval battle of Manilla Bay the Americans had not a solitary man killed or wounded. The Spaniards, on the other hand who fought with great bravery under unequal conditions, had about 400 killed.

Hon. Frank Oliver's Opinion.

Edmonton Bulletin.

The Toronto Globe thinks that "when the red dust clears, the broken nations that survive and the neutral nations that escape must join hands in a league of all for each that will make forever impossible another of this century-old international folly, 'In peace prepare for war.'" If the "must" can be enforced, all well and good. Otherwise the highly desirable "league" is impossible. Where and what would Belgium, and France, and Britain, and Russia be by this time if in peace they had not prepared for war?

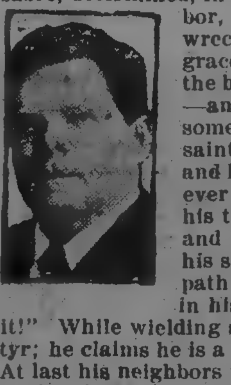
He Liked Her Looks.

(Canadian Courier.)

A Hamilton man tells a rather good joke at his own expense, and it is safe to say that he will guard his tongue more carefully in future. He went into a quick lunch place the other day where ladies are served While standing at the counter he turned to take a long last lingering look at a remarkably pretty young woman. The man at his elbow turned to look, too. "Some chicken," said the Hamiltonian, in low tones, and the man beside him repeated the phrase as an order to the waiter behind the counter. "No, no," said the young fellow. "I did not mean that as an order. I referred to the girl behind me." "Looks good to you?" queried the other man. "Some girl," said the admirer. "She looks good to me, too," was the answer. "That's why I married her." When the Hamiltonian's order came, he had lost his appetite.

STRENUOUS STRIFE

By Walt Mason



When man discards the pruning hook, and takes up gun or sabre, determined, in his heart, to cook the gander of his neighbor, when he elects to turn his face to ruin, wreck and ravage, he shows that he, with all his grace, is still at heart a savage. He talks about the boon of peace—an ear his country lends him—and then he goes to knock the grease from someone who offends him. He swears by all the saints above that warfare shocks and galls him, and he'll support the White Winged Dove, whatever ill befalls him; then someone steps upon his toes, which makes him yearn for slaughter, and he proceeds to tear his clothes, and grabs his sword and swatter. Is there an army in his path? You see him hack and hew it, still crying, in his noble wrath, "My neighbors drove me to it!" While wielding snickersee and creese, he says he is a martyr; he claims he is a prince of peace, while acting like a Tartar. At last his neighbors tire of tricks beyond excuse or pardon, and so they break his head with bricks and plant him in his garden. The boon of peace! The human hordes will praise it loud and louder, and as they praise they'll grind their swords, and manufacture powder.

WAR AND WHEAT

The immediate effect of the declaration of war on the wheat market was, as is well known, a stiffening in prices. Roughly speaking the Winnipeg prices for wheat had averaged around 80 cents per bushel before the war, while recent quotations are in the neighborhood of $1.05 and have been higher. There have been some fluctuations due to uncertainty regarding the conditions of shipment and insurance across the Atlantic, but generally speaking there is little doubt that the war will mean much higher prices to the Western farmer than would have been the case if peace had prevailed. In so far as the increased price will compensate for a partial loss of crop, the West will gain from the war.

An outstanding and interesting fact is the great difference in favor of the Winnipeg market in the price of wheat. On August 10th the Winnipeg price was 14 cents per bushel higher than the Minneapolis price for the same kind of wheat. In fact the difference was so great that Canadian millers were forced to buy American wheat which could be laid down cheaper at Canadian mills after the freight and duty had been paid than the Canadian article. Under war conditions, which, however, everyone hopes will not prevail long, it would seem that the Canadian wheat grower would suffer by a removal of the duty. The big American wheat crop has tended to reduce the price of wheat in this continent, and apparently there was a possibility of the Canadian millers buying large quantities of wheat in the United States, some of which might have been used in the one million bag order, comprising Canadian flour, given to Great Britain. The Government has, however, protected the interest of the Canadian wheat growers by requiring the mills to use nothing but Canadian wheat in manufacturing this huge order.

German Casualty List.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 14. — (Via London.)—A despatch from Berlin says that the total losses sustained by the Germans, including the 21st casualty list, which has just been published, are given as 5,535 dead, 8,391 seriously wounded, and 4,242 slightly wounded. The number of officers killed and wounded was extremely high. The ratio of the wounded to the dead was about two to one, which is also extreme, the usual ratio being five to one. It is not known to what date the list extends.

Sentries Are Fired On.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 14.—Reports have been received at headquarters of the militia guard on the Welland Canal, of firing on sentries of three different posts at midnight Friday and early Sunday morning. None of the soldiers was hit. A corporal at lock six declares a bullet passed so close to his ear that he could hear it. The guard at this point chased three men, but the strangers succeeded in outrunning the soldiers.

Australia Takes Town.

LONDON, Sept. 14. — An official statement by the Secretary of the Admiralty announces the receipt of a telegram from Rear Admiral Patey, commanding the Australian squadron, announcing the occupation on Friday at seven o'clock in the morning of the town of Herbertshoehe on the island of New Pommeru, the largest of the Bismarck archipelago due east of New Guinea.

Iron Crosses Conferred.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—Emperor William has conferred 196 Iron Crosses for distinguished service in the field. Eighty-six of them went to members of the 53rd Regiment and eleven to the 83rd. Among the recipients is Count Helmuth Von Moltke, chief of staff, and Major Von Winterfeldt, formerly military attache to the German legation in Paris, and twenty-one other officers.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

Germany's Extensive Claims.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent telegraphs: An official Berlin message claims that the prisoners of war in Germany number: British, 100 officers, 7,350 men; French, 1,630 officers, 86,000 men; Belgian, 440 officers, 30,000 men; a total of more than 215,000 officers and men.

Until Germany Wins.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14.—An extraordinary session of the German Chamber of Commerce is called for Tuesday next, at which a resolution will be moved that relations between Germany and the world of commerce shall endure until Germany is wholly victorious, notwithstanding British threats to protract the war.

HIS PUNISHMENT

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Did any one ever hear the like of that? I'll fix him!" with a concentration of energy on the word "him."

Dorothy Doane, engaged to Tom Arnold, had called at his house to see his mother about arrangements for the wedding. It happened that Tom and his friend, Ned Winthrop, were in the smoking room and unconscious of Dorothy's presence in the adjoining parlor. She overheard her fiance talking with his chum. Ned was saying:

"So you're to be swung off next week? Poor fellow! You'll feel like a muzzled dog, a chained dog, a dog with his tail between his legs. If you smoke she'll bother you till you give it up that she may have the money you spend on it for hats. If you stay at home much of the time she'll make you feel what it is to have a man about the house all day. If you go out she'll accuse you of leaving her to mope at home while you are enjoying yourself in the gay world. As for me, she'll brook no rivalry. She'll freeze me out the first"—

Dorothy heard no more, for at this point Tom shut the door.

The honeymoon was over, and Ned Winthrop was invited to spend the week end at the newly married couple's country place. When Arnold invited him Ned tried to beg off by saying he had no mind to be snubbed by the bride with a view to breaking off the last vestige of intimacy between himself and the husband. But Tom urged him, and he gave in. Mrs. Arnold received him cordially.

Moreover, she had provided a young lady friend to meet him.

Miss Kate Rathbone had been selected from all of Mrs. Arnold's acquaintances as the most competent person to make him eat his words overheard by her before her marriage. The hearts Miss Rathbone had smashed were like the sands of the sea. Men had fought over her, had moaned over her and groaned over her. And now Ned had been brought to the house in order to be made to suffer for his strictures on wives.

The net was set immediately. Miss Rathbone gave Mr. Winthrop a glance the moment of their meeting intended to give him to understand that her breath had been quite taken away by his Apollo-like appearance. She was very gracious to him at dinner and when left alone with him on the veranda in the moonlight turned her face so that the heavenly orb might rest upon it, softened her voice to dove-like tones and used her eyes without mercy.

Mr. Winthrop appeared at least to be deeply moved by his fair companion. He was a bright man, a good conversationalist, which with him meant to listen attentively. His voice was a baritone, but he seldom used it, though when he did it it was with good effect. For two days he was under the fascinations of Miss Rathbone, and when Monday came, being invited to prolong his visit, consented to do so.

Mrs. Arnold was much pleased at the way her scheme of punishment was progressing. Her husband was obliged to go to the city during the day, but returned the same afternoon. Mrs. Arnold busied herself with her household duties while he was absent, leaving her guests to entertain each other.

Every day it was expected that Ned Winthrop would break down before Kate Rathbone and beg for mercy. There was certainly every indication that he would. He showed plainly that he was about to drop into the bottomless pit that had been dug for him. He hung on Miss Rathbone's every word. If she remained long in her room for her afternoon siesta he walked about forlorn, and his face brightened at her appearance. Mrs. Arnold did not scruple to do some eavesdropping, hoping to hear the proposal.

At the end of ten days Winthrop remarked ruefully that his affairs in the city were suffering and he must return. Mrs. Arnold urged him to remain, and Miss Rathbone looked unhappy at the prospect of his departure. He was easily persuaded and the campaign was prolonged. But there was every indication that a capitulation would occur at any moment.

On the morning of the thirteenth (unlucky) day of this scheme of punishment Mr. Winthrop did not appear at breakfast. A servant reported that he had started for the railway station for the 5:20 train. The two conspirators looked at each other in dismay. Then a maid brought the hostess a note left by her guest apologizing for his abrupt departure. He had received a telephone message during the night that his presence was needed in the city. When the postman came he brought a letter for Miss Rathbone from a friend. She read it and handed it to Mrs. Arnold. It ran as follows:

I understand that woman hater, lady killer Ned Winthrop, is of your party at the Arnolds'. Although you are adept at such affairs yourself, I would advise you to have a care with him. He is a terrible heart breaker, without any conscience whatever.

Mrs. Arnold looked up from the letter to her friend, and both burst into a laugh.

"Tom," said Mrs. Arnold before her husband's departure for the city, "why didn't you tell me your chum was a heart smasher?"

"Because we men always stand by each other."

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw has this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to me one day and said:

"'As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon.'

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my shortstop, Dahlen, remarked:

"'Funny those white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky.'

"I heard him and couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a man to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That is a fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

A Printer's Error.

In the mass of war news that is being printed in the daily press these days, there is bound to be an occasional mistake. Perhaps one of the oddest was caught in a Toronto daily the other day. It was a cable despatch describing the advance of the German troops into Belgium.

"The Germans attacked en masse," ran the cable, but the "en masse" was unfortunately run together. The printer, not being a product of a bilingual school, and being a bit shy on geography too, perhaps, decided that there was something wrong. He took a different meaning out of it and made the sentence read: "The Germans attacked Enmasse."

Points for Mothers

The Boy's Model.

In the Woman's Home Companion Mary Heaton Vorse, writing a story entitled "His Manly Dignity," comments as follows on the practice of urging small boys "to be a man like father:"

"From earliest infancy they implore their boy children to 'be a man.' That glorious goal is pointed out to a boy baby from the moment he can understand anything. He is not only told to 'be a man,' but to 'be a man like father.' I often wonder how the fathers bear it. I often wonder how they can stand there apparently so smug and contented when this ideal of conduct is suggested to their innocent babies. Don't they really see themselves, I wonder? Aren't there some of them at this who have a sudden, beneficent impulse to exterminate their own sons if the feat of growing up to be a man like father is all that awaits the innocent before them? How can they bear the adoring gaze that their little sons fasten upon them?

"Some little boys have a trick of looking so much more like real men with all the qualities that we love to think of as belonging to the most manly of men than grownup men do. I have seen them stamping down the street, still in skirts, and a man in the fullness of his powers couldn't have better exemplified finer masculine traits.

"No one tells little girls to hurry up and 'be a woman like mother.'"

Training the Ears.

A child should never be permitted to insert anything in its ear. Often if there is an itching sensation a child will poke in the head of a pin. This is altogether wrong and may bring about deafness.

In training the ears to lie straight in babyhood it is wrong to let the little one lie with its ears crumpled. Straighten them and see that they stay so.

In putting on a child's cap see that both ears are properly placed, as the cartilage, being so soft, the weight of a ribbon string may keep it out of place.

So much is done in the line of surgery these days that parents who can afford the prices should have any deformity of the ears attended to at as early an age as possible. It is not right to permit anything of the kind to be endured through life if it can be avoided.

Often after such diseases as measles, scarlet fever, etc., the hearing is defective. This comes from the inflammation of the ear drum and seems almost impossible to avoid. If there is a constant running from the ears of a child an aurist should be consulted immediately. There is a cause that should be treated without delay.

Canopies For Cribs.

A better protection for the baby's crib than is the length of quilting that goes around the four sides of the little one's daytime sleeping place is the tent canopy. It hangs from a hook in the ceiling, falls straight to the floor and may be drawn about the crib in a manner to protect the occupant thoroughly from whatever direction a draft is likely to come.

Yet at the same time the baby gets plenty of air, as no matter in what portion of the room the crib is placed the curtaining need go only part way around it.

Some mothers have these tent canopies in printed cretonne, but they are daintier and quite as serviceable in a lingerie or a muslin curtaining material, which may be finished with lace rufflings. Along the lower edges they are lead weighted so that they shall not blow about.

Hot Weather Tempers.

Many minor ailments—and much bad temper—can be prevented by intelligent anticipation.

The first signs of trouble are seen in restlessness at night and fidgetiness by day, a tendency to crossness and often to disobedience and fretfulness. Sometimes a tiny rash under the skin will be seen after a fairly warm bath, and a child suffers from capriciousness of appetite (which is not the same thing as loss of appetite, though this, too, may be present) and generally shows a tendency to either constipation or diarrhea.

Now, all these, temper and troubles of physical conditions alike, are due to the overheated condition of the blood, and a little simple dosing and careful dieting will soon mend matters.

Medicine Cakes.

Some children who refuse to take castor oil make no fuss if it is given in this way: Take one cupful of milk, one of molasses, half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of castor oil, a teaspoonful of soda, two of ginger, a little salt and enough flour to make a stiff paste. Roll out, cut into shapes and bake in a quick oven. One or two are as good as a dose of oil.

Use For Gay Rugs.

Very cheap and gaudy little bath rugs that would look too garishly bright on the quiet inside of a house are delightful when bought for the garden. The tots are not so likely to take cold when they sit on a rug and play quiet games as when they roll on the ground which is likely to be damp.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Rumors that a peace move on the part of Austria was not unlikely had a bearish effect today on wheat. Despite an early advance in harmony with quotations at Liverpool, the market closed heavy at a decline of 2c to 2¼c net. Corn wound up with a gain of ½c to ⅝c and oats with a rise of ½c to ⅝c. In provisions the outcome was a setback ranging from 15c to $1.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 12.—The wheat market was weak generally, caused by poor demand, heavy receipts, heavy offerings and no export trade. Winnipeg opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, oats unchanged to ¼c higher, and flax unchanged to ⅛c lower. The decline was gradual from the opening, few attempts being made to stem the decline, which continued to the close, which was 1⅛c to 1⅞c lower for wheat options, and ⅜c to ⅞c lower for oats.

There was little or no demand for cash wheat, oats, barley or flax.

Inspections Friday totaled 1437 cars, as against 484 cars last year, and in sight 1300.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.11½; No. 2 do., $1.07¾; No. 3 do., $1.04¾; No. 4, $1.00¾; No. 5, 96¾c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 49¾c; No. 3 C.W., 48¾c; extra No. 1 feed, 48¾c; No. 1 feed, 48¼c; No. 2 feed, 47¼c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.29½; No. 2 C. W., $1.25½.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Owing to the further decline in wheat prices American and Canadian cables were weaker, and the price bid for No. 1 Manitoba spring wheat was fully 1s per quarter lower at 52s to 42s 6d for October-November shipment, which prices exporters were not disposed to accept and business was very quiet. There was no change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, prices being steady with only a small trade passing. Demand for flour continues good for domestic account, and an active trade continues to be done, but the export business is quieter on account of the decline in prices for the raw material. A firm feeling prevails in the market for millfeed with a good demand and small offerings. A strong feeling continues to prevail in the market for butter and prices are steadily working towards a higher level, sales of finest creamery in the country being made at 29c, which is ½c per pound higher than a week ago.

CHEESE MARKETS.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 12.—Offerings of cheese were 1145 white and 30 colored, all being sold at 15c.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 12.—Eleven factories offered 1477 boxes of colored cheese. Bids were 14½c. No sales took place.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., Sept. 12.—At the dairy board here today 350 packages of butter sold at 29c, and 450 boxes of cheese sold at 14c.

COWANSVILLE, Que., Sept. 12.—At the meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Association here yesterday nine factories offered 424 boxes of butter. Four buyers were present and offered 28¾c. No sales.

"Not For Little Girls."

In "Le Debutant," at last a French book written by a French-Canadian author, that is not written for little girls. The author is Arsene Bessette, a journalist who has long been in the newspaper field of the Province of Quebec. He has narrated in a creditable way the toils of a beginner in journalism, interwoven with an effective love story, and he has depicted a living picture of some aspects of the political situation in Quebec as he has seen them.

"Le Debutant," or the tyro, as we would say in English, bears on its title page that caution: "this book has not been written for little girls." One would be very mistaken if he expected that a work thus introduced was an immoral one, intended especially for those who read what "little girls" must not read. What the author meant to do and what he has successfully accomplished, was to depart from the deplorable tradition which weakens French-Canadian literature and according to which authors in Quebec, instead of writing for the public at large, devote their chief efforts to producing books that are devoid of the characteristics of real life, in order that they may not offer offence to anybody. And while they strive to achieve works that can be read by little girls, the intellectual public of Quebec neglect their weak productions and read the French novels from France, because those latter do not suffer from the lack of virility that is noticeable here.

First Offence Overlooked.

Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes is a simple but hearty actor. An old soldier, he makes his meal off the first dish that is set before him. This conversation was overheard at the Rideau Club:

"William," said the War Minister to the waiter, "what did I have for breakfast this morning."

"You had six fried eggs and a piece of toast, sir."

"Well, I wish you to tell the cook that of these six eggs five were bad. I have eaten them this time, but don't let it occur again." — Saturday Night.

HOW EVERY HOUSEWIFE CAN DO HER SHARE

"At a time when the Empire is straining every nerve against the common enemy it is essential that each and every section of the community should stand together. Canada is sending her soldiers to the help of Great Britain, but it must be remembered that scarcely less effective help can be rendered by keeping trade and industries prosperous throughout the Dominion. No one is able to say how the strain of war may affect us. Already there is a prospect of unemployment on a considerable scale during the coming winter.

"There are many ways in which the evil of unemployment may be fought, but one way is to keep up the demand for Canadian products in order that Canadian industries may continue in operation. Articles that are being produced in Canada are also being imported annually to the value of $104,639,879. By purchasing only commodities produced in Canada we should largely increase the output of our industries and provide employment for large numbers of workmen. To attain this desirable end it is hoped that, in so far as possible, housewives and others will buy products 'made in Canada.'"

Household League

This was the resolution passed at a meeting of several leading Canadian women in Ottawa on Saturday. They met to discuss ways and means whereby the women of Canada could effectively lend their assistance in tiding Canada over the probable stress and trial of the coming winter. Amongst the ladies present were Mrs. T. W. Crothers, wife of the Minister of Labor, Mrs. W. T. Herridge, wife of the moderator of the Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Adam Shortt, Mrs. Dr. Lyman, Mrs. R. H. Coats, and Mrs. J. A. Wilson, national convener of Household Economics. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Household League of Ottawa.

Official figures relating to the importation of goods produced in Canada were laid before the meeting, and it was found that in certain products $30,337,083 worth of the $104,639,879 imported came from the United States alone. For instance Canada, which is a wheat country herself, imports $268,617 worth of wheat flour from the United States. If Canadian women would see that they purchased Canadian flour only this in itself would be a great help.

Soap is another household commodity which is manufactured in Canada, yet we import $1,827,997 worth a year. 917 men are employed in this industry in Canada, but if our women would purchase only Canadian soap there would be employment for very many more.

It is the same with baking powder We import $179,180 worth, the amount from the United States being $177,617

Figures Given

Canada imports blue for washing clothes to the extent of $50,421, biscuits $275,269, buckwheat meal or flour $9,269, corsets $560,054, baskets $126,970, buttons $851,822, candles $98,665 carpet sweepers $16,103, clothes wringers $95,483, combs $238,516, cotton goods which includes embroideries clothing, socks, and stockings $27,315,112, canned fruit $832,397, gloves $2,756,788, hair work $218,164, jellies and jams $815,617, Indian corn meal $176,779, lard $1,356,292, milk $22,301, oatmeal and rolled oats $3,526, pickles $465,366, rye flour $19,577, silks $8,877,576, sauces $341,213, paints $1,768,256, sugar candy and confectionery $1,549,367, starch $109,148, woollen goods which includes shirts, stockings and knitted goods as well as tweeds $30,732,271, stoves $1,058 367, hats and caps $793,746, furs $1,378,121, fancy goods $5,610,020, dried apples $16,833, furniture $3,187,780, cocoa $1,046,131, blacking $126,328, brooms, whisks, etc., $037,210; boots and shoes $520,709, aerated waters $34,792.

In the production of these articles of household use there are 1,631 establishments throughout Canada and there are 82,630 employes. It would stimulate industry and it would mean employment for more if Canadian men and women would insist upon receiving Canadian goods when they are making purchases.

The shutting off of imports from Continental Europe into Canada, due to the war, gives many home industries an unexampled opportunity for immense and immediate development.

Canada will prosper at the expense of Continental Europe. This is not a time in Canada for repining on the part of the business man. We must be careful, even frugal, but we must also be bold.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics."

"I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

ROUTLEY'S [illegible]

WORK IS COMMENCED

Many Applications for Enployment When Operations for Paving, Started This Morning

An army of unemployed, numbering upwards of one hundred, assembled on the corner of Charlotte and George Street this morning, while the ancient bell above them tolled seven, anxiously awaiting the appearance of the officials of the Foley and Gleason Co., who were to commence paving operations. At first the main body stood on the north corner but as Old Sol rose high enough to throw his rays over the Hotel Empress they moved across and hugged the base of the Custom House.

Two officials, namely Messrs. E. T. Davis and F. Deans, soon were the centre of attraction but only one team and four or five men could be put to work as the necessary implements for grading the roadbed were not on hand. By tomorrow, however, it is expected that all the equipment will be here and some thirty or thirty-five men given a chance to earn their livelihood. Work was started on Charlotte St. from George to Water.

Mr. Davis in speaking to a Review man stated that they would not have their concrete mixer and asphalt plant on the ground for a week as the men on roadbed had to get a sufficient lead. When all the branches are working over sixty men will be employed. In reference to the bricks for the street car tracks Mr. Davis informed the scribe that they had written the brick factory and whether or not the bricks are in stock, will not be known till a reply arrives.

REV. S. T. BARTLETT'S APPEAL FOR THE HIGHEST TYPE OF MANHOOD AND WOMANHOOD

Rev. S. T. Bartlett, general Epworth League secretary, preached at the annual rally of the Epworth League in George Street Methodist church on the Sabbath, taking his text from the sixth chapter of Hebrews in the morning, and speaking directly to the congregation of the care that must be exercised in the cultivation of the rising young man and woman.

Rev. Mr. Bartlett made an apt comparison of the well-tilled garden and the neglected one, wherein many weeds spring up. Both gardens might be on equal terms if the neglected one had received the care of the well-tilled garden. Just so, we may compare the lines of the rising young man and woman. Many are cultivated in their early lives and receive careful attention and remain to be of service to God and their fellowman; while others are growing a life of weeds and thistles and, in the end, can only hope to reap a harvest of sorrow.

Duty Is Neglected.

As we know, parents are responsible for the cultivation of their children, but many are neglecting this duty. We should remember that it is better to prevent the growth of weeds and thistles in the youth of our land than to try and weed them out afterwards. As the farmer takes pleasure out of the tilling of his soil and the care of the crop, knowing that he will be rewarded in the end, so should we greet with pleasure the work of training the young, knowing the just reward of our labors. Parents should feel it their duty to have the word of God in the mouths of their children from their earliest days, if they would have them grow up to a useful life.

In active workers, Rev. Mr. Bartlett went on to say, the Epworth League was stronger than ever before. Young people had committed themselves to the care of God and were taking an active and enjoyable interest in His work. The Sunday school and the League are doing untold good for the young.

Call for Recruits.

God is calling for recruits for his service—the pulpit needs many, and the foreign fields are calling for the young man and woman to teach God's word. And they must be taken from the ranks of the Epworth League.

Our Epworth League must be well supported, for in it many of our young are being raised to a higher and brighter life. We are meeting with hard work, but it is God's price, and that which costs us the most is of the greatest value.

Large congregations were present at the morning and evening services, special music being given by the choir at both services.

The rally will be continued in the lecture hall to-night. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend the meeting.

SPORTS FOR THE 57th REGIMENT

The efforts of the officers of the 57th Regiment to obtain large number of recruits has so far been successful but it is their intention to keep up their work and have the number enlisted far exceed any previous record. To assist in this it has been decided, as was announced, to encourage athletics in every possible manner. An indoor baseball league is to be started and the first game is billed for Wednesday evening of this week. The recreation room is now open to the members every evening and after Wednesday the bowling alley will also be in operation. Now is the time for men of the city who would like to join the regiment to "fall in line." Applications should be made at the armouries.

ONE DAY'S MILK WOULD BRING OVER $5000 FOR FUND

Kingston, Sept. 14.—In connection with the proposal of the Frontence Cheese Board members to donate one day's milk to the Patriotic Fund it is interesting to note that the money accruing from such patriotic action would be considerable.

There are about sixty factories in the county and each makes about eight cheese a day. These average about eighty pounds each, which would bring to total quantity of cheese manufactured in a day up to about 36,000 pounds. At the price of 14⅝ cents this cheese would be worth about $5,265. Ths would make a handsome sum with which to start out to relieve the needs of those who are dependent on the men who have gone to the front.

This sum, immense in the aggregate would mean but little to the individual farmer. The exact sum in dollars each farmer would subscribe in this manner cannot be ascertained definitely, but the average day's earnings of each factory can be approximated, and it is safe to say that not a farmer in the county will object to making his donation in this way. The farmers of Frontenac have a reputation to sustain and the matter may safely be left in their hands.

REEVE HOWDEN TREASURER FOR RELIEF FUND

Subscriptions Are Opened in North Monaghan

It was a very enthusiastic meeting that was held in May's schoolhouse last Thursday evening, when Reeve Howden, his councillors and a large representation of ratepayers met to consider a couple of questions of great importance. The Patriotic Fund and the question of relief for the unemployed in that district were dealt with.

Councillors Young and Foster addressed the gathering and with a few timely remarks explained that they thought it was the duty of the ratepayers of that district to show their approval of such matters by taking a step in the right direction. It was decided to place subscription lists in the stores of the vicinity, where ratepayers could leave money or goods. Reeve Howden was made treasurer.

There was a strong feeling shown that the ratepayers were heartily in favor of such steps being taken.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS HEARD REV. F. J. SAWERS

Large congregations greeted Rev. F. J. Sawers, when he took the services at St. Luke's Church, on Sunday, after a trip to England. Rev. Mr. Sawers did not disappoint his parishioners and friends from other churches as he delivered two very interesting discourses, bearing on his experiences in England and on the European war.

Work by any other name wouldn't make a bigger hit.

The Prophecy of Mayence

War of 1914 Predicted in 1854 --- Fall of Germany and Austria Hungary This Year --- Much Has Already Been Fulfilled in Remarkable Manner

There is in Germany a famous prophecy. It is called "The Prophecy of Mayence," and dates from 1854. It comprises eighteen verses of prediction, of which the first nine have been fulfilled in the most remarkable manner. Here are the verses:

1. When the little people of the Oder shall feel themselves strong enough to shake off the yoke of their protector and when the barley is sprouting from the ears their King William shall march against Austria.

2. They will have victory upon Victory up to the gates of Vienna, but a word from the great Emperor of the West shall make the heroes tremble on the field of victory, and the barley shall not be gathered in until he has signed the peace, shaken off the yoke and returned triumphantly to his country.

3. But at the gathering in of the fourth barley and that of the oats a dreadful sound of war shall call the harvesters to arms. A formidable army, followed by an extraordinary number of engines of war that hell alone could have invented, shall start towards the West.

4. Woe to thee, great nation, woe to you who have abandoned the rights divine and human.

The God of battles has forsaken you; who will succour you?

5. Napoleon III., mocking his adversary at first, shall soon turn back towards the "Chene-Populeux" where he shall disappear never to reappear.

6. In spite of the heroic resistance of France, a multitude of soldiers, blue, yellow, and black, shall scatter themselves over a great part of France.

7. Alsace and Lorraine shall be carried away from France for a period and half a period.

8. The French shall only take courage again as against each other.

9. Woe to thee, great city, woe to thee, city of vice! Fire and sword shall succeed fire and famine.

10. Courage, faithful souls, the reign of the dark shadow shall not have time to execute all its schemes.

11. But the time of mercy approaches. A prince of the nation is in your midst.

12. It is the man of salvation, the wise, the invincible, he shall count his enterprises by his victories.

13. He shall drive out the enemy of France, he shall march to victory on victory until the day of divine justice.

14. That day, he shall command seven kinds of soldiers, against three to the quarter of Bouleaux between Ham, Woerl and Paderborn.

15. Woe to thee, people of the North, thy seventh generation shall answer for all thy crimes. Woe to thee, people of the East, thou shalt spread afar the cries of affliction and innocent blood. Never shall such an army be seen.

16. Three days the sun shall rise upwards on the heads of the combatants without being seen through the clouds of smoke.

17. Then the commander shall get the victory; two of his enemies shall be annihilated, the remainder of the three shall fly towards the extreme East.

18. William, the second of the name, shall be the last King of Prussia. He shall have no other successor save a King of Poland, a King of Hanover, and a King of Saxony.

All the first part of this prophecy up to the ninth verse, inclusive, is verified by the war of 1866, then by that of 1870, and then by the Commune of 1871. Here are the last nine verses.

10. Courage, French patriots, Germany cannot carry out its schemes of supremacy.

11. The time of retaliation approaches. The Tsar shall come in the midst of you to seal the alliance.

12. That is the man of salvation.

13. He shall chase the enemy of France, he shall conquer Germany until it is completely destroyed.

14. The last battle on the field of Bouleaux, near to Paderborn, in Westphalia, shall reunite seven allied peoples (French, Belgians, English, Dutch, Russians, Japanese, and Servians) against three (Germans, Austrians and Hungarians.)

15. Woe to thee, Prussia, thy seventh generation shall answer for the wars thou hast made upon all the people. (Seven generations make 30 years plus 7 equals 210 years. The realm of Prussian dates from 1713. The seventh generation is, then, living between 1893 and 1923.) Woe to thee, Austria! Never such a battle shall have taken place.

16. It shall last three days in the smoke of the conflagration.

17. Finally Prussia and Austria shall be annihilated. Hungary shall fly towards the extreme east (of Europe.)

18. William II., shall be the last King of Prussia. Germany and Austria shall form three realms: Poland, Hanover and Saxony.

The British army is at present engaged in assisting the Prophecy of Mayence to a triumphal fulfilment.

NEW MOUNTAIN IS FOUND IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

New York, Sept. 14.—A mountain, 11,000 feet high, which Miss Mary L. Jobe, explorer, and instructor in history at Hunter College here, believes has never been mapped, was discovered by her in the wilds of British Columbia, and a report concerning it will be made, she said last night, to the Canadian Government and to the National Geographical Society.

Miss Jobe returned today from her exploration trip, which lasted six weeks, and announced her discovery. She locates the mountain, to which she will give a Cree Indian name, as about 150 miles north of Mount Robson. The topographical survey of Canada extends to a point only a few miles north of Mount Robson.

Miss Jobe and several companions arrived at the foot of the newly-discovered mountain on August 22, and began the ascent in a heavy snowstorm. After recovering six miles they were forced to return to camp for food. A flock of grouse enabled them to provision, and the ascent was begun once more. On August 25 they reached within 800 feet of the summit. Here great ice caves, with icicles 60 feet in length at their mouths, blocked progress.

The trip was Miss Jobe's seventh into the Canadian Northwest.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Embro, Sept. 14.—Charles McKay, of Woodstock, was found dead in bed Saturday at the home of Thomas Underhill, two miles from this village.

For some days Mr. McKay had been engaged in bricklaying work for Mr. Underhill, and at night he retired to rest in apparently good health. As he failed to rise at the usual hour, Mr. Underhill went to his room, and found he had died in his sleep. A doctor was summoned, and said death had only occurred a short time before the finding of the body.

Although the death comes as a shock to his friends, it was not altogether unexpected, as he suffered for some time as the result of a sunstroke.

He is survived by his wife and seven children: Edna, Alice, George, William, Ida, Vera and Charles; also by two brothers, Frank and John, of London.

Father Roche to Preach.

As previously announced the corner stone of the new Church of the Immaculate Conception in East City will be laid on Sunday, September 27th. Rev. Father Roche, Superior of St. Michael's College, Toronto, will preach the sermon. Rev. Father Roche it will be remembered preached the sermon at the laying of the corner stone of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Rays of Sunshine Through the Clouds

The sudden breaking out of war caused many to "run to cover." Like the chicken on whom the rose leaf fell, some of us became a prey to fear and were ready to declare "the sky is falling."

Now the vision is clearing, our alarm has fled, we have recovered our poise and our courage. We are seeing, also, our opportunity. Swiftly and almost overwhelmingly has come to us the perception of the fact that the competition of Continental Europe has been taken away. We are faced with a condition and an opportunity both tending to our advantage as a country of industry, agriculture and trade. Good times are ahead, if Canada and Canadians see and prize the present opportunity for enlarging their industries and trading. We must be careful. We must have courage.

Trade With Australia.

The Canadian Trade Commissioner at Melbourne reports that according to official statistics the Canadian-Australian trade fell off last year from £1,138,000 to £1,134,000, Australia taking £169,193 from Canada, a decrease of £11,000. These figures, however, are believed to be below the mark, because it has been found that some Canadian products, such as apples have been registered as from the United States.

The most noticeable increase in Australian importations from Canada last year were in vehicles, particularly motor cars and parts of £34,000 rubber manufactures, £12,000 agricultural implements £10,000, rubber footwear £5,000, besides smaller increases in oatmeal, hops, oils, manufactures of wood, machinery and engines. The decrease have been chiefly in fish, fruit, metal manufactures, timber, printing paper and drugs.

Canada took from Australia £9,985 worth of butter, or double that of the year before; meats £81,000, increase £86,000; hides and skins £53,000, decrease of £48,000.

A ship from St. John, N.B., to Melbourne carried 402 motor cars for Australia and New Zealand. Another steamer now en route carries 428 motor cars.

MILK IN THE COCOANUT BETTER GET AFTER IT

While the nations of Europe are at war, the people of Canada have a duty to their own land as well as to the Mother Country. While regretting the issue forced on the Mother Country and giving contingents to England's aid, let us also give all the help we can to ourselves. Canada's own big problem is that of a country which has imported much—and suddenly finds those importations cut off.

You will get at the milk in the cocoanut at once by glancing at the following lists:

List No. 1

Some of the things we have been importing from Germany, Austria, etc., to the value of $38,000,000 per annum:

Analine dyes, baskets, books, boots, buttons, brooms, brushes, canned goods, chemicals, chinaware, clocks, clothing, collars and cuffs, cotton goods, combs, curtains, colors and dye stuffs, cutlery, dolls, drugs, earthenware, embroideries, electric apparatus, feathers, furs, fringe and tassels, gloves and mitts, glass and glassware, guns, hats, hosiery, hops, jewelry, knitted goods, leather goods, lace, labels, locomotive tires, machinery, millinery, mineral waters, musical instruments, optical instruments, paints and colors, papers, pencils, perfumes, pianos, pharmaceutical preparations, piano parts, piano key ivories, pipes, purses, ribbons, rubber goods, seeds, shoes, laces, silk knitted and other goods, silverware, soaps, spirits, stockings and socks, time recorders, tobacco, toilet articles, tools, toys, underwear, woodenware, woollen goods, watches.

List No. 2

Some of the things mentioned in List No. 1 that we now make in Canada in competition with the manufacturers of Continental Europe:

Baskets, boots, books, buttons, brooms, brushes, canned goods, carpets, chemicals, collars and cuffs, cotton goods, clothing, combs, colors and dye stuffs, cutlery, dolls, drugs, earthenware, electric apparatus, feathers, furs, glass and glassware, gloves and mitts, guns, hats, hosiery, jewelry, knitted goods, lamps leather goods, labels, machinery, millinery, mineral waters, musical instruments, optical instruments, paints and colors, paper, perfumes, pipes, pharmaceutical preparations, pianos, piano parts, purses, ribbons, rubber goods, seeds, silverware, silk knitted goods, soaps, spirits, stockings and socks, time recorders, toilet articles, tools, underwear, woodenware, woollen goods.

A Great Advantage

The Canadian manufacturers of the articles in List No. 2 have now an advantage greater than any tariff wall. The competition of Continental Europe has been withdrawn and will remain withdrawn until the war is over at least. Let the Canadian manufacturers make the most of the situation. And let the people of Canada rally round our manufacturers and help them make the most of it, for we need them and the things they make as never before.

The immediate result of the European war, in Canada, was a check to business.

The second result will be to stimulate business—if we keep our heads, and go after business.

We believe every Canadian will follow this timely advice.

LABOR REPORT

The condition of the labor market, in Peterboro, for the month of August, is reported to the Labor Gazette as follows :—

There was very little improvement in the condition of the labour market as compared with the previous month. While the building trades continued active, the factories showed no improvement, and there was very little demand for unskilled labour. The city has been doing what it could to relieve the situation. A contract for paving some of the principal streets has been let, and this, with some sewer work and sidewalk extentions, was expected to give employment to a large number of men. The street railway was making some extension to their line, and this will also help. A number of the men were going out to the farms for the summer, but will not have work for the winter.

The saw mills started again after being shut down waiting for the drives of logs. These were arriving and the mills were expected to run as late in the season as possible to get their lumber out.

The barbers have raised the price of a shave from 10 cents to 15 cents.

The farmers were cutting their spring grain. The harvest was rather early on account of the dry weather, and in most places the crop was expected to be light. The army worm and grasshoppers have done considerable damage in some districts.

LOCAL POLICE OFFICER IS OFF TO THE FRONT

Marries the Girl he Left Behind Him

Chief Thompson of the local police force has received the following letter from Constable E. Downs, who left the local police force to join his regiment in England about a month ago. The letter is written from Waterloo Road, London, England.

Dear Chief Thompson :

I am now in England and expect to go to the front on Monday, 7th inst. I shall be very glad to get there I can assure you for there is certainly something doing.

The chief item on my program is that I am going to be married on Sunday to the girl I left here before I came away, and my wife and I will return as soon as the war is over. Now, I must thank you for your kindness in coming to see me off, also the other members of the force.

When I get to the front I will send you a card and let you know how things are. London is alive with militia and friends of the militia. The regiment I will join has suffered terribly lately as they are right at the front. I am writing from the residence of my brother and I will thank you if you will send a card to him to forward to me, as a little word from Peterboro is mighty welcome.

I shall be glad to get back again to Peterboro, as I can not get used to England again, and if I am spared I shall return as soon as the trouble is over.

Hope all at the station are keeping well and I hope to be spared to meet them all again.

Yours sincerely,
E. DOWNES.

POLICE COURT

In today's police court Charles Danby was found guilty of being under the influence of John Barleycorn—$2 or twenty days.

A young woman was also in court on account of not conducting herself in a womanly way. She spoke of her intentions to leave for Toronto today and her case was held in abeyance.

GERMAN FLEET IS LOCATED

Part of Navy Under Command of Prince Henry

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14. — (Via London. — A despatch from Raumo, Finland, says that, according to statements made by pilots and fishermen, a German fleet has been cruising for the last two days in the waters south of the Aland Islands. The fleet includes seven dreadnoughts and cruisers of the Friesland, two big cruisers, four torpedo boats of the first-class, and a lot of coal and repair vessels. Aboard the cruiser Blucher the flag of Chief Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia was hoisted, which would indicate that he is in command of the fleet.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

CANADIAN FLOUR MILLS WILL RUN AT FULL CAPACITY

Orders from the Dominion and Ontario Governments for an aggregate of 1,250,000 barrels of flour are only the beginning of the increased demand on the flour mills of Canada as a result of the war.

The mobilization of the armies of Europe will result in a large reduction in the acreage sown to wheat in that Continent. That reduction in acreage and consequent reduction in yield will greatly increase the demand for wheat and flour from other producing countries. Canada will find a ready market for all the wheat and flour she can export during the war. The flour mills of Canada will be kept busy grinding Canadian wheat into Canadian flour for export to the Mother Country at this time of trial.

In the home market also there will be an increased demand for flour. The tendency of many will be to use more bread and other staple articles of food instead of some of the luxuries of the table. This will mean an increased consumption of flour.

Thus it would appear that the 7000 men who are working in the flour mills of Canada are assured of continued employment throughout the war. It is possible the number of employees in flour mills will have to be increased but even if an increase should be unnecessary the continued operation of this industry will mean the circulation of approximately four million dollars a year in wages to Canadian workmen.

RATEPAYERS WATCHING THE HYDRO ELECTRIC APPOINTMENTS

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I notice by your evening edition that the city has paid into court $100,000.00 being the purchase price of the plant, etc., of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and I suppose that in the ordinary course of events, a few weeks or months will see this city under the Hydro-Electric system.

Now although our aldermen in the past have, at least to the casual observer, been fairly free from any direct charge of graft or nepotism, it behooves every member of our present city council, at this important juncture in Peterborough's history, to let her members of the Utilities Commission have a perfectly free hand in the selection of the men who are to make or mar our Hydro-Electric system, and it likewise behooves the members of the Utilities Commission to at once set their faces sternly and resolutely against the introduction of any favoritism in the appointments which they are about to make.

There is no doubt but the overtaxed citizens of Peterborough will watch keenly the appointments that will be made to our local Hydro-Electric staff and it is sincerely to be hoped by all that no favoritism will be shown.

It is well known to the people that there are at present in the employ of our local power company, a few men who are experts in their departments—men who know the business from the bottom up—and it is to be sincerely hoped that the services of these men will, if possible, be retained to guide and guard our Hydro-Electric system, and although I have but a very slight personal acquaintance with any of these men and hold no brief from them I cannot refrain from mentioning the names of at least two who stand out conspicuously as experts in the financial and mechanical management of an electric system.

I refer to Mr. Charles Seymour and Mr. J. H. Greer.

The people of this city are already overburdened with taxation and if any relief is to come through the introduction of the Hydro-Electric system it can only be accomplished by the appointment of men who understand the management of that system and certainly not by foisting into office, on our already overtaxed people a lot of mere automatons or parasites.

If it is made apparent by the personel of our Hydro-Electric staff that the members of our city council have had the slightest influence then of course the keeping up of a Utilities Commission is a farce and fraud upon the people and the sooner it is wiped out by them the better for the city.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your kindness in allowing me this space in your columns, I beg to subscribe myself,

One of Those Already Taxed to the Limit.

THREE BELLEVILLE YOUNG MEN DROWNED IN BAY OF QUINTE

Trenton, Sept. 14.—Three young men from Belleville, Fred Gerow, Jimmy White and Clare Jenkins, the latter a son of J. Jenkins, proprietor of the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, were drowned about a mile down the Bay of Quinte about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

They, with three others, Harry Symons, Fred Palmatier and Norman Hall, in the latter's fast Motor-boat Wren, were up at Trenton on a visit, and on the return journey Norman Hall, who was steering, let go the wheel for a few seconds to light a cigarette, when the boat swerved slightly and Jimmy White caught the wheel to right it, which gave the boat a swift turn in the opposite direction, almost upsetting it, and throwing Gerow, Jenkins and himself overboard, the boat going at such a fast rate those in it could not get back in time to rescue their comrades.

On their return to Trenton dock R. G. Weddell immediately started out on his tug with his crew of men off the dredge, accompanied by Pat Jennings, who is an expert direv, for the scene of the accident.

ENLARGE RIFLE FACTORY.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The Ross Rifle factory at Quebec is to be enlarged considerably to meet the demands made upon it. The capacity of the factory is 200 rifles per day, but more than these are required, and at once. A greater supply of ammunition is also needed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ORDER OF MUD TURTLES.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Is there a branch of the Loyal Order of Mud Turtles in your city ? If any of your correspondents will answer me I will esteem it a great favour.

Yours truly,
R. SNOGGS.

THE ONLY WAY.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—I thank you for the insertion of my letter in Saturday's issue but pardon me when I say the heading you gave "stop the war" is open to misconception. There would be no results in stopping the war, while still so indecisive and there is no way it can be done other than the Kitchener way. It is too late for any other way but there is the opportunity to organize public opinion so that when Germany is overwhelmed the allied governments will know the people want peace, for all time and the only way to have this, is to fight now for the abolition of all armaments and wars, replacement by compulsory arbitration with one international armed support which would require to be of about the strength of the United States peace establishment or less. The other alternative policy would be to reduce all armaments to the relative strength of twenty-five years ago which would surely result in the same rapid increase as we have seen and would culminate in a conflict to compromise both hemispheres with ten times the number of men engaged ; the improvements of and invention of wars death dealing machinery would cost millions of lives where this present one will take hundreds of thousands.

From a Christian, moral and economic standpoint the only settlement of this war should be on the basis of complete disarmament and the policing of the world by an international force. This is the most momentous and insistent question. Hold up the hands of the British, French and United States Governments by endorsing such resolutions by the name of every man, woman and child here. The moral effect of this added to appeal by letter to one's friends elsewhere with a personal delegation to Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa would begin a world movement.

Yours sincerely,
JOSEPH S. BELL.

THE NAVAL SITUATION

Discussing the naval situation, the Scotsman (Edinburgh) says:

Developments in the naval situation will be awaited in this country with even more eagerness than news of the operations on land. The public must, however, guard themselves against an excess of impatience. We can have every confidence that when a serious engagement takes place our fleet will acquit itself with credit. But it must abide the time when the German navy will be forced to leave the shelter of its base. So long as Germany keeps the main part of the fleet interned where it can do no harm, we are winning in the naval warfare, and it would be rash at this period of the struggle to attempt an attack upon the strongly fortified and mine-protected base where her ships are lying useless. Meanwhile it can be confidently assumed that Admiral Sir John Jellicoe is carefully watching for an opportunity to deliver a crushing blow, and while the main part of the British fleet is waiting to give battle in the North Sea, scattered units are dispersed in the Atlantic and Pacific, protecting the British trade routes. Command of the seas has, in fact, already been secured. The rapidity with which the British naval mobilization was carried out, and the promptitude with which the home fleet took up its appointed position, ensured that only a few vessels of the German navy should be at large. These vessels are still on the high seas, but they are being hunted by a much superior British force, and their capture or destruction cannot be long delayed.

WELL KNOWN OTONABEE RESIDENT PASSES

The death occurred yesterday morning at 11 o'clock of Mr. Hugh Mackey, of concession 11, Otonabee. Born in Donegal, Ireland, 77 years ago he came to Canada when about 1½ years of age, and had resided in the township ever since. He was highly respected and his death will be a great shock to his many friends. Left to mourn his loss are his sorrowing wife, two daughters, Mrs. Jas. Thompson and Mrs. A. Wood, North Monaghan ; also two sons, George, of Humboldt, Sask., and Hugh, at home. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 from his late residence, concession 11, lot east of Curtis' brickyard, to Little Lake cemetery.

GAVE THE WARNING ANSWERED CALL HIMSELF

Windsor, Sept. 14.—"Any one of us is apt to be cut off from this life at any moment," declared Rev. John Edmund Meunier, vicar-general of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London, in the course of a sermon on "Death" at St. Alphonsus Church yesterday morning. In the afternoon he dropped dead from paralysis. He was 64 years of age and had been rector of the local parish for 14 years. He was a native of Quebec City.

MEN WHO GUARD CROSSINGS ARE UP IN THE AIR

When the gateman's house on Brock Street was removed to make room for a more up-to-date duckett, there was destroyed, the oldest land mark that we had as far as the Midland division was concerned through these parts. It stood there for over 31 years and was the first one of its kind in these parts. James Mallock has charge. Now the ducketts may be seen along the railway from Reid to Sherbrooke Streets. The city council ordered that the one on King Street be moved to the north side of the street as it was impossible formerly to see trains coming in both directions. Now the duckett commands a good view from all directions and is in charge of Jno. Noyes and Jno. Horner. The duckett house at Sherbrooke St. is a great guard of public safety, and fills a long felt want. It is in charge of Isaac Little.

Mr. Chauncey Depew rode out of France a few weeks ago in a cattle car. We presume that he was listed on the bill-of-lading as "City skin. Green."—Toronto News.

IN RETREAT EVERYWHERE

Allies Are in Pursuit of Invaders Who Are Abandoning Wounded, Guns and Ammunition as They Go---On the Left the Allies Have Gained Sixty-Five Miles in Six Days.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 14.—The Minister of War, Alexandre Millerand, yesterday communicated to the Cabinet the following telegram, which he had received from Gen. Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces:

"Our victory is confirmed as more and more complete. Everywhere the enemy is in retreat. Everywhere the Germans are abandoning prisoners, wounded and munitions of war.

"After heroic efforts on the part of our troops during this formidable struggle, which lasted from the 5th to the 12th of September, all our arms are flushed by success and executing a pursuit unexampled for its extent.

"On our left we have crossed the Aisne below Soissons, thus gaining 100 kilometres (about 65 miles) in six days' fighting.

"Our armies of the centre are already north of the Marne, while those of Lorraine and the Vosges are arriving on the frontier. The morale, endurance and ardor of our troops and those of our allies are admirable. The pursuit will be continued with all our energy. The Government of the republic may well be proud of the army which it has equipped. (Signed) Joffre."

French Capture 160 Guns.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—An official report issued on Saturday night says:

"The third French army reports to-day that it has captured the entire artillery of a hostile army corps, a capture which probably represents about one hundred and sixty guns. The enemy, thus in retreat along the whole line west of the Meuse, has suffered gravely in morale, besides encountering heavy losses in personnel and material."

The report continues: "On Sept. 6 the southward advance of the German right reached the extreme point at Coulommiers and Provins, cavalry patrols having penetrated even as far south as Nogent-sur-Seine.

"This movement was covered by a large flanking force west of the line of the River Ourcq, watching the outer Paris defences and any allied force that might come from them.

"The southward movement of the enemy left his right wing in a dangerous position, as he had evacuated the Creil-Senlis-Compeigne region, through which his advance had been pushed.

"The allies attacked this exposed wing both in front and on the flank on Sept. 8. The covering force was assailed by a French army based upon the Paris defences, and brought to action on the line between Nanteuil-le-Haudouin and Meaux.

"The main portion of the enemy's right wing was attacked frontally by the British army, which had been transferred from the north to the east of Paris, and by a French corps advancing alongside it on a line between Crecy, Couloummiers and Sezanne.

"The combined operations have, up to the present, been completely successful. The German outer flank was forced back as far as the line of the Ourcq river. There it made a strong defence and executed several vigorous counter-attacks, but was unable to beat off the pressure of the French advance.

"The main body of the enemy's right wing vainly endeavored to defend the line of the Grand Morin river, and then that of the Petit Morin. Pressed back over both of these rivers and threatened on its right, owing to the defeat of the covering force by the allied left, the German right wing retreated over the Marne on Sept. 10.

"The British army, with a portion of the French forces on its left, crossed this river below Chateau Thierry—a movement which obliged the enemy's forces west of the Ourcq already assailed by the French corps forming the extreme left of the allies to give way and retreat northeastward in the directions of Soissons.

"Since Sept. 10 the whole of the German right wing has fallen back in considerable disorder, closely followed by the French and British troops.

"Six thousand prisoners and 150 guns were captured on the tenth and eleventh, and the enemy is reported to be continuing his retirement rapidly over the Aisne, evacuating the Soissons region.

"The British cavalry is reported today to be at Fismes, not far from Rheims."

GERMAN ARMY CORPS DEFEATED BY BELGIANS

GUNS TAKEN AT DEXMUDE

They Have Reoccupied Termonde, Nearly all of East Flanders, Antwerp and Limbourg—Germans Waiting For War Levy Have Been Ordered to French Frontier.

LONDON, Sept. 14. — An Ostend despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says:—

"The Belgian troops have just gained an important success at Cortenberg, between Louvain and Brussels, cutting up a German corps and taking a number of prisoners. The line toward Liege has been occupied by the Belgians."

Reports says that King Albert is constantly at the front with his troops.

Harassing the Enemy.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Antwerp gives the following official communication:—

"The Belgian army has reoccupied Termonde and nearly all of East Flanders, as well as the provinces of Antwerp and Limbourg, which are free from the enemy. The operations resumed by our army at Antwerp are progressing satisfactorily. The Germans are suffering important losses, principally from our heavy field artillery, which is doing remarkable service."

A despatch from Ostend says that since Sept. 9 German reinforcements numbering 60,000 have been moving toward Lille by way of Renaix, Belgium. The despatch adds that German troops who have been waiting at Betriegem to receive the war impost levied on the city of Ghent also have been ordered to the French frontier.

Germans have been seen laying mines under the Belgian roads which the allies are likely to take while following the retreating German forces.

Captured Guns From Uhlans.

OSTEND, Sept. 14.—Stray bands of Uhlans are still prowling in the neighborhood of Ostend. A sharp action was fought yesterday morning at Dixmude between the Belgian infantry and Uhlans accompanied by a machine gun mounted on an automobile. The Belgians dispersed the enemy, who numbered several hundreds, captured the machine gun, and inflicted considerable loss on the Germans. Other bodies of hostile cavalry are reported south of Ostend. Railway communication with Ghent is now open. The news from the south states that the harassed German right wing, which is being pursued by the British, is still fleeing in disorder.

Servians Occupy Big Area.

ROME, Sept. 14.—The Messagero's Belgrade correspondent reports that the Servians have now occupied all the Austrian territory between the Danube and the Save rivers.

DR. SAUNDERS

Former Director of Arms Passes at London

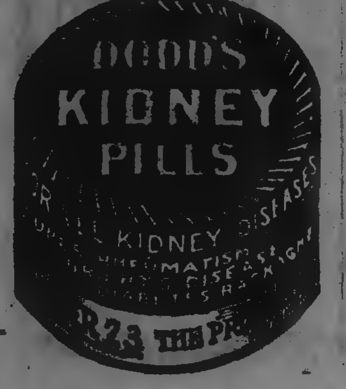
LONDON, Ont., Sept. 14. — Prof. William Saunders, LL.D., C.M.G., formerly director of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, died at his home, 255 Dufferin avenue, this city, yesterday to his 79th year after an illness extending over two years.

A native of Devonshire, Eng., Dr. Saunders came to this city at the age of twelve. He was appointed director of the Central Experimental Farm in 1886 and held the position for 25 years, during which time he established an international reputation for himself by bringing about a wonderful advance in grain-growing in Canada and thereby adding millions of dollars to the wealth of the country. Dr. Saunders was one of the founders of the Entomological Society of Ontario, and held high offices in many botanical, horticultural and entomological societies, both at home and abroad. He was created a C.M.G. in 1905.

Dean Starr on the Indomitable.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 14.—Dean Starr, who is on active service as chaplain, writes that he is on the warship Indomitable for a month, and then he will report to London for further instructions. He says there are many wounded in the barracks at Brentwood, many of whom are Germans, all good fellows who are opposed to the war and who put all the blame on the Kaiser and officers.

He hopes to go with the Canadian contingent on active service.



THREE GERMAN PRINCES ARE REPORTED DEAD

LONDON, Sept. 14. — An Ostend despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co says:—

"Crown Prince Frederick William and Prince Adalbert of Prussia, the Emperor's third son, and Prince Carl of Wurtemberg are reported to have died in a hospital at Brussels."

CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY.

Despatches from Berlin, however, continue to refer to the crown prince as being in East Prussia, in command of the German army there. Petrograd and London has referred to the East Prussian force as "the Crown Prince's army," but only because of rumors that he has gone east.

TROOPS DID NOT CROSS CANADA

Ottawa Denies Rumors Regarding Indian Soldiers

OTTAWA, Sept. 14. — Officials of the Militia Department deny emphatically the stories appearing in New York and other American newspapers to the effect that thousands of Indian and Australian troops have been sent across Canada within the past week.

It is stated that for quite obvious reasons there has been no such movement of troops. Since the outbreak of the war Australia has not been able to organize her forces and send them across the Pacific before the Canadian troops are ready to leave this country for England.

The Indian troops have doubtless proceeded to France by the shortest and safest route, through the Suez Canal and the Mediterranean to Marseilles, and thence by rail to Paris.

Just how the Australian troops will be sent to France is not known, but it is presumed that they will go all the way by ocean transports, accompanied by a strong convoy.

WAS BOUND AND GAGGED

Mysterious Case Engages Attention of Police

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Herbert E. Price, Bartholomew street, was found by John Donovan, lying in a ditch along the G. T. R. tracks in the yards east of Ormond street crossing, her hands and feet bound and tied with a rope and a gag in her mouth. The police have since been working on the case, but have been unable to obtain a clue.

The affair has brought out the fact that several threatening letters have been received at Mr. Price's residence the past summer, some of which were addressed to his brother-in-law, Mr. Lamore, who lives there as a boarder. Those addressed personally to Mrs. Price threatened the family with dire things. Mrs. Price further affirms that her assailant resembles a man who called three or four times lately and enquired for her brother-in-law, Mr. Lamore. Each time the stranger called it would be at a time when Mr. Lamore was at work.

Von Buelow Talks In Vain.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14. — The Frankfurter Zeitung's Rome correspondent says that the utterances of Prince Von Buelow in an interview, manifestly designed to turn Italian opinion in favor of Germany, has made no impression at all in any way, and that the reply of leading newspapers and politicians to Von Buelow shows that Italian sentiment is still overwhelmingly in favor of England and France.

AUSTRIANS ARE HEMMED IN

Sixty Thousand Austrians Who Fled After the Taking of Tomaszow Are Expected Momentarily to Surrender---Germans in East Prussia Driven Back.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14. — Following the taking of Tomaszow, the shattered Austro-German forces that had made their last stand in the south of the Province of Lublin, has been herded by the victorious Russians down into the impassable country between the Rivers Vistula and San. Some 60,000 men, harried in the rear by Russian cavalry and fronted by Russian artillery, are expected momentarily to surrender.

It is also announced here that German forces in East Prussia have been driven back with great losses near Muishenta, but are still bringing up reinforcements. The Germans are making their chief efforts in the region of the Maursee Lakes.

A statement, issued by the Russian headquarters staff, describes the Russian operations culminating in the victories of Krasnik and Tomaszow, Russian Poland:

"The total Austrian and German forces exceeded 1,000,000 men with 2,500 guns—that is, over 40 divisions of infantry, 11 divisions of cavalry reinforced by German divisions.

"The main body of the enemy numbering 600,000 men moved towards Zavichvart and Tomaszow advancing on Lublin and Chela (Russian Poland). Its right wing was covered by the Lemberg (capital of Galicia) army numbering 206 battalions. Its left wing was covered by several Austro-German divisions around Radom (Russian Poland)."

The statement then describes the Austrian advance, which the Russians were compelled to meet with an inferior force. Then the Russians imperilled Lemberg and took defensive attitude while awaiting the result of the operations of Gen. Ruzsky and Gen. Brussiloff in the southeast.

"The successes of Gen. Ruzsky and Gen. Brussiloff enabled us to make a general offensive movement, and the enemy's centre was beaten at Sukhodoyl as a result of a rapid movement among the Austrian troops at Krasnik. These were attacked by Gen. Ruzsky in the southeast on Sept. 6 and were forced to accept battle on three front. We repelled counter-attacks of the Krasnik troops, and we carried by impetus assault the enemy's position on the front at Opole, Tourobine, and extending over a distance of 60 versts, on Sept 9. They fled, abandoning their arms.

"They continued vigorously to attack our left wing in order to win success in the direction of Lemberg. However, about Sept. 12 we also resumed the offensive on this side, and now the battle of Galicia, which has lasted seventeen days is drawing to an end. The pursuit of the enemy continues."

Germany is making a tremendous effort to recover East Prussia. All of the German forces that have been stationed northward from Posen and eight corps (about 320,000 men) brought from the western campaign are being disposed under the leadership of the crown prince for an aggressive movement against the Russian invaders.

The region of this coming battle is one of the most exposed and difficult in Europe.

This part of East Prussia is a network of railways and rectangular cross roads covering great expanses of bare flat fields. The marksmanship of both sides will have its deadliest effect, since the ground there is known to the last square yard, and there will be little need for experimental range-finding when once the enemy is located.

Driven Over River San.

LONDON, Sept. 14—The Exchange Telegraph Co. has received the following official communication from Petrograd:—

"The Russians gained a glorious victory over the Austro-Hungarian armies at Krasnik and Tomaszaw, the enemy being driven over the River San. Over 200 officers and about 30,000 men were captured by the Russians, as well as a number of big guns, maxims and stores."

GERMANS LOSE 31,000.

French Troops Have Re-entered Nancy and Occupy Belfort To-day.

DIJON, Sept. 14. — Germany has evacuated the region of Nancy, which for ten days resisted splendidly and repulsed victoriously all German attacks. The last attack was superintended by the German Emperor in person. Luneville, which had been occupied by the Germans, was retaken on the 11th inst. by the French army.

The Germans have lost heavily; at Nancy 20,000 men, and at Luneville 11,000. The bombardment of Nancy by Germans on the night of Sept. 9-10 caused only damage, without loss of life, and was followed by the retreat of the German army. The Belfort district is free of the invaders, and we shall reoccupy it to-day. The French army holds, as heretofore, Thann and the outskirts of Altkirch.

Gen. Pau Takes Ammunition.

LONDON, Sept. 14. — The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Nanteuil, Department of Oise, in a despatch dated Thursday, dealing with the turn of the tide in favor of the allies, says:

"Gen. Pau scored a tremendous advantage by capturing an enormous ammunition column seven kilometres (four and a quarter miles) long. This he destroyed, leaving the Germans short of ammunition."

SURVIVORS OF KURLUK

Eight of Ship's Party Reach Nome

THREE OTHERS DEAD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. — Eight white men and an Eskimo family, survivors of the wrecked Canadian exploring ship Karluk are safe aboard the revenue cutter Bear, after being marooned on frozen Wrangell's Island since last January. A relayed wireless message from the Bear received here last night said she was due at Nome, Alaska, yesterday.

The despatch told of the death of three of the explorers on the island, George S. Malloch, geologist; Bjarne Mamen, assistant topographer, and John Brody, seaman.

Captain Cochran's report said:—

"Bear is now returning to Nome with the following members of the Canadian Arctic expedition:

"Munro, Williamson, McKinley, Hadley, Chaf, Templeman, Williams, Maurer, Eskimo family.

"All doing well under care of the surgeon. Will arrive Nome Sunday.

"Party was rescued by schooner King and Wing on Sept. 7. Transferred to Bear Sept. 8, latitude 69 degrees 55 minutes north, longitude 175 degrees 30 minutes west.

"Malloch and Mamen died of nephritis. Brody was accidentally shot. There are eight missing persons who never reached Wrangell Island. The Bear reached within twelve miles of Herald Island. Clear and heavy ice. Unable to land on the island, but no signs of life."

GERMANY MAY NOT GET LOAN

CONSTANCE, Sept. 14. — (Via Paris.)—The headquarters of the 114th German infantry are in mourning, as practically the entire regiment has been destroyed. Many pitiful scenes are enacted when the women come to examine the posted list of the dead.

The war loan is causing anxiety to German financiers, as it will force the hands of the bankers, while the attitude of the people is somewhat uncertain, in view of the imminent disastrous retreat of the German army in France.

Home Rule Conferences.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Premier Asquith's statement to Parliament on the intentions of the Government with regard to the Irish Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment bills has been postponed from to-day until tomorrow (Tuesday). Further negotiations between the political parties over the bills are taking place.

700 German Prisoners.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Seven hundred German prisoners have arrived at Brienne-le-Chateau. They expressed surprise that the British were fighting against Germany. Another party of 50 Uhlans has surrendered at Montereau in a starving condition.

RED CAPS AND BANKERS WON IN BASEBALL AND ENGLAND TOOK SOCCER EXHIBITION

Despite anticipations there was not an exceedingly large number on hand at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon to witness the two baseball games and the football match, the proceeds of which were to go toward the Patriotic Relief Fund.

Red Caps 6, De Laval 5.

At 2 o'clock Mr. W. Andrews, who handled the indicator, called the first game between the Red Caps and De Laval men, Mercantile League teams. Contrary to expectations the class of ball was not up to the standard of previous games this season. The teams demonstrated a great lack of practice, the throwing of the infield being decidedly poor. The contest dragged on for seven innings, and the final score was, Red Caps 6, De Laval 5.

Carson and Rahmel were the opposing pitchers for the first four innings and after that Neary worked for the C.G.E. team in place of the latter. All the pitchers were hit hard and delivered numerous wild heaves. Carson could be given the credit for pitching the best ball, but Taylor the other member of the De Laval battery had an off day. Ray Rose, late pitcher for the Wm. Hamilton team played third for the Carsonites and threw several bad ones to the initial sack, peculiar though it may seem Callaghan the shortfielder also had a bad session.

The teams :—

Red Caps : Swanson c., Rahmel p., 2b., Hayes, 1b., Neary 2b., p., Anderson s.s., Butcher 3b., Taylor l.f., Heenan m., O'Hearne r.f.

De Laval : Taylor c., Carson p., Spratt 1b., English 2b., Callaghan s.s., Rose 3b., Ross l.f., R. Pilling m., Holly r.f.

England Victorious.

The exhibition of soccer between teams representing England and Scotland was won by the former by 2-0. As the majority of the spectators were from "across the pond" the match provided far more amusement than the baseball. At half time the score was 2-0 in favor of the English and although the Scots pressed hard they were unable to break down the fortifications of Ridley, the goal custodian for the opponents.

The teams lined up as follows :—

England		Scotland
	goal.
Ridley		Naples
	backs.
Wilson		Stewart
Perry		Pierson
	half-backs.
Mason		Irwin
Padget		McKinley
Knight		Hadd[illegible]
	forwards.
Boycott		Hurry
Holmes		Wilson
Halston		Hardie
Edwards		Cater
Bartley		Sinclair

Referee, Mr. W. Day.

Bankers Won.

The teams of both the Bankers and Drafting Room decided on a nine innings game but at the end of the eighth Umpire Andrews decided that the clouds of night had sufficiently lowered to warrant the game being called. When he did so the score stood 6-4 in favor of the money clerks.

The game was a big improvement over the first encounter and till the last bat was in the bag the outcome was uncertain. Gorman and Huycke were the decorators of the rubber and while the former was hit a little harder than the other the game was kept close through Huycke's wildness. Mossy showed lack of practise but at that pitched a good game. In the second inning the Drafting Room filled the bases with nobody down. The next man went safe on an error and a run was scored but Huycke drew himself together and struck out Jackson, Gorman and Barrie, leaving the trio stranded.

The teams :—

Drafting Room : Taylor c., Gorman p., Olson 1b., Rose 2b., Barrie s.s., Jackson 3b., Corrin l.f., Cranfield m., Ross r.f.

Bankers : Hill c., Huycke p., Long 1b., Patch 2b., Parsons s.s., Sheehy 3b., Moran l.f., Smith m., Phelan r.f.

NO EASTERN GROUP IN ONTARIO RUGBY UNION

A GOOD OPENING FOR CITY LEAGUE

At the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Rugby Football union, held on Saturday afternoon in Toronto, Dr. McPherson, of this city, was named as convenor for the eastern teams in the junior series. In speaking to Dr. McPherson to-day the Review was informed that there is very little possibility of an eastern group being formed, as the only cities capable of putting a team in would be Kingston and Peterboro, and for the past few years Rugby has been blotted from the sport calendar of those two. In Kingston, as here, the enthusiasm for the once popular game is very light, and it would be practically impossible to enter a team even in the Junior O. R. F. U. Considering these facts, it is only logical that the project of forming an eastern group must be abandoned.

The fact that this city cannot be represented in the great Rugby association of Ontario does not necessarily mean that the game must be crowded into oblivion. It is true that the majority of Peterborough's gridiron stars have drifted to other centres, but new material can be developed. A city league, say with three teams, the Y.M.C.A., T. A. S. and P.C.I., would put a little life into the game and would be instrumental in getting the younger element interested. What is needed is a lad. Dr. McPherson has fostered the game for a number of years, but his professional duties now require all his time, and it is rather selfish for the other admirers of the game to sit back and let it die simply because Dr. McPherson cannot take an active part. There are many other older players who, like Dr. McPherson, have ceased to take an active part in the pastime, but are willing to assist in getting it resuscitated, and should the above three organizations step out to start a city league there is reason for positive belief that the idea would be successful.

CHAMPIONSHIP HINGES ON RESULT OF LEAGUE MEETING

The Bankers, by winning over the Drafting Room on Saturday, are champions of the Mercantile league, provided they win the protest over the game they won from the De Laval on August 26. In the game in question the Bankers played a man who, according to the constitution of the league, was not eligible, hence the protest. If the De Laval are given the game, Bankers, De Laval and Red Caps will be tied for first honors, each having won seven and lost three.

Should the protest be disallowed, the Bankers, as stated above, are the champions, as follows :

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Bankers	8	2	.800
Red Caps	7	3	.700
De Laval	6	4	.600
Drafting Room	6	4	.600
Printers	3	7	.300
Wm. Hamilton	0	10	.000

A meeting of the executive is called for to-morrow night in the Y. M. C. A. at 7.45, when the protest will be discussed.

COMMENT

As You Like It

Frank Heffernan has been elected to the executive of the T. R. and A. Rugby Club.

The O.R.F.A. looks forward to another big season. The Ontario union will have plenty of teams in the junior series and may be depended upon, as always, to outdo the other unions in the matter of fostering the game throughout the province.

It is probable that all the Canadian League clubs will abandon the training camp idea next season. Ottawa, London, and St. Thomas established headquarters in the West last spring, but it was money thrown away as they struck more rain and cold weather than they would have done in their respective towns. The climate in Ottawa between April 25 and May 5 is just as warm and as pleasant as anywhere north of the Mason and Dixie line and in future Frank Shaughnessy will probably mobilize his Senators here. Besides the Canadian League, after general prosperity in 1913, struck a bad season and all the clubs have learned the necessity of economizing if they are to continue in existence.—Ottawa Citizen.

Ottawa will not have Silver Quilty on their amalgamated team this year. He is billed for a McGill uniform.

Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans, yesterday resigned his managerial duties. Chance requested to be relieved on September 15 and be paid his full salary for the season, this President Farrell refused to do so it is understood that Chance may remain for the rest of the season. He was signed a year ago at a salary said to be over $20,000 a year.

Rochester and Providence are still separated by but half a game. On Saturday Rochester took a brace from Montreal while the Grays were treating Jersey City in a similar manner. Providence moved to Newark for Sunday and split a double bill.

The standing of the two teams today is :—

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Rochester	85	55	.607
Providence	85	56	.603

The Giants and Phillies split a double bill on Saturday while the Dodgers took one from the Braves. Their standing today is :—

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	73	55	.570
New York	71	57	.555

Bob Fisher, late of the Leafs' infield played short for the Cubs yesterday and had one hit in three times up, accepted eights chances and had a stolen base. Pretty fair debut.

Charlie Isaacs is filling his position for Kelly.

A married woman who takes very little interest in the styles isn't thinking of getting a divorce.

Luck hates the slow, for they are apt to plod along and get there without any help or hindrance from luck.

It sounds picturesque to say that a girl looks like a wind blown rose, but to sober judgment it somehow suggests the need of pins.

We must conclude from hearing some people talk that there are a lot of men in this wide world who are dismal failures and go right along and enjoy themselves and never know it—the brutes!

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A bore is a man who isn't in the least interested in what you are enthusiastic over, but is enthusiastic over something for which you don't care a straw.

When it comes to American heiresses, of course the woman pays every time.

Taking the conceit out of a man ought to be synonymous with putting some sense in him, but it isn't.

The only difference is that some of us are a little more indirect and tactful than others in trying to get the best of the other fellow.

The man who has a pressing engagement should not complain if in the end he finds he has been squeezed dry.

Any kind of ready to-eat living looks good to the perfectly harmless chap who has to make his own living.

Probably the reason why there are so many unhappy marriages is because the girl does not think that the young man as husband lives up to all that is implied in a solitaire engagement ring.

Keeping still is merely an imitation of being wise and sometimes is just as effective as the real thing.

A girl who treats her suitors badly ought to be severely dealt with for contempt of court.

Primitive Aerial Navigation.

The cyclone season is at hand,
And very soon throughout the land
The natives will be treated to
As fine a breeze as ever blew,
And they will see, to their surprise,
Their household treasures in the skies.

A cloud no larger than a hand
Will very suddenly expand
Until it looks as large, we'll say,
As some account you cannot pay,
And its playful onward flight
Will pick up everything in sight.

The barn before this master grip
Will from its firm foundations slip
And like a modern airship will Go sailing over yonder hill
And, evoluting wide and neat,
Will settle in a field of wheat.

To follow in its train of course
Will be a buggy and a horse,
Some cattle and a drove of swine
And other critters in that line
To come down scattered far and wide
As with the cyclone's whim they ride.

The cyclone is a playful sprite,
For things inanimate take flight
When it displays the busy sign
And sends its forces down the line.
You never know what it will do,
So do not let it play with you.

A Problem In Astronomy.

The irrepressible George Ham arrived in London, Ont., late one night, and finding no street car in sight, he decided to walk from the C. P. R. station, which is in the northern end of of the city, to the business and hotel section. After traversing a block or two, he was approached by an individual whose unsteady gait indicated that he was unlikely to be found in the ranks of those lined up behind Mr. N. W. Rowell in his fight to "Banish the bar."

"Beg y'r pardon," said the wavering pedestrian in thick tones; "will you do me li'l favor?"

"Certainly, if it is within my power," answered the always courteous and obliging assistant to the president of the C. P. R.

"Will you tell me if that'sh the shun or moon?" was the query of the devotee of Bacchus, pointing an uncertain figure in the general direction of fair Luna.

Mr. Ham surveyed the luminary with a judicial expression, and then, shaking his head, answered: "Sorry, old chap, but you'll have to ask some one else. I'm a stranger in town myself."

GREENWOOD—GRAHAM.

A wedding of interest to the many local friends of the bride was solemnised at St. Catharines on Thursday, Sept. 10, when Miss Nellie Graham, daughter of Mr. G. N. Graham, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. F. C. Greenwood, son of Dr. Greenwood, of St. Catharines. Mr. and Mrs. Greenwood will reside at St. Catharines.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Dela Fosse left on Saturday for Montreal, where they will reside.

Lieut. Allan B. Mann, of the Third Prince of Wales Dragoons, has volunteered his services with the regiment.

Dr. Mann will not be in his office until further notice.

Mr. Jack Carson, of Tete Jeane Cashe, B. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Carson, Romaine street, is home on a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandy were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harding, Bethune street, over the week-end.

Mr. John Carson, of British Columbia, is visiting his parents, Romaine street.

Mr. F. B. Johnston, Orillia, is in the city.

Mr. W. B. Tinker, Beebe, Que., is registered at the Snowden House.

Messrs. M. C. Henry and J. M. Alfred, Healey Falls, are registered at the White House.

Mr. H. T. Armstrong, Hamilton, is in the city for a few days.

Messrs. Thomas and George Wilson of this city are visiting at Indian River.

Mr. W. H. Kidd, of Indian River, is in Lakefield to attend the fair tomorrow and Wednesday.

PROSPECTS NOT BRIGHT FOR THEATRICAL SEASON

Grand opera has not a very brilliant outlook in Peterboro for this season. However, Peterboro is no exception to the rule as the majority of the Canadian cities have about the same outlook.

Many English companies are cancelling contracts for Canada and at any event will only take in Eastern Canada as the outlook for the theatrical season in the west is very dismal.

Many of the companies who are touring Canada at present are making all endeavors to go to the States where the theatres are being better patronized. In the words of a local manager, "The less plays there are in Peterboro this season the better. People do not feel able to patronize the theatre no matter how good the play is."

DEVOTION VOICED BY SOUTH AFRICA

Cape Town, Sept. 14.—The Senate and Assembly of the Union of South Africa have adopted an address to King George, in which they state :

"While deeply deploring the outbreak of the war, we are convinced that participation therein was forced upon the Empire, and we respectfully desire to be allowed to express our approval of the action taken in defence of the principles of liberty and justice and of the integrity and sanctity of international obligations."

The conviction further is expressed in the address that the Empire will emerge victorious in the gigantic struggle, and that the conflict will be succeeded by "an era of beneficent and lasting peace."

The address concludes with a declaration of continued loyalty and devotion.

KAISER TREMENDOUS

Son of a soldier humane, brave and true,
Whose honor to him was as brute force to you.
Are you mad, bloody tyrant, or fool all through?

With God's holy name ever glib on your lips,
You value Him less than your bayonet tips ;
Professing allegiance to Christ as your Lord,
His Gospel of Peace is mocked by your sword.

With impious tongue you called God your "ally,"
Then hellishly doomed vast thousands to die—
Brave Belgians to die if they dared to defend
Their country, their homes, children, women and friend.

While bidding your legions to trust in the Lord,
You pinned your own faith to your slaughtering horde;
Afraid to fight France by honorable code,
You murder the Belgians to hew you a road.

Your country's signed contracts are naught in the scale,
Its honor is lost in your murderous hail.

When you came to the throne which Bismarck had built,
With help of your grandsire, you forecast your guilt ;
Slighting the People, the Army you first hailed,
Called yourself War Lord, flung out your fist mailed.

Proclaiming yourself the appointed of God,
You blazed to the world your vicarious rod;
Your foul use of that rod in Europe to-day
Will make your name loathed for ever and aye,
Whether mad, bloody tyrant, or fool all through,
Son of a soldier humane brave and true.

William Tremendous!
Butcher stupendous!

SCENE FROM "THE SPENDTHRIFT"

Will be Presented Here for the First Time Next Thursday

Our theatregoers have their first opportunity of witnessing "The Spendthrift," the latest dramatic work of Porter Emerson Browne, whose "A Fool There Was" has given him a position among American dramatists. The piece is a "vital drama of today" and deals primarily with the extravagance and wasted opportunities of a class of women who are numerous in certain strata of society. The basic theme of "The Spendthrift" appealed to Browne for a long time before he set his thoughts on paper and when he did he put into his writing all the vitality with which the idea was invested during the mental evolution. The date is Thursday next, Sept. 17. The seat sale opens tomorrow (Tuesday) morning.

Berlin's Defences not so Strong as Those of Paris

A Russian army is reported to be advancing upon Breslau, the most important city in south-eastern Germany, and less then 200 miles from Berlin ; and we have the Czar's statement that he is resolved at all costs to reach the German capital. It is by no means an impossible task, and we believe that it will prove a good deal easier for the Russians to reach Berlin than for the Germans to enter Paris. Having reached the city, its capture will be simple, for Berlin is not a fortified city in the same sense that Paris is fortified. The wonderful general staff of the German army never calculated upon permitting the enemy to get so close to Berlin that it would require fortifications. As a matter of fact, though the Germans have some very strong fortresses along the route of the Russian advance, they have never had the faith in fortresses that the French have. They showed in the course of the Franco-Prussian War that even with the artillery at their command fortresses could be battered into subjection if their defenders could not be starved out.

No Faith in Fortresses.

Germany is relying upon her armies rather than upon her fortresses, and her strategists have calculated that if the German armies were destroyed by invading Russians Berlin could not make use of any fortifications. The general staff calculated upon fighting the battles in defence of Berlin a couple of hundred miles away, and on this account the first defences of Berlin may be said to rest in the cities of Allenstein, in Eastern Prussia. Both these cities are reported to have fallen into the hands of one of the Czar's armies, which is now marching down upon the second chain of forts, those of Dantsic, Virschau, Marienwerder, Graudenz, and Thorn, all of which rest upon the Vistula River, and form a barrier from Russia to the Baltic. Should Russia burst through this wall she can march directly south as far as the Oder without encountering another fortress on her way, if we except Posen, which her armies could leave far to the eastward. At the Oder, and north-east of Berlin, is the solitary fortress of Gustrin. This once captured it would be as simple to march to Berlin as to march from Hamilton to Toronto.

Threatened on Two Sides.

Another Russian army is threatening Berlin from the Austrian frontier. We know that both Lemberg and Cracow are in the hands of the Russians, and it appears that instead of continuing toward Vienna this army is likely to continue its way west and north toward Breslau, avoiding the fortresses of Neisse and Glatz, or else leaving a sufficient number of troops there to seal them up. At Breslau, again, the Russians would be on the Oder, directly east of Berlin, and with only one fortress on the line of march, at Glogau. In other words, Germany has about a dozen fortresses spread over probably a thousand miles to protect Berlin. It is interesting to note that four years ago the annual manoeuvres of the German army were held in East Prussia, and the field of operations was between Konigsberg and Allenstein.

Natural Defences of Berlin.

The problem of the defence was to resist invasion from the east, and the defence was held to have succeeded. On this occasion, however, the natural character of the country greatly aided the defenders. Most of the land is swampy and low lying, in many places being covered by what might be called invisible lakes, so thickly overgrown with grasses and other vegetation that an advancing army might be knee-deep in slime and water before it was aware that it was not marching on solid ground. Again the operations of the defenders were assisted by the heavy September rains, which flooded the rivers and made progress slow, the artillery wagons and transports frequently being hub-deep in mud. This mimic warfare differs from an actual campaign. The September rains had not fallen in time to delay the march of Russia, and these two fortresses fell easy prizes. However, later on the Russians are apt to be impeded by the natural character of the country over which they must advance. In both East and West Prussia much of the land is low, with innumerable watercourses and lakes, through which the roads are few, thus making it necessary for Russia to move along certain lines known far in advance.

Relying on the Army.

Berlin's strategic position, therefore, is quite different from that of Paris, and consequently can be equally well defended by much fewer fortresses situated much farther off. Still the German fortresses are not supposed to be as strong as those which the German army has captured in Belgium and France. They have been designed, in fact, rather as entrenched camps than as walls to defy modern artillery. The German general staff calculated that if they were to be used at all they would be used as mere shelters to prevent the German armies resting upon them being taken by surprise. If seriously threatened it is likely that they will be evacuated, the German troops retreating as the Allies retreated farther and farther from his base until a favorable opportunity presents itself of hurling the whole strength of the resisting army at one point, bursting through the enveloping line and destroying it, in sections.—Mail and Empire.

ALL'S WELL — NO BLUE RUIN

It is the very irony of fate that, just as we were preparing to celebrate a century of peace, the nations of the world should be clutching at each other's throats — destroying, wounding, slaying, slaughtering.

The deadly conflict was inevitable, for conditions had arisen that it could not be otherwise. The appalling sacrifice of life, the widespread devastation, and the wanton loss of priceless treasure, however, shall not have been altogether in vain. Mighty consequences may result :

Stricken Poland will regain her nationhood after a century and a half of tyrannical oppression :

The persecuted Jews of Europe will have their full rights restored ;

Home Rule, which until the war broke out, was ominously rending Britain in twain, will re-unite the Motherland ;

Woman will be given the suffrage, and a fearful menace to Britain's home life removed ;

And, above all, the nations must unite in policing the world. There should be no more vast squandering of countless billions to maintain gigantic rival fleets and colossal opposing land fighting forces. The untold wealth expended in non-productive war material—for armament destroys and does not produce—could be profitably spent in the betterment of the world. Europe shall no longer be an armed camp. Entirely new and happier conditions will naturally arise, and Canada must naturally share in the better times that are to come.

Even today, embroiled in war as she is—for when Britain's at war, Canada is at war — comparatively few of of our own industries are suffering, and many are working overtime. Never were these so busy. Never were the products of the soil and of the factory in such heavy demand.

God forbid that we should build our prosperity on the misfortunes of others, but it is the consensus of opinion that the New World, far from the scene of strife, shall gain by the terrible disruption of the Old. New avenues of trade must necessarily be opened, new markets spring up—with a greater demand for our products.

So there is no cause for despair —no gaunt spectre of Blue Ruin before us.

Canada is sending her best blood and her best food and munitions to aid Britain's cause. We cannot all be in the firing line, but every Canadian just as sacred, if not as perilous, as our gallant troops. Those who, many unwillingly, remain at home can help Canada by not being stampeded with the panicky cry of hard times, by not going up and despairing of the country, by not tamely submitting to the extortions of unscrupulous price-raisers, by co-operating in minimizing want, by lessening the number of the unemployed, and, with a staunch heart and trusting in Providence, by doing that for Canada which, when the Dove of Peace once more descends upon earth, place her first among the nations of the world as a land of Illimitable Opportunities and Peaceful Prosperity. While mourning the appalling sacrifice of life, deploring the desolation of fair lands, the awful annihilation of peaceful homes, and the utter ruin of countless peoples—it may be that the end of this Age of War and Death and Destruction will be followed by a brighter and a better Era in which the Dominion shall play no inconsequential part.

All that Canadians have to do is to stand pat and keep their courage up. All's well.

Gloves For Dishwashing.

The housewife who has never used rubber gloves has yet to learn what a comfort they are when washing greasy dishes, pots and pans and doing other forms of housework which force one to put the hands in strong suds.

In selecting a glove the same rule holds good as in selecting for hot water bottles. The seamless ones are less apt to spring a leak. Be sure they are amply large, for they will not stand much stretching.

Apple Sauce Sundae.

Make apple sauce in the usual way. Shell and chop into small pieces one dozen English walnuts or pecan nuts. Also chop fine enough preserved ginger to make three tablespoonfuls. Just before serving beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth. Add the nuts and the chopped ginger with its sirup. Serve in sherbet glasses, heaping the nut and ginger decorated whites on top.

FIGHTING CONTINUES ALONG THE WHOLE LINE

BRITISH TAKE 600 PRISONERS AND 12 GUNS---CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY DRIVEN BACK

ALLIES IN RHEIMS, JAPS FIGHT GERMANS, BELGIANS GOOD WORK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 15.—The occupation of Rheims by the allied troops was announced by the official press bureau this afternoon.

London, Sept. 15.—The statement given out by the official press bureau this afternoon says the enemy is still occupying a strong position to the north of the Aisne, and fighting is going on along the whole line.

The Crown Prince's army has been driven farther back and is now on the line of Varennes, Consenvoye and Ornes. The allied troops have occupied Rheims. Six hundred prisoners and twelve guns were captured yesterday by a corps on the right of the British. Rain has made the roads heavy and is increasing the difficulty of the German army in its retreat.

Peking, Sept. 15.—German and Japanese forces encountered near Chi-Mo this morning, when there were some sharp skirmishes between patrols. The statement given out by the war office at Tokio says the Japanese cavalry had previously captured Chi-Mo.

Belgians Inflict Loss on Germans

London, Sept. 15.—An engagement took place yesterday near Alost, 15 miles northwest of Brussels, between German cavalry and a Belgian quick-firing detachment in motor cars, according to an Ostend despatch to Reuter. The Germans are reported to have lost heavily.

London, Sept. 15.—A despatch from Cape Town to the Reuter Telegraph Co. says the Fourth South African Mounted Rifles, commanded by Col. Daetson, after two night marches, surprised a German force which had occupied a drift 60 miles from Steinkopf, in Namaqualand.

After a sharp skirmish the Germans were compelled to surrender. Another Cape Town despatch reports the action took place at Raman's Drift, an important strategic position.

AUSTRIAN LOSSES, A THIRD OF FORCES

London, Sept. 15.—A reasonable estimate, says a Times Petrograd despatch, places the Austrian losses in Galicia at 300,000 in killed and prisoners, or nearly one-third of their forces.

They have also lost, the despatch says, one thousand guns, more than two-thirds of their available artillery.

SUBMARINE WHICH SENT PATHFINDER TO THE BOTTOM IS VICTIM OF THE BRITISH

London, Sept. 15.—The Scotsman to-day states that the German submarine which sank the British cruiser Pathfinder has itself been sunk by gunfire from several British ships.

Part of the British fleet on the lookout for submarines became aware of the near presence of one. The British vessels divided when the submarine appeared with only its periscope showing. With grim patience the British cruisers waited for the reappearance of the submarine, which occurred in dramatic fashion.

By some miscalculation, probably in a final effort to escape the cruisers, the submarine's conning tower and upper structure suddenly appeared in the midst of the English vessels. The conning tower had hardly broken the surface of the water when the first British gun marked it. The doomed vessel was within range of seven British cruisers and from every one of them guns crashed out. In ten seconds seven shots entered the frail shell of the submarine.

EXTEND DURATION OF THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 15.—Charles Bathurst, Unionist member for Wiltshire asked Premier Asquith today to consider the desirability of extending the duration of the present parliament till 1917 or of constituting a coalition so that a general election shall not be fought on ordinary lines of domestic controversy.

This suggestion followed a motion made by the Premier to introduce a bill to suspend the operation of government of Irelane Act and Welsh Church Act. Mr. Bathurst urged the undesirability of the country being convulsed in a general election during the war.

Mr. Asquith responded "I trust that will not take place." In answer to a question, the Premier said how the Secretary and Attorney-General would take steps to inquire into the allegation of German atrocities.

MANY ARE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Part of Train Went Into Lake Which Had Been Formed by Rains

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Springfield, Mo., Sept. 15. — Express No. Five known as the Texas Limited on the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad was wrecked this morning near Lebanon and a large number of lives were lost.

Part of the train fell into a gulley beside the track, which rains had swollen to a lake. The chair car and smoker were submerged and train men believe every passenger in the two cars were drowned. Seven bodies have been removed and the loss of life is variously estimated at from twenty-two to fifty.

AGREEMENT IS REACHED ON HOME RULE BILL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Sept. 15.—The Home Rule question is prominent again. Lord Crewe in the House of Lords today pledged the government to introduce an amending bill and deal with it before Home Rule becomes operative.

Conservatives held a meeting at the Carlton Club and decided to accept the government's program from patriotic motives.

EIGHTY CHILDREN BURNED

Panicky Germans Fired Village in Belief They Were Attacked

PARIS, Sept. 15.—A German who has arrived in Basle gives the following account of the Germans' destruction of the village of Hurzweiller:

"A small detachment of German soldiers entered Hurzweiller to pass the night. The kindly inhabitants gave beds to the exhausted soldiers. Later, more soldiers camped near the village. During the night, in order to shorten the sufferings of a wounded army horse, a soldier killed it. A sentry, hearing the shot, gave the alarm and the troopers asleep in the houses, roused themselves and frantically fired from the windows in the belief that the French were outside.

"The Germans from the houses on the outskirts of the village rushed into Hurzweiller and fired on their own comrades during the excitement, setting fire to the village. Eighty children were burned to death and numerous non-combatants were shot."

PRAISE IS DUE GENERAL JOFFRE

London, Sept. 15.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The reward of praise must be chiefly Joffre's. It was not always kindly that the name of Joffre was mentioned during the retreat from the frontier, though the chorus of praise would make one think confidence had never wavered. He has had the courage to expose himself to the danger of contempt and criticism, in order to realize his plan for final victory."

Gen. J.J.C. Joffre

General Joffre recently said: "There are two methods of making war, one to employ troops in masses, and the other to fight in an extended order. The former is the German method. It is immensely costly in life, but they can afford it, for two reasons—their immense superiority in numbers, and the fact that their men are disciplined to mechanical obedience and fight best when closed and held together under the personal command of their officers.

"The extended order is the French way. The French soldier does not fight well, wedged together, and he becomes impatient under constant command and mechanical discipline. One thing is certain, in open country I cannot meet troops en masse and of greatly superior numbers, with extended troops. To have the best chance for success, I must fight in such position that the battlefield is limited to strong fortresses which will support the extended lines of the French, and, by limiting the front, will hamper the movements of the Germans."

This is what Joffre has done. He retired to the narrowest part of France, between Paris and Verdun, and the success of his strategy is amply shown.

GERMANS TRY DOUBLING BACK IN FRANCE AND LORRAINE

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 15.—The official announcement given out this afternoon reads: "On our left wing during yesterday the Germans offered resistance, on the north side of the river Aisne, along a line marked by the forest of L'Augle and Craonne, 12 miles southeast of Laon.

"On our centre the German line of resistance was located yesterday to the north of Rheims and of Chalons.

"In order to reach Vienne, a town in the western section of the Argonne region, forces of the enemy which were in the southern part of Argonne hastened their movement of retreat. In passing between the Argonne region and the river Meuse, their front yesterday at the end of the day extended from Varennes to Consenvoye.

"On our right wing the Germans were doubling back on Etain, in France, and on Metz Delme and Chateau-Salins, in Lorraine.

"In the Vosges and in Alsace the sitantion is unchanged.

"In Belgium the Belgian army is continuing to operate around Antwerp, causing serious losses to the enemy."

London, Sept. 15.—A despatch from the Rome correspondent of the Central News says it is declared there that members of the Roumanian ministry have tendered their resignations.

London, Spt. 15.—The correspondent of the Central News at Dieppe wires: "A report has reached Dieppe that the extreme left of the allies, after making an encircling movment by way of Roye and Ham, and joining a force from the Boulogne district, has compelled General Von Kluck to surrender with, according to one statement, 14,000 men, and, according to another statement, with 25,000 men and a quantity of guns and war material."

London, Sept. 15.—A despatch from Copenhagen quotes the Berlin Lokal Anzieger to the effect that the Russian forces exceeded the Austro-German force in Galicia by 350,000 men, and to this is due the Russian success. Another paper says the overwhelming superiority in artillery won the victory for the Russians. The Austrian losses are enormous, some regiments losing all their officers.

Vienna, Sept. 15.—News of Russia's increasingly victorious occupation of Galicia is depressing the more intelligent classes here, but the mass of the people get no information and are willing to accept official assurances that all goes well. The newspapers maintain an extraordinary reserve.

Belgium Commission's Report

London, Sept. 15.—The official press bureau, acting for the Belgian legation in London, has made public a second report of the Belgian commission appointed to inquire into the alleged German actrocities at Louvain and in the district around Malines. The report reviews incidents heretofore generally reported, but it adds documents and evidence on which its conclusions rest. It will be published in due course. The commission finds that on entering Louvain the Germans requisitioned food and lodging.

The German troops took possession of the cash in all the Louvain banks, burst open houses and pillaged and committed other excesses. The report then relates with considerable detail two alleged instances in which women were outraged by German soldiers, and asserts that there have been instances where women and children have been stabbed with bayonets and their legs cut off.

One case is cited where a woman covered with kerosene was thrown into a burning house. Of the burning of Louvain, the report says everything tends to prove that German regiments, through mistake, fired at one another. At once the Germans began bombarding the town, pretending that the civilians had fired on their troops. The suggestion is denied by all witnesses.

The commission contends that from several places in Belgium the male population has been sent to Germany and forced to work at harvesting, as if they were slaves.

London, Sept. 15.—According to a statement issued here to-day by the Servian legation, there are now in Hungary at least 150,000 Servian troops, successfully pushing an offensive movement against the forces of the dual monarchy.

Austrians are entrenched at all strategic points on all roads leading to Budapest.

Was Nominated For Governor

Paris, Sept. 15.—It is reported to-day that when the German general who was captured by the French and brought into the capital yesterday, was searched, there was found in his pockets his nomination to the governorship of Paris, signed by Emperor William. The name of this general may not be divulged.

BRITISH NAVAL LEADER.

ADD TO THE CAVALRY

Two Complete Regiments Will be Raised

VALCARTIER CAMP, Que., Sept. 15.—The Canadian Government, after communicating with the War Office, has decided to increase the first Canadian expeditionary force by adding two complete cavalry regiments of 575 men and 27 officers each. The regiments to go will be the Strathcona Horse and the Royal Canadian Dragoons. Both regiments are of the permanent force, but at present they number only about 300 men in each regiment. They will be at once recruited up to the full war strength of 602 officers and men. They will be in addidtion to the two cavalry squadrons already assembled at Valcartier.

The British War Office has intimated that further cavalry troops from Canada will be welcomed, and the men of both regiments here are eager to go. The decision of the Government to send them means that practically the whole of the permanent force in Canada will go abroad, either for service in France and Belgium, or doing temporary garrison duty in Bermuda, as in the case of the Royal Canadian Regiment, which left Halifax some days ago.

VOLUNTEERS SANG "DON'T TAKE ME HOME"

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. English, 309 Margaret Ave., are in receipt of the following letter from their son James.

Valcartier Camp,
Sept. 12, 1914.

Dear mother and father,—

I am sending this letter by one of the boys, who is returning home. We were all ready to go to the ranges this afternoon, when we received word that the Honorable Sam Hughes was to inspect us at I o'clock.

There is quite a bunch going home and I am sure glad to be one of those not returning. It is quite cool in the evenings here, and heavy frost, but the days are hot. The boys who are going home are out in the lines singing "Don't Take Me Home." I feel sorry for them. I was in Quebec on Wednesday, it is the quietest place I ever saw. It is now 4.25 p.m. We have just finished our march past the Honorable Sam Hughes, Major Bennett says: "The best I've ever seen." The Brigadier complimented our battalion. Our colonel says our company was the best. This was a test for brigades to go to the front as only three are going. I tell you what, we sure did have some line. We marched past better today in half battalion, than we did last Sunday in companies. We are all feeling fine about it. We marched through a bog to get to the inspection field, and we were up to our knees.

Your loving son,
JAMES.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1914

CANADA'S INDUSTRIAL NEED.

ALMOST since the very beginning of hostilities between Great Britain and Germany, the press of Canada, and doubtless that of the United States as well, has been saying that a great trade opportunity is knocking at our doors. The quick minds of Canadian business men were not slow to see that the isolation of Germany and Austria would deprive this continent, at one sweep, of millions of dollars' worth of articles that came formerly from German and Austrian factories. If these two countries could not buy foodstuffs from Canada and the United States, neither could they sell us toys, chemicals, china, novelties, cutlery, buttons, jewelry, or the other finished articles that their manufacturing centres produced. The condition of a state of war cut both ways, and so we have heard daily that Canada must seize her opportunity and manufacture within her own boundaries the things that she used to purchase from Germany and Austria.

OUR TRADE WITH GERMANY.

The figures designating German and Austrian trade are large and alluring, and, so far as Canada is concerned, relate more to Germany than to Austria. Last year Germany's trade with Canada outstripped that of France with the Dominion, and as a result she ranked third among the countries with which Canada carries on trade, coming after the United States and the United Kingdom. In the year ending March 31, 1914, Canada imported from Germany goods worth $14,686,069, and she exported to Germany goods to the value of $4,433,736, thus giving a total trade with Germany of the value of $19,119,806. Of the total amount of goods imported from Germany, $11,176,198 worth was subject to duty, the remaining $3,509,871 worth being admitted free. It is thus seen that Germany up to the outbreak of the present war had a material foothold in the Canadian market, which will be lost during the progress of the war.

This footing was largely for finished articles, a very small proportion of imports from Germany being raw materials. For the most part, Germany has been sending to Canada in the past considerable quantities of iron and steel goods, such as tubing, steel tires, cutlery, machinery, wire, etc., also a great variety of hardware, lamps, clocks, jewelry, electrical apparatus, scientific instruments, musical instruments, earthenware and glassware. All kinds of dry goods, cotton and woollen goods, hosiery, gloves, fancy goods, toys, dolls, buttons, combs, etc., have also been purchased. Drugs, chemicals, paper, paints, furs, tobacco, sugar and molasses also account for a large share of the imports into Canada from Germany. German manufacturers have established a reputation for careful and thorough workmanship, and they excel in anything requiring minute execution and exactness of finish.

Perhaps one of the most widespread effects of the present war on the Canadian import trade will result from the cessation of the supplies of iron and steel goods, hardware, etc., that have been coming from Germany. For the year ended March 31, 1914, iron and steel goods accounted for $2,824,900, or nearly one-fifth of the total import of German goods into Canada. A great assortment of goods goes to make up this amount, among them being included tubing to the value of $539,130, and steel tires for locomotives, etc., to the value of $848,059. Of special significance are Canada's purchases of cutlery from Germany, which amounted for the year concerned to $379,890. This is second only to the imports of cutlery from the United Kingdom, and exceeds those from the United States by over $150,000. German machinery was last year bought by Canadians to the extent of $252,889, while other iron and steel goods imported included wire of a value of $140,523; angles, beams, etc., worth $185,138; billets to the extent of $68,728; tools and implements worth $66,724, and iron and steel ware proper to the value of $93,037. This great assortment of goods being no longer obtainable from Germany, it rests with the Canadian iron and steel manufacturers to see that a large proportion of them is supplied at home.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Thus run most of the conclusions on the trade situation at the present time. There are, however, intermediary steps of great difficulty which have been apparently overlooked. It is all very well to say to Canadian producers—now is your opportunity, supply the Canadian market with the goods that formerly came from Germany, and great profit is yours. Germany has been perfecting her trade organization for years and building up a strong connection in foreign countries like Canada, and to ask a Canadian producer to "jump in" and do in a minute what Germany required a quarter of a century to accomplish, is to ask the impossible. To produce and sell goods that came from Germany, Canadian manufacturers have to establish an organization intricate in details and wide in extent, and which requires much time to be done well.

Moreover, Germany possesses a very large population and supplies her labour market at a much lower scale than that which prevails in Canada. Goods are produced at a lower price there because wages are lower, the market larger and the organisation more perfect. Considering what a dollar will purchase in Canada and in Germany, there may be little difference in the cheapness of articles in the two countries, but economic conditions make prices considerably different, and that is why Canadian tourists say a dollar goes farther there than in Canada. It is for the same reason that German goods have established themselves so easily and extensively in Canada and also in the United States. Thus, the price of an article produced and sold in Canada for one dollar may be a fair or cheap price here. The same article may be produced and sold in Germany for fifty cents and be no cheaper there than the dollar article here, because fifty cents in Germany would buy as much as a dollar here. But when exported, the equality disappears, and the German article in Canada is sold at a price against which we cannot compete. The difference in prices between Canada and Germany which does prevail, thus constitutes one of the most serious difficulties in producing in Canada the articles we formerly bought from Germany. We may produce these articles in Canada, but we cannot produce them at German prices. Perhaps Britain could supply those articles, the production of which could not be undertaken in Canada because of too great price differences and other difficulties in the way. The problem is to know, then, just what articles of German importation can be successfully produced in this country.

A SUGGESTED REMEDY.

An article in the Canadian Manufacturer insists on the appointment of an investigating government commission to inquire into this problem. It commends the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Sir George Foster, for preparing pamphlets on the subject, but thinks a commission would render still more efficient service. While government commissions are slow, that is a scientific way to proceed, provided good men can be found to act, and is to be commended; but it is quite hopeless to expect Canadian producers to take the place of German manufacturers with a well and long-established commercial organization. Enlightenment is needed badly as to what we can do, and if a commission would be of service, by all means let us have it.

WHAT WELLINGTON FARMERS DID.

WE HAVE no wish to dictate to the farmers of this locality, but merely desire to point out to them what the farmers of Wellington county did for the Empire. Wishing to offer some tangible aid, they called a largely attended meeting in the city hall, Guelph. It was decided to hold an "Oat Day," when the farmers would deliver the various quantities of oats for which they had subscribed their names. The Goldie Milling Co. has offered to store the grain until such time as the government desires to have it shipped. If the farmers of this district wished to do something similar to this, it would be quite appropriate and acceptable, and there should be no difficulty in securing free storage in the city of Peterborough. This is merely offered as a suggestion. Perhaps if the farmers here were to hold a meeting, they would do something different, but the matter remains in their hands.

That Line of Communication.

(Toronto Star.)

With 130,000 native troops from India at the front, and perhaps as many Russians in Belgium, in addition to the British and all France under arms, it need surprise nobody if the Germans begin to feel nervous about keeping an open road leading back home.

The War May Be Short.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The British government officials are said to look for a long war, but when the Germans on east and west are penned in on German territory, and for the allies the war is one of invasion and subjugation of Germany, the rest of the world need not worry much. It may be that when the German collapse comes it will come quickly. The defence of a beaten nation in the dangerous financial condition Germany has been in, goes to pieces quickly.

Government Should Appoint a Commission.

(W. R. Edmonds in Canadian Manufacturer.)

The governments of both Great Britain and the United States have begun investigations with a view to taking advantage of the opportunity which the present situation affords for developing both their home and export trade.

Sir George E. Foster, the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, is having, it is understood, a series of pamphlets prepared, with a view to enlightening business men in this country in regard to trade matters. This is commendable.

But would he not be rendering still more efficient service if he were to appoint a competent commission to make a thorough investigation in regard to industrial conditions in Canada and to bring in a report suggesting ways and means both for conserving the home trade for manufacturers, agriculturists and workmen—and for expanding the export trade? As far as the export trade is concerned, most of the investigation might be done by the respective commercial agents in the countries in which thy are located.

Ach, Hoch! Here Are Our New Names.

Beck's Weekly.

A special cable from London this week announced that the city of St. Petersburg had been renamed Petrograd by a special edict of the Czar. The special cable which is of real interest and importance to Canadians in connection with this latest phase of the war situation appears to have been missed by all of the Montreal papers. We take considerable pride and pleasure in "scooping" them by publishing it below.

London, Sept. 8. — A Berlin despatch states that the Kaiser's board of special geographers have completed their study of the map of Canada and that, acting on their report, the Kaiser has issued orders that the names of a number of important cities and towns shall be changed.

Montreal is to disappear absolutely from the map, the German geographers declaring the name not sufficiently characteristic. By the Kaiser's edict it will henceforth be known as Grafteneremoneburg.

A partial list of other re-named places follows:

Hamilton, Ont., is to be re-named Dedz.

Sorel to be known as Auffeloder.

Ottawa to be known as Helwhatagabfest.

Quebec City to be known as Prettedambad.

Berlin, Ont., to be known as Bustakaiserbust.

Toronto to be known as Swilpilaneronsleb.

Nauwigewauk, N. B., to be known merely as Nauwigewauk, N. B.

Pugwash, N. S., to be known as Hundmiteinewstumpfennascabwaschen.

Brockville, Ont., Georgepiegrahamskier.

AFTER US

By Walt Mason

The workman, in my new abode, now spreads the luscious plaster; he hums a blithe and cheerful ode, and labors fast and faster. I stand and watch him as he works, I stand and watch and ponder; I mark how skillfully he jerks the plaster here and yonder. "This plaster will be here," he cries, "unbroken and unshredded, when you sing anthems in the skies—if that's where you are headed." How good to feel, as on we strive, in this bright world enchanted, that what we do will be alive when we are dead and planted! For this the poet racks his brain (and not for coin or rubies) until he finds he's gone insane and has to join the boobies. For this the painter plies his brush and spreads his yelow ochre, to find, when comes life's twilight hush, that Fame's an artful joker. For this the singer sprains her throat, and burns the midnight candle, and tries to reach a higher note than Ellen Yaw could handle. For this the actor rants and barks, the poor old welkin stabbin', and takes the part of Lawyer Marks in Uncle Tommy's Cabin. Alas, my labors will not last! In vain my rhythmic rages! I cannot make my plaster plast so it will stick for ages!

ORILLIA AND "MADE-IN-CANADA"

The Orillia "Packet," one of the brightest of Ontario's weeklies, recently had the following editorial on the "Made-in-Canada" idea:

"The Orillia Furniture Company is promoting the buy-at-home idea by making use of a pay envelope which calls attention to the fact that "last year Canadians bought $618,000,000 worth of foreign goods, half of which could have been made in Canada"—or in other words $1,000,000 a day which went out of the country might have been spent at home to keep Canadian factories busy. Why should not the same principle be extended a step further to "Made-in-Orillia" articles? Our merchants and people generally grumble more or less loudly if the factories are not running full blast. But do the grumblers do what is in their power to keep our home factories busy? Take the matter of furniture for instance. We have in Orillia a factory whose goods are commanding a ready sale in all parts of the country—to such an extent that it has worked more steadily during the last eighteen months than any other furniture factory in Ontario. Yet the Furniture Company might have spent much more money in wages if all the furniture of the class sold in Orillia had been of their manufacture. How often have those who clamor for industries, or talk about making Orillia grow, enquired for, or given a preference to Orillia furniture. Similarly, why should those who want a motor car of the class manufactured by the Fisher Motor Company go out of town to buy it, when they can obtain the best value for their money by purchasing the "Made-in-Orillia" article, and factory service at their door—to say nothing of doing their share to make the motor works permanent and prosperous. On the same principle the farmer from any of the surrounding townships who buys Tudhope carriages, or Tudhope-Anderson wagons, implements or stoves is helping to build up the home market for his own produce, and to add to the value of his own farm. The buy-at-home principle should not be confined to dry goods and groceries."

The remarks of the Orillia "Packet" would bear repetition in almost every town and city in Canada.

Beaten by Pyjamas.

Col. Hugh Clarke and a bunch of members were in the House of Commons restaurant talking over things in general, when one of them remarked: "If I were a wrist watch, I couldn't get elected in my constituency."

"It's worse than that in North Bruce," chipped in Colonel Hugh. "A wrist watch is an outward and visible sign of weakness, but my constituents look deeper. They get right down to the skin in these matters."

"Do you know what did a lot to beat John Tolmie!" continued the Colonel. "Outside of my own personal merits, I mean! You'd never guess it. Pyjamas! A report got about among the North Bruce farmers that John wore the Babylonish garments. John never had a chance to deny it, because it was never charged against him on the platform. The fatal story was whispered on the side lines. It did its deadly work there. Presbyterian sentiment was much aroused against John Tolmie for encouraging Oriental practices. The loose flowing nature of the vestments was dwelt upon at great length, and John Tolmie became known in some districts as The Pasha. That cooked his goose for him. North Bruce might stand for John Tolmie in kilts, but never in pyjamas. My majority in that election was eighty-two. It was the anti-pyjama vote that settled it, not anti-reciprocity."

"And what do you wear yourself, Hugh?" put in Colonel Morphy of North Perth.

"Why," said Col. Hugh, fidgeting, "I wear a nightshirt, but that's not for publication in North Bruce."

NOTED PIONEER GONE.

Captain Shott Passed Seventy-Four Years in the Northwest.

Pioneers of the north, officials and residents of the municipality of Athabaska, members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 150 Cree Indians, and three members of his family, followed the remains of Louis Passoneure, known from Edmonton to the Arctic Ocean as Captain Shott, to their final resting place, near Tawatinaw, several weeks ago, two days after his death at Sacred Heart Hospital. It was fitting close to the eventful career of a hinterlander, who lived 74 years in the vicinity of the 55th parallel of latitud.

Captain Shott's youth is shrouded in mystery, but it is generally believed that his forebears were sturdy fishermen and trappers, from whom he inherited the sterling qualities that placed him in the fore of river men and pioneers in the north country trade. He was a friend of all in the Athabaska district; he had no enemies among the white people. He was feared and revered by his own people, the halfbreeds. He drove a close bargain — his word was his bond. One of the old-timers of the North said of him:

"Captain Shott may have been cheated, but he never cheated. He may have been 'stung' again and again, but there was so much of Nature's gentleman in him that he would be the last to try to get over the weakest of his class. He was no scholar, but he could tell the value of a 'bit.' His wits had been sharpened by contact with a strange and cosmopolitan school, and the wonder is that he did not get contaminated with the smooth and artful gangs that would fawn upon him, not for what he was, but for what he could procure."

Rev. Father Demerais, friend of twenty-five years, who was at the old river dog's deathbed, where were also gathered the captain's wife and two sons, preached the funeral sermon, in the course of which he spoke at length of Shott's qualities. It was an eloquent tribute from one man to another. The priest, who spoke in Cree and English, dwelt briefly on the last moments of the pioneer, mentioning that after the last offices of the church had been performed, Captain Shott said: "I am ready to go. I have done with the world."

His One Failing

An Episode in a City Belle's Summer Campaign in the Woods

By ELLIOT WALKER

"I'll get Tinker to take you out, I guess," said old Sackett. "He's just come in."

"Is he a good, safe man?" asked Mrs. Cranby.

"Who—Tinker? Safe? Well, he's supposed to be safe—safe as they make 'em round here," responded the hotel keeper. "He's been up in the woods with a party for two weeks—got back this mornin'. Best guide on the lakes for a young feller. Quiet, good lookin', and knows his business—you'll like him, marm. He'll work around the house till another party picks him up—maybe a day or two or a week. You're lucky to git him—I dun't know as he'll go out. He's cranky sometimes."

The Cranbys had just come up to the String lakes, that well known chain where the lower one affords good hotel accommodations, fair general society and poor fishing and the upper ones dwindle into wilderness with its accompaniments, according to distance.

"It was too bad that papa had to get that disgusting telegram which called him back to nasty old Wall street just as he was comfortably settled. How mean and inconsiderate for those people to fail at such a time!"

So said Ethel, who, with her mother and sisters, lamented the trying circumstances in various degrees of impotent wrath.

"He will be back soon, in a week probably," explained Mrs. Cranby. "Meanwhile we must enjoy ourselves as best we may. It is too bad, though. What shall we do for amusement? It's a dull place."

"Let's have a picnic tomorrow!" cried Harriet, the second shining light in the galaxy of daughters. "That'll be fun."

Her eighteen years had not dulled her appreciation of the love of freedom, and the woods and waters appealed to her strongly.

Ruth and Maria, the junior hopefuls, whose respective ages of fifteen and thirteen were as yet undimmed by the tarnish of society, gave glad accord to the proposition. To them a picnic embraced many thoughts of mild adventure, as well as a variety of refreshments, which alone was worthy of their approving consideration.

Ethel, whose twenty summers had brought to her much beauty of face and form and a rather undue portion of masculine adoration, poohpoohed the picnic idea at first. Finally she graciously yielded, thereby receiving much thankful acclamation from Ruth and Maria.

"I won't row five women, Sackett—you can put that down," observed Mr. Tinker when he was approached. "I'm willing to take two. Let 'em have a couple of boats, and the Injun can row one. Five females in a boat isn't safe."

Tinker had considerable fault to find, and he did it loudly, addressing his remarks to the hotel man, who was on hand to see them off.

"Why don't you keep your old tubs in some kind of shape, Sackett? I'm ashamed to take a lady out in this one—it's all fish scales!" he cried.

"He's a mite sour this morning," whispered Sackett to Ethel. "I don't mind him. Usually he don't say but little. Fine lookin' feller when he's dressed up. Knows a lot too."

The girl was gazing at the active figure in the boat, swabbing away with an old rag of a sponge

"I think I'll go in Mr. Tinker's boat," she said very audibly.

The man looked up, and their eyes met.

"She's a stunner!" thought Tinker.

"He looks like a nobleman in disguise," mused Ethel. "I'll take Maria with me," she called, "and then the children won't get fooling."

The "Injun," who was only a tall, tanned Yankee with strongly pronounced features, accepted all burdens meekly and grinned as he started with his load.

"Where are you goin,' Tinker?" he asked as that gentleman drew away from him.

"Over to Bogey point," answered Tinker. "Got any torbacker?"

"Yep!" replied the Injun. "Got a whole new plug."

"How long will it take to row to the point?" asked Ethel.

"Half an hour," was the short answer.

The pretty girl in the stern gazed reflectively across the lake. She wondered how much she could accomplish in half an hour.

She brought her eyes back to the face of Tinker. He was looking straight at her with an expression of respectful admiration, and his bright brown eyes sought hers for a moment and then dropped.

The girl had smiled into them a quick "I like you!" smile, and the guide's cheeks burned through the tan. His features wore an almost childish look of pleasure and embarrassment.

Ethel smiled softly at some interesting thought. Could she have read the mind of Tinker she would not have smiled.

"Trying to flirt with the guide, eh?" he was thinking. "Well, let her go it. I'll just lead her on. I'm nothing but a poor, unsophisticated countryman but good looking enough for that beauty to try to upset. I'll have some fun out of it myself. I haven't rowed pretty girls around this old pond for six years for nothing. She evidently thinks I never saw a girl before. I guess she is younger than she looks."

Tinker stopped rowing long enough to pull off his gray slouch hat and drop it at his feet. Then he dipped his brown hand in the lake and rubbed his hair vigorously with the cold water.

"There," he remarked; "that feels good."

"Mr. Tinker," observed Maria, "you are quite a beautiful looking man. Isn't he, Ethel?"

The guide looked at Ethel and smiled—a very pleasant, indulgent smile.

"Hush, Maria," said her sister reprovingly, with a quick blush. "You mustn't be personal in your remarks."

"You look like a picture of young St. John," went on Maria in an absorbed tone. "We have it."

"I feel honored," laughed Tinker. "I know the picture of which you speak. In the old days"—he suddenly became very serious and bent to his work, sighing a little as if at some sad remembrance—"no matter," he added softly.

Ethel was now consumed with curiosity, and her eyes inquired of his as he looked up. He shook his head.

"Not now," he said.

The picnic was a great success. Ruth and the Injun appeared to have formed ties of the closest interest. It subsequently turned out that these two had possessed themselves of sundry delicacies from the basket, the Injun's pocket being a convenient repository.

"I'm sure they put in more cake," complained Harriet, "and I told them particularly about the apples. They must have forgotten."

It was all very beautiful in the fresh sweet air, with the wild sounds of birds and little waves. What more conducive to a nap for Mrs. Cranby and small explorations for Harriet and the little girls?

Tinker rowed Ethel along the shore and up into the cool shade of Moose creek, where the fine old trees and the limpid water combined to form a picture which would have gladdened the heart of a painter in water color. The very air seemed to invite confidences and to induce low toned and very earnest conversation. The Injun smoked and lounged, and the fair afternoon was soon over.

* * * * * * *

"Have a nice time yesterday?" observed Mr. Sackett to the eldest Miss Cranby as she sat on the piazza the next morning trying to read.

"Lovely," responded the young lady dreamily. "Oh, Mr. Sackett!"

"Yes?" said her host interrogatively.

"Isn't that young man—that one you called Tinker—isn't he quite superior to most of the men about here? He talks very nicely—I mean uses such good language," went on the girl, hesitating a little. "He was not born here, was he?"

"Eh?" ejaculated the old man. "Oh, well! Let's see! Yes, he does talk first rate—he's a quick feller. He got some education when he was younger, and he's smart. Remembers everything! He can talk all right. Likes fun, but he's real solemn and steady most always."

"Yes, he was telling me," said Ethel absently.

"What was he tellin' you?" asked Sackett.

He gazed at the pretty, confident face and smiled quietly.

"Did he tell you about his uncle," he went on, without waiting for a reply, "and his college days—the unjust charge and how he bore it all to shield another—how he ran away and was now livin' in this desolate country, away from everybody, where he could feel free and independent?"

"Ah, you know about him, too!" cried the girl.

"Yes, I know about him," answered the hotel keeper. "Did he tell you about thoughts and ambitions and things—how he hoped to go to the city and begin over and succeed? Maybe he asked you to be his friend?"

Ethel nodded.

"I think he will succeed," she said; "he seems so determined and strong I shall be glad to be his friend."

"Did he tell you," resumed Sackett with great solemnity, "that he had a wife and two kids over in Brushview, four miles east of here?"

"Mr. Sackett!" cried the girl, jumping up in consternation. "What do you mean?"

"Just what I say—that's right," answered her host, "and that's the only true thing in the whole story—the rest is all lies. He's told that tale before. Yes'm, he's got a nice little woman and two boys that he thinks the world of, and he's a good guide and a good feller. I've never known him to lie, except about this one thing. Wonder why he does it?"

His keen eyes twinkled. Ethel, almost as tall as he, peered into them as if trying to read his thoughts. Then she burst out laughing.

"That's right!" exclaimed Sackett. "You're a sensible young lady. Gracious, but your face was red, and your eyes blazed for a minute!"

"Where is he?" asked Ethel. "I want to see him."

"He's gone," said the landlord. "He went up the lakes with a party early this mornin'. I don't expect him back for a fortnight."

"We will be gone by then," said the girl. "I'm sorry. Well, you tell him I have a little sense, and I forgive him. It was a real mean trick—tell him that, too—but it wasn't a bad lesson. Will he tell about it?"

"He—Tinker? No! He'll never lisp it, and I won't!" exclaimed Sackett.

"I don't think I will, either," said Ethel.

The Proper Order.

A successful man died not long ago. Somebody says his success was due to brains, a sense of humor and complete self confidence.

Fault has been found with the arrangement of this sequence.

The critic claims that self confidence should come first, with brains trailing.

There are six ways of arranging the trio.

What's yours? — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Trial by Jury.

The establishment of trial by jury dates back prior to the time of Alfred the Great. He is said to have organized juries of twelve men, as now in practice, but even earlier six Welsh and six Anglo-Saxon freemen acted as a jury when there was a dispute between Welsh and Saxons.—London Express.

Information Wanted.

Nobody has ever explained, scientifically or otherwise, how it is that one man will haul in a nice string of fish in an hour or two, while another, fishing near him, catches nothing but an old shoe and the left leg of a pair of overalls. Has psychology anything to do with it?—Toledo Blade.

Father's Helpful Words.

"I suppose when you left home your father spoke the words of wisdom that helped you to make your own way in the world."

"He did. He said, 'Sam, don't come back here until you are able to pay board.'"—Baltimore Sun.

THE ONLY CURE FOR CONSTIPATION

Is "Fruit-a-tives"—That Wonderful Remedy Made From Fruit Juices.

AVON, ONT., MAY 14th, 1913.

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. When I first started about six years ago to use them, I took four at a dose but gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night. Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the illness as from these treatments. Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which some one recommended them very highly, so I tried them, and I have no hesitation in recommending them." ANNIE E. CORBETT.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TAFFETA AND TOWELING.

Here's a Striking Combination of Materials in Smart Afternoon Frock.

The oddest combinations of fabrics are sanctioned this season. One of these is cleverly carried out in the case of the gown of embroidered toweling and white pussy willow taffeta shown here. There is a double tunic effect, one of embroidered toweling being worn over a tunic of the taffeta. The skirt is slightly caught up.

SILK AND COTTON COSTUME.

How to Make Pillows.

When making pillows put the feathers into a cheesecloth case and then slip this into the regular case of ticking. When the pillow is soiled the ticking can be taken off and washed and the feathers washed, sunned and dried without emptying them from the cheesecloth. The latter should be made much larger than the ticking to allow for the spreading of the feathers.

Shades of Holbein.

A Montreal millionaire, whose knowledge of art is even more recent than his money, returned from Europe the other day and was describing his wanderings to a group of friends.

"Yes," he said, "we visited most of the famous galleries."

"Did you see any of Holbein's works?" asked one of the group.

"Holbein! Holbein!" said the millionaire, tapping his forehead. "Oh, yes! I remember. We came across him in London. He built the Holbein Viaduct, didn't he?" — Saturday Night.

Heroes of Peace.

The Montreal policemen who have shown conspicuous bravery during the last three years are to be honored by gifts of medals and an extra ten cents a day in their pay, so it is announced. One hundred and two names are on the list of those who have distinguished themselves.

Civil Servants Salaries.

An order in council has been passed at Ottawa providing that civil servants who are enrolled in the militia and called out for active service in Canada, or, who with the consent of the head of the Department, enlist in any expeditionary force for service abroad, during the present war shall during such period of activity whether in Canada or abroad, receive their regular salary subject to such conditions as to payment thereof to their families or dependents as may be prescribed by order in council or by the head of the Department.

The Positive Limit.

Principal Radcliffe, of the London Normal College, took his six-year-old nephew to see Niagara Falls the other day.

"Well, Bobbie," said his uncle, "what do you think of it?"

Babbie gasped with sheer admiration. "I think," he said, "that it has 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' beaten a mile."

Enemies Ever Alert to Obtain War News

Perhaps one of the most striking things about the war so far has been the veil of secrecy thrown over the operations of the campaign thanks to official censorship and the co-operation of the press. In no country has the silence been more significant or more useful than in Great Britain.

The supreme usefulness of this national silence was so apparent in connection with the despatch of the expeditionary force to France that the recent efforts in some quarters to secure a relaxation of the regulations respecting the publication of war news would cause surprise and even irritation were all the circumstances of the case not taken into consideration.

The Britain public is more than most communities in the world, jealous of the least infringement upon the liberties of the press and has grown up to rely absolutely upon the press for its daily news. At such a time of stress and excitement as that now existing this reliance and the hunger for news is intensified many fold. The fact must be borne in mind that the British Empre has not been engaged in a great European war for such a great number of years that the public is unaccustomed to restrictions on the news supplied to it by the press. And the public has been accustomed to have its news hot after the event, the wonderful progress in means of communication, railways, telegraphs, telephones and wireless, having enabled newspapers to serve their public without such promptitude as would never have been dreamt of a century ago.

It has to be remembered that the facilities in the way of communication which under normal conditions serve the press so well are open to the spies of the enemy when they wish to comunicate with their superiors, and consequently the precautions to be taken to prevent news of advantage to the enemy reaching him will have to be much greater and more careful and more rapid in their effects.

A Different Situation.

The situation in the present war is very different from that which existed during any one of Britain's small wars of the past century. The enemy is one especially alive to the value of military intelligence, one that has reaped inestimable benefits from its possesion in the past campaigns; and that by the establishment and careful maintenance, regardless of expense, of elaborate intelligence and spy systems in every corner of the world, has equipped itself to promptly gather in every scrap of news calculated to be of direct military value.

It is a well known and universally admitted military axiom that the success of a nation which appeals to arms depends to a great extent upon the concealment of its plans and their operations.

On the other hand, ample and accurate information about the enemy is the best guarantee for success and an absolute essential to security. Napoleon said that a general who was ignorant of the enemy's doings and intentions was ignorant of his profession.

Information is essential to the success of both strategy and tactics. The acquisition of accurate information is one of the most difficult tasks of the headquarters staff as well as of the commander in the field. The mood and bearing of the hostile population, the accumulation of armaments and supplies, as well as the members, the dispositions and the movements of the enemy are veiled in an obscurity which has been aptly named "the fog of war," an obscurity which the opposing headquarters staff and generals endeavor by every artifice to deepen.

Watch the Newspapers.

Newspapers are among the sources of information most carefully watched by the military intelligence authorities, the German cavalry, for instance being specially instructed that spies, patrols and outposts are to keep their eyes open for copies of fragments of an enemy's newspapers found anywhere and forward them at once to the nearest intelligence officer.

There are many instances of news which had been published in newspapers having led to disaster in the field.

Sir Henry Hozier in "Lloyd" General Report mentioned a case in point. He wrote "In the war of 1866 (Germany versus Austria) I was with Prince Frederick Charles of Russia, who had to advance on Vienna, and he great duty was to hold the Austrian Army on the Bistris, in order to allow the development of the attack on the Crown Prince on its flank and rear. It was of the utmost importance to Prince Frederick to know what Austrian force was in front of him, since, unless the whole force was there, it would be imprudent to hazard a general attack. On the morning of the battle he could not find out what the force was, but about 10 a.m. a telegram reached him from London, announcing that that morning an official intimation had appeared in a Vienna newspaper stating that the whole Austrian force was concentrated under Field Marshal Benedek on the Bistris. The telegram had been sent from Vienna to the German Embassy in London, was at once despatched from London to Prince Frederick Charles in Bohemia, and within half an hour his army attacked all along the line. The result of that telegram was the loss to Austria of the leadership of Germany and the ultimate establishment of the present German Empire under a Prussian Emperor."

During the Franco-German War of 1870, after the decisive defeat of MacMahon at Woerth and elsewhere he gathered together his shattered forces, and retreated westward in the direction of Chalons, as it was thought with the intention of falling further back on Paris. The Germans pursued on a frontage of forty miles, but through the supineness or otherwise their cavalry divisions, they lost touch with MacMahon, and, as a matter of fact, at last really did not know where he was. Thus, enveloped in the "fog of war" they continued their westward march under the assumption that he was retiring on Chalons and Paris, till one day headquarters received a telegram from Berlin, which had been forwarded from London transmitting an item from the Daily News indicating that MacMahon had changed his line of route, and instead of retiring on Paris, was doubling back on the Meuse with intent to relieve Bazaine at Metz. This intelligense had originally been published in the Temps at Paris. On receipt of this momentous news the Germans right half-wheeled their forty miles of front, and in this way succeeded in overtaking and surrounding the French at Sedan, and in bringing about the fall of the French Empire.

Colonel Henderson, in his work on "Field Intelligence," points out that a copy of a despatch carelessly thrown away was the undoing of the great Confederate effort at Antietam; a parish priest guided the French troops at Jena; a peasant showed the ford at Crecy; in almost every war great events have hung on scraps of information, gained, it would seem, by chance.

It is a safe estimate that the efforts of the German intelligence bureau will, during this war, be at least as energetic as they were in the last war. Numbers of tireless, watchful and adroit intelligence officers are just now poring over uninteresting letters and newspapers and deciphering unintelligible scraps of waste paper at Berlin and Vienna, just as others of their kind are doing at the allied capitals and the various field headquarters.

The very general approval by the British public of the comparative silence observed by the national press with regard to the operations of the war, proves that there was little ground for the fear often expressed in peace time that the British press would refuse to co-operate with the military authorities. It used to be argued that as the business of the press is to buy and to sell news, any arbitrary restriction of its business would be likely to be unpopular and would naturally be expected to come as a shock, at any rate in the first instance, to most of the profession.

The British public seems readily to have acquiesced in almost any restriction as regards news, as they realized the enormous importance of keeping secret the operations of war.

The needs of a nation, particularly in war time, must override the needs of any parts of it; and necessary interference with the everyday occupation of any portion of the inhabitants of a country is justified by the fact that that country is at war—that for its own safety it has had to have recourse to brute force. In fact, a state of war means the abrogation of all the ordinary amenities of life, provided that abrogation is found necessary in the national interest.

In the present crisis the journalists of Great Britain have shown themselves ready to subordinate themselves to the need of the national safety, in the same way as other interests or individuals have.

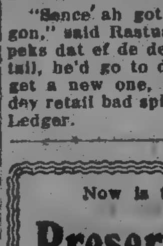
The objection has been made that the suppression of unauthorised war news would have the effect of destroying for the time being newspaper enterprise and reducing our journals to a dead level of dull official information; but the great English papers now being received in Canada absolutely disprove this prediction.

As to the value of the co-operation of the press in the war, it is impossible to form an estimate, for it is simply inestimable.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.



Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

PETERBORO VOLUNTEERS MAKE FINE SHOWING

Local Man Gives His Impressions of Valcartier and Canadian Soldiers.

Mr. R. B. Rogers, who has just returned from a visit at Valcartier has kindly contributed the following article, at the request of the Review:

It would make anyone feel proud of their country to visit the camp at Valcartier. To think of quiet Canada who has been merely playing at the game of soldiery for so many years now in less than a month putting into camp a force of men of nearly thirty-five thousand in number—men that are in earnest and mean business, men from every part of this vast Dominion, men that would do credit to any country in the world, is a fact that would make the heart of any Canadian swell with pride—not in the whole of Canada could be found a more suitable and more beautiful location for such a camp. The camp is situated about sixteen miles north of Quebec City and is reached by the Canadian Northern Railway or by road, a beautiful run, the Jacques Cartier, about as large as the Otonabee runs along the west side of the camp ground. To the west of the river there lies a range of mountains which furnishes a fine location for a sham battle and for artillery practice. The tents are pitched on a plateau about twenty-five feet above the river and which a month ago was covered by trees and low shrubs all of which is now removed except a strip along the river bank. The surface of this plateau is even with a gradual slope to the north and the soil is a light loam for about a foot in depth and below this is coarse sand which makes an ideal ground on which to camp. Half an hour after rain the parade ground which lies between the lines of tents and the river is fit to walk on. About half a mile to the east and about fifteen feet above the plateau on which the tents are located is another immense plateau of cleared land about a mile wide and about two miles long on which the review was held. This is a grand place for such a purpose, being as level as a billiard table so that the whole field can be seen from any point. At the review on Sunday afternoon to see all the troops drawn up in position reaching from one end of this field to the other as far as the eye could reach, battalion after battalion, battery after battery, mounted infantry, engineering corps, ambulance corps, medical staff, sappers and miners, etc., was a sight never before seen in Canada and was such a grand sight as to make any Canadian proud to feel that Canada could send such a force to help defend the old mother land to preserve her liberty and freedom. And to think that not only one such contingent can and will be sent but half a dozen of such forces if necessary will go to help old England maintain for herself and the Empire in that position that she has always held was enough to make a man feel proud of his country.

Plenty of Rain.

Though the rain came down in torrents and many were wet to the skin not a man was made to go to shelter till the whole of this immense force had marched past in review order before the Duke of Connaught, the Premier, the Minister of Militia. It was a sight that every Canadian should have seen if possible and possibly the moving picture companies may be able to produce the sight on canvas though the rain probably prevented them from getting satisfactory views.

To criticize the march past would take more space than you could afford but I can say truthfully when A company of the second battalion commanded by Major Bennett marched past the saluting point the immense crowd sat up and took notice and burst into a volley of applause. To show the military spirit that there is among the men when marching back to camp soaked to the skin not a murmur was heard but they marched home to the music of a mouth organ and singing "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again." Peterborough can well feel proud of their contingent which can compare favorably with any in the province and under the able management of their officers who have gone with them are fast being whipped into shape to meet the foe. The camp rises at 5.30 in the morning and in half an hour they are out on the parade ground for a short drill when they have breakfast and then company or battalion drill or they go to the targets. Say, to see nearly two thousand targets in a line reaching nearly two miles in length gives one an idea of the scale of this camp.

Everything about the camp is in order. Water tanks, electric lights cover the whole camp. At the end of each line of tents there is a water hydrant and a shower bath. There are a number of stores on the ground where the men can purchase anything they want and at prices that are regulated by headquarters. The Y.M.C.A. does a grand work for the men. They have two big marquees where men can get writing material free and tables to write on. They have services every night which are well attended. The tents are in lines on each side of a long street about two miles in length. The first battalion is on the right side and the second battalion on the left of this street and so on northwards. The companies are lettered A, B, C, etc. I can't close this communication which is much longer than I intended without a word of praise for the splendid officers that Peterboro has sent with their company. They have each of them had to make great sacrifices, greater than most of their comrades who did not offer their services, they have shown that they have not been toy soldiers and when the time came to show that they were in earnest they came nobly forward. They can rely on it, their action will not soon be forgotten by those whom they have left to defend.

PROGRAM FOR FALL AND WINTER AT Y.M.C.A. GYM

The physical department committee of the Y.M.C.A. met last night and outlined the winter program of sports and athletic events and gymnasium classes taking place during the winter.

The policy of the physical department of the Y.M.C.A. is to promote by means of exercise, recreation and education the highest physical, mental and moral efficiency of men and boys as essential in the developments of the best type of viril Christian manhood.

The executive officers of the physical department are: H. B. Cowan, chairman; C. E. Sisson and Fred Roy. These men are directly responsible for the activities, but under them there will be special committees on each of the different activities.

Wrestling will be under the direction of H. B. Cowan, who will teach the classes. This class will be limited to members over seventeen years of age, and a special fee of one dollar will be charged for the class.

Boxing will be started at a later date if a suitable instructor can be found.

Bowling will be promoted by a special committee on bowling. Leagues will be organized and conducted throughout the winter season.

A special endeavor will be made to keep the swimming pool at a temperature that will make bathing at all times a pleasure.

A basket ball league will be formed, which will take in a large number of teams. There will be two sections to the league, before and after Christmas.

The senior class, which meets on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights at 8.15 will be especially for young men, and committees have been formed to see that every new man gets into the spirit and has an enjoyable time. They will also conduct a social once a month. A new committee will have charge of this social each month and the one putting on the best social evening will be suitably rewarded at the end of the season. The work of this class will be graded according to each man's ability. A grading contest will be held once a month and the man making the highest total throughout the year in this class will be given a prize at the end of the season.

There will also be conducted in the spring a gymnastic championship which will be open to all men who have attended a certain percentage of the classes.

Skating and hockey is also on the schedule of winter work. A special committee is working on the arrangements and it will be announced later regarding details.

Special emphasis will be laid on the business and professional men's class which meets from 5.30 to 6.15, Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The work will be of a type to give relaxation from business cares. All business men are especially invited to join this class. Exhibitions will be put on at stated periods and there will be special nights, when special groups will be invited to come in and enjoy privileges with the men.

Athletics will be given a place in the program and an honest effort will be made to revive this branch of sport. There are some men who are especially interested and will give time and energy in coaching the boys in different branches, which will put them in shape to go on the track when the spring season opens.

Special all round contests will be run for boys as well as leagues in the different games.

Our aim will be to give everybody who comes into gymnasium a social as well as healthful time. Any member who is in doubt of his physical condition can make arrangements with the physical director to have an examination.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. EDNEY

The funeral of the late Mrs. L. S. Edney took place on Monday morning from Robinson's private chapel, Hamilton. The service was conducted by Canon Abbott, of Christ church cathedral. The pallbearers were members of the A. M. Souter Co., with which firm Mr. Edney is at present engaged. Wreaths were sent from Messrs. Creesman (Peterborough), Mr. and Mrs. Vickers and friends (Peterborough), A. M. Souter Co., Christ church cathedral choir, Mr. and Mrs. Goodman and friends.

Interment took place at the Hamilton cemetery.

Tommy Atkins Keeps Up the Good Work

The war is driving it home to Englishmen that in the British soldier of today they have a man of whom they can be proud in every sense. The old stigma of rough and dissolute behaviour, for many years most unjust, it likely to receive its quietus from this war. A vivid description in the London Morning Post of the landing of the Expeditionary Force in France throws a strong light upon the knightly bearing of Thomas Atkins of today. The British regular soldier is a well-informed man, well-trained, self-controlled, and courteous. The battles which followed the landing showed how well he can fight; the article which follows, by an eye witness, shows how he bears himself among a civilian population.

The roll of the drum beating, "La Generale" has died out, and Dumanet, the French Tommy Atkins, has gone to do his duty manfully, even rejoicing over the fact that the prolonged nightmare that has been disturbing him is about to vanish. "War is imminent," says a newspaper. "It has been imminent for 44 years," says a French soldier. "It is better to have done with it once for all." The women-folk face the ordeal as bravely as he does; there are no "scenes," although tears well up into the eyes of all of them, eyes through which shines the lovelight of motherly and sisterly devotion. The men are off as quickly as they responded to the call to arms, and then eyes are strained towards Albion's white cliffs. "Les Anglais Viendront pour sin," spring from many lips.

A few days pass by, days spent in patient and confident expectation. On a certain night the cliffs and the strand of the many villages about Boulogne-sur-Mer are lined with fishermen and others, all intent on watching signals made by "sea-wolves" (destroyers), of which one occasionally sees five, then three. "Ils viennent," is the exultant and joyous cry one early morn. Yes, indeed, they are coming — they bring our troops. Thereupon, all those who can tramp towards the town on a hard, dusty road, under a broiling sun, to welcome "Les Anglais," as they speak the word in those parts.

A French Welcome.

In a very few days the town itself and its surrounding hillsides are covered with our tents. Steamer after steamer deposits its load of fine stalwart men and youths, who are welcomed with delight and heartfelt gratitude. "Vivent les Anglais; Vive l'entente cordiale; Vive la reine Marie; Vive le roi George, and Vive Lord Kitchener." An animated scene is to be witnessed daily—nay, almost hourly—alongside the basin. The decks are crowded with men, horses, guns, A. S. C. wagons, etc. It is Aldershot transported. The transport is hardly moored alongside when our gallant men clatter down the gangways, the horses are slung over the side; military automobiles, repairing wagons, and all the adjuncts of warfare, following rapid succession. Cheers, waving of French, Belgian and British flags. The cavalrymen unsaddle their horses, and proceed to massage their saddle-backs. The clap, clap, clap of the masseurs makes cheerful music, and a lady remarks to her little son: "Jean, I have always told you that the English were kind to their horses. I saw that years ago when I was at school in their country." The ground is strewn with accoutrements, and our men, after having been kind to their beasts, stretch out on the bare soil in quest of a short rest, for some of them, if not many, are to be entrained very shortly.

A little French girl boldly steps up to a British soldier and asks him for a souvenir. "J'aime bien les Anglais, ils ont de si belles tetes," is the old fashioned mite's speech. He does not understand her words, so they are translated for his benefit. With knightly courtesy does this private in the "Darlings" remove the numeral from his left shoulder-strap (the nearest the heart, I presume) and presents it to the happy and dainty petite demoiselle, she puts up her lips. He understands this time and he reverently kisses the little creature. "How amiable, how gallant those English soldiers are?" exclaims Georgetre's overjoyed mother, gracefully bowing to the gallant knight, who salutes her in military fashion and presents her with his regimental badge. The crowd cheers vigorously, and a rush is made for the temporary camp." In a few minutes, hardly a badge or numeral is left. Mothers and fathers lift their children, shoulder-high, and the little ones tug at the numerals and badges, not in vain, for Tommy helps them to detach the coveted souvenirs. Having thoroughly "looted the camp" the fortunate ones depart with cries of "Look at what the English soldiers have given us?" Ah, but we must give them something in our turn; they are too polite, too amiable; one can see that they are "des gentlemen Anglais." And English gentlemen they are from beginning to end, and a British subject feels proud of them. None of us had, so far, heard of Lord Kitchener's recommendations to the King's soldiers, but they have faithfully harkened to his advice. For ten days did I go into the town, watching them land, march through Boulogne to their respective quarters, in and about it, wandering about the streets and in the adjacent communes, and English gentlemen they were on every occasion. A French lady kisses her hand to them, and many another does so. Off comes caps doffed with a courtly dignity. An Englishman commits the blunder of offering money to one of them for a badge, remarking that he wants it for a French lady. The soldier "looks" at him, hands the badge to him, remarking the while; "I am an Englishman, sir, and I don't sell presents to ladies."

Mastering the Language.

Many French ladies speak English fairly well, and on one of them inquiring of a cavalryman to which regiment he belongs he replies that it has the honor of belongng to Queen Mary, and he adds: "Her Majesty was very kind to us when we left. She gave us each a pipe and plenty of tobacco." "Vous avez une bien bonne reine," says the lady forgetting to speak English in her admiration of her Majesty's kindly thought. On another occasion a "madam," as Tommy soons gets to call her, asks a tall "Blankshireman" what he things of his French fellow in arms, and she gets her reply in French, English French and not French French; but she understands him and is much gratified. "Pettit soldier, but bonne," is how he gives his opinion. English residents, and visitors are add Tommy Atkins—Take 2 very proud of the demeanour of the soldiers of their country. To them the clanking of the spurs of our smart cavalrymen sound like music, as these well-set, well-groomed young fellows walk along with a swing that delights an English girl to such an extent that I heard one exclaim, "What lovely swank," to which "soldiers three" reply with a "Thank you, miss." Tommy is generous. He brings with him huge pots of jam and marmalade, rips off the cover of one, spreads some on a slice of bread, and then hands over the whole pot to a crowd of ragged urchins, male and female. "That's jam," he informs them. They understand that. The French people supply the bread and the urchins are as happy as a mastmaker's dog curled up in shavings. A neighboring shop is quickly bought out, and fancy bread (the baking of it has not as yet been prohibited), bonbons and chocolates are handed over to the Tommies. One lady presents them with a botle of champagne. It is dexterously uncorked, and all are pleased except a braw laddie who prefers a "wee drappie" to "sweet wine." He is spoiling, so are his comrades, for a "fecht," and they would like to "clure a sicht of Germans." "There'll be no work for us to do if we let the Belgians do it all." That is the spirit that animates all our men, who have been temporarily "left behind."

Scots in France.

A kilted regiment from the north is literally cooped up in an old barracks, and the people are hanging to the rails as Londoners hang on to those of the barrack-yard in Bird-Cage-Walk. One of the Scotsmen comments on this curiosity in the following fashion: "They are taking us for monkeys at Corstorphine" (the site of Edinburgh's magnificent "Zoo"). They have marced in with a piper. The fishermen know them and explain that they have seen them at "Aberdeen" and at "Leet" (Leith), but that in those places they hear "de belles jupes." "Why don't they show them?" enquired the fishwives, who, with their inbred taste for color, do not fancy khaki. They insist on seeing the "vraie jupe," and Jock obliges them by removing the hkaki covering. Then, womanlike, they speculate as to the price of such magnificent cloth. Ere long every Tommy is sporting the French, the Belgian and the Russian colors, and picking up French. A body of the A. S. C. and of the Ambulance Corps march down the Grand Rue, headed by an unmistakable Cockney playing "The Cock o' the North" on a mouth-organ. This extraordinary regimental band provokes the following comment: "All the same they have a funny musique, those English. You understand, mon chou, that it is only in war-time that they play like that. Oh, they have fine bands as good as ours; I have heard them in Heed Parc." One more humorous incident. A number of Victoria nurses arrive "one fine day." "Ah! Here are the wives of the soldate ecossais." An explosion of laughter follows this assertion. I explain to my neighbors that they are nurses, and am thanked by a lady, who adds: "Mais, monsieur, avec de sibelles toilettes elles ne soignent que les officers sane doute." Again I explain that there is no doubt about the matter; they nurse officers and men. "C'est admirable."

That the King's soldiers will fight as they always have, when their turn comes, there can be no doubt. But they will always be remembered as "English gentlemen." I was a good deal among them at all hours of the day, but never did I see one intoxicated, and they were ever generous, kind-hearted and polite. "Ils n'ont insulte personne." "Ce sont de braves gens. Nous les aimerons toujours," are the words I heard coming unmistakably from the heart as well as from the lips of a Frenchwoman as a trainload of British soldiers is conveyed towards the path of glory. May many of them come back, is the prayer of those who witness them as they leave Boulogne-sur-Mer. The "gentlemen anglaiss" will never be cement the Entente Cordiale.

Easily Settled.

"Pa, the doctor at the hospital said that he would have to have a lot of cuticle to cure Mamie's burns."

"Well, tell him to telephone to the nearest druggist for all he wants and charge it in the bill."—Baltimore American.

CANADA AND THE WAR

(Westminster Gazette.)

Sir Harry Wilson sends us the following letter just received from Dr. Helen Macmurchy, of Toronto, who recently visited England in connection with the Health and Town-Planning Conference organized by the Victoria League. It gives a vivid picture of the enthusiasm prevailing in the Dominion since the outbreak of war:

Under other circumstances I should hesitate about troubling you with a letter, but today we in the Empire are all thinking each for all and all for each, and I want to send you a line to add another voice to all the voices you have already heard saying God Save the King. There is but one heart and one spirit and one wish here—that we might be able to do something for the Empire. Never has anyone seen anything like the feeling here. Men, women, and children all the same. Two days after war was declared I was in the little town of Cobourg, about seventy-five miles east of Toronto, on Lake Ontario. The battery was called out to go at once to Quebec (they went to Nova Scotia later to guard the wireless, the cable, and the shore). The whole of Cobourg—quiet, determined—was there to say good-bye to them, and they did it bravely. Just good, strong young fellows off the farm, most of them had recently been in the summer camp, made up the battery, and the people were their families and friends. Besides, there were about 200 Americans, who were there for the summer. They were, if anything, more eager and outspoken than the Canadians. Every house, almost, had a Union Jack floating over it.

In Toronto the feeling is intense. We only all of us wish we could do more to help. I have no fear of the result, nor have you. There is no record in history of a really free people being conquered. Before this reaches you, I trust that there will have been such news from the Fleet and the Army as will make us all feel that peace will come sooner than now today seems possible. Good for Belgium!

Good-bye. God Save the King.

SEPTEMBER IS A BATTLE MONTH

September sems likely to enhance its reputation as a battle month, for almost every day in it is the anniversary of a fight. On the 2nd Sedan capitulated (1870), and on the same day, 28 years later, Omdurman was fought; Malta became part of our Empire on the 5th, 1800; Sebastopol fell on the 8th, 1855; the 9th, 1513, is the date of Flodden Field; whilst on the 11th, 1709, Malplaquet was won. On September 11, 1857, began the siege of Delhi; on the 13th was fought, in 1882, the battle of Tel-el-Kebir; the 19th is this year the 558th anniversary of Poictiers, the next day the 60th anniversary of Alma, and the 57th of the fall of Delhi. On Sept. 23, 1803, Assaye was fought, whilst in 1857, two days later, Lucknow was relieved, the date of the commencement of the siege of Paris in 1870. The batle of Busaco took place on the 27th, in 1810, and on the 28th, 44 years ago, Strassburg capitulated. And as a conclusion and climax, Sept. 30 is the 82nd anniversary of the birth of Lord Roberts.

Moors Were Defeated.

MADRID, Sept. 15.—It is officially announced that a Spanish column, commanded by Gen. Silvertre, inflicted a severe defeat, with heavy losses, upon a force of Moors at Abd-el-Homan. The Spaniards lost one officer and four soldiers killed and two officers and 25 men wounded. Communications between Larache, Tangier and Tatuan are now assured.

Grecian Foreign Minister Resigns.

ATHENS, Sept. 15. — Because of the dissensions among the members of the royal family and the leading Greek statesmen over the attitude of Greece toward the general war, Minister of Foreign Affairs Panas has resigned. Premier Venezelos, who is also Minister of War, will discharge the duties of Foreign Minister temporarily.

MERCHANTS DO NOT WANT LOWER FEE FOR TRANSIENT TRADERS

A deputation composed of Messrs. Barrie, R. C. Braund, and C. N. Cameron, representing the Retail Merchants Association waited on the Finance Committee, in session yesterday afternoon, and voiced their objections to the city lowering the Transient Traders' License.

Mayor Buller explained that the reason for such a step would be to assist the poor of the city who wished to earn a livelihood by opening a small store during these depressed times. The deputation was not against assisting this class, but they were of the opinion that such a step would leave an opening for outsiders to step in.

After considerable discussion the meeting decided to allow the fee to stand as it is and permit the Retail Merchants' Association to use good judgment in cases as cited by the Mayor. If they do not then the committee will step in and lower the fee.

CANNING FACTORIES WILL EMPLOY MORE CANADIAN HELP

Industrial conditions in Canada at this time will result in the employment of many more Canadians than usual in the canning factories of the Dominion. In previous seasons many canning factories, finding difficulty in obtaining sufficient local help, secured assistance from the larger labor market of the United States. It is estimated that several thousand employes of Canadian canning factories during previous seasons were not permanent residents of this country. In view of the unemployment in some industries at this time, the canning factories will be able to secure in Canada most, if not all, the help they require this season. Thus many Canadians who would otherwise be out of employment will have the work in the canning factories that in previous years was given to parties who were resident in Canada only during the canning season. The policy of the leading canning companies has been to employ local help as far as possible.

Another condition that will tend to increase the number of Canadians employed in the canning industry in this country is the curtailment of imports of canned vegetables from France and Belgium. The imports of canned vegetables from these countries into Canada during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, amounted to $164,151 and $124,463, respectively—a total of almost $300,000. The curtailment of these imports will increase the demand for the products of the Canadian canning factories.

FINE RALLY OF EPWORTH LEAGUE

Young People Enjoyed Program at George Street Methodist Church

A social evening was held in the school room of George Street Methodist Church on Monday evening in connection with the Epworth League rally, which was well attended.

The chairman of the evening, Mr. C. S. Thompson, made a few appropriate remarks. Mr. E. Logan addressed the gathering in a very interesting manner as to what the league has done in the past. Miss A. L. Beatty spoke on the prospects of the league for the coming year. It was aimed to get one hundred members and three hundred dollars would in all probability be raised as missionary money. Altogether, the league had a very brilliant outlook for the coming year.

Rev. R. G. Peever addressed the gathering in his usual effective manner on the introspective or looking within.

Mr. Ivor Brock gave a splendid address on the desires and deeds of the league.

The program was as follows :

Preceding opening — Orchestra selection.
Hymn—188 or Stand Up, Stand Up (new tune.)
Prayer—Rev. R. G. Peever.
Chairman's remarks — C. S. Thompson.
Instrumental duet — The Misses McKee.
Address — The Retrospective or Looking Backward — E. Logan.
Solo (vocal) — Miss Lottie Hanson.
Address — The Prospective or Looking Forward — Miss A. L. Beatty.
Hymn — Epworth League hymn, led by Mr. Renwick.
Address — The Introspective or Looking Within—Rev. R. G. Peever.
Instrumental — violin — Miss Laura Logan.
Address—Desires and Deeds—Mr. Ivor Brock.
Duet (vocal)—Misses Maisie Armstrong and Lillian Garbutt.

After the program games and refreshments were participated in to the enjoyment of all.

GIFT OF SUGAR IS WELCOMED BY THE MOTHERLAND

The gift of two million pounds of sugar for the use of the Army and Navy which the planters of Mauritius have offered is another example of the splendid way in which our colonies are helping us. Mauritius has been a British possession since 1810; and it is interesting at this time to be reminded of the fact that the island owes its prosperity to Labourdonnais, the Governor during the French occupation. It was Labourdonnais who introduced the sugar cane, thus laying the foundation of the commercial position of the colony. The older inhabitants, too, are mostly descended from French colonists. The greater part of the people consists of Indian coolies, who are imported to work in the sugar fields. The Portuguese discovered the island in 1507, but it was the Dutch, who became possessors at a later period, who named it after their Prince Maurice.—Westminster Gazette.

ENROLMENT AT SEVEN NORMAL SCHOOLS, 1134

The Normal School enrollment of the Province for the term now commencing averages about the same as that of last year. These institutions are now turning out a steady supply of school teachers for Ontario, and the department considers the showing this year as encouraging in the face of considerable unrest, which has been felt in educational circles during the past few years. The total enrolment to date is 1,134 pupils for the seven Normal schools of the Province. These are situated respectively in Toronto, London, Hamilton, Ottawa, Peterboro, North Bay and Stratford.

Directions for Knitting Helmets for Soldiers

Here are directions for making knitted helmets for the soldiers :

Knit with double wool.

Cast on 27 stitches.

Knit 27 ridges (two rows make a ridge).

Take up stitches on each side of the 27 ridges (using two more needles, making 27 stitches on these needles.

Knit 38 ridges.

Cast on one needle 24 additional stitches and join to other side. (This leaves opening for face.)

Knit two plain, two purl to the depth of a finger and a half for neck. Bind very loosely.

Then take up stitches all around the opening for face, and knit two plain two purl to the depth of two inches.

Be careful to make ribs under each other at chin and neck.

Owing to the difficulty in getting coarse needles, knit loosely or not finer than 13 (Cressman's) or 9 (Woolworth's). Coarser needles would be better if they can be obtained. A supply of wool has been obtained and may be secured, through the courtesy of the management of the Oriental hotel, at the office, a 25c. skein making, as nearly as can be estimated, two helmets.

FIRE DAMAGED G.T.R. STATION AT LINDSAY

Roof Destroyed and Upstairs Offices Gutted

The G. T. R. station at Lindsay had a narrow escape from being wiped out yesterday afternoon. A spark from a passing engine set fire to the roof, and before the blaze was brought under control it had burned the roof and gutted the offices upstairs, which included the quarters of the trainmaster, dispatcher and roadmaster. The library was also burned. The line of communication was broken and the trains were dispatched by telephone. H. F. Coyle, superintendent, and Trainmaster McMillan passed through here last night, on their way to Lindsay. The station will be repaired at once.

VOLUNTEERS RETURN FROM VALCARTIER

A dejected looking party of men arrived in the city this morning on the Belleville train. They were 21 volunteers of the 57th regiment who were unsuccessful in passing the rigid medical examination. They left Val Cartier Sunday evening. Before leaving, Major Bennett addressed the men, and in a few words said how he regretted to see them leaving. He explained that there were more soldiers than were needed for the first contingent, and it was impossible to keep them. He said the examinations had been made severe, so that the men who were selected would be the very best that Canada could produce.

Major Bennett congratulated the soldiers on their eagerness to serve their flag and country. The boys speak very highly of their food and their camp, and they all have great praise for the officers and the treatment they received. They all feel disheartened at their inability to go over and help to crush the Germans.

"MADE-IN-WINNIPEG"

During the "Made-in-Winnipeg" week, organized by the enterprising Industrial Commissioner of the Western metropolis in May last, many "slogans" were used with good results by the keen business men of Winnipeg, whose co-operation made the exhibition such a huge success.

The following are a few mottoes which can be adopted with slight change for use in every Western community:

It isn't always the sky-scraper that makes the city. A factory with a big pay-roll will do twice as much.

Become impressed with the real, true downright duty you owe your city in patronizing home industry. After all is said and done, the full dinner-pail is the prosperity sign of a live city.

Winnipeg believes self-preservation to be the first law of nature, and therefore welcomes the "Made in Winnipeg" Week, advocating home industries, the first law of a city's solid development.

Winnipeg believes that no city can continue growth upon sound foundation without industry. It is the city of manufacturing that forges ahead.

Winnipeg knows that the way to build up a local industry is to buy of its wares. It is a duty citizens owe to the community. Buy the product of home labor, home capital and home industry.

Winnipeg realizes that there are eighteen thousand people employed in manufacturing goods right here in the city, and that if we can double the number and have the money that these people earn spent right here, it goes to help the prosperity of all.

Winnipeg knows that the purchase of every $1,000 of goods, "Made in Winnipeg" instead of purchasing outside, means the addition of one person to the city instead of supporting him elsewhere.

GERMANS MAKE STAND

Are Reported to be Resisting Attack on the River Aisne

French Official Statement Says Left Wing of Allies Has Caught up With German Rear Everywhere and Even With the Main Body of the Fleeing Troops---New Line of Defence Prepared by Enemy.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—The French official statement, issued last night, says that French troops have reoccupied Amiens, which was abandoned by the Germans, but that the Germans are making a stand on the River Aisne.

The statement is as follows:

"On our left wing we have everywhere caught up with the rear guards, and even the main body of the enemy.

"Our troops have re-entered Amiens, abandoned by the German forces.

"The enemy appears to be making a stand on a prepared front along the River Aisne.

"On the centre, similarly, it would seem as if the enemy intends to resist on the heights to the northwest, and to the north of Rheims. In the region between Argonne and the Meuse he continues to retire.

"On our right wing, in the Woevre district, we have succeeded in relieving the fort of Troyon, which has been stubbornly attacked time and time again during the last few days. (Troyon is 12 miles south-southeast of Verdun.)

"In Lorraine our pursuing detachments are keeping, as everywhere else, in touch with the Germans.

"The morale and sanitary condition of our armies continue excellent."

The following communique has been issued by the War Office:

"On our left wing the enemy had prepared to the north of the River Aisne, between Compeigne and Soissons, a line of defence. Detachments which the enemy had around Amiens have now retired on Peronne and St. Quentin.

"On our centre, likewise, the Germans had organized a rear defensive position, which they have not been able to hold. In Argonne they have fallen back northwards, beyond the forest of Belfoue and of Triancourt.

"On our right wing, the enemy's retreating movement, which is general now, extends from Nancy to the Vosges mountains. Last evening all the French territory in that quarter was completely evacuated."

A batch of German prisoners, composed of a general with his entire staff and six other officers and 300 men, arrived to-day at Noisy-le-Sec, 50 miles northeast of Paris, whence they were sent to the south.

Unrelenting pursuit of the rapidly retreating German armies by the British and French forces continued yesterday with extraordinary vigor, according to the French statements.

Despite the great numbers composing their various armies, which operated together against the allies, the German withdrawal movement is being carried out with great rapidity and cleverness. The main body appears to be approaching the Belgian frontier, while the German left wing seemingly is gaining shelter in German Lorraine.

So far as known, the fleeing invaders, who, after wonderful forced marches into France, made such a stern attempt to break through the solid lines of the allies defending Paris, have abandoned more than 60 cannon of various calibre, and 30 machine guns, because their exhausted horses were unable to drag them fast enough to keep up even with the footweary infantry. Enormous amounts of ammunition and war stores also were left on the route of the Germans, which is through a difficult marshy country, rendered almost impassable in some places by the heavy rains of the past few days, and which threaten to continue.

The allies, on the other hand, it is asserted, display no signs of fatigue. They are represented as stirred by unexpectedly great victories to such a state of elation that they are able to keep close on the heels of the retiring enemy, whom they harass day and night, cutting off detachments and attempting to place forces between the retiring armies and the comparative safety of the frontier.

Official German Statement.

BERLIN, Sept. 15. (Via wireless.)—The Belgian garrison in Antwerp has been repulsed in its sally against the Germans. The army of Crown Prince Frederich Wilhelm is attacking the forts between Verdun and Louvain on both sides.

Prince Joachim arived yesterday in Berlin, and has been lodged in Bellevue Palace.

Monday night's official details of the battle to the east of Paris cannot yet be made public.

GERMAN MOVEMENT AS SEEN BY MILITARY AVIATOR

Frenchman Describes Northerly and Northeasterly March of Kaiser's Troops Moving With Great Rapidity to Escape Their Pursuers—Many Were Straggling Across the Frontier.

PARIS, Sept. 15.—The best view of the retreating German army was obtained by a French military airman who, ascending from a point near Vitry-le-Francois, flew northward across the Rheims, down to the region of Verdun and back again in a zigzag course to a spot near Soissons. He saw the German hosts not merely in retreat, but in flight, and in some places in disorderly flight.

It was a wonderful sight to look down upon those tens and hundreds of thousands of moving men, the long grey columns of the Kaiser's picked troops, some marching in northerly, others in northeasterly directions, and all moving with a tremendous rapidity which was eloquent of their desire to place themselves beyond reach of the allied armies, who were harassing them every step of the way. The retreat was not confined to the highways, but many German soldiers were running across fields, jumping over fences, crawling through hedges and wending their way through woods without any semblance of order or discipline.

These men doubtless belonged to the regiment which, badly cut up in the fierce fighting which preceded the general retreat, was deprived of the majority of its officers and non-commissioned officers. They were a mere rabble of fugitives, many without rifles, having abandoned their weapons in the made haste to escape the vengeance of French and British pursuers. These scenes of almost panic-stricken flight were witnessed at the end of a week's hard fighting.

The invading army seems to have its Moscow, and its Waterloo cannot now be long delayed. The German right has been shattered to atoms. It is simply a fugitive mob, which flies night and day, hoping to escape or shake off the relentless pursuer, who has for days been hunting it down. The vanguard of the fleeing Teutonic host has now recrossed the Belgian frontier.

JAPS IN SHAN-TUNG.

Twenty-Five Thousand Troops Sent to Take Kiao-Chau.

PEKIN, Sept. 15.—It is believed here that 25,000 Japanese troops have now been landed on the Shan-Tung Peninsula. The Chinese are sending 25 Red Cross men to serve among both combatants at Kiao-Chau. This is the first time the Chinese Red Cross members have worked among foreigners.

The Professor's Prophecy Failed.

While a student at Harvard university Phillips Brooks was walking in the yard one day with a professor, who asked him what he intended making of himself.

"I am thinking of the ministry," answered the youth.

"Then banish such thoughts," said the professor earnestly. "Your manner of speech would forever bar you from being successful in that calling."

Many years later, when Phillips Brooks was one of the world's great pulpit orators, the most expert stenographer in England took down one of his sermons and said:

"Any stenographer who thinks he has conquered fast talkers should try Phillips Brooks."

ITALY WITH ALLIES.

She Is Neutral Only In Appearance Says Italian Prince.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 15. — The Temps quotes Prince Tasca di Cuto, an Italian Socialist Deputy, with reference to the attitude of Italy.

"Opinion in Italy," says the Deputy, "is unanimous in demanding the realization of the anti-Triple Alliance program. Every one to-day believes Italy must absolutely separate her policy and destiny from the Triple Alliance.

"United action with the Triple Entente is the inevitable outgrowth of the situation. Italy's neutrality has been a necessary transition. Our military measures have been taken as quickly as geographical conditions permitted, and the Italian army is ready for all eventualities. Our fleet is mobilized and coaled, thanks to arrangements with Britain.

"We are now neutral only in appearance. The action of Italy might definitely turn the scale in favor of the Triple Entente."

SOLDIERS USED BURNT CORK

Germans Ran When They Thought Turcos Were Upon Them

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Incidents of the recent fighting in France between the Germans and the Anglo-French troops, related by members of the French light infantry passing through Paris yesterday, show that the Kaiser's troops have a mortal fear of the black soldiers brought from Africa to fight with the allies. Taking advantage of the German's timidity in this respect, the white French troops blackened their faces with burnt cork to make themselves look like the dark-skinned warriors.

"You should have seen the Germans run the next day, when we charged them, uttering fearful shrieks," said one of the soldiers who had blackened his face.

"They took us for real blacks."

ANDREW JACKSON'S FINE.

How Judge Hall Came to Punish the Doughty General.

When the war of 1812 was over vague rumors of peace drifted into New Orleans, but still Jackson did not feel justified in revoking the martial law, under which he had placed the city. While the city was in this state this peculiar incident started. A man named Louaillier was tried as being a spy and was acquitted. This displeased Jackson, and feeling that in the martial law he had complete command of the city, he, in opposition to the court, retained Louaillier in prison and sent Judge Hall out of the city with orders not to return until it was regularly posted that peace had been declared or that the enemy had left the coast.

The following day came the overdue notice officially explaining that peace had been declared and that the treaty had been ratified. Upon hearing this Jackson revoked the martial law and set all his prisoners free. Then preparing to send home the detached militia from Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky amid the greetings and demonstrations of the populace, Judge Hall returned to the city.

In order to uphold the honor, as it seems of the civil over the martial government, Judge Hall issued, on March 21, an order summoning Jackson to court for contempt of a habeas corpus writ and also to state his reason for so doing. The next day Jackson appeared in court in person. He held a written protest against the decision which was to be given.

Hall then imposed a fine of $1,000, remarking that "the duty was unpleasant, that he could not forget the important services of the defendant to the country, and that in consideration thereof he would not make imprisonment a part of the punishment."

The fine was promptly paid amid cheering of the crowd for the popular hero.—Philadelphia Press.

Books Made by Slaves.

Some publishers in ancient Rome could turn out books rapidly and cheaply. A publisher of the Augustan era produced 1,000 copies of the second book of Martial in ten hours, and these, sold at about 12 cents apiece, gave him a profit of 100 per cent. This was done by employing slaves carefully trained to write swiftly and legibly. Working in batches of 100, with an overseer dictating the book in hand, the task was completed in a very short time. As soon as the copies were written they were revised, corrected, rolled up and bound. Being slaves, the men required only maintenance from their master, and thus he could afford to sell their productions at a very low rate.

Insulted the Horse.

As an illustration of the veneration with which the Argyll family was regarded in Rosenenth parish years ago Principal Storey, then minister of the parish, used to relate that one of his parishioners in detailing to the duke's factor some grievances he had sustained from a neighbor added, "And, mair than that, he had the impudence tae strike me in the presence o' his grace's horse."—Westminster Gazette.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Grain prices crashed downward today in a whirl of selling due to belief that the war might end soon. The close was wild, with wheat 6½c to 5¾c lower than Saturday night, corn off 2⅛c to 2¾c, and oats showing a setback of 3⅞c to 4⅝c net. In provisions, the outcome started from 35c decline to an equal advance.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14.—Quite a collapse took place in wheat prices today, owing to heavy receipts and consequent hedging sales and favorable reports from the seat of war. The opening was 1⅛ to 2⅜c lower for wheat, for oats 2½c, flax unchanged to ¼c higher.

The movement of wheat is astonishingly heavy in face of the unsettled weather. Inspections were 2852 cars, which approximately represents around 3,500,000 bushels of grain.

Cash wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.06¾; No. 2 do., $1.02¼; No. 3 do., 97½c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 48c; No. 3 C.W., 47c; extra No. 1 feed, 47c; No. 1 feed, 47c; No. 2 feed, 45c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14.—A few cables were received today asking exporters to make offers of wheat and bids of 23s were made for new crop No. 2 C. W. oats for October shipment.

In sympathy with another sharp decline of 2c to 2 1-2c per bushel in prices for oats in the Winnipeg market, a weaker feeling has develpoed in the local market and prices for old crop oats have declined 4c to 5c and new crop Ontario oats 1c per bushel. The demand is limited and the volume of business doing is small. Owing to the continued weakness in the wheat markets at American and Canadian centres and another decline in prices of 5c to 8c per bushel, there is an easier feeling in the local flour market, and unless prices react again in the near future for wheat, there will likely be a reduction in prices for flour. The demand is quieter today. Millfeed is unchanged, with a fair demand. At the auction sale today finest creamery butter sold lower at 28 5-8c, but apart from this, there was no change in the market. There was more enquiry for cheese from over the cable today and sales of some fair-sized lots were made. Eggs active and firm.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 144 cars, comprising 2686 cattle, 796 hogs, 1292 sheep and lambs and 178 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice steers sold at $8 50 to $9; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was a fair supply, but quality was not up to the requirements of the demand. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A fair supply sold at prices ranging from $60 to $90 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate and values practically unchanged. Choice veal calves, $10 to $10.50; good, $8.50 to $9.50; medium, $7.50 to $8.50; common, $6.50 to $7.50; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were moderate. Sheep, ewes, light, and of good quality, sold at $4 to $6 25; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $5; yearlings, $6.25 to $7; lambs sold at from $8 to $8.30, the bulk going at $8 to $8.15.

Hogs.

Hogs, selects, fed and watered, $9.50, and $9.75 weighed off cars, and $9.15 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of the live stock for the week ending Sept. 12, were 3000 cattle, 3350 sheep and lambs, 3300 hogs, 800 calves. The supply on the market for sale this morning consisted of 2300 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 600 calves.

The run of cattle today was again very large, but as fully 75 per cent. of it consisted of canning stock, there was no further change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle, the feeling being firm with an increased demand and a more active trade was done owing to the fact that packers in some cases were short of supplies of good beef. A few loads of choice steers changed hands at $8.50, but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle ranging from $7.50 to $8.25 per 100 lbs. The trade in canning stock was very active and altho the supply was large prices ruled steady with sales of bulls at $5 to $5.50, and cows at $3.75 to $4.25 per 100 lbs.

Owing to the decline in prices in the Toronto market for live hogs late last week, a weaker feeling developed in the local market today, and prices declined 30 cents per 100 lbs., as compared with this day week. At this reduction the demand from packers was good and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $10.10, sows at $8.10, and stags at $5.05 per 100 lbs. weighed off cars.

A feature of the small meat market today was the demand from American buyers of lambs and sales of several carloads were made for shipment to Boston at $7.75 per hundred lbs., while local buyers paid $7.50 to $8 for Ontario stock and $6.50 to $7 for Quebec per 100 lbs. There was no change in sheep for which the demand was good for local account. Calves were fairly active with sales of milk-fed stock at 5c to 9c per lb. live weight. Quotations were: Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.50 to $8.70; medium, $7.25 to $8.25; do. common, $6 to $6.50; canners, 3.75 to $3.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do. medium, $3 to $7; do. bulls, $6 to $7.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $85; do. common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $55 to $65; sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; buck and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $6.50 to $8; hogs, off cars, $10.10; calves, $5 to $20.

AUSTRIA ADMITS BLOW

One Humdred and Eighty Thousand Prisoners and Nearly Fifteen Hundred Guns Complete Record of Russian Success--German Army Defeated at Mlawa Retires From Russian Poland.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A despatch to The Central News from Rome says telegraphic advices received there from Petrograd are to the effect that the seventeen-days' battle of the Russians against the Austro-German forces ended with the following result:

Prisoners taken, 180,000; field guns captured, 450; fortress artillery captured, pieces, 1,000; transport wagons taken, 4,000; aeroplanes captured, 7.

The Russian Embassy in Rome, according to the correspondent of The Central News, says that the German army commanded by Gen. Von Hindenburg has been defeated near Mlawa, Russian Poland, and that the Germans are evacuating Poland with a loss of 50,000 men. The Ambassador adds that the Russians have assumed the offensive in Prussia, and have commenced to lay siege to Koenigsberg.

A despatch to the Central News from Copenhagen says Berlin messages received in Copenhagen admit that the chief Austrian army has suffered an absolute defeat, but claim it is retiring in good order.

"Gen. Von Auffenburg's army," the correspondent continues, "is said to be in a dangerous position, being cut off from the main army. The Austrains have had terrible losses."

Big Captures by Russians.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 15.—The following official communication was issued last night:

"On the Austrian front the Russian troops are crossing the San river. On taking position near Rawa Ruska the Russian troops captured 30 cannon and 8,000 prisoners, and also enormous stores of war material and provisions.

"The results of the pursuit of the enemy in that territory are still unknown.

"In the marshes of Belgoraion the Russians found some more Austrian batteries sunk in the mud, abandoned during retreat.

"The general army, while repulsing the last desperate Austrian attack, captured the moment our troops took the offensive a great number of prisoners and guns, the total number of which has not as yet been determined.

"Gen. Brusiloff declares that his troops gave proof of great energy, determination and bravery. The commanders of the corps, he says, led their units with imperturbable coolness, snatching victory from the enemy on more than one occasion at critical moments.

"Gen. Brusiloff particularly commends the activity of the Bulgarian general, Radko Dmitrieff, in the fighting.

"On the right bank of the Dniester river the Austrians have been thrown back on Dorogobuzh, 55 miles east of Smolensk.

"Czernowitz, capital and chief town of the Crownland of Bukowina, and all the neighboring regions have been occupied by the Russian armies without resistance."

A semi-official communication says the slowness of the Russian operations in East Prussia are not disquieting. The fighting there has no importance in such a gigantic struggle.

An energetic attack has begun in the district of Tchestokhov, where the Russians took a strong German position by storm on Saturday.

A Series of Massacres.

ROME, Sept. 15. — A despatch from the Austrian Tyrol says that thirty Italians have returned wounded from Galicia, and report the fighting there as a series of massacres. They declare nearly 100,000 wounded have been conveyed to Vienna, Budapest, Prague and elsewhere. More than 8,000 beds are occupied by wounded in Vienna alone.

The knowledge of the Rusisans, that the Italians and the Slavs in the Austrian army are deliberately firing low, is believed to account for the large proportion of wounded.

Austria has lost practically half of her army.

Machine Guns In Trees.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—In a despatch from Copenhagen the correspondent of The Evening News quotes the correspondent of the Berlingskeubends, who telegraphs from Austrian headquarters, as follows:—

"The Russians have done great execution with machine guns mounted in trees. Austrian doctors declare that they are unable to discover any evidence that the Russians are using expanding bullets. The Russian infantry men are said to fire high owing to the excessive depth of their trenches."

ALL ARE PROBABLY DEAD

Ottawa is Notified of Disaster to Eight of Karluck's Party

OTTAWA, Sept. 15. — The rescue of eight survivors of the Karluk expedition by the schooner King and Wing, the news of the known death of three and the fact that eight others were missing, is officially confirmed in a wireless to the naval department here from Capt. Robert Bartlett yesterday. In addition to the names of the rescued announced in Sunday night's Washington despatch the dead and missing are:

Dead—George S. Mattoch, geologist, son of Dr. A. E. Malloch, 28 Duke street, Hamilton, Ont., and formerly employed in the geological survey, Ottawa; Marne Mamen, Christiania, Norway, assistant topographer; Geo. Breddy, seaman of Esquimault, B.C.

The missing, whom Government officials believe to be dead are: Henry Beuchat, of Paris, France, anthorpologist and world famous scientist who had considerable experience in Arctic explorations.

Dr. Allister Forbes McKay, of Edinburgh, Scotland, the surgeon of the expedition, who accompanied Sir Ernest Shackleton in his dash to the south pole a few years ago.

James Murray, of Hampshire, England, oceanographer and well-known scientist, who was also a member of the Shackleton expedition.

Alex. Anderson, first officer; Chas. Barker, second officer; John Brady, seaman; A. King, seaman, and T. S. Morris, seaman.

The last five joined the expedition at Esquimault and their place of residence is not known by the Department.

The official message is from Capt. Bartlett on the U. S. revenue cutter Bear, and contains the names of the eight rescued men as announced on Monday night.

Japanese Admiral Goes To Prison.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Vice Admiral Koichi Fujii was sentenced yesterday to serve a term of four years and six months in prison following his conviction on charges of bribery in connection with the naval corruption scandal of last year. He was formerly Japanese naval attache at Berlin. He was tried before a court-martial last February on the charge that he received illicit commissions for influencing the allotment of Admiralty contracts in favor of a German firm.

COMMENT
As You Like It

Curley Blount may not return to Peterboro next year. Blount was not very popular with his players, and it is not likely he made a very deep impression on the Peterboro owners. He was not an improvement on Davy Rowan, who handled the Petes in 1913.—London Advertiser.

Frank Shaughnessy, manager of the Ottawa ball club, received a wire from a class A club in the Western States yesterday morning asking him to name his own price to manage the club next season. Shag replied that there was nothing doing.

"Cozy" Dolan, the big first baseman of the Senators, is remaining in Ottawa and may train the Ottawa rugby team. The Citizen says:—

"As to who will coach the Ottawas this year, no one seems to know. It was hoped that Father Stanton would be able to spare some time from his arduous duties at the university, but prospects for this look somewhat gloomy at present. The Ottawas are undoubtedly in urgent need of a good coach, and if Father Stanton cannot be induced to assume command, other football strategists, residents of the city, will be asked to help the club out. The names of Jack Williams and Eddie Phillips have been mentioned for this position and should they consent to handle the reins the club will have nothing to worry about, as both have seen many years of active experience on the Canadian gridiron."

HE ENFORCED THE RULE.

But in Doing it Grant Proved His Good Hearted Nature.

General Grant was a kind and warm hearted man in spite of a certain brusqueness of manner. A story that General Logan used often to tell is to the point.

At the time General Logan was with General Grant at Holly Springs, Miss., General Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader, had just captured a train of supplies, and General Grant had issued an order to his men to scour the country for twenty miles round in order to get food for his troops. The country had already been swept pretty clean, and the new demands brought a good deal of hardship on the people of the neighborhood. At many of the homes there were only women, old men, children and faithful colored servants. These people, hungry and without money to buy provisions, were often forced to apply to the northern army in their distress. Food was always given them if they would take the oath of allegiance to the United States.

One day a rickety carriage drew up before General Grant's headquarters, and from it alighted an elderly woman and her colored driver. The woman was admitted to the tent, and the servant stood just inside the tent flap. Only a few words were necessary to explain matters. The woman's home had been ravaged by troops, both blue and gray, and she and her servants needed food. The soft voiced woman spoke of her humiliation at having to beg for food, and added that she made the request more for her servants than for herself. "I am willing to suffer everything for the south," she said, "but I can't see our people starve."

An officer who had charge of such cases told the woman that she should have food if she would sign the oath of allegiance. "I cannot do that," she said. "My husband and three sons are fighting under the Confederate flag. I thank you, sir, for listening to me."

The woman turned to leave. General Grant, who had been writing at a table in one corner of the tent, glanced up from his papers. He called to the negro:

"Sam, did you ever hear of Abraham Lincoln?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral."

"Do you know that he is trying to free you colored people?"

"Yassuh, Ah knows it."

"Are you willing to take sides with Abraham Lincoln—to take the oath of allegiance to the United States?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral, Ah's willin' ter do dat."

General Grant turned to the officer who had talked with the woman. "Administer the oath to Sam," he said, "and give him the provisions. See that he gets plenty."

The rickety old carriage with its escort of soldiers passed through the Union lines a short time afterward, laden to the seats with provisions, and Sam, probably thinking less of his oath than of the supper to come, grinned from ear to ear as he urged the two mules to a faster gait.

HIS CURIOUS FALL.

It Wedged Him Head Down In a Slit in a Steep Cliff.

A personal experience of a highly sensational character is recorded by A. H. Savage Landor in his book "Across Unknown South America:"

"The forest near the Secundury river was at first overgrown with dense vegetation that gave us a good deal of work and extra exertion, but after that, when we got some distance from the water, the forest was fairly clean, except of course for the fallen trees. We found troublesome ravines of great depth where streamlets had cut their way through.

"In going down one of those difficult ravines I had an accident that might have been fatal. The ravine, the sides of which were almost vertical, was very narrow—only about ten metres across. We let ourselves down, holding on to a liana. When we reached the bottom we found a tiny brook winding its way between great round boulders that left a space about two feet wide for the water. I began to climb the other side, and I had got to a height of about thirty feet. In order to go up this steep incline I had set one foot against a small tree and I pulled myself up by a liana. Unluckily the liana suddenly gave way. The weight of the load that I had on my shoulders made me lose my balance so that my body described a complete semicircle. I dropped down head first from that height on the rocks below.

"Providence once more looked after me on that occasion. On the flight down I already imagined myself dead; but no—my head entered the cavity between two great rocks, against which my shoulders and the load became jammed, while my legs waved wildly in midair. I was forced so hard against the two side rocks that I could not possibly extricate myself. It was only when Benedicto and the new man came to my help and pulled me out that we were able to resume our journey. I was much shaken and a good deal bruised, but otherwise none the worst for that unpleasant fall."

BELGIUM DREW ENEMY

Sturdy Battlers Occupied Two Army Corps Badly Needed in France

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Evidence accumulates that the German commander-in-chief has been compelled to weaken his force in France owing both to the Russian menace on the east and to Belgian attacks from Antwerp.

Petrograd despatches speak of ten German field corps transported to the east, and at least one German division has been fighting with the Austrians in the Lublin government.

A despatch from The London Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent says: The Belgian army, which last week conducted a four-days' vigorous offensive in the triangle of Brussels, Malines and Louvain, have now retired under the shelter of the Antwerp forts with the satisfaction of knowing they have not only dealt a heavy blow in their own defence, but have undoubtedly contributed to the defeat of the German right in France. Their sudden sally compelled the Germans to concentrate all their available forces in Belgium and actually to recall to Brussels their third and ninth army corps, which had been sent southwest, presumably to reinforce the Germans in north France. In addition the Germans had to put in the field against the Belgians, Landwehr and Landsturm regiments from the south of Brussels, and 15,000 sailors and marines are also reported to be engaged.

Although the Belgians have again fallen back under cover of the Antwerp forts they keep in close touch with the Germans, who maintain a threatening attitude, and continue to occupy the attention of a great body of troops which the enemy would much like to send to Frnace.

Despatches received here from Antwerp relate that the fighting by the Belgian forces which went out from Antwerp last Friday lasted for three days, day and night. There was a heavy engagement among the ruins of Louvain, the Belgians penetrating twice to the centre of the city. Yesterday the Belgians delivered a fierce cavalry attack on the Germans at Louvain.

TO ATTACK ANTWERP

Enemy Hope to Take City With Their Heavy Siege Guns

LONDON, Sept. 15.—In a despatch from Antwerp the correspondent of The Evening News says:

"According to the German commanding officer from Aerschot, who is now in prison here, the Germans firmly believe that the Antwerp forts are no match for their 17-inch siege guns, of which he says they have 50. The range of these guns is about six miles, and each piece can be fired only ,20 times. While confessing that the Germans are unable to spare enough men to invest Antwerp, this officer says he believes the siege guns will enable them to take a couple of the forts, thus giving access to the city. As a bombardment would be destructive to Antwerp, such action is not contemplated, because its harbor is too valuable an asset for Germany."

He Bought a Saw

Down in Alabama some time ago a man went into a store to buy a saw. He saw the kind he wanted and asked the price. It was $1.65, the dealer said.

"Good gracious," said the man; "I can get the same thing from the mail order house for $1.35."

"That's less than it cost me," said the dealer; "but I'll sell it on the same terms as the mail order house, just the same."

"All right," said the customer. "You can send it along and charge it to my account."

"Not on your life," the dealer replied. "No charge accounts. You can't do business with the mail order house that way. Fork over the cash."

The customer complied.

"Now, two cents postage and five cents for a money order."

"What—"

"Now, two cents postage and five cents for a money order, to a mail order house, you know."

The customer, inwardly raving, kept to his agreement and paid the seven cents.

"Now, twenty-five cents expressage."

"Well, I'll be———," he said, but paid it, saying: "Now, hand me that saw and I'll take it home myself and be rid of this foolery."

"Hand it to you?" Where do you think you are? You're in Alabama and I'm in Chicago, and you'll have to wait two weeks for that saw."

Whereupon the dealer hung the saw on a peg and put the money in his cash drawer.

"That makes $1.67," he said. "It has cost you two cents more and taken you two weeks longer to get it than if you had paid my price in the first place."—Hidden Hints.

THEY JUST MADE HIM SING.

When Scanlan Wooed Minister Wu and the Chinese Officials.

When W. J. Scanlan was in the show business he invaded Washington on one occasion with a brand new comic opera. In order to give the piece a fine sendoff he formulated the plan of sending free tickets for boxes to the president, the cabinet members and other men high in social life.

"That won't do," one of his newspaper friends told him. "Too common. Do something picturesque. Why don't you go after Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister? If you get him he will bring down a lot of other diplomatic people."

Scanlan fell for the proposition and called at the Chinese legation.

"What sort of show is this?" asked Mr. Wu.

"It's a comic opera," replied Scanlan.

"Any good jokes in it?"

Scanlan said it was full of good jokes.

"Tell me some of them," commanded Mr. Wu.

Scanlan did so, and Wu got such a series of laughs out of them that he sent for his whole establishment, numbering thirty-two people, and made the embarrassed Scanlan tell them all over again.

"Now," continued Wu, "are there any good songs in this show?"

"The show had so many good songs," declared Scanlan, "that we had to throw some of them away."

"All right," said Wu. "Sing me some of the best."

"I sang them," said Scanlan, telling the story afterward. "But that wasn't so remarkable. I had to sing 'em. There were thirty-two Chinamen to make me sing 'em. The amazing part of the thing was that all thirty-two of them came to see the show that night."—Popular Magazine.

"Yes; I have seen much of the seamy side of life."

"What is it like?"

"Much like the other kind with the polish rubbed off."

No Curiosity.

"You can't get along with him?"

"No."

"Why don't you show him the door?"

"Oh, he's seen it."

She Is So Light Headed.

"I wonder why Mamie will load her hat with such a lot of trimmings."

"Probably to keep her head from blowing away."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

PAKENHAM—KINGDON.

A quiet wedding took place at Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa, on Monday, when Miss Maude A. Kingdon, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Kingdon of Peterboro, Ont., became the bride of Mr. Gilbert Pakenham, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Pakenham, also of Peterboro. Rev. Lennox Smith, Rector of the Cathedral officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by her sister, Mrs. C. R. Bromley, while Mr. C. R. Bromley assisted the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Pakenham will reside in this city.

JOHNSTONE—MORROW.

The marriage of Miss Lillian May Morrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Morrow of Peterboro, Ont., and Mr. Geo. A. Johnstone, architect, son of Judge T. C. Johnstone, of Regina, was solemnised by the Rev. E. C. Earp at Grace Church at 8 o'clock last evening (Sept. 10).

Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone will leave this morning for Los Angeles, Cal., where they will reside in future.—Regina Leader, Sept. 11, 1914.

BROWN—BEGGS.

The marriage of Miss Janette Beggs, of Peterboro, to Mr. E. H. Brown, of Smith township, was solemnized at St. Paul's manse at 3 o'clock this afternoon. They were attended by the groom's brother, Mr. Fred Brown and Miss Cora Bradburn.

The happy couple left on the 3.31 train for points near Toronto.

Mr. G. C. Stewart of Hamilton is in the city for a few days.

Mr. Joseph Greenaway, Philadelphia, is registered at the Snowden House.

Mr. W. A. Murray, Toronto, is visiting here for a few days.

Mr. Jas. Cuthbertson, Hamilton, is visiting friends.

Mr. H. E. McLean and S. C. Hughes, Toronto, are registered at the White House.

Mrs. and Miss Merriman, Montreal, are visiting friends here.

Mrs. H. McIlmoyle and Miss McIlmoyle, King Street, left this afternoon for Regina.

CIVIL ACTION, ONLY CASE TO BE HEARD AT ASSIZES

But one case and it as civil action is being dealt with at the Fall Assizes which opened this afternoon at one o'clock before Hon. Mr. Justice Britton. The grand jury composed of: George Elliott, foreman; W. H. Dunsford, George Dench, John Fife, H. O. Fiske, James A. Fowler, J. M. Greene, George Garbutt, W. H. Hamilton, Norman Johnston, W. S. Kelly, W. E. Murphy and P. J. McNulty was empanelled and addressed by Justice Britton. His Honor commended the county on the absence of any criminal cases and then briefly outlined their duties.

The jury retired to the Grand Jury Room and in the course of a few minutes returned with the decision that they deemed it unnecessary to make the usual visit to the public buildings. They were then dismissed.

The petty jury was sworn in as follows:— John Fitzpatrick, Gordon Fitzgerald, J. Fitzgerald, Chas. Grr/stock, Gilbert Howson, W. Hambridge, E. Kent, N. Lean, John Leahy, S. Morrow, S. McBride, A. Millage.

Mr. F. D. Kerr of the law firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry who acted as counsel for John A. Sharpe, the plaintiff, in the civil case, addressed the petty jury and gave the members a short insight into the details of the case. Thomas L. Sharpe, son of the plaintiff was employed by the C.P.R. as lineman and was working in Hamilton. On the evening of March 19, 1913, while en route to his supper, he was walking along the track to the boarding car, and a light engine of the T. H. and B. Railroad came from behind and struck he and a fellow workman killing them instantly. The engine was running backwards and was not fitted with the necessary lights, hence the plaintiff took the view that the company's neglect caused the death of his son, who was one of the principal breadwinners of the family. To obtain some remuneration he entered action against the two railway companies for $5,000.

The evidence is now being taken and the case proceeding.

ENTRIES POURING IN FOR PETERBORO EXHIBITION

Entries are coming in fast and numerous for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Tuesday's entries in all lines are as much as could be handled, and much stock that was expected to exhibit at Lindsay is coming here.

Those interested in poultry are promised a large and variegated number to feast their eyes upon, and altogether the live stock exhibits will be exceptionally large. Accommodation for the sheep is rapidly filling up. There is also an extra good entry in the ladies' work and in art. Conditions point to an extra good exhibition this year.

All entries close Wednesday night, and those desirous of making entries should do so before that time.

GENERAL NEWS

The body of John Barrie was found in the bay at Barrie Monday afternoon, with the pockets of his coat weighted with stones. He had been despondent for several weeks.

Mr. H. P. Ross passed away at his home in Penetanguishene yesterday afternoon after an illness of almost three years. He had been a resident of the town for almost 25 years and held the position of collector of customs.

The Royal hotel was destroyed by fire at Port Hope last night. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at around $1,000, with insurance of $700.

Mr. J. H. Hare, of Barrie, superintendent of the electric light and waterworks department of that place, received a shock of 25,000 volts by the power being turned on unexpectedly in the electric plant on Sunday. His arms and feet were seriously burned, but hopes are held out for his recovery.

London, Ont., Sept. 15.—Henry Nichols, 70 years of age, was trapped in a silo adjoining a barn, which caught fire from a traction engine yesterday near Glendale, and was burned to death before he could be rescued, at a silo-filling bee. The barn was completely destroyed, with all its contents, at a loss of $5,000.

There are men who never admit failure, though they do sometimes confess that they made a wrong guess as to their ability.

THE SPENDTHRIFT IS TRUE TO LIFE

A Singularly Attractive Performance for Grand Patrons

Eminently acceptable and singularly attractive is The Spendthrift, the play which the Russel Theatre management offered to its patrons for the opening of the season last night, says the Ottawa Citizen. Its acceptability lies in its lifelike portrayal of modern social conditions and the strong, convincing lesson which the author, Porter Emmerson Browne, has, with infinite skill and care, drawn for the delectation of those who may go to see it. And in the clean acting, absence of artificiality and adherence to truth will be found its attractiveness.

LOCAL AUTOISTS FIGURE IN MISHAP

(Port Hope Guide.)

Four young men from Peterborough, while autoing to town met with a rather serious accident. When near Bailieboro the driver lost control of the car and went into the ditch and completely overturned.

The driver was scratched about the face and arms and the car was badly broken up. The other three occupants escaped injury.

It is said that the driver was inexperienced.

"CLEAR SHIP FOR ACTION"

Last Preparations in a Fleet at Sea — When the Guns Begin to Speak

(London Daily Mail.)

We say that the modern ship of war has no beauty. Gone are the graceful lines of the old three-deckers, gone the bellying sails and the majestic pictures of manned yards.

If we say these things of the ship of war as we know her in peace time, what should we say of her now, when she is swept bare of every superfluous stick and bar, and floats on the water a mere armored gun-platform?

"Clear ship for action" is a phrase that is often used ashore, but without any very clear understanding of its full meaning. It must be taken literally: it means that the ship is to be cleared.

In the event of hostilities breaking out suddenly, with the fleet at sea and the enemy's ships on the horizon, the order means wholesale wastage.

Everything that encumbers the ship, everything that could burn, everything that could splinter and aid the enemy's shells to spread death, must be thrown overboard. Pinnacles, deck awnings, and top hamper of all sorts would be sacrificed.

Ten Minutes' Notice.

In the present case such wastage is saved, because nearly all the work of clearing for action was done before the fleet left Portland. Life on board a battleship now is not particularly comfortable, for practically all combustible furniture, all door curtains and scuttle hangings, all the little civilized comforts that go to make sea life less hard, have been left behind.

Every ship is in such a state that she is ready to fight at ten minutes notice. That ten minutes, though will be strenuous, when it comes. Ensign staffs will disappear, rails and stanchions laid on the deck, hatchways closed. Searchlights will be struck down and sent below, the usual wireless office dismantled, and all gear sent to a place of safety while the operators proceed to the special protected station fitted for this emergency.

Between decks repair parties of the torpedo lieutenant's staff will be giving a last glance to all the network of communications to the gun turrets, the conning tower, the engine room, fire gongs and the fire control. All over the ship these repair parties are stationed throughout the action, for those rubber-covered wires are the nerves of the ship; from the brain which is in the conning tower of eighteen inch steel they carry orders to every corner.

Below the water-line engineers move from valve to valve, with odd looking spanners, seeing to it that no precaution is neglected to preserve the floatability of the ship however much she may be battered.

Sighting the Guns.

On every deck fire fighting appliances are set ready to hand: hoses and nozzles, the steam pumps ready to pour hundreds of tons of water on the flames; keys and spanners for the flooding of magazines or the stoppage of ventilation. At any moment during the action the bugle may blare out, "Fire quarters," and the appointed men will put on their fire helmets, while others take up their places on the hose.

A little pennant breaks at the yard-arm and tells that admiral that the ship is cleared.

Then follows the order, "General quarters," and every man proceeds to his allotted station. Eight hundred or a thousand men, trained for many years against the coming of this hour, slip into their places in turret and casemate, in magazines and shell room, in sick bay, or in submerged torpedo flat.

A minute or two longer the admiral lingers on the forebridge. Far ahead in the distance the glasses show the moving shapes that are the enemy's ships. In the foremost turret the sighter says, "12,000 yards."

The admiral looks round quietly at his staff.

"To your stations, gentlemen," is his farewel.

The conning-tower, whence the steering, the speed, the firing of the guns, and the despatch of the torpedoes will be controlled, encloses him.

The action is joined.

In the forward turrets the gun layers peer through the telescope of the sighting apparatus, each hand on a little wheel that will move the great gun by hydraulic pressure. The order is given to load, and the breech of the gun opens. A little lift shoots up through a hole in the floor, and the 1,400 lb. projectile is rammed into the breach, as are the cartridges that will send the twelve hundredweight of metal and explosive in a few seconds across the miles of water. The breech block closes again. "Right gun ready."

"Fire!"

A few seconds slip by into eternity.

The gun layer touches a trigger no larger than that of a boy's toy pistol.

Shattering, blasting, maddening noise fills the turret, but through it the men proceed to load again. The breech blocks opens as the air blast cleans out the burning remnants of the cartridges, and sweeps violet acrid fumes and flames like a cylinder through the muzzle.

Another shell is rammed in. Mechanically, like clockwork figures, those few men in the turret go through with their "job of work," though they choke with the fumes and their ears bleed with the reverberating shock of their own guns.

Mechanically a few men in every turret in every ship are going through their "job of work" in the same way.

Warfare at sea on a modern armored gun-platform is an unknown quantity. We know that at 10,000 yards our gunners can make forty-one hits out of fifty rounds on a small target, for they have done it. But what effect those hits will have, what effect on our own ships the enemy's hits will have, we can only imagine. For since the days when Togo fought Rashdestvensky in the Straits of Tsushima the weapons of sea fighting have been revolutionized.

When the order comes to clear ship for action, and the last man has gone to his station, all the theories of the last decade will be put to the proof.

65,000 Chocclate Bars Going to Valcartier

Toronto, September 15.—William Neilson Limited, Toronto, offered to supply the Government with 65,000 bars of chocolate, for use in whatever manner the Government should choose.

This offer has been gratefully accepted by the Minister of Militia, Colonel Sam Hughes, and the chocolate is to be shipped to Valcartier, and from there will be transhipped with the Canadian Commissariat to Europe.

The several hundred members of the staff of William Neilson Limited, have also donated one full day's pay to the Canadian Red Cross Fund.

HERE AND THERE

Good-bye, Home Rule!

* * *

Germany must rally and save her empire, or the war will soon come to an end.

* * *

Looks like good weather for the exhibition.

* * *

Still the German line is said to be intact and they are not in confusion by any means, yet. The battle of the ages is still to be concluded.

* * *

Commerce in Canada should be stimulated by the victories of the allies.

* * *

Perhaps those Val Cartier boys will not have the pleasure of going to the front.

Cherish the egg—$2.50 a dozen in Hamburg. And fresh meat is out of the question.

* * *

Many firms in Calgary may abandon gas heating on account of the increase in rates. We were also of the opinion that gas throughout the west was very plentiful, and are at a loss to understand the rise in the rates. It's perhaps due to the war. The poor old war takes the blame for everything.

* * *

Taking it all around, the boys at Val Cartier are pretty good shots.

* * *

Now and again a faint echo of Calgary oil is heard on the far-off horizon.

* * *

Both those Germans and Austrians are pretty good foot-runners. Still the saying is that one can run far better on an empty stomach.

* * *

The Kaiser seems to "be a devil in his own home town."

* * *

Eating eggs in Hamburg when they are $2.50 a dozen is worse than allowing the children to play with diamonds.

As a general thing, we assume before our impudent friend dares to presume.

GERMAN BATTLE FRONT 114 MILES LONG

KAISER'S ARMIES ON THE DEFENSIVE AT SELECTED GROUNDS

Real Fight For Supremacy Between Invaders and Allies is Now in Progress.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 16, 3.18 p.m.—It is officially announced this afternoon that the German army is fighting a defensive battle along its front from Noyon to a point north of Verdun. Noyon is 11 miles from Compiegne and 55 miles northeast of Paris, and this battle line would be about 110 miles long. The German rush into and out of France has brought no decisive result, and until a pitched battle on a huge scale is fought and won, neither side is in a position to claim it has secured more than an opening move in the war game.

The allies for the moment have retrieved their perilous position and turned the tables on the invaders, but the next move is with the Germans, whose armies are still in being and in great force on ground more or less selected by themselves.

The debacle—for it seems nothing less—in the Austrian armies, means that Germany will have more and more to rely mainly upon herself, hence there will be greater interdependence of events in the eastern and western fields of operations. What new forces Germany can put into the campaign in the western area must henceforth depend in a great measure upon how far she can neglect the Russian movement on Breslau, 190 miles southeast of Berlin.

MANOEUVRES OF THE GERMAN FORCES.

Paris, Sept. 16.—The official communication of Monday which referred to the preceding days' developments, said the enemy showed a disposition to resist the north of the river Aisne. Yesterday's official communication said the enemy had resisted on a line from Craonne and the fores of L'-Aigle, north of Compiegne.

As a simple rear guard stand against the allies, this would scarcely last 48 hours, so there must be another big battle in progress since Sunday. The forces that constituted the centre in the battle of the Marne seem also to be seeking positions on the same line, while the Crown Prince's army in Argonne continues to retreat in that direction. The Germans have on this line the advantage of high ground, with the right protected by the rivers Oisne and Aisne.

If the centre and left are able to complete the retirement in such shape as to make a stand on the same line, they may be able to sustain a general engagement under more favorable conditions than on the Marne. The battle line this time is nearly straight from east to west.

In case the German line should retire again, they would have two lines of retreat, by Longwy and Sedan. It was rumored last night that Indian cavalry had arrived and would go into action. This is unconfirmed, however, and doubtless no one will know definitely about them until they have actually participated in an engagement.

DRASTIC ORDERS FOR THE INVADERS.

London, Sept. 16.—A Central News despatch from Rome quoted a telegram from Basl to the Messagero, stating that the Germans are reported to have received orders to retire as far as the right bank of the Rhine, completely evacuating France, Belgium and Luxemberg.

PAPERS FOUND ON GERMAN GENERAL.

Paris, Sept. 16.—Significant papers were found in possession of the German general Friese, who was made a prisoner and brought to Paris on Sept. 14.

One was a letter inflicting punishment for not replying immediately to the mobilization order, and was dated July 10. Another paper was a despatch addressed to General Von Kluck during the retreat, advising him that General Friese's troops had no more ammunition, and that if he did not receive some at once he would be lost.

SUFFICIENT CAVALRY IS LACKING.

London, Sept. 16.—The Daily News' correspondent following the pursuit with the allies, laments the lack of sufficient cavalry. He says: "The French cavalry has not been fortunate in this division. Too often it timed its brilliant charges too late and only swept over the crest when the German guns had secured a range to mow them down. Hence their support has not always been available at the right moment, but their courage and dash have been characteristic."

BERLIN PUBLIC GET "REASSURING" NEWS.

Berlin, via Copenhagen, Sept. 16.—The public has been showing signs of impatience because of the absence of news from the front, and this has led headquarters to depart from its practice and issue reassuring statements in general terms. Among those lost in battle near Heligoland was Admiral Maas, commander of the second scouting division.

PEACE TERMS TO BE MADE IN BERLIN

London, Sept. 16.—The stand of the Government as regards reports that Germany might listen to mediation proposals is reflected in the editorial appearing in the Times yesterday:

"The allies will go to Berlin to settle accounts, not to lay waste the Fatherland. They will have this to say to the German people: 'This worship of war must cease, and the sword you have forged must be broken.'

"Not until the horsemen of the gathering nations ride down Unter Den Linden will the German people realize fully that their mad dreams of world-domination have been shattered for ever. The defenders of civilization will destroy, but they will not destroy women's virtue, nor ancient sanctuaries, nor peaceful homes.

"They will destroy warships, arsenals, shipbuilding yards, fortresses, all the paraphernalia of Teutonic warfare by which terror has been spread.

"The expiation of Louvain should be the absolute obliteration, not of Bonn nor Heidelberg, but of the Krupp works at Essen.

"The price of peace should be, among other things, the reconstruction of more beautiful towns and villages upon the ruins of innocent, devastated Belgium.

The Only Way.

"Friends of Germany and all who talk of lasting peace ought to be the first to speed the allies on their way to Berlin. But not until the capital is reached will the sword be struck from Germany's hands, and not until they see the conquerors in their midst will the Germans turn from Treitchke and Nietzsche to Luther and Gœthe once more."

CAPT. HORNBY OFF TO THE FRONT

Has Friends Here but He Couldn't Stay

Toronto, Sept. 16.—It takes a lot to cool the ardor of the British soldier when the war-drum calls to arms. Half the world is a mere trifle when it stands between him and the spot where his fellow-soldiers are facing the foe.

Captain Hornby, an officer of the Cheshire Regiment, is carrying out the traditions of the British army in sturdy fashion. For some time past he was located in the Great Bear Lake district, about 1,000 miles north of Edmonton, collecting geological and natural history specimens. While he was peacefully hammering the granite in the wild north, the news filtered through to him that the British army was hammering the Germans in France. Without a moment's hesitation Mr. Hornby dropped his hammer and specimen bag, packed up and made for the east, saying to his companions, "I must join my regiment."

After his long journey Mr. Hornby passed through Toronto last night, on his way to the front. While passing Peterborough he looked out, exclaiming, "I ought to have called there to see some friends. However, I'll see them when I return."

"Do you think you will ever return?" laughingly asked a fellow-traveller.

"Why not? My chances are 30 to 1. I shall return when the war is over," replied the cheery optimist.

VETERAN OF THE CRIMEA PASSES

Kingston, Sept. 16.—Thos. Packer, aged 85, who served in the Crimean war and had many hairbreadth escapes when with the Royal Horse Artillery, is dead here. He was the second last Crimean veteran of this district. Kingston had up to 10 years ago a number of survivors of this great war of the fifties, but since that time they have gradually laid down their arms.

ANOTHER SEDAN?

New German Position in Vicinity of Old Battlefield

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The battle of the Marne has about come to an end, and although the allied armies are keeping in touch with the retreating Germans it is evident that the latter are taking up positions to stay the northward advance of the French and British.

Gen. Von Kluk with his army has made a stand north of the River Aisne on a line marked by the forest of L'Aigle and Craonne, while the armies of Generals Von Buelow and Von Hausen, the Duke of Wuertemburg and the crown prince are falling back to straighten out the front on which the next big battle is likely to be fought.

Although the Germans have been badly punished in their long retreat and have lost many guns and men, they maintain cohesion, and, unless the French succeed in their attempt to get between the army of the crown prince and these operating to the west of him they will present a solid front when the time comes for another clash, which will be as big as the recent battle.

The new position of the Germans, if they can gain it, offers better opportunities for defence than the ground they have passed over during the last ten days.

Their right apparently extends as far west as St. Quentin, through a country intersected by rivers and streams that will embarrass the attacking forces. The main German forces, under Generals Von Buelow and Von Hausen, the Duke of Wuertemberg and the crown prince, stretch along the River Aisne to the hills behind Rheims and then north to Verdun.

Thus by bringing the army of the crown prince of Bavaria more into line they will be covered on one wing by their own fortress of Metz.

Some military experts are of the opinion that the Germans will offer their next resistance on the Meuse and that another battle of Sedan will be fought before many days.

REAR GUARDS OF THE ENEMY REINFORCED

Pursuing Forces Were in Contact With Them for Two Days

LOCATION OF GERMANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Sept. 16. — The following official communication was made here today:— During the 14th and 15th of September, the rear guards of the enemy with which our pursuing forces were in contact were reinforced from the main body of the German army. The enemy is engaging in a defensive battle along their entire front, on which certain of their positions show strong organization.

This front is bounded by region of Noyon plains to the north of Vic Sur, Aisne and Soissons, Laon heights to the north and west of Rheims and a line which runs thence to the north of Ville-sur-Tourbe to the west of Argonne region, and which is continued thence beyond the Argonne by another line which passes north of Varennes, a point that has been evacuated by the enemy and reaches the river Meuse in the neighborhood of the forest of Forges which is north of Verdun.

During the pursuit of the enemy, executed by our troops after the battle of Marne, the Germans abandoned numerous prisoners to our hands. To these men there has been added a large multitude of stragglers who were hidden in the forests. No exact accounting of these prisoners or of war material captured by us so far has been possible, therefore the Minister of War who does not want to give out the figures which might be considered fantastic, refrains from announcing the details of these captures.

DEFEAT OF AUSTRIANS CONTINUES AT HANDS OF RUSSIAN FORCES

Succor Attempted by Germans Did Not Avail, 5,000 Prisoners and 36 Pieces of German Artillery Being Taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Sept. 16.—The following summary of the recent fighting in Galicia has been made public through semi-official channels:

Russian troops are pursuing the Austrians with energy and the defeat of the enemy continues. Certain Austrian army corps have been virtually annihilated. The Russian advance guard is approaching Przemya. According to such information as has come to hand, the Austrians have lost in the neighborhood of 25,000 men in killed and wounded, 16,000 prisoners and 400 pieces of ordinance and a number of standards. Desperate efforts of the German troops to save the Austrian army from utter rout should be recorded. Active participation of the German army corps in the fighting has been revealed at several different places along the Austrian front, as, for instance, at Tourobine the Russians captured 36 pieces of long range German artillery, in addition to some 5,000 German prisoners. At other places on the front several dozen large German guns, many of which had been prevented by lack of time from taking part in the fighting, fell into Russian hands. Succor sent by Germany did not save the Austrians, and the heavy defeat inflicted upon the Germans has contributed to the brilliancy of Russian victories.

AUSTRIAN FORCES IN DIRE STRAITS.

London, Sept. 16.—Telegraphing from Rome, the correspondent of the Daily Express says the surrender of the Austrian army led by Generals Dankl and Von Auffenberg is imminent. The heir to the Austrian throne, Archduke Charles Francis, is with Dankl's army, which is entirely cut off from its communications.

Five German corps marching to the relief of the Austrians have been checked at Grodek by a third Russian corps. General Dankl's army is caught in a morass west of the river San. Further west a flanking army of 100,000 Cossacks is awaiting it. Its artillery has been lost and its cavalry is in a bog. The last hope of the Austrians is to concentrate between the triangular fortress works of Przemysl, Cracow and Jaroslav. They can accomplish this, if at all, only by tremendous losses.

JAPANESE SCOUTS OCCUPY RAILWAY STATION.

Tokio, Sept. 16.—The railway station at Kiao-Chow, five miles from the bay of that name, and opposite Tsing Tau, a German fortified port, was occupied on Sept. 13 by Japanese scouts, according to an official announcement.

GETTING SOME OF THEIR OWN MEDICINE.

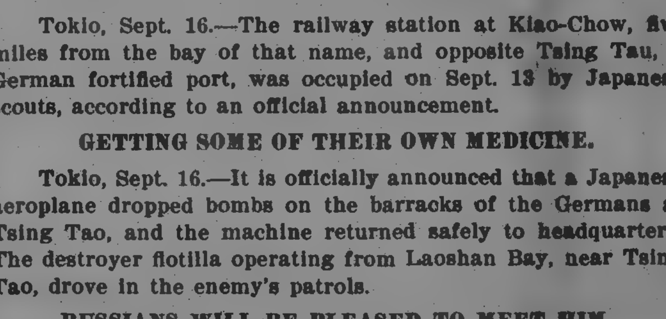
Tokio, Sept. 16.—It is officially announced that a Japanese aeroplane dropped bombs on the barracks of the Germans at Tsing Tao, and the machine returned safely to headquarters. The destroyer flotilla operating from Laoshan Bay, near Tsing Tao, drove in the enemy's patrols.

RUSSIANS WILL BE PLEASED TO MEET HIM.

Paris, Sept. 16.—Petit Journal prints a telegram from Berlin, via Copenhagen, stating that the Geman Emperor will proceed to East Prussia and resume chief command against the Russians.

JOINED FORCES AT HEAVY COST.

London, Sept. 16.—A despatch to the Express from Rome states that the two Austrian armies commanded by Generals Dankl and Auffenburg have joined forces at Rzesow, 13 miles northeast of Jaroslav and 32 miles due north of Przemy. In the course of this operation, the despatch says, they lost 40 per cent. of their number.



BRITISH TYPE OF FIGHTING AEROPLANE.

This particular kind of machine is built to carry a pilot and gunner and 300 pounds of ammunition, besides fuel for 200 miles. It has a speed of from 45 to 65 miles an hour.

ARMOURED SPADE IS A SUCCESS

Novel Contrivance Stands Tests at Valcartier

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 16.—The Canadian troops when they sail may be equipped with an armor-plate protection which it is expected would save the lives of hundreds of the men while they are engaged with the enemy especially when defending an entrenched position against an infantry attack.

The device is a spade which would also be used to dig shallow trenches by the advance party during an advance. In the blade an oval aperture is punched. After the trenches are dug, the spade would be placed on the ground, it being possible to secure it fairly firmly with a spike, and sprawling behind it, the troops would fire through the aperture, getting a secure rest for the rifle and a splendid protection from the bullets of the enemy.

Experiments with the spades were carried out yesterday, both with the Ross rifle and mark 7 ammunition, and a Laird machine gun. Neither weapon punctured the plate and only in one or two instances did the bullet crack the spade. They plunged against the steel and fell twisted and melted to the ground.

Col. Sam Hughes said that he was delighted with the results, but would express no opinion as to the probability of the adoption of the device by the troops. The spade weighs four pounds, and it is believed, could be carried by the troops without much extra effort.

Sergt. Hawkins, of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, King's prize winner, was picked to do the shooting with the rifle. Time after time he hit the spades, but it was only at 200 yards, with Mark 7 ammunition, which has a velocity of 400 feet more per second than the Mark 6 type which had been used by the Canadian troops until the present, that he did any real damage. And then the spade was not really perforated.

LOCAL BRANCH OF INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION

Mayor Buller Calls Meeting for Friday Night

The mayor has received a letter from Mr. K. McKnaught, M.P.P., chairman of the Industrial Association of Ontario, outlining the plans of the association to endeavor to prevent unemployment, and asking that a local branch be established in every city and town in the province.

By this means the central association can be kept informed of conditions throughout the province and will have the information necesary for co-operation.

In accordance with this request, the mayor has called a meeting to be held in the city council chamber on Friday night next, Sept. 18, at 8 o'clock. Manufacturers, business men, representatives of the labor organizations and all others interested are urged to be present.

BOER GENERAL SHOT DEAD BY POLICE

Was Riding in Car Which Failed to Answer Challenge

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Cape Town, Sept. 16. — General Jacobus Hendrick de La Rey, a well known Boer general, has been accidentally shot dead near Johannesburg.

General De La Rey accompanied by General Beyers was returning yesterday evening by automobile to his farm when police who were watching for a gang of deperadoes known to be using a car similar to that of De La Rey, challenged the General.

It is evident neither De La Rey nor the men in the car with him heard the challenge for they proceeded without stopping. The police fired at the car and the bullet entered Gen De La Rey's heart. The shooting has caused a great sensation throughout South Africa.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION SHOULD BE UTILIZED.

THAT FAMOUS old school of British culture, Oxford University, has just announced an extensive plan for teaching the causes of the present European war, through popular lectures to be offered in courses throughout England. Canadian universities would do well to consider the same sort of propaganda in this country.

To the majority of people who have not made a special study of History, the complexity of the present struggle, with its bewildering names and strange combinations, confuses their minds and does not present a clear conception of the issues involved. They ask what the war is all about, anyway. They know the sides that are fighting, but a well rounded idea of the causes and objects of the strife, a great many people have not, and the quantities of matter in the newspapers is so great that classification is extremely difficult.

Canadian universities have the facilities for doing some excellent public service in this regard. Every year, in their university extension work, members of their staffs deliver public addresses on various subjects. These men are eminently qualified to speak on the subjects chosen, and, in the Departments of History and Political Science, are men who are specially trained to elucidate the causes and purposes of the European War.

To do this work adequately would require cooperation. The Oxford plan is to offer courses at various extension centres and single lectures will be given in places where there is no demand for a lengthy review of the causes which led up to the war. For the Province of Ontario, extension centres might be made of the cities and such other places as apply for the same. By combining the men of Western, Toronto, and Queen's Universities with McGill, this Province could be fairly well covered. By agreeing on a course of lectures and assigning men to certain phases of the question, the object of such a course ought to be attained. We would prefer to see the whole of Canada embraced in such a scheme, but territorial difficulties are so great that they might necessitate a certain amount of localization. If a committee were appointed to consider the suggestion, these difficulties might be largely overcome, and we think that co-operation between all the universities of Ontario, at least, would in this regard be productive of a distinct public benefit. If some such plan were adopted, the assistance of the press in giving as full reports of the addresses as possible, would carry the thoughts of the speakers to distant and isolated parts, and would spread them over a wide area that hears all too little of university culture and which could not be reached as easily in any other way.

THE NECESSITY OF WAR.

WE DESIRE to draw attention to a letter to the Editor in another column entitled "The Necessity of War." Owing to the peace propaganda, to the arguments of pacificists, the necessity of war has long been denied. It is true that war is made less easily than it used to be, and has become less brutal, in spite of dumb-dumbs and the burning of cities. For example, William I. of England went to war with the King of France because the latter made an uncomplimentary remark about his birth. Then, the growth of arbitration, international law, Hague Conferences, Nobel Prizes, have tended to make war less frequent, not, as some have thought, unnecessary. The storm of war in Europe has given a rude shock to pacificists' conclusions which did not logically follow, as events have proved.

But the war has done more than that. It has struck at Christian principles and has caused a shock to many people who have not been avowedly peace propagandists, but who have always believed war to be un-Christian. Now, we have thoughtful people talking about the necessity of war, and the strange force of events giving weight to their statement has tended to have a disturbing influence on what has long been accepted as a principle. Just last Sunday, the Rev. T. T. Shields, of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, Toronto, said, in a noteworthy sermon: "While human nature is what it is, the principle of war, the rule of force, is necessary to the maintenance of society."

There are two recent books that bear on the subject: Lord Morley,—Notes on Politics and History, and Lord Hugh Cecil—Conservatism, the latter being a book every Conservative should read as it sets forth the principles of Conservatism. States can appeal but very little to principles of law, because principles of international law cover only a few of the disputes that arise between nations. Circumstances make most disputes distinctive or individualistic in themselves. Hence, arbitration is comparatively inefficacious because a court of arbitration cannot enforce its decrees. It appeals to a sense of right. Then, there is a lack of confidence in the perfect fairness of arbitration, because such a court is manned by human beings, and patriotic prejudices may cause biased decisions. Again, the cause of the majority of wars "is on analysis an irreconcilable conflict of interests, and therefore not a thing that can be determined by any law, or by the arbitrament of any court."

All are not agreed as to what is right. Bismarck made it a principle not to let commonly-accepted principles of morality or of Christian ethics to interfere with the interests of his Fatherland. He placed his own country ahead of everything. Moreover, States justify their action in some matter, such as war, by the expedient, "Reason of State." That is a very elastic and usually satisfactory method to explain actions of governments. "Each country has its part to play, and to try to force it to abandon that part is to put upon its people the choice between fighting and failing to respond to its vocation." Germany violated Belgium's neutrality for reasons of state. She went to war, we understand, because her interests in commerce and diplomacy necessitated war, or because her vocation, as Germany understands that word, was being subjected to restrictions.

Lord Morley, who resigned from the British Cabinet on Britain's declaration of war, says: "When war ends, after infinite devastation, ruin, and universal exhaustion of energy, comes a peace or terms that plain reason would have suggested from the first. The remedy is a federal league of nations, in which even the weakest member looks for protection to the united power, and the adjudication of the collective will." What Lord Morley says is true, but, the hardest, sometimes impossible, thing to do is to make a disputing nation see plain reason. Britons think that Germany did not act as reason would dictate. The appeal of Belgium was to the adjudication of the collective will, but Germany refused to submit.

The truth is, so long as human life is on a competitive basis it seems impossible to eliminate war in some questions. Life is on all sides a conflict of interests, a struggle to live, and the difference of opinion as to what is right, and what is meant by nationality and national vocation and national interests, leads to conflicting definitions, to contrary principles, that make a resort to force the only way to settlement. True, that way may be unprofitable, as Norman Angell has shown, it may not be, in the sum total the best, the most reasonable, and permanent method of settlement. But it is the way that expediency, or the necessity of human conditions, demands. Because one man is unreasonable, the whole world may be plunged in war, and when, or how often, some man in authority is going to be unreasonable is impossible to say.

The difference between Britain and Germany is well shown by the philosophy of Nietsche, who has lately come again into prominence. Nietsche has emphasized too strongly the limitations or imperfections of men. Realizing how frail human nature is, he has outlined a nationalistic philosophy, so self-interested, so dominated by interests, that it is quite repugnant to British ideas. Nietsche is only half right. The happy medium he missed. While we must expect wars and be prepared to fight wars, the British idea of justice recognizes that there are others in the world who have rights and these must be respected. The peace philosophy that we have heard so much about of late years, and which has been knocked so vigorously of late days, is not vain and impossible, as our correspondent suggests. It has, however, been generally overestimated and has concealed in shadow the necessity of war in just such problems as Europe is now settling by a resort to force.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Toronto Star-Telegram war, which promised to be a stupendous conflict, has suddenly subsided, doubtless owing to the financial stringency.

Remember Your Chimney.

(Kingston Whig.)

With the first chill touches already here, and the thoughts and desires, as well, running to stoves and furnaces, householders should see that their chimneys are cleaned out before they start to take the dampness out of their homes. The season of chimney fires is approaching, because there are always many, even though forewarned, who fail to see that things are in order before the match is struck. In some cities there is an agitation for an ordinance that will impose a fine on householders who neglect their chimneys until they have a fire, and, while such a move might seem severe, it must be remembered that every time the fire department is called from its barn, there is danger to life and property.

British Heroism.

(Kingston Standard.)

Field Marshal French's plain, unvarnished story of the field operations near Mons tells of one of the most glorious achievements of the British army—and their achievements have been many and full of glory. Assailed by overwhelming masses of foot, horse and artillery, they beat back attack after attack, with fearful slaughter to their opponents, and much loss to themselves. When threatened with envelopment by the countless hosts opposed to them, they fought their way through and conducted an orderly retreat to a stronger position. Truly, as the great historian Napier wrote: "The British are the soldiers of battle."

A Great Combination.

(Dunnville Gazette.)

Whether the war be long or short, it is obvious that the market for Canadian grain and food products next year is bound to be affected favorably by the conflict. As a matter of self-interest, as well as from the standpoint of national duty, farmers should make every effort to increase production. Where patriotism and their own pockets combine to render such a course desirable, surely the agricultural element of the population will make an extra effort.

All Are Not in Uniform.

(Westminster Gazette.)

It is foolish and hurtful to cry out at every young man not in uniform, or taking, it may be, a little harmless recreation at the end of a hard day's work, without knowing whether he has offered himself for military service, or whether he is not doing his part in some other way which may be equally important to his country. Our voluntary system gives us the advantage that the call to arms does not involve a wholesale disarrangement of industry, and that it gives us willing and picked men, instead of a mere average of the population taken without their consent. We may be sure that the numbers who are willing and eager to serve will prove ample, and that the difficulty, if any, will be in their organization. Here the most urgent need of the moment is for non-commissioned officers. There are large numbers of them in the country, but they are generally occupying well-paid positions of trust and have families dependent on them. If we want their services, as we do, it is right and fair that we should pay for them adequately.

THE EXILE

By Walt Mason

Do they think of me at home, do they ever think of me, as through weary years I roam, sadly over land and sea? Do they speak of how I spread soap upon the kitchen stair, so that father pushed his head through the cane seat of a chair? Do they ever recollect what he said when he came down, all his Sunday garments wrecked, and a lump upon his crown? Often when the sun sinks low, crimsoning the sea's white foam, I would give the world to know if they think of me at home. Do they speak of how I tied giant crackers to the cat, so we only found the hide, and not very much of that? Do they think of how I placed nettles in Aunt Sarah's bed, or of how that spinster chased, saying she would break my head? Oft I find the sledding poor, journeying from Cork to Rome. If I only could be sure that they think of me at home! Do they speak of how I sawed through the legs of granny's chair, so she fell about a rod with her trilbys in the air? Do they evermore recall how I broke the window panes with my little bat and ball, when the hush of evening reigns? Though I'm old and tired and blue, with white hairs upon my dome, I'd be cheerful if I knew that they think of me at home.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR CANADIAN MADE ELECTRIC LAMPS

The tungsten and incandescent lamp industry in Canada will benefit through the industrial conditions created by the war. There have been large importations of tungsten and incandescent lamps from Continental Europe into Canada, and these importations will be greatly curtailed, if not completely shut off, as a result of the war. This will result—indeed has resulted already—in greatly increased demands upon the Canadian manufacturers of these articles.

When the war broke out the plant of the Canadian Tungsten Lamp Co., Limited, at Hamilton, was shut down for the summer. Under ordinary conditions operations would not have been resumed until September 15. In view of the probability of an increased demand on account of the war, the plant was put in operation on August 15—a month ahead of the usual time. Since operations were re-commenced the staff has been employed several nights a week, in an effort to keep up with the demand. Although the present output of the plant is 75 per cent. greater than under normal conditions, it is not sufficient to meet the increased demand. Recently three large orders, which under normal conditions would have kept the plant busy for three weeks, were refused because of the difficulty of filling orders already in hand.

The plant of the Canadian Sunbeam Co., Ltd., in Toronto, was reopened on July 28, after the usual 30-day summer shut-down. This plant has been operated ever since at full capacity, and plans are being made to double last year's output.

There are technical difficulties in the way of operating a double shift in a tungsten or incandescent lamp factory. The work is of a technical nature and it takes a new employe some considerable time to become adept at it. However, if the present demand upon the Canadian tungsten and incandescent lamp factories continues, as is likely to be the case, the training of additional shifts for night work will be necessary.

The Canadian manufacturers of tungsten and incandescent lamps had some problems to face in connection with the securing of certain raw material which has been coming from some of the countries involved in the war. It is understood a solution of these problems has been found, and there will be no serious inconvenience on this score.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, Sept. 16.—The Board of Education met on Wednesday evening, Sept. 9th, at the High School, the members present being Messrs. E. P. Cuff (chairman), W. H. Cuthbertson, Thos. Burkell, John Doherty, E. H. Scott, Wm. Webster, J. F. Elliott, E. C. Squire, C. E. Pakenham, D. MacNaughton, John Marks. The secretary was instructed to send bill to Mr. McMillan for 75 bricks at 2c. each, $1.50. Estimates of receipts and expenditures for the year 1914 was laid on the table by the finance committee.

The amounts required to be levied were $1,380 for high school and $3,260 for public school purposes.

A communication from John Weese asking for $5.00 for extra work in conenction with the renovation in public school was left with the property committee for adjustment. The follqwing accounts were passed by the board:

T. E. Rorabeck, work $5.00; Isaac Puffer, painting porch, $1.50; R. G. Martin, account $6.00; J. Finley & Sons, Co., lumber, $3.70; Norwood Register, printing, $12.15; K. G. Thomson, $3.95; C. P. R., freight, 45c.; for agricultural school: J. W. Rork, $4.50; Co-Operative Supply Co., $2.25; Kieth & Sons, $2.63; Isaac Puffer, $2.00.

A special meeting of the village council was held this evening, Sept. 14th, at the clerk's office to strike the rates for the present year as follows:

For high school purposes, 3 9-10 mills, for public school purposes, 3 3-10 mills, for high school debentures, 1 1-10 mills, for town hall and cement walks, debentures 3 mills, for county rate, 3 4-10 mills, for house of refuge 5-10 mills, for village rate, 9 mills, making a total rate of 23 7-10 mills on the dollar for 1914. This is somewhat higher than heretofore caused by the large amount of extra work done on the streets and also the building of the new cement side walk on Spring Street, all of which was very necessary. It might also be pointed out that the present council faced quite a deficit brought over from last year.

Mr. Herman McNichol, of the Union Bank staff at Smith Falls, is visiting his parents here.

Mr. Donald McTavish, of Cornwall, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. Charles I. Puffer has returned from a visit to Toronto.

Miss Eggleston, of North Bay, spent the week-end in town, the guest of Miss Mabel Andrews.

Miss Evelyn Moffat and her assistant, Miss M. Laing, have returned from the fall millinery openings in Toronto, and are preparing to hold the local openings at the new millinery parlors in the Roxborough block on Thursday of this week.

Miss Dot Fry, who is attending the Peterborough Business College, spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. Keith Waters, of the Union Bank staff at Hastings, is spending his holidays at his home here.

Mr. Earl Sloggett, of Warkworth, is visiting his friend, Mr. Hartley Ivey.

Mr. Bert Cuffe, of Warsaw, visited friends in the village on Sunday.

Mr. Earl Cumming, of Toronto, is visiting at his home here.

Mrs. Walter Higgerman (nee Clara Cumming) of Odessa, has been the guest of her parents here for the past two weeks.

Mrs. H. Meharry has returned to town after spending the past few months in California and other southern states.

Mr. Leslie Waters, of Peterborough, spent Sunday in town.

Mrs. (Rev.) Erwin has returned after spending a few days in Toronto.

Misses Gertrude Greenbank and Myrtle Hendren are among those who are attending Peterborough Normal School this year.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL DEAL WITH FINANCE ITEMS

The North Monaghan Council meeting was held in Mr. Bradburn's office, Peterboro, on Sept. 14, at 2 p. m., all the members of the council being present.

It was moved by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that the minutes of the last four meetings be accepted and confirmed as read.

An agreement was received from the city of Peterboro and a request asking the municipal council to authorize the reeve and clerk to sign the same, together with the mayor and clerk. The agreement was for the laying of sewer pipes in the township of North Monaghan. No action was taken on the matter.

Council then took up the matter of striking rates for the current year. Requisitions were received for county rates and school rates as follows:

County rate	$2607 42
House of Refuge	336 45
Equivalent to Gov't grant re schools	82 00
Total county rate	$3025 87

School Section No. 1	$550 00
School Section No. 2	4500 00
School Section No. 3	600 00
School Section No. 4	302 50
Separate School in Peterboro	879 00
Total	$6831 50

The council then prepared estimates of the current receipts and expenditures of the township of North Monaghan for the year 1914 as follows:

Receipts

Prov. Gov't railway tax	$119 60
Dog taxes	190 00
Commutation of statute labour, 2,414 days, at $1 a day	2414 00
County rate	3025 87
Schools (trustees and general)	6831 50
Township rate	4484 40
Sidewalk debtnture rate	559 98
Total	$17625 35

Expenditures

County rate	$2607 42
House of Refuge rate	336 45
Equivalent of Gov't grant, three schools	82 00
Schools (trustees and general)	6831 50
Election expenses	30 00
Law costs	50 00
Interest on loans	160 00
Charity	400 00
Printing, etc.	125 00
Salaries	750 00
Miscellaneous	150 00
Commutation of statute labour	2414 00
Roads and bridges	1000 00
Sidewalk debenture rates	559 98
Stone crusher	664 00
Board of Health	65 00
Overdraft, 1913	1400 00
Total	$17625 35

The total assessment of the township for the year 1914 being the sum of $899,273.25, it would therefore be necessary to levy a rate of 3 2-5 mills on the dollar for county purposes, and the rate of 5 mills on the dollar for township purposes.

Re Dumble and Hurley's plan:—Mover by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Young, that the matter of the council accepting for registration the plan presented by Mr. Dumble and Mr. Hurley be hereby referred to Mr. Peck, township solicitor, for advice on same. A complaint having been made through the council regarding the above named plan.

Moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that the motion passed at the meeting of July 25th, authorizing the grading of certain streets be and is hereby rescinded.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Young, that a grant of $22 be made to road division No. 5.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that the treasurer be given full authority to pay the Sawyer-Massey Co. of Hamilton in full for the stone crusher purchased from them.

Moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that Mr. McIntosh be appointed tax collector at a salary of $100. Later, however, Mr. McIntosh declined to accept, and the clerk was authorized to advertise for a collector.

The meeting then adjourned.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Wheat prices made giant swings with each report today of what seemed any important turn in the fortunes of war. After covering a range of nearly 5c, the market closed strong, 2⅝c to 2¾c above last night. Corn finished 1⅛c to 1⅝c up, oats with a gain of 1⅞c to 2¼c, and provisions at an advance of 5c to 47½c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15.—Trading on the wheat market was quiet in the early hours and only a light volume in futures was transacted. Prices opened fairly steady, following Monday's collapse, and were stronger generally, ranging from 1½c to 1⅝c over opening values. Oats opened ⅜c to ½c higher and declining later ¼c to ⅜c. Flax opened unchanged, easing ½c later on both months. War news had considerable effect on prices and a drop took place of about 1c when the big German reverse was rumored on the exchange. Prices recovered later, however, on the news standing unconfirmed.

Closing prices were ⅛c to 2½c higher for wheat and oats were ⅝c to 1c lower. Cash demand for wheat was poor.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.31; No. 2 C.W., $1.28.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.07½; No. 2 do., $1.03½; No. 3 do., 99c; No. 4, 94c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—The foreign demand for new crop Manitoba spring wheat this morning was very limited. Prices for coarse grains were easy. A feature of the flour market was the stronger feeling in winter wheat grades and prices advanced 10c to 25c per barrel owing to the continued small offerings. The feeling in the market for spring wheat flour was firmer again today in sympathy with the reaction in wheat prices, but business is rather quiet. Demand for millfeed is good and the market was active, with a firm undertone. The trade in butter is rather quiet and chiefly of local character. Cheese is quiet. Demand for eggs good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 15.—Wheat—Sept., $1.06¾; Dec., $1.09½; No. 1 hard, $1.09⅛; No. 2 do., $1.03½ to $1.05½.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 73c to 74c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 43⅜c to 44½c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $5.90; first clears, $4.70; second clears, $3.25.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 15.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 68 cars, comprising 689 cattle, 885 hogs, 1517 sheep and lambs and 73 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice steers sold at $8.50 to $8.90; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior heifers, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $3 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was a fair supply, but quality was not up to the requirements of the demand. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

There were a few good milkers and springers, which were reported to have sold at $75 to $95, and those not so good at prices ranging from $50 to $65.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light and prices very firm. Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $11; good at $8.50 to $9.50; medium at $7.50 to $8.50; common at $6.50 to $7.50; inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were fairly large. Sheep, ewes, light and good to choice quality at $6 to $6.50; yearlings at $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes and rams at $4 to $5; lambs sold at $7.50 to $8.25, the bulk going at $8; culls at $6.50 to $7.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9.50, and $9.75 weighed off cars, and $9.15 to drovers at country points f.o.b. cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—Cattle—Receipts, 100; steady, prices unchanged. Veals—Receipts, 50; active and steady; $5 to $13. Hogs—Receipts, 1,600; active; heavy, $9.50 to $9.65; mixed, $9.60 to $9.80; yorkers and pigs, $9.75 to $9.80; roughs, $8.30 to $8.50; stags, $6.50 to $7.75; dairies, $9.40 to $9.80. UNIONISTS LEFT HOUSE.

They Resent Asquith's Action Regarding Home Rule Bill.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—After the Unionists had made a formal protest and had left the chamber the House of Commons yesterday afternoon passed through all its stages the bill introduced by Premier Asquith to suspend the operation of the Irish Home Rule and the Welsh Disestablishment Bills.

Introducing his bill, Premier Asquith said that to have postponed the passage of the bill until after the termination of the war, he said, would have had a deplorable effect on the Irish race all over the world and on Irish recruiting.

Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, during whose speech the Liberals left the chamber, entered his protest against the bill introduced by Mr. Asquith.

Mr. Bonar Law charged the Government with trading upon the loyalty of the Unionists to their country.

At the conclusion of Mr. Law's speech all the Unionists left the House, the Opposition leader declaring that they would allow the Government to do what it liked with the suspensory bill.

Pestilence In Albania.

ROME, Sept. 16.—(Via Paris.)—Telegraphing from Avlona, Albania, the correspondent of The Messagero says:

"Famine and smallpox are raging among the population, especially the refugees from the outlying villages, who are in fear of massacre by insurgents in Epirus.

"Many of those killed in the fighting with the insurgents were carried long distances on donkey back, and then merely buried under a light covering of earth. This, it is said, led to the pestilential outbreak."

Four Peace Treaties Signed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—In the presence of the Cabinet Secretary of State Bryan yesterday signed peace treaties with the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France, Spain and China.

These treaties bind each of the countries and the United States to submit to investigation by an international commission for a period of at least a year, all questions which cannot be settled diplomatically. During the period of investigation hostilities cannot be opened.

UTILITIES COMMISSION IN SESSION

A short meeting of the Public Utilities Commission was held yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. A letter was received from E. H. D. Hall asking for settlement of the claim of R. W. Scott for damages to his threshing engine which occurred at the corner of Weller and Monaghan Road as a result of one of the trenches being left open. The secretary was ordered to write Mr. Scott's solicitor and ascertain if they would settle the claim for $25.00.

The manager acting on the request of a former meeting of the commission presented the estimated cost of the lighting of the waterworks dam. His figures were $325.26. The matter was left over and in the meantime an effort will be made to utilize either the Bell Telephone or the C G E. poles.

Superintendent Dobbin of the waterworks department presented a recommendation for the purchase of a gasolene engine and trench pump cost to be $146.50 and also a triple chain block at a cost of $45.00. He was given authority to purchase the latter. The question of installing a Hersey detector metre for metreing the water used at Nicholls Hospital was discussed but in view of the fact that the cost would amount to $337.50 the matter was left over.

POWER COMPANY ASK FOR AN EXTENSION OF TIME

But City's Chief Counsel Advises That nc Delay Be Made

At the meeting of the power committee last evening Mr. Robinson, of Toronto, general manager of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and Mr. W. H. Munro, local manager of the same company, were present and requested the city to stay their move of taking over the Peterborough Light and Power Co. till November 1, so as to enable the company to divorce the Radial Railway Co. and to settle all accounts. They also desired to give their employes a month's notice. Should the city go ahead immediately, as they have already decided, the company could not do these things in a satisfactory manner.

When the gentlemen withdrew, the committee proceeded to discuss the request, but the city solicitor thought it best to secure the advice of M. K. Cowan, the city's chief counsel, who is at present at Hamilton in conection with the judicial probe into Hamilton's civic works department irregularities. Mr. Gordon spoke to Mr. Cowan over the telephone and the latter was of the opinion that every day that passes before the city takes the step, is a day lost. He urged that the city go ahead with the procedure at once.

The various record books of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. are not included in the inventory, and it was pointed out at the meeting that they would be of great value to the utilities commission. Mr. Gordon and Ald. Johnston were sent out from the meeting to interview Messrs. Robinson and Munro and to find if they would turn over the books should the city give them till the end of the month. The answer they came back with was to the effect that the company might hand over the books, yet they would not furnish any written agreement to that effect. In view of this stand, the committee authorized Solicitor Gordon to forward his by-law for expropriating to the Hydro commission at once, and as soon as it is returned the council will hold a special session and pass it.

The meeting confirmed the appointment of Mr. R. A. Ross, of Montreal, as the city representative on the board of arbitrators.

APPAREL IS NOT NEEDED

Government is Making Necessary Provisions for Soldiers

The inspector of war stores and army supplies for the Dominion Government has written privately to a relative here urging that no apparel be sent to the soldiers. The Government has been attending to all that from the first and it is evident that neither a hospital nor soldiers' equipment is needed. Funds collected had much better be spent for the benefit of those out of employment through the war except perhaps for such few knick-knacks as soldiers may receive from relatives.

C.G.E. CORPS OF ENGINEERS

Men Were Addressed by President of the Company

Toronto, Sept. 16.—A notable contribution to the service of the Empire has been made by the Canadian General Electric Co., Limited. By drawing on its technical staff, it has raised a corps of engineers, both electrical and mechanical, for service during the war, and has further undertaken the duty of maintaining the corps for that period.

The corps assembled yesterday under Capt. Hazen Ritchie, an old Royal Military College man, and after being equipped and sworn in proceeded to the head offices of the company, King and Simcoe Streets. Here a number of the directors had met, and Mr. Frederic Nicholls, President of the company, addressed the men as follows:

President Nicholls' Farewell.

"In times of danger to the Empire it behooves every corporation, as well as every private citizen, to render such service as opportunity offers, and I may say on behalf of our directors that after consultation with the Government part of the service rendered and to be rendered by our company has been to raise and maintain the corps of engineers to which you belong.

"You have this morning been sworn in to serve your country as part of the permanent forces, and if appearance and past performances go for anything you can all be relied upon to serve your country faithfully, and cast no discredit upon the Canadian General Electric Company, which is responsible for your efficiency.

"Good-bye, and good luck go with you."

The corps was divided into three sections, to serve at Esquimalt, Quebec and Halifax, and left during the evening as follows:

For Esquimalt—Messrs. H. Ritchie, Chas. Stewart, H. S. Elliott, W. S. Johnson, H. Williams, J. S. Dunlop of Peterboro, and A. T. McLean, Harold Bestard, Alex. Hardie of Toronto.

For Quebec—Messrs. W. J. Swanger, R. W. Nurse, George Monaghan, George Hillier, C. Pink, P. Foster, H. Galvin of Peterboro, and Colin C. Rous of Toronto.

For Halifax—Messrs. H. S. McKean, J. C. Munro, Clarence Henry, E. S. Shill, R. Bethune, A. J. Palmer of Peterboro, and F. G. Jackson, Edward Crockford of Toronto.

FIRE CHIEF WILL ATTEND CONVENTION

Toronto, Sept. 16. — Fire Chief Thompson is going to the meeting of the International Fire Chiefs' Association at New Orleans, whether the city pays his expenses or not, At the Board of Control Ald. Maguire suggested that the chief should first secure permission from the city. The chief retorted that he had not yet taken his holidays. In other words, he meant to go anyway.

Alderman Maguire thought it was a time to cut expenses down.

Alderman Dunn took a hand and urged the advisability of sending the chief for the sake of the valuable information he would secure.

Alderman Maguire urged again that this was a time when the Council should shut down on sending officials to conventions when the city was looking forward to a "soup kitchen" winter.

It was finally deecided to send the chief.

COW DIDN'T SEEM TO LIKE THE PLACE

The story goes that a cow being shipped from Havelock to Peterboro was absent from the car when the owners went to look for her yesterday at the C.P.R. yards. They made a hasty search and were about to put in their claim against the C.P.R. when Molly was noticed making a hasty retreat down the track for her home town. In some manner the door of the box car was opened and the cow, quite natural, jumped out and was heading for Havelock when the owners spied her. After some wily manoeuvres on their part she was captured and forced to prolong her visit in the city.

Your New Gown, Madam Can Hardly Be Distinctive Unless Your Figure Is Correctly Corseted

And yet the average woman will spend days planning her new gown, without giving the second thought to the matter of first having the figure correctly corseted. According to experts, this is most unwise, to say the very least. The best dressmakers recognize the merit of this fact and often insist that their customers be correctly corseted before they do any work. Isn't this a point worth considering?

We carry four of the best known makes, namely :

Frolaset The Nemo D. & A.

Three of these we are Peterboro's exclusive agents for.

There is no need for you to take a chance with your corset. Determine to wear a proper model and permit us to select that model for you. We assure you that the result will be satisfactory. We have all the newest models and can fit every figure as it should be fitted.

SALARIES OF SCHOOL TEACHERS ARE PARED

But It's not the Teachers of the Local Schools Who Will Suffer

A FINE POINT

The board of education at Lethbridge has cut the salaries of the school teachers, following the adoption of a report which the school management committee submitted. The action is due to conditions which have followed since the war broke out.

The Lethbridge Herald reports the board meeting as follows :

Here is the report of the school management committee of the public school board, submitted to the board of education at their regular monthly meeting last night, and adopted after nearly two hours of discussion :

The school management committee recommends :

1. That all grace teachers be asked to forget their increases for one year, beginning Sept. 1, 1914.
2. That all teachers who have reached the maximum salary be reduced 5 per cent.
3. That Miss Nimmons forego one year's increase ($100) on her salary.
4. That the matter of Mr. H. McG. Young be allowed to stand as at present.
5. That Mr. Filmer forego one year's increase.
6. That Miss Alwood forego one year's increase.
7. That Mr. Jennings' salary be reduced to $1,000 (from $1,200).
8. That Mr. Fleetwood forego one year's increase.
9. That the salary of Mr. Hamilton be placed at $2,00. ($2,200.)
10. That a reduction of 5 per cent. be made in the salaries of principals of Central, Fleetwood and Galbraith schols.
11. That a reduction of 5 per cent. be made in the salaries of the teaching staff of the high school. beginning Sept. 1, 1914.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Some Objection.

The opening round of the discussion over the reductions was started by one of the principals, who happened to be present. He said in part : "It has just occurred to me that, outside of moral obligation, there is a question as to whether the board can legally take this action. I am not saying that any steps will be taken to settle the question, but I simply wish to put it to this meeting. Let us take an example. A teacher is engaged by an advertisement, which is equivalent to a contract, at, say, $1,600 a year salary, to increase to $2,000. The first year is over and his services are satisfactory. Just as he is entering on his second year's service, you say you will not keep your contract. That is, you not only disallow the increase of $100, but you reduce him 5 per cent. In other words, you fail to keep your contract to the extent of $180. Now the question is, has the board the legal right to fall down on their contract to this extent?"

R. P. Wallace pointed out that the boards in Calgary were doing the same thing, brought about by the strenuous objections of the ratepayers.

Let the Wealthy Ones Pay Also.

Mr. Higginbotham brought out the point that a war annulled all contracts, and that so far as the school board was concerned, they were legally entitled to take action.

The Missourian pedagogue continued : "There is another way of looking at this impending reduction. I have taught school for fifteen years. During the first ten years, I didn't make any more than enough to make ends meet. Ten years of fifteen were devoted, or rather contributed toward the gaining of experience, which I am giving now to this city. During these same ten years, some of these ratepayers made, in addition to what it has cost them to live, as much as $100,000, and many of them more. To bring the matter home: this man comes to me, who hasn't made a cent more than my living, and asks me to bear this burden and to sacrifice my due so that his burden may be lighter. I say right here, let the man who has made the pile pay up in proportion at least. When these business men are making money, we rejoice in their success. But there comes a time when to be on an income is better than to be in business. When times are good he comes to us and tells us how he can make as much in a month as we do in a year, and we rejoice; and now that we are making more than he, let him also rejoice."

Board Reluctant.

The members of the board listened intently to this appeal on behalf of the teaching profession, for the teacher in question was talking for them all.

President Higinbotham replied briefly, stating that all the members of the board had the very highest regard for the teachers, and rejoiced when they could boost their salaries, for they had it coming. He was interrupted in his remarks by a still small voice which said, "The same men who want our salaries reduced continue to charge us the same rent for our rooms, and the same for our groceries."
